LIBERIA LINE MUST BE SHOWN

France May Be Asked to Define Boundary Limit.

THE MONTGOMERY'S VISIT

Causes Much Speculation and Is Explained By Associated Press Representative.

A London cable dispatch says: It has been learned by a representative of the Associated Press that the United States cruiser Montgomery's visit to Liberia is apparently the result of overtures made to Washington by that republic. Though the British government is in complete ignorance of the purpose of the Montgomery's commission, the establishment of a coaling station in Liberia by the United States is regarded as scarcely probable, as, it is asserted, no Liberian port has any facilities for coaling, all of them being open and surfbound.

The Associated Press representative learns, however, that a far more important step is under consideration. It consists in a joint request of the United States and Great Britain upon France to define the boundary between the territory she claims and that claimed by Liberia. This step is not yet decided upon, but Great Britain only awaits the United States' assent to become a party to such a request.

It is alleged that France, for many years, has been encroaching on Liberia, and it was only by a strenuous protest of the United States that she was prevented from appropriating a large slice of Liberia in 1892.

According to the Hon. Arthur Ponsonby, managing director of the Liberia Rubber syndicate, which recently guaranteed the interest of Liberia's public debt, the Montgomery's visit was probably prompted by a desire to ascertain the extent of French activity. Mr. Ponsonby said to a representative of the Associated Press:

"Bishop Hartzell, while in Monrovia this year, strongly urged the government to interest the United States in preserving the boundaries, with the result that Liberia appointed a mission to Washington. I believe it has already made representations and presume the commander of the Montgomery investigated both this and the possibility of a coaling station. The latter Liberia would gladly lease to the United States, but beyond hoisting her flag upon it, it would be of little service.

"The feeling among British subjects commercially interested in Liberia is that the republic's progress had better be under the protection of either Great Britain or the United States. But both the British government and those having interests there believe that so long as Liberia can continue to struggle on in her present condition, everything possible should be done to support her."

Liberia has decorated Mr. Ponsonby with the Order of African Redemption in recognition of his services against encroachments.

NAVAL OFFICIALS "MUM."

A Washington special says: Although the naval officials will make no statement respecting the cruise of the Montgomery to West Africa, it is admitted that the ship was there in the early fall, returning to her station at Buenos Ayres about the first of last November. These dates in themselves may be regarded as sufficient to dispel any impression that the cruise was in any manner connected with the war between the British and the Boers.

As to the real objects of the cruise, it is believed that the navy department had its eye upon a possible coaling station on the west coast, as is indicated in the foregoing dispatch. Before and during the civil war the United States had no less than three coaling stations on that coast. They were practically abandoned when the West African station was dropped from the list, but the chief of the equipment bureau, Admiral Bradford, has strongly urged that they be reestablished.

DELAY IN ROBERTS CASE.

Contest Will Not Come Before the House Until January 15.

Representative Tayler, of Ohio, the chairman of the special committee which is to investigate the case of Brigham H. Roberts, says that the case will not come up for action in the house before the middle of January.

As the committee's report will be exhaustive, the greatest care will be exercised in its preparation, and although it is the intention of the committee to proceed as rapidly as possible, Mr. Taylor does not think the case will reach the house before the time stated.

EXEMPT FROM SEIZURE.

Gold From Transvaal Cannot Be Confiscated By English.

The Neuste Nachrichten (Berlin) questions the right of Great Britain to confiscate gold ingots which are being transported from the Transvaal to Europe. It says it regards the discussion in the English press concerning Delagoa bay as purely tentative, as Great Britain has given no signs that she will infringe on neutral territory.

LAWTON FUNERAL

Held at Manila With Impressive Ceremonies--Body Aboard Transport Thomas.

A Manila special says: The funeral of General Henry W. Lawton, who was killed at San Mateo, December 18, was held Saturday with impressive ceremonies. The body was conveyed from the Paco cemetery down to the Luneta, to Pasig and then to the transport Thomas, which sailed at once for San Francisco.

As the body was removed from the vault, Chaplain Marrin read the prayers. The personal staff of the late general was augmented by Color Sergeant Simon, Trumpeter Haberkam and Privates Oakum and Mohrusen. The latter, who were closely connected with General Lawton's recent campaigns, bore the casket from the vault to a six-horse caisson awaiting at the gate.

The funeral procession was composed of the band of the 20th regiment, General Hall and his staff, two troops of the Fourth cavalry who were with General Lawton at the time of his death, a battery of artillery, a number of clergymen, the caisson covered with flowers; the personal staff of the general on foot; Generals Wheeler, Watson, Bates, Forsythe, Kobbe and Schwan in three carriages; a naval battalion, Major General Otis and his staff, the foreign consuls in full dress and the members of the Philippine supreme court.

Five delegations from the towns where General Lawton established civil government presented wreaths. Women from the same towns waited on Mrs. Lawton Friday and presented her with their condolence and flowers.

Crowds of natives and Americans witnessed the procession, the band played dirges and the crowds uncovered.

At Pasig the casket was transferred to the tug, "taps" was sounded and prayers were offered by Chaplain Pierce.

Four enlisted pall-bearers accompanied the body to the United States.

NAILS COME HIGHER.

American Steel and Wire Company Announces a Big Advance.

Hardware dealers all over the south received the following telegram from Chicago Saturday:

"Prices of nails and wire advanced 25 cents per hundred, effective this morning, December 30. Details by mail. American Steel and Wire Co."

All kinds of shelf hardware was advanced 11 per cent, and another advance is expected. The advance is due to the steady advance in all kinds of iron and steel.

CARTER'S ALLEGED PARTNERS

Are Examined In United States Commissioner's Court In New York.

At New York, Saturday, Benjamin D. Greene, Colonel John F. Gaynor and William T. Gaynor and Edward H. Gaynor, members of the Atlantic Dredging and Contracting company, jointly indicted with Michael A. Connelly and former Captain Oberlin M. Carter, United States engineer corps, for conspiracy resulting in a loss to the government of $575,594 in connection with the Savannah river and Cumberland sound contracts, appeared for examination before United States Commissioner Shields.

DEFAULTER IS BRINSFIELD.

Mystery of Young Man's Disappearance From Atlanta Cleared Up.

An Atlanta dispatch says: Of the most exemplary habits, with a reputation hitherto above the slightest suggestion of reproach, Kelly H. Brinsfield, the young man whose mysterious disappearance was announced in The Constitution of Sunday, is a defaulter and a fugitive from justice.

The exact amount of Brinsfield's shortage with the Manhattan Life Insurance Company is not known. It may amount up into the thousands.

Buckeye Legislature Meets.

The Ohio legislature met and organized at Columbus Monday. The Republicans have a majority in both branches. In the senate there are nineteen Republicans, eleven Democrats and one independent Republican. In the house there are sixty-two Republicans, forty-five Democrats and three independent Republicans.

LADYSMITH CASUALTIES.

Seventy Killed and Over Two Hundred Wounded So Far.

A dispatch from Ladysmith, dated December 22d, says:

'The Boers have mounted another howitzer on Surprise hill, replacing the gun captured in the sortie of the rifle brigade. While they watch us nightly with a searchlight and bombard the place daily, they show no signs of assaulting the town. They probably think they can starve us out, but we have plenty of provisions. The total casualties since the siege began are seventy men killed and 236 wounded."

DISPATCH FROM OTIS

Announcing That Bodies of Lawton and Logan are En Route.

The departure of the transport Thomas from Manila with the remains of Major General Henry W. Lawton aboard was announced in a dispatch received at the war department from General Otis Sunday. The vessel comes to the United States via Nagasaki. She also has aboard the remains of the late Major John A. Logan.

HATTERAS STORM WAS DISASTROUS

Belated News of Ocean Horrors Are Just Coming In.

LIVES OF FORTY-SIX LOST

The Hurricane Passed Along the Coast Over a Week Ago.

A dispatch from Norfolk, Va., says: The loss of about ten other men can be added to the already long list sacrificed in Saturday night's big hurricane, in which twenty-one met death at Hatteras and fifteen on an unknown bark in midocean, for they undoubtedly went down in the wreck that was discovered Friday off Hatteras, the most dangerous point on the Atlantic coast.

The first news was brought by the British steamship Ashlands, Captain Lewis, which arrived several days overdue from Galveston to Marseilles via Norfolk for coal. Captain Lewis stated that on Thursday, when twenty-five north, one-quarter east of Diamond Shoals lightship, off Cape Hatteras, he passed the wreck of a large three-masted schooner, and the only thing visible above the water was the topmast.

There were no signs of life about the vessel or wreckage floating and the sea was too rough to permit his ship to go near the wreck. The size of the mast indicated a large sail vessel whose crew could not be less than ten men. The schooner undoubtedly sank in Saturday night's storm with all on board. The Ashlands had a rough trip, as did the Kairos, which left Galveston four days ahead and which vessel also arrived Friday.

PREPARING FOR CENSUS.

Supervisors Will Meet Assistant Director and Get Instructions.

On the 5th of January the census supervisors of the Georgia, East Tennessee and Florida districts will meet at Atlanta, where they will confer with Assistant Director of the Census Wines concerning the character and different details of their work. General Merriam, director of the census, has planned the Southern trip for Assistant Director Wines as part of a plan to bring all of the supervisors in close touch with the department. After the trip south, similar trips will be taken into other sections.

The southern tour included the following stops: January 4th, Charlotte, N. C.; January 5th, Atlanta; January 6th, Montgomery; January 8th, New Orleans; January 10th, Houston, Tex.; January 11th, Memphis, and January 12th, Cincinnati.

At Charlotte the supervisors of North and South Carolina are to meet. At Atlanta, on Friday, the 5th, the Georgia and Florida and east Tennessee supervisors will confer with the assistant director.

On Saturday at Montgomery he will meet the supervisors of Alabama. On Monday, at New Orleans, the supervisors will receive instructions. On Wednesday, January 10th, at Houston, the Texas supervisors will meet him. On the 11th the supervisors of Arkansas and Tennessee and northern Missippi will assemble at Memphis.

The trip will end at Cincinnati on January 12th, when he will meet the supervivors of Kentucky, southern Indiana and southwestern Ohio. The plan followed is to go over the entire census subject giving information concerning the instruction of enumerators and explaining the different schedules. The supervisors appoint the enumerators and the assistant director explains thoroughly their duties, compensation and method of making reports.

THEY TERRORIZE NATIVES.

The Insurgents Punish All Who Show Friendship For America.

Advices from Manila state that the insurgents who evacuated the coast towns between Dagupan and Vigan, fleeing to the mountains before the advancing Americans, are returning in small bands to the towns the Americans do not occupy, terrorizing the natives and Chinamen who showed friendship for the Americans. The natives and Chinese are seeking the protection of the American garrisons.

SENT TO GLORY.

Two Workmen Thawed Their Dynamite On a Hot Stove.

At Pittsburg, Pa., Saturday, two Italians, Peter Yolente and Ambrosio Donatello, were fatally injured and several others slightly injured in a dynamite explosion. There were blasting in a cut and sought to thaw out some frozen dynamite by placing it on a hot stove, with the usual result.

Stock Is All Paid Up.

A certificate has been filed with the secretary of state at Springfield, Ill., by the Pullman Palace Car company for an increase of capital stock from $54,000,000 to $74,000,000.

HAY BOUND FOR PRETORIA.

Leaves Lodon For Long Journey to South Africa.

Adelbert S. Hay, the new United States consul at Pretoria, left Waterloo railroad station at London Saturday morning for Southampton on his way to Cape Town. Mr. Hay is charged with many commissions from relatives and friends of the British prisoners at Pretoria.

BRITISH SEIZE GERMAN VESSEL

Alleged Recruits For Boer Army Said to Have Been Aboard.

IS HELD AS A PRIZE.

A Christmas Sortie at Kimberly. Latest Reports From Africa.

A cable dispatch from Lorenzo, Marques, Delagoa Bay, states that the German steamer Bundesrath, belonging to the German East African line, has been captured as a prize and taken to Durban. The Bundesrath arrived at Delagoa Bay from Mozambique.

The Bundesrath, of 1,319 tons, sailed from Hamburg November 8th, for Tanga, East Africa.

The capture of the vessel has increased the already strong anti-British feeling among the Hollander and German section of the population.

The vessel will be brought before a prize court at Durban.

The directors of the German East African line at Hamburg have received news of the arrest of the imperial mail steamer Bundesrath. The commander of the port of Durban refused an explanation of the cause of the seizure. It is declared that there was no contraband of war on board, and when application was made to the German foreign offices the latter immediately promised interposition with the British government.

A London reporter of the Associated Press has learned that there were three German officers and twenty men attired in khaki, and intending to serve the Boers on board the Bundesrath, which explains her capture.

A CHRISTMAS SORTIE.

Advices received from Pretoria under date of Wednesday, December 27, say that an official dispatch from Mafeking announces that in the sortie which the British made from that place December 25, attacking one of the Boer forts with cannon, Maxims and an armored train so persistently that the fighting raged up to the walls of fort, the British lost 109 men killed and wounded, while the Boers lost only two men killed and seven wounded.

The dipatch adds that Captains Kirkwood and Grenfell were captured by Boer scouts near Colenso and were being sent to Pretoria.

Ten unloaded shells inscribed "The Season's Greetings" have been fired at Ladysmith.

Ten South African medical students fron Edinburg have arrived at Pretoria from Delagoa bay with five tons of medical stores.

A dispatch from the Boer camp at the Modder river, dated Thursday, December 28th, reports an artillery duel lasting an hour. December 28th a British reconnoitering party made a sortie, but did not come within the Boer range. The British, December 28th, commenced a steady bombardment of the Boer position.

The latest Ladysmith advices show that the Boer shelling is becoming deadly, while sickness and ennui must also be telling strongly upon the garrison.

CHICAGO HAS BIG BLAZE.

Nine Firemen Are Injured and Valuable Property Is Destroyed.

Fire in Chicago at an early hour Saturday completely gutted the buildings extending from 216 to 222 Monroe street, and badly damaged the building at 212-214 Monroe street, causing a loss aggregating $950,000 and resulting in the injury of nine firemen, two of them seriously.

The fire is supposed to have originated on the second floor in the work room of Wooley & Co., wholesale woolens, at 220 and 222 Monroe street, and fanned by a fierce northwest wind the flames quickly communicated to the building at 216 and 214 Monroe street, gradually spreading east to 212 and 214 Monroe street, where its progress was finally checked.

Raised Wage Scale.

The stockholders of the Meridian, Miss., cotton mills have advanced the wages of all employes 5 per cent. A statement just issued shows the net profits of the mills for 1899 to be $30,107.36.

SAVANNAH HAS BIG BLAZE.

Property to the Amount of $150,000 Destroyed In Forest City.

Savannah, Ga., had a $150,000 Friday night. It started in the basement of Lindsay & Morgan's furniture store at Broughton and Barnard streets about 10 o'clock.

Within a short time Daniel Hogan's store, across Barnard street, was ablaze. The fire in this building and that next to it was confined to the two upper stories, but they were both flooded with water. Other stores on the opposite corners were slightly damaged. The losses will foot up more than $150,000.

To Develop Mineral Lands.

The South Warrior Coal Company, with a capital of $50,000, was organized at Montgomery, Ala., Friday by Ignatius Pollak and associates for the purpose of developing north Alabama mineral lands.

Florida Republicans to Meet.

The Florida republican state convention will be held in St. Augustine on January 19th, and McKinley delegates will be elected to the national republican convention.

MILES GETS PRECEDENCE.

Army Officers Rank Those of the Navy at White House.

A Washington dispatch says: The program for the president's new year reception, is accepted as settling all questions of precedence at official receptions of the three branches of the military service, the army, the navy and the marine corps.

According to the programme the departments rank in the order named, thus adhering to the custom established many years ago of placing them in line according to seniority of organization. When Major General Miles, head of the army, and Admiral Dewey, the head of the navy, pay their respects to the president as commanders-in-chief of the army and navy, on New Year's Day, they will take their places in line in the order named, one at the head of the military branch and the other at the head of the naval.

COIN VALUES DECREASE.

Report of Mint Director Shows That Silver Has Depreciated.

The quarterly statement of the values of foreign coins, issued by the director of the mint, shows that during the last three months the value of silver has decreased .118 cents per ounce and the value of foreign silver coins has decreased accordingly. These figures will be followed in estimating the value of all foreign merchandise exported to the United States on and after January 1, 1900.

VESSELS TO BE SOLD.

The Navy Department Will Dispose of Collier Scipio For $41,550.

The secretary of the navy has arranged for the sale of the collier Scipio to Ludwig Rubello, of Philadelphia, at $41,550, and for the sale of the naval tug Rocket to James Tregarther & Son, of New York, at $1,123. The purchasers in each case made the highest bid received for these vessels, which were recently condemned for naval service.

CONDEMNED MAN SHOT.

Escaped From Jail and Resisted Attempt at Re-Capture.

W. R. Williams, the condemned murderer who escaped from jail last June, was killed near his home in Bronson, Fla., Friday morning. Williams resisted desperately. He shot Deputy Sheriff Walker in the side, and John Dean, another deputy, was shot in the hand. Dean finally shot Williams in the abdomen, inflicting a mortal wound.

THE BOILER EXPLODED.

Four Men Blown to Atoms While Many Others Are Hurt.

At Elizabethtown, Pa., Saturday four men were killed and several others injured by a boiler explosion. They were emloyes of Keller & Kresson, railroad contractors.

The boiler was used to drive a steam drill and the explosion occurred just as Davis, who was the engineer, turned on the steam. He was decapitated, his head and body being found forty yards apart. The others were also terribly mutilated.

FEEDING INDIA'S FAMISHED.

Government Charity Is Being Distributed at An Enormous Cost.

Advices from Calcutta state that almost three million person are receiving famine relief. The government is spending nearly two lakhs of rupees daily. It is estimated that the cost of the relief to the end of March will be crores of rupees. Owing to the rapid increase in the number of people seeking relief, the viceroy, Lord Curzon of Kedleston, invites a closer scrutiny of the claims of the applicants.

Matricide Is Charged.

Mike E. Burke, white, aged forty years, a printer, was arrested at Savannah, Ga., Sunday, on the charge of having choked to death his mother, Delia Burke, sixty-six years. The man is supposed to have been drunk.

Cattle Receipts of Kansas City.

Cattle receipts in Kansas City for the year 1899, including cows, will aggregate 2,017,000 head, or close to 200,000 head above that for 1898. The average value of cattle received was $30 per head, or a total of $68,810,000.

It appears that people generally are greatly mistaken in their notion that their is an enormous surplus of unmarried women in this country, thinks the Cincinnati Enquirer. The truth is that no such excess of spinsters exists in fact, it is quite the other way, the bachelors outnumbering the maidens. At the present moment there are in the United States 2,200,000 more unattached males than females similarly situated, the exact figures being 5,427,767 bachelors against 3,224,494 spinsters of ages from twenty years up. Thus it is obvious that if girls do not find husbands, it is no for lack of a plentiful supply of the article. What is required, seemingly, is a general migration of spinsters from the North and East to the great and growing West, in parts of which there are ten available males for every maid.

Eighty automobile companies, with a capital of $430,000,000, have already been formed. This ought to give the public cheap horseless vehicles.

HOUSEHOLD MATTERS.

A False Economy.

It is a curious sort of economy that makes housekeepers buy cheap matches and ignorance or carelessness that prevents them from teaching every member of their household how to use them properly. The really safe matches are those that can be lighted only on the box, and these should be used. Every child should be taught that a match must never be thrown away while burning, and never shaken to extinguish; it must be held still in the fingers and blown out. Many valuable lives have been lost and property destroyed from the careless using of matches. An unlighted match dropped on the floor may be as dangerous as a loaded revolver. Matches are so common that their danger is overlooked, but the statistics of every Fire Department in the country will attest to their deadliness unless carefully used.

Earthworms in Flower-Pots.

Earthworms, or angleworms as they are often commonly called, in the soil in pots is a matter that ever seems to trouble the flower-grower. It has been a disputed point as to whether or not they do any real harm, or whether they are not of some value in assisting drainage. I think they are better out of the soil than in. Being of a somewhat slimy nature like snails, only not so bad, they impart to the soil, by constantly working through it, much the same consistency as that induced by plowing or cultivating land when it is too wet and pasty. It seems to kill the natural life and friableness of the soil, making it tough and putty-like. When practicable it is well to repot the plant, using new soil. If during the winter, saturate the soil in the pot containing the worms with a solution of lime-water. Give enough to insure the penetrating and saturating of all the soil. This should exterminate the pests. There is no danger of getting too much lime in the water, as it will hold only a certain quantity.—Woman's Home Companion.

The Couch Replaces the Folding Bed.

It is just possible that the folding bed will not become entirely extinct for some time yet, for there are too many of them in existence, but they are going out very rapidly as far as up-to-dateness is concerned. They have been going for some time, and people have hardly realized it. The couch has taken their place, and it has undoubtedly come to stay. The big pieces of furniture that pretend to be something that they were not, and never really deceived anybody, were always ugly. They were not sanitary and there have been accidents enough to prove that they might be dangerous. Then the couch came and filled almost every want. It is broad enough and comfortable enough also to make a delightful bed. The lower part can be utilized, if desired, as a receptacle for gowns and bedding and all sorts of things, and with a fancy covering and a few cushions in its daytime appearance, the couch is a thing of beauty, a joy forever, and is really what it seems. In many of the furniture shops of New York City they have had no folding beds in stock for several years. It does not do for even furniture to pretend to be what it is not. It is only the real things that attain any degree of permanency.

The folding beds, however, are not of recent origin, for early in the eighteenth century they were to be found in this country, in the slaw bank, our great-great-grandmothers' folding beds. These were fitted into closets in the wall. There were doors in front of them which, when they opened, revealed the under side of the bed ready to be let down for use. There was no pretense about that. A closet might contain anything, and it is just as legimate if it is a bed standing on its head within its four walls, as pillows or bed clothes.—New York Times.

Recipes.

Maple Sauce For Fritters—One fourth pound maple sugar, one-half cupful of water. Boil till it strings, then add stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, as one would for boiled frosting. Then add one-half cupful of sweet cream and juice of a lemon.

Fruit Sandwiches—Make a dough as for biscuit, using a trifle more shortening. Roll out an inch thick, cut with a biscuit cutter and bake in a hot oven. Split open, butter lightly and lay between the pieces half of a canned or preserved peach or pear, from which the juice has been drained. When cold, press firmly together. Any other fruit may be substituted.

Glazed Chestnuts—Dip a half pound of sugar in as much water as it will absorb. Boil the sugar in a stewpan until a little dropped in cold water hardens directly. Have ready some chestnuts, boiled and peeled and unbroken. Put six or eight at a time on a steel wire, dip them in a syrup and quickly plunge them into cold water, then slip them off the wire on a dish.

Chicken (Porto Rican Style)—Roast a spring chicken and mince the meat fine. Boil half a cup of rice, season with pepper and salt, and mix with the chicken. Bake three-quarters of an hour in a deep dish, first pouring over it the following sauce: Add to the chicken gravy half a cup of cream, two level teaspoonfuls of flour, salt, pepper and a clove of garlic; boil for two minutes and pour over the chicken mixture.

Pot Cheese—Put thick sour milk into a saucepan, set it on side of stove to heat gradually, till quite hot, taking care not to let it boil; remove from fire, put a bit of cheese cloth in a colander and set it over a bowl, pour in the contents of saucepan and let it drain several hours. When wanted for use, mix it with a small piece of butter and season with salt, or it may be eaten as it is. Some mix it with a little sour cream and some with finely cut chives.

REBELS READY FOR UPRISING

Hidden Bombs Found By Americans In Manila.

PLOT NIPPED IN TIME

Outbreak Was Scheduled For Day of Lawton's Funeral, But Well Laid Plans Miscarried.

Philippine advices state that four explosive bombs, a few firearms and 500 rounds of ammunition were discovered in a house in the center of Manila Sunday morning, while the police were seeking Recarte, the insurgent leader, who was said to have come to Manila in the hope of effecting an outbreak Saturday by taking advantage of the mobilization of the American troops at General Lawton's funeral.

It developed that the plot included the throwing of bombs among the foreign consuls attending the ceremonies in order to bring about international complications. These, it seems, were to be thrown from the Escolta's highest building, but the avoidance of the Escolta by the funeral procession spoiled the plan.

The populace, it is thought, had been prepared for the attempt by a rumor circulated widely among the natives that Aguinaldo was in Manila and would personally lead the outbreak. The American authorities having been advised of what was brewing, prepared for all contingencies.

Captain Morrison who commands the troops in the most turbulent district of the city, says he does not believe an actual uprising will ever occur, as the natives lack the resolution to take the first steps in a movement that would entail fighting at close quarters with the American troops.

An American advance in Cavite province, south of Manila, is expected shortly. Reliable reports from native spies show that there are upward of 2,000 organized insurgents under arms within a mile of Imus. They are strengthening their intrenchments and possess artillery.

FILIPINOS WELL INTRENCHED.

At Novaleta the Filipino intrenchments have been much strenghtened since General Schwan's advance. A thousand of the enemy are in the vicinity and there are 600 at San Francisco de Malabon. From twelve to a hundred garrison all the towns in the southern part of Cavite province and the same may be said of the towns in Batangas province.

The provinces of North Camarines and South Camarines hold quantities of hemp which the people cannot market. As a consequence the population in that part of Luzon is suffering from lack of food. Rice now costs four times its normal price.

It is estimated that 1,000 insurgents are intrenched at Calamoa.

Life along the coast of the provinces of Cagaban and north and south Ilocos is resuming normal conditions. The American troops occupy the important towns and patrol the country roads. The natives implore the Americans to continue the occupation, to establish a settled government and to terminate the uncertainty, abuses and confiscations that have characterized the rule of the Tagall revolutionists during the last eighteen months.

Vast amounts of tobacco, estimated to be worth $2,000,000, are ready for shipment to Manila. The opening of the ports of Dagupan, San Fernando, Vigan, Laoag and Aparri will permit the resumption of trade, bringing relief to communities greatly in need of foodstuffs. Many vessels have already been cleared from Banila for these ports.

Incoming Spanish prisoners declare that Aguinaldo has ordered the release of all Spaniards now in possession of the rebels. The mountain passes of Cayagan and the two Ilocos provinces are still guarded, in the hope of catching the insurgent general, Tinio, who is still a fugitive. It is asserted that Lieutenant Gilmore is in Tinio's custody.

WOOD SELECTS CABINET.

Awards Portfolios to a Number of Well Known Cubans.

The names of the members of General Wood's Cuban cabinet and the assignment of portfolios has been issued as follows:

Secretary of state and government—Diego Tamayo.

Secretary of justice—Luis Estevez.

Secretary of education—Juan Dautista Hernandez.

Secretary of finance—Enrique Varona.

Secretary of public works—Jose Ramon Villon.

Secretary of agriculture, industry and commerce—General Ruis Rivera.

The Lawton Fund Growing.

The Lawton home fund continues to grow. The daily increase for the past few days ranges between $2,000 and $4,000. General Corbin's statement Saturday shows that the total subscriptions to that date were $32,774.25.

More of Carnegie's Liberality.

Andrew Carnegie has made Cheyenne, Wyoming, a present of $50,000 to be used in the construction of a free public library building.

THE ✶ CHRONICLE.

F. W. GIST. EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Entered in the post-office at Columbiana Ala., as second class matter.

SENATOR MORGAN'S POSITION.

"It is possible," says the Washington Post, "that the sentiment of a majority of the Senate upon the Philippine question will be expressed by the adoption of the resolution offerred by Senator Morgan as a substitute for the lengthy declaration presented by Senator Bacon. Mr. Morgan's resolution was quite brief, as follows:

> Resolved, That in pursuance of section 4 of Article IV of the constitution the United States will guarantee to the people of Puerto Rico, Cuba, the Philippine Islands, and all States and peoples within its sovereign jurisdiction and control, a republican form of government, and will protect them against invasion.

If those who are charging Senator Morgan with being an imperialist can get through their heads the difference between expansion as a Democratic policy of long standing and imperialism as a Republican principle of equal age, they may be able to see from the above the Senator's real position. To be perfectly plain, we are of the opinion that these organs of Johnston understand the position of Senator Morgan very well and know that it is distinctly Democratic, but that they hope by misrepresentation to turn against him some who are not informed as to the principles involved in this question. If these editors do not really know the difference they are too ignorant to be editors, and we do not think they are.

It will appear quite sufficient to the man of average intelligence that the same form of government is to be guaranteed to these people that is guaranteed to Alabama under the Constitution. There may be an honest difference as to the wisdom of taking these islands under our protection, but the charge that those who favor it are leaning toward Republicanism can not be honestly made by men who know their country's history or their party's creed.

THIS year will be one in which all the people will want to read the newspapers and keep themselves informed as to current events. For this purpose take THE CHRONICLE.

THE demand of the Governor for a retraction of the Senator's charge against him brought forth a hot reply. The Governor ought to know the penalty when a man is caught bluffing.

IN a recent interview our Mr. Deans said "he might be forced to run for representative from his county." It would be too bad for the Populists to run him against his will when they have so many men that really want to run.

WHEN Johnston demands an explanation of Morgan he gets it quickly and to the point. When the people demand an explanation of Johnston of his connection with land deals they don't get it. The reason for this difference is plain.

THE organization of the Morgan campaign committtee in Birmingham the other day was very timely, and will do much good. Johnston's organization is a secret one, and engineered by himself. The Senator knows nothing of politics, and his friends are doing the organizing for him. This is well. Let every county be organized with a view to defeating the machine politics of the Governor.

THE "73 cents for common schools" cry of the Governor's organs is not fooling anybody up here. We all know that the Governor was opposed to the little increase made by the last legislature to common schools and tried to defeat it. We also know that the State of Alabama is not giving to the University anything except the interest on its indebtedness to that institution. That cry may do to raise among ignorant and prejudiced people, but we are not that kind up here, and we don't like for the Governor to indicate that we are by giving us such rot.

JOHNSTON'S chief sin with the "unrepentant deserters" is that the Populites are for him.—Court Journal.

You have got it backwards. Johnston's chief sin is that he tried to turn the Democratic party over to the Populists in the hope that he would be made the boss. Recent events go to show that the Populists did not want the Democratic party with Johnston attached. The load would probably be too heavy for them. The attachment is getting a little heavy for the Democrats. The Populists showed good judgment in declining the attachment.

NOT IN TOUCH.

One of the objections to Senator Morgan is that he is not in touch with Alabama affairs. With a slight amendment we acknowledge his deficiency. He is not in touch with Alabama politics. He came into public life at a time when campaigns were made on principles, when men were selected for their ability and there was no trading or machine building. He was sent into the field for his power as a speaker, and he discussed politics from the standpoint of its application to the science of pure government. There was then no place in the Democratic party for personal politics, and they were lost in the great issue of white rule and Democratic government. He was sent to the Senate under this regime, and his mind has not left the higher plane of politics to which it was trained. A new school of politics has been established in Alabama, wherein men build up factions and only use principles for convenience. Morgan does not belong to that school. In this he is not in touch with Alabama affairs. Out of the old school came statesmen; out of the new come politicians. The needs of Alabama did not suffer then; the needs of the machine are more important now. For a Senator we prefer a man of the old school. The real interests of the State as a part of a great nation will be safer in his hands than in the hands of a politician of the new order.

CURRENT ✶ CRITICISMS

By MRS. F. W. GIST.

Our good friend, Mrs. Ball, like the rest of Governor Johnston's organs, persists in calling Senator Morgan an imperialist, and in charging him with going over to Republican policies. This position of the Senator's enemies indicates one of two things. They either desire to wilfully misrepresent Senator Morgan's position on this foreign question, or else they do not know the difference between imperialism and expansion. In the case of our friend of the New Era we prefer to charge it up to ignorance rather than a desire to misrepresent.

It may be presumption in us to offer to enlighten the editor of the New Era, but at the risk of offending the dignity of her position we beg to suggest to her the difference between the two policies, and to explain to her the real position of Senator Morgan.

According to our simple understanding there is little similarity between the policies of imperialism and expansion. Webster defines imperialism as being, among other things, the spirit of empire. This is the true political meaning of the term. The policy of imperialism may be applied to the government of our own people as well as to our foreign possessions. It is the application of the principle of a strong federal government; the concentration of power into the hands of the chief executive; the subordination of the rights of the people to the authority of a centralized power; the yielding of the state to the nation, of the people to a king, of home rule to central power, of local self-government to the majesty of personal dictation. In this connection imperialism has always been a Republican policy; in fact it has been the fundamental principle of the Republican party. Mr. Hamilton contended for this idea in the adoption of our constitution, and the same tendency has prevailed at all times when the Republicans have been in power. As applied to the new possessions it implies a government by the appointment of chief officers, the control of the islands by supreme dictation from Washington, the White House the supreme source of power, the President an emperor, commanding with haughty "blasts of his imperial clarion."

Opposed to this principle is that spirit of representative democracy which had its inception in the mind of the great Jefferson and its birth in the cradle of the constitution. Our friend of course understands the application of this principle to the home government, but we venture to suggest to her that in the matter of the foreign islands the application will, if Democrats can control, follow the same rule which has been applied to the government of the territories, if statehood seems best as an ultimate end; if statehood does not appear desirable then independent home rule will be guaranteed to those people whenever they have learned the art of self-goverment. Until that time the authority, the power, the majesty if you please, of the federal government must be acknowledged and the natives must cease firing upon the flag. This principle has been applied to every foot of territory now belonging to the United States and which is today enjoying the blessings of home rule. It was applied by compact to the thirteen original States; it was applied by ratification to those later admitted into the Union; it was applied by force of arms and purchase to Texas, Louisiana and the plains of the great Northwest; it was applied in the shedding of fraternal blood to the bravest people on earth, who attempted in the majesty of their local rights to secede from the Union. It has been given for the asking to Hawaii; it has been guaranteed to Cuba; it will be given to the Philippines in the course of time if the Congress is composed of men like Senator Morgan, filled with the spirit of American liberty and desiring that its blessings be extended to the nations of the earth "as the waters that cover the sea."

This thing that our friend, in her antagonistic zeal, calls imperialism, which she is wont to term Senator Morgan's Republican tendencies, is not what she thinks. Senator Morgan is an expansionist, and in the open honesty of his nature he does not hesitate to speak his convictions. He is not responsible for the inability or refusal of his enemies to understand his position or to comprehend the scope of its possibilities in the upbuilding of his country, in the uplifting of his people, in the prosperity of his section, in the glorious destiny of his nation.

Expansion under American methods is the acquisition of territory—by purchase, by agreement or by conquest—and the conferring upon it of the blessings that perforce must come to any people from the application of the principles of self-government and of American institutions. This has always been a Democratic policy. All that territory from the Mississippi to the Pacific came in under this policy applied by Democrats; the great State of Texas became our sister as the result of a war waged by a Democratic administration; indeed we were sold into the happy family at a time when the hand of the nation was stretched forth in grasping; we bought Alaska as well as Louisiana. At each step beyond the home yard we have had to assert our power in the smoke of battle, but each time the sunlight of constitutional liberty has cleared away what looked like the cloud of empire. It was always the assertion of that spirit of democracy toning down the spirit of advancement which is the peculiar heritage of the American citizen. Senator Morgan believes in this expansion because he is a Democrat, because he follows the teachings of Jefferson, Jackson, Pierce and Polk. Having these to thank for the present glory of the American federation of sovereign States, have we not a duty to perform in upholding the hands of Morgan, who is as able as he is willing to secure to the new islands the blessings of home rule while bringing into the American storehouse the richness of their undeveloped resources.

Republican, indeed! Expansion has never been a Republican policy. Theirs has been the idea to tax one community to build up another; to levy tribute upon the poorer and weaker to enrich those in power, but never to extend the trade relations of the country so as to increase commerce through the open door. Forced into this war by the great voice of a liberty loving people it will be the purpose of the Republican party to draw from the conquered people a tribute for the coffers of those who are already growing fat off the public teat. The true policy of expansion, to which Mr. Morgan holds, will be to open the way for commercial relations that will benefit all our people while giving to a new people a new song of civil freedom.

In the meantime our friend would have us believe that Johnstonism is Democracy, while Morgan is untrue to the faith of his fathers. If she and the other blind followers of Johnston will learn what expansion is, from what it springs, from whom it emanated, she and they will find that Morgan is the Democrat, and that Johnstonism is demagoguery. When they learn the truth will they admit it?

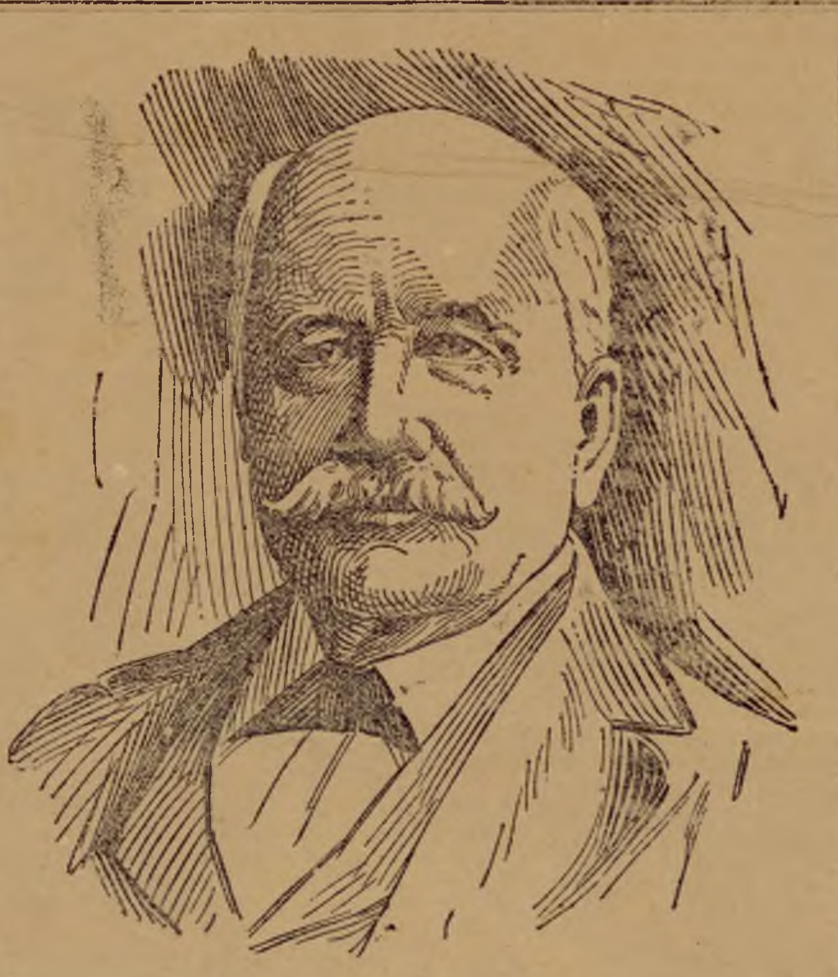
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.



Hon. Thos. Williams, of Elmore county, Alabama, ex-member of congress, statesman, orator, writer and one of the best informed men on the theoretical and practical application of commercial fertilizers. He is one of the largest cotton planters in the state, and produces his great crops upon poor sandy uplands by the skillful use of commercial fertilizers. He uses the ALABAMA FERTILIZER exclusively—after having tried nearly all other leading brands of complete fertilizers. His words, like rifle balls, are few, and go straight to the mark:

WETUMPKA, ALA., September 9, 1899.

DEAR SIRS:—Speaking from experimental tests, in results I am assured the ALABAMA FERTILIZER put up by you, is not excelled by any on our market, and I commend it to the public as a genuine fertilizer productive of good results.

The bags treated by the VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVER used by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER Co., successfully resisted the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in the fertilizers, also preventing all loss from wasting.

Yours truly,
THOS. WILLIAMS.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT ANALYSIS.

Bulletin No. 12, issued by the Alabama Department of Agriculture, shows the actual commercial value of the ALABAMA FERTILIZERS to be 19.83 per cent more valuable than all the complete fertilizers or guanos offered for sale in the State of Alabama for the season covered by said bulletin.

Bulletin No. 13, just issued by the Department of Agriculture, shows the actual analysis, from samples sent to the Department by dealers and consumers throughout the State, that the ALABAMA FERTILIZER is actually $3.54 per ton or 24 per cent better than the guaranteed analysis by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER Co., and this answers the question so often asked, "why the ALABAMA FERTILIZER produces so much better crops than other fertilizers of equal guaranteed analysis?" The ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be shipped in the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVED BAGS There is no other preserved bag on the market of any value.

The Commissioner of Agriculture recommends and endorses it in the following words:

"I therefore unhesitatingly say that I believe the bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVING PROCESS will resist the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in fertilizers; that the meshes of the bags are so filled by the process as to prevent all wastage, and that if generally used by manufacturers, would be of inestimable value to carriers, dealers and consumers.

(Signed) "I. F. CULVER,
"Commissioner of Agriculture."

These MUMMIA PRESERVED BAGS are almost indestructible by the weather or Fertilizers. Can be hauled in the rain without material damage to bag or contents. Fertilizers put up in these bags can be hauled out to the farm at any time and kept ready for use.

The ALABAMA FERTILIZER is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all round fertilizer for cotton and corn.

ALABAMA FERTILIZER RECORD.

It has produced nearly four bales of cotton on one acre of poor sandy upland.
One hundred and thirty-two bushels of corn on one acre of poor sandy upland.
Two thousand and forty one bushels of corn on twenty acres of poor upland.
Land and corn accurately surveyed and measured by competent disinterested and honorable men.

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 48 premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

ESTABLISHED 1880 ALABAMA TRADE MARK

This trade mark is registered. It is our property. It is not likely to be counterfeited, as that would subject the perpetrator to the danger of heavy fine and imprisonment (see U. S. laws respecting copyrights). It is on every genuine sack of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

As required by state law the word "ALABAMA" in large letters is found on every bag of fertilizer offered for sale in this state. Some unscrupulous persons have employed this means to deceive you.

See that the above trade mark is on the bag, and take none offered you as the ALABAMA FERTILIZER without it.

BILL IN CHANCERY

Filed Against H. C. Reynolds by Girls' Industrial School.

A bill was filed in the chancery court of this county last week by the Girls' Industrial School against H. C. Reynolds, W. B. Reynolds and H. C. & W. B. Reynolds, praying for an accounting and for the delivery of all books and papers in the hands of said Reynolds belonging to said school.

By paragraphs the bill alleges—

1. That the school is a corporation, organized for the establishment of a first-class industrial school for the education of white girls in industrial and scientific branches, and that in the conduct of said school from two to four hundred white girls have received instruction therein per year.

2. "That to successfully conduct said school, H. C. Reynolds was elected president for the business qualifications he was reputed to possess." Upon his election he was intrusted with the management of the business and affairs of said school, and was authorized to receive money from the pupils for their board, washing and incidental fees, and to hold the same and pay out under orders and rules of the trustees.

3. That H. C. Reynolds during his term received of the pupils as follows:

1897-98	25,000
1898 99	30,000
Total	75,000

4. That he wrongfully turned over said money to the firm of H. C. & W. B. Reynolds, who wrongfully converted it to their own use.

5. Sets out the manner of conducting his business, and alleges that the books he kept belonged to the school.

6. That from the amount forfeited by students leaving school before session closed said Reynolds retained the sum of $10,000, which rightfully belongs to said school, but said Reynolds refuses to pay it over.

7. That said Reynolds has refused to turn over the books to said trustees.

9. That said Reynolds paid one Banks $1,350 for building and took voucher for $1,900, thus wrongfully converting to his use $550. That he sold to Latham Bros. $50 worth of lumber belonging to said school, but did not account for same. That he used a boiler and coal of the school and charged said school rent for same.

The bill prays for writ of injunction commanding the return of said books and papers, and to return an accounting for all money due.

The attorneys for complainant are S. W. John, of Birmingham, and Peters & Beavers, of this place. The allegations are sworn to by Sol. D. Bloch.

The New Year's greeting of the Columbiana Mercantile Company will be found in this issue. They are preparing for a big business this year, and will be able to supply the wants of their customers in all lines.

Columbiana lies almost in the very heart of the richest coal fields of the State, but it is quite difficult to obtain this article of fuel and only a small number of our people have a supply.

Johnston & Co. begin the new year with a full line of groceries, hardware and crockery, and seek the patronage of all who want good goods at cheap prices. All the latest and freshest eatables will be kept in stock.

We learn from a private source that an agent of the Government has been investigating the land matter of the Girls' School, and that his report will be unfavorable to the Governor.

The exercises at the private school of Miss Mary Liles on Friday before Christmas was attended by a number of patrons of the school, who were delighted with the progress of the children and the prospect for a successful school session.

Gordon DuBose will open a bank at Clanton in a few days. Miss Edna Chapman will accompany him there, while H. C. DuBose will take charge of the bank here. Mr. DuBose has made quite a success of his bank here, and we congratulate Clanton on the establishment of a financial institution there.

One of the most pleasant social features of the holidays was the reception given by Misses T. Hammond and Nell Parker Christmas night at the residence of J. H. Hammond. The decorations and costumes were in white and gold. A luncheon was served to the guests in keeping with the occasion. The young hostesses were assisted by Mrs. Hoskins, of Aldrich, and Miss Pearl Norris.

A NOTABLE WEDDING.

Marriage of One of Columbiana's Brightest Belles.

The most notable event of the season, and perhaps the most interesting occasion in Columbiana for many years, was the marriage of Miss Myrtle Swain Wednesday evening, December 27, to Mr. Charles Pleasant Damron, of Vienna, Ill.

Miss Myrtle and her sister, Mrs. Gordon DuBose, came here several years ago from California with their grandmother and aunt, Mrs. and Miss Beman. Her family is one of high culture, education and refinement, and Miss Myrtle has not only been a belle, but the idol of this community, and has a large circle of friends throughout the State. She is an accomplished musician, and of that high christian character to ensure the love and homage of all good people. No bride has left this place carrying with her more true hearts and loyal friends than the beautiful and lovely Mrs. Damron.

Mr. Damron is a rising young lawyer of Vienna, Ill., and of notable high christian integrity and superior qualities. His family is one of the best in Illinois, and the happy young couple start out on life's voyage under favorable auspices and full of the highest ambitions. That they may realize the full measure of life's happiness is the wish of their friends, who are legion.

The ring ceremony was performed at the Presbyterian church by Rev. W. I. Sinnott and was beautiful and artistic in in its simplicity. The ring was a magnificent gold band with the raised monograms, C. P. D. and M. S. There were no attendants. The bride was attired in an elegant costume of cream crepe de chine, and tucked satin bodice with full length net veil, and carried bride's roses. The groom and bride entered the church together and glided up the center aisle keeping time to the wedding march, which was executed by Mrs. A. M. Elliott.

The bride was the recipient of more than a hundred handsome gifts—full sets of silver, china, bric-a-brac, dinner sets and ornaments; gifts modest and gifts expensive, but all bearing testimony of good will and solicitude. They left on the southbound train for Vienna, where they will reside.

Mrs. Wheeler Carleton died at her home in Montevallo last Friday after an illness of only a few days. She is a sister of Mrs. E. B. Nelson, of this city, and was well known to our people, having lived here for a number of years.

J. H. Hammond, the cash grocer, has moved to the Moore corner, where he will continue business. He enjoyed a splendid trade during the past year, and made this move for the sake of room. He keeps in stock all the good things to eat, and sells them at bargain prices. Watch for his advertisements in these columns, and call on him when you want anything to eat.

Congressman Gaston A. Robbins passed up the Southern last Friday en route for Washington. He was seen by a CHRONICLE man, to whom he said he felt sure of holding his seat. His contest will be heard before the elections committee on the 8th of this month. He is looking specially after the interests of his district, and hopes to get some important appropriations for it.

We would call especial attention to the advertisement in this issue of the Imperial Gas Lamp Co., of Chicago. These lamps burn ordinary gasoline, and cost but one-third of a cent per hour when lighted. They generate their own gas and furnishes a brilliance of one hundred candle power. THE CHRONICLE office is fitted with this light, and parties contemplating a purchase can call around and inspect its workings.

A town negro went down to Calera on Saturday before Christmas to lay in a supply of spirits for himself and several friends, but he failed to reach home with the amount of his purchase. The heavy rain of the night before had swolen Campbranch, and on his return in the afternoon the water overflowed his buggy and washed away several jugs. The negro disrobed himself and waded about in the creek for the precious article, but had to give up the search. The water was chilly and it was too near the holidays to catch a cold.

An Old Idea.

Every day strengthens the belief of eminent physicians that impure blood is the cause of the majority of our diseases. Twenty-five years ago this theory was used as a basis for the formula of Browns' Iron Bitters. The many remarkable cures effected by this famous old household remedy are sufficient to prove that the theory is correct. Browns' Iron Bitters is sold by all dealers.

BIG LIME COMBINE

Went into Effect on the First Day of the Year.

Baltimore, Jan. 1.—The big lime combine goes into effect today, embracing nearly all of the important kilns of the south. The plan has been engineered by the banking firm of Sperry, Jones & Co. The combination is chartered under the laws of New Jersey, and will be known as the Consolidated Lime Company. The company has a capital of about $2,500,000, divided into common and preferred stock. A. M. Baldwin, president of the First National Bank of Montgomery, Ala., is president.

It is understood that this concern has bought every lime plant in Shelby County with one exception. The transfers have not yet been completed, but will be within the month. Probably $150,000 will be paid for the Shelby County property. J. B. Adams, of Longview, will be a vice-president of the new company, and will probably have the management of this district.

Wilsonville Waifs

Christmas is over and we are all alive and hope to live to see quite a few more, to say the least of it.

The town enjoyed the visits of many pleasant guests during the holidays—some from afar off, some not so far, and others very near and dear to our hearts as are the scenes of our childhood.

Miss Katie Gwin, of Selma, and her cousin, Miss Lottie Boykin, of Camden, spent last week with relatives in town.

Miss Natie Fowler and Mr. Frank Beard were quietly married a few Sundays ago at the residence of the bride's parents. Relatives and a few friends witnessed the nuptials. Mr. and Mrs. Beard will reside near Fayetteville.

Charles Bolin and sister, Miss Meta, visited Atlanta relatives Christmas week.

Misses Horne and Pope were "at home" to a party of friends Thursday eve from 8 to 10. Substantial refreshments and a floral souvenir marked the end of a pleasant evening.

Bud and Blake Edwards were among the Xmas visitors.

Wallace Walthall, a bright cadet of the M. M. I., was a transient guest of our Xmas entertainments.

Embrue Weldon and T. V. Neal, after a week's vacation, returned Monday to resume their work at the Howard.

Miss Mamie Millstead visited relatives in town a part of last week.

Jap Moore, of Texas, was visiting his old acquaintances here last week.

Oscar Tinney, of Aldrich, is visiting the "old folks at home."

Misses Baber and Thomas are at their respective places in the music and schoolroom after a pleasant week's vacation.

Professor Herndon returned from Centreville Sunday and opened school Monday morning.

Miss Ethel Kidd, of Vincent, was visiting Miss Pernie Pope a part of last week.

Miss Minnie Kidd spent her vacation in Vincent.

Miss Lizzie Privette, linguist and mathematician in Jacksonville Normal College, spent Xmas with G. W. McGowen and family.

Miss Laura Weldon gave the social element a delightful entertainment Friday eve. All attended "but me."

Mrs. Hansell is visiting her parents in Mississippi.

Miss Pernie Pope returned to Marion Monday, where she is taking a course in the Judson Institute.

Charles Avery, of Shelby, came up Monday to participate in the masquerade party at Mr. and Mrs. Williamson's.

Will McEwen had occasion to visit Birmingham during holidays and perchanced to pass a steam peanut roaster, which he supposed to be some sort of slot music machine; consequently he drops a nickle in the steam pipe and says, now play "She was bred in old Kentucky."

The most delightful social event of the season was the masquerade party at Mr. and Mrs. Williamson's on New Year's eve in honor of Mr. New Year himself. Were it not for the absence of the floats it would have had every appearance of a real mardi gras festival. To make mention of each impersonator would consume too much space. However, we will quote you the make up of a few of King Rex's subjects. E. Williamson, with his white flowing beard and hair, presented a typical Rip Van Winkle. Miss Laura Weldon was a quaint, curious old Gypsy fortune teller—indeed she was. Ed Wellington represented the Choctaw tribe, only he was off his war path. Mrs. Williamson represented "Grandma Hubbub," of long ago. Chas. Avery represented the dude of Saratoga in summer attire. Miss Horne's make-up was in direct harmony with a little country maid. Pat McGowen portrayed a George Washington in costume. It would consume too much of your valuable space to mention all the masqueraders, but suffice us to say that each one was gorgeously masked and conducted themselves in an altogether becoming manner. About 10 o'clock the signal to unmask was given, and all were changed in the twinkling of an eye. Soon light refreshments were served, and the guests departed, congratulating themselves that 'twas only a disguise and not a reality.

FRIEND O' MINE.

Harpersville.

New Year's gift!

That cold wave—do you feel it?

Dr. Teague preached at the Baptist church last Sunday.

Messrs. Bob and Frank Bevil, of Texas, are visiting friends and relatives in our community.

Oliver Caldwell and Wallace Walthall came up from the Military Institute and spent all of last week and a part of this with homefolks.

J. W. Thompson and little son, Ward, of Collinsville, Texas, spent Christmas week with relatives in and around Harpersville.

Mrs. Spinks returned home Friday after a two weeks visit to her father's family at East Lake.

Miss Georgia Heacock, of Alpine, spent last week with her friend, Miss Hannah Caldwell, in the city.

Miss Meeda Kidd came up from the Montevallo school last week and spent several days with her father's family.

Professor Strock, of Soap Hill, spent Christmas week here, and during his stay contracted for a tract of land in South Harpersville, with the expectation of building on it this summer. A welcome awaits you, Professor.

A. A. Gorman, who is stationed in Uncle Sam's army on Sullivan's Island, is at home for a few week's rest, and will remain until his health gets better.

The marriage which we spoke of in our last locals did come off at the appointed time, and was the grandest affair that ever occured in Vincent. The church was full, and everything passed off very nicely indeed. The presents were many and some very costly. They left on the first train for Sylacauga, where they will reside, carrying with them the well wishes of many friends for their future success.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

J. H. HAMMOND, THE CASH GROCER,
HAS MOVED TO THE MOORE CORNER.

WHEAT CARRIED BY THE WIND.

Blown From Morocco Across the Mediterranean to Spain.

Some years ago the villagers in a town near the southern coast of Spain were surprised by a sudden shower of white wheat, which seemed to come from the heavens as rain does, says the New York Sun. There were so many witnesses to tell of the strange occurrence that there could be no doubt of the accuracy of the story. Some months elapsed before the remarkable phenomenon was explained. It was learned at last that some farmers near the northern coast of Morocco had been threshing wheat with flails, when suddenly a tornado swept over the ground and carried all the wheat and chaff on the threshing cloth into the air. The cloth was swept clean, though the wind storm was not sufficiently violent to do any damage to the workmen, who fell to the ground and saw to their dismay when the storm had passed that the result of their labor had disappeared in the air. There seemed to be no doubt that the fall of wheat in Spain was the result of the shabby trick the tornado played the Moroccan farmers, the grain having been wafted clear across the Mediterranean before it was dropped to the earth.

A somewhat similar phenomenon has recently been observed further East of the Mediterranean region. A steamer was on her way along the North African coast from Asia to England, and had entered the Galita channel, between the island of that name and the coast of Tunis, when a fine dust began to darken the air and immediately thereafter fell on the vessel deck. Quantities of the dust were collected and later submitted to a chemical analysis in Europe. About a third of the dust consisted of rock particles, containing calcium, magnesium, & iron, proving, what the prevailing wind had already indicated, that the dust had been carried high into the air from the Sahara desert, passing over the whole of Tunis, and finally dropping into the Mediterranean.

Another curious occurrence of the same sort occurred in Hungary in 1896, when there was a fall of dust, which analysis proved to be identical with the sediment of the Nile. The dust was declared to have been brought on the wings of the wind all the way from Egypt. These incidents show how the atmosphere helps to change the aspect of the earth's surface by removing small particles of matter from one region and depositing them in another.

LARGEST PLANT IN THE WORLD.

Gigantic Seaweed from the South Seas Holds that Distinction.

It is not the earth but the sea tha has produced the largest plant in the world. That distinction is held by a gigantic seaweed, known as the "nereocytis," which frequently grows to a height of more than 300 feet. The stem of the plant is as strong as an ordinary rope, and large quantities are dried and used as rope by the inhabitants of the south sea islands, where the curious vegetable ropes are found. This sea weed usually grows to a depth of from 200 to 300 feet. As soon as the plant takes root a spear-shaped balloon is formed, which grows with the stem toward the surface of the water. This balloon frequently has a diameter of six feet or more. It has, of course, an upward tendency, and therefore keeps the stem growing until it floats on the top of the water. This enormous weed grows in such quantities that large meadow-like islands are formed, which are often so big as to impede navigation. The ropes made from the stems of the plant are used for building purposes, and the balloons when dried make very serviceable vessels.

Poultry Prizes Awarded.

The Alabama Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock association, whose annual exhibition has been in progress at Birmingham during the week, has elected the following officers. President, W. W. Bussey, Birmingham; vice-president, R. B. Goss, Carbon Hill; second vice-president, A. J. Reilly, Pratt City; third vice-president, P. S. Hamilton, Oxmoor; secretary, D. J. Flummer, Birmingham; assistant secretary, S. E. Farr, Birmingham. Among the prices awarded were those to S. J. Fearing, Tecumseh, Ala., for Plymouth Rock chickens; S. J. Hickman, Oxmoor, Ala., for Brown Leghorns; J. D. McCarty, of Atlanta, Ga., for Brown Leghorns; Mrs. H. J. McCafferty, of Birmingham, for white Wyandottes; Thomas S. Forbes, of Birmingham, Ollie S. Dale, Birmingham, H. J. McCafferty, Birmingham, and W G. Estes, Birmingham, also for white Wyandottes.

Carnegie's Envoys in Birmingham.

The presence in Birmingham of representatives of the Carnegie interests has given impetus to the rumor that the great iron and steel magnate has his eye on the south, especially the Birmingham district, and in the light of recent developments has strengthened the belief that he is preparing to enter the field at no very distant day—perhaps within the next few months. Some days ago Joseph E. Schwab, general manager of the Duquesne steel mill at Pittsburg, and Manager B. F. Wood of the Homestead mill at Homestead, accompanied by J Wideman Murray, representing Matthew, Addy & Co., of Pittsburg, arrived in Birmingham, and have made a thorough inspection of the district.

Meets Next in Birmingham.

The convention of the Epsilon Province of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, in session at Knoxville, Tenn., adjourned Friday. Birmingham was chosen as the place for the next convention in 1901. The following officers were elected: F. A. Gamble, president, of Jasper, Ala.; Tully R. Carnick, vice president, Knoxville, Tenn.; George D. Booth, secretary and treasurer, Clarksville, Tenn.

Wheeler Desires to Return.

A Washington special says: General Wheeler has been making inquiries through General Otis and the war department whether he can come home, or if the department desires to keep him in the Philippines. The general seems to be a little tired, because he has had no opportunity in Luzon for very conspicuous service.

Rebuilding a Big Foundry.

The Birmingham Machine and Foundry company is building a $[illegible]0,000 foundry plant at East Birmingham, to take the place of that burned some months ago. The main building will be 100 by 250 feet, made of brick. It will be equipped with modern machinery and will be one of the most complete iron foundries in the south.

The Battle House Sold.

It is announced that the historic Battle house, the principal hotel in Mobile, which was opened in 1852, is to pass to Anthony Visard and others of New Orleans, by purchase from the Battle House company. The price is not given, but it is in the neighborhood of $150,000. At least as much more money, it is said, is to be expended in reconstructing and refurnishing, to make it a modern hotel in every particular.

Alabama's Commissioner at Paris.

Governor Johnston has appointed Leo Hirsch, a resident of Paris, formerly a citizen of Uniontown, this state, to be commissioner from Alabama at the Paris exposition. Mr. Hirsch is a wealthy young man and has many friends in Alabama.

One of the central business blocks of Huntsville was partly destroyed by fire Thursday. The loss is about $25,000, partly insured

QUEER FLORIDA FISHES.

Odd Members of the Finny Tribe Found by the Fish Commission.

The Florida waters are strikingly rich in fish life, and the United States Fish Commission has just published a check list in small compass, which will be interesting to anglers everywhere. Sixteen different kinds of sharks have been taken and identified. Among them are the curious nurse shark, the great tiger shark, the swift and ravenous mackerel shark, the ugly and strange angel shark, and the huge hammerhead. There are thirteen varieties of rays, including everything from the common barndoor skate to the electric ray and the immense butterfly ray. There are no fewer than six varieties of the terrible sting ray, locally known as stingarees and feared as being fatally venomous. Strange rays are the eagle rays, and stranger still are the monstrous devil fish, more properly known as sea devils, thus being distinguished from the octopus and the squid, which are called devil fish all over the world. There are three varieties of gar fish, the long-nosed gar pike, the short-nosed gar and the alligator gar, which is feared by fishermen as much or more than a shark. Eleven species of catfish are listed, ranging from the blue cat of 100 pounds and more to the tiny fellows of one-quarter of a pound. Twenty-three kinds of eels are to be found in the inland and oceanic waters of Florida. There are three varieties of fierce and serpent-like morays. There are two varieties of tarpon and twenty-five varieties of the rest of the herring family.

Among the more curious fishes that are not known generally are the lizard fish, the viper fish, the snake eels, the needle and the hound fish, the trumpet and the cornet fish, pipe fish, and sea horses, there being four varieties of the latter; the savage barracudas, the cutlass fishes, sawfish, amber jacks, moon fish, the triple tails, the rudder fish, croakers, parrot fish, lady fish, angel fish, trigger, file and trunk fish, puffers or blow fish, of which there are twelve varieties; the shark suckers and other remora fishes which have a flat disc like the sole of a rubber shoe on top of their heads, with which they attack themselves by suction to a shark or anything else; the star gazers, which have eyes that are turned upward at so sharp an angle that they have a ludicrously sanctimonious aspect, the hideous bat fishes, which look as if they had escaped from the inferno; and for beauty, the lovely little bride fish, also known as the four-eye fish, because it has a deep velvety black spot just behind the tail which looks like a glowing eye.

TRADING SHIPS CARRY NO CASH.

No Wonder the Piracy Business Has Fallen Away to Nothing.

A son of the old time yachting captain, Jack White, of Red Bank, picked up a Mexican silver dollar of 1834 on Sandy Hook the other day. Captain Jack said it reminded him of many a dollar he had seen that had been picked up along the Jersey coast and on Long Island shores.

"Mexican silver dollars," he said, "were the money of the commercial world during all the early part of this century and you could find them whenever there were wrecks. Nowadays pirating would not pay, but in those days every ship had to carry a lot of money every time she went on a voyage. Nowadays a captain doesn't have to have anything but a bit of pocket money, and it is a fact that many a ship goes out on a voyage with hardly a dollar on board. If the captain needs anything he can either draw money at any port he enters or else find credit there.

"It was very different a generation ago. In those days a captain had to take out with him money enough to last him for the whole voyage, and something for emergencies besides. He often had big sums aboard, also, that were used in trading, or that represented a cargo sold.

"It was not uncommon in those days for a ship to start out with a full cargo bound for some foreign port, where the captain would have to hunt his own market. If the cargo wouldn't sell well there, he had power to go to any other port to hunt a profitable market. Then when he had sold out, he was expected to buy new cargo, either for a home port, or perhaps, some other part of the world. It was not unusual for a captain to handle half a dozen cargoes on a long trading voyage, and come home in ballast, with a big box of silver dollars to help keep his ship up to the wind. Even the little vessels carried a lot of money aboard.

"I guess that dollar was wrecked there fifty years or so ago, and it has been drifting around in the sands ever since."—New York Sun.

Evolution of Head Coverings.

Earliest of all forms of headgear was the cap. The hat did not really come into common use till the seventeenth century. In the time of Charles I, the queer, high, sugar-loaf shaped hat came into fashion. It was wound with a rich band and trimmed with a feather. Constant balancing of the head was necessary to keep it on. This hat was taken up by the Puritans, who satisfied their bitter consciences by discarding the frivolous band and the wicked feather.

Charles II brought the French periwig into England, and the tall hat went out to make way for a low, broad-brimmed thing, gorgeous with feathers and gimcracks. These broad brims became broader and broader. At last, it became necessary to turn them up at first, this was done at the back, finally according to the wearer's fancy.

Out of this extravagant style of headgear grew the cocked hat. The footman and liveried coachmen of many European nations still wear this style of headgear. During Queen Anne's time the cocked hat was the hat of the gentleman. The correct fashion was to carry it under the arm as much as possible.

The French revolution, which took off so many heads that had worn the cocked hat, took off the cocked hat, too. In its place the crescent shape became the style, partly by force, The direct ancestor of that dreadful thing, the high hat of to-day, was the noble and sturdy beaver. Beavers went out of fashion largely because the supply of material became exhausted.—New York Press.

Edgeley's Wonderful Well.

For many years Edgeley, N. D., has boasted of one of the finest flowing artesian wells in the State. The water comes gushing out with high pressure in a stream as large as a man's arm. The well is 1,370 feet deep, and the water is too saline for domestic use. A beautiful lake has been made at a small cost, which in the winter time furnishes a splendid skating rink for the young people. The water has been placed under control, and is piped through the streets, affording a system of waterworks, the most cheaply of any town in the country.

For many years it has been known that the water was mixed with gas, but no effort was made to separate the two until last fall. C. J. Sturgeon, a druggist, has at last succeeded in accomplishing this after many experiments, and now secures gas for lighting and heating purposes in his store and residence. The separation of the gas is to be accomplished on a larger scale, and the streets and residences are to be lighted and the business houses all heated at a minimum cost, from the same source that furnishes the town a free waterworks system. The well is on the experimental farm, under control of the State Agricultural College.

A number of the larger farms in the State are equipped with such wells, and in the future their farm houses may be lighted and heated at the cost of putting in gas pipes.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

St. Peter Couldn't Keep Him Out.

"The brightest reporter I ever knew," said a newspaper man, "was Billy Gaylor, who died at Hot Springs in 1895. He was a most persistent fellow after an item, and that reminds me of a little story about the last incident of his career. He had been assigned by a certain Chicago daily to interview an eminent bishop about a schism in the church. The bishop didn't want to talk and wouldn't see him, but Gaylor bribed a servant to let him into the hall, and he waylaid the dignitary as he was coming through. He was ordered out for his pains, but next day he penetrated the house again on some pretext or other, and was again fired.

"He repeated the exploit three or four times with similar results, and at last the bishop, coming home late at night, found Bily sitting in his study reading the Bible. Nobody could explain how he got in, but the prelate wilted and told him what he wanted to know, on condition that he would go away and stay away.

"Shortly afterward poor Gaylor got galloping consumption and died, and, happening to meet the bishop at a church conference, I told him that the young man who had once so molested him would never do it again.

"'Let us hope that he is in heaven,' said a clergyman standing by.

"The bishop's eyes twinkled. He loved a joke.

"'No doubt he is,' he replied, gently. 'I don't think they could keep him out.'"—Denver (Col.) Post.

No Fear When Death Draws Nigh.

"I have seen thousands of persons die under all sorts of circumstances, and never yet have I seen one display the slightest fear of death." This remarkable statement was made the other day by a physician who has practiced many years in Philadelphia and who has seen a great deal of hospital service.

"It is a popular fallacy," he went on, "to imagine that a deathbed scene is ever terrible, other than as a parting between loved ones. The fear of the unknown is never present at the last. Even amid ignorance and vice I have never experienced such scenes as a novelist, who strives after realism, will sometimes picture.

"When a patient is told that he cannot recover and the end is near, he invariably seems resigned to his fate, and his only thought seems to be of those who are to be left behind. This is true alike of men and women.

"Those who become hysterical and declare they are not fit to die are the ones who are not as ill as they think they are. They always get well.

"A psychological reason? Oh, I don't know that there is any. It's just a human trait."—Philadelphia Record.

The Ancient War Chest.

Once upon a time there really was a war chest—an actual, literal war chest. Kings of England respected the demands of that chest to a greater extent than they were wont to respect the requirements of a good many other deserving institutions, and all the gold pieces that they felt they could spare from their own pet enterprises they dropped into it as a child put pennies in his little tin bank.

Government officials say when I ask them half seriously if the war chest is to-day hidden away in some burglar-proof vault, that no such thing now exists, that in these days of blue books and public reports that any one can buy for a cent, there is no chance for any such secret fund. Germany, however, is popularly supposed to have a strongly guarded war chest, and so it is believed, have Italy and Austria.—Atlanta Constitution.

Blind Persons and Dreams.

Everybody dreams more or less, but have you ever reflected upon the fact that people who are born blind have only "hearing" dreams? In other words, their mental eye sees nothing; they only hear sounds.

This interesting point came up before a scientific society the other day, and it was found that of 200 blind persons who had been questioned on the subject those who had been born without sight and those who had become blind before their fifth year never saw things or faces in their dreams, while all those whose eyesight was destroyed after the seventh year had as vivid dream visions as seeing people.

Blind persons, it may be observed, dream just as frequently as do normal people.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune,

STRAW FAST REPLACING WOOD.

Many Uses to Which the Refuse of the Grain Field Is Being Put.

The serious inroads upon the timber forests of this country of late years has directed attention to the probable exhaustion of that source of lumber supply and scientists have set about devising substitutes. One of these that promises to be satisfactory is the invention of a New York man. The basis of the substitute is straw, which, with certain chemical combinations, produces a material cheaper and more durable than wood. The new material, which is very solid in structure, can be nailed, screwed, sawed and generally manipulated as easily as lumber, and it is expected to work a revolution in the matter of interior construction.

It is said that chemically prepared straw has been tried and found to be highly satisfactory by railroad companies, blackboard manufacturers, makers of picture frames and packing boxes, by decorating artists and others. For all practical purposes it is the same thing as lumber, but with these important differences, that it is very much cheaper and lasts longer. Every year the forests of America are diminishing to a lamentable degree, and the forestry question has become one of the most serious ones confronting the country. If all that is claimed for the substitute for lumber is true, the importance of the invention can scarcely be overestimated and it deserves to rank with such other productions of man's genius as the electric light, the cotton gin and the telegraph.

The inventor of "straw" lumber, it is said, only succeeded in perfecting his invention after twelve years of experimenting. The new material has, however, been in practical use, although in a small way, for a considerable time, and the knowledge of it thus obtained would seem to demonstrate its value thoroughly.

RELIGION OF THE PRESIDENTS.

Not All American Executives Were Exemplary Church Members.

There has been no religious tests applied to candidates for president of the United States. General Washington was a member of the Episcopal church long before he became president, and was a communicant. Jefferson, though accused of being an atheist, died a believer in a divine being, as asserted by his daughter and by some of his later writings. Both the Adamses were Unitarians. Madison and Monroe were Episcopalians. Jackson became a Presbyterian. Van Buren attended the Dutch Reformed church, but was not a member. W. H. Harrison and Tyler were Episcopalians. Polk never united with any denomination, but during his presidency attended the Presbyterian church. Taylor was an Episcopal attendant. Fillmore was a Unitarian, Pierce a Trinitarian Congregationalist, Buchanan a Presbyterian, and Lincoln and Johnson attended the Presbyterian church. Grant and Hayes went with the Methodists. Garfield was a preacher of the Church of the Disciples. Arthur was an Episcopalian, Cleveland a Presbyterian, Harrison a Presbyterian church member, and President McKinley is a Methodist.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

MISS MORRISON'S STATEMENT

ACTRESS TELLS THE JURY OF BAD TREATMENT AT THE HANDS OF LEIDEN.

SOME DAMAGING TESTIMONY

Elicited In Examintion of State's Witnesses---Sensational Scenes In Court.

The second day's trial at Chattanooga of Miss Julia Morrison for the Murder of Frank Leidenheimer was repele with dramatic situations.

The state introduced witness after witness who painted a black picture of the woman who trembled at their words.

The trend of the testimony showed that she laid in wait for Actor Frank Leidenheimer and when the opportunity came she pulled the pistol she carried concealed in the folds of her dress and fired into his face. After he had falled she stooped over him and deliberately fired a ball into his writhing body.

The examination of witnesses for the state occupied the morning session and the court adjourned until the afternoon.

STATEMENT OF DEFENDANT.

Immediately on reassembling at 2 o'clock, the court ordered the examination of witnesses to proceed and Miss Morrison was called to the stand. The accused woman was quite flustrated at first and seemed to be very much excited, but she soon became calmer and proceeded to give her testimony in an emphatic and clear, though rather dramatic manner. She stated that she had been subjected to all kinds of insults by Leiden; that when Leiden found that she was married he had subjected her to systematic insult and abuse and had continued it until it became unbearable.

The first witness called was W. J. Patterson, the stage manager of the Chattanooga opera house, who testified as follows:

"Liendenheimer said nothing to Miss Morrison or made any effort to assault her when she fired the shot. She shot him before he could speak. The shot was fired the second she saw him."

His story was very damaging to Miss Morrison. On questioning him on Liedenheimer's actions, he swore that he acted the gentleman and tried to avoid any trouble with Miss Morrison, who seemed to be ill-tempered and insulting.

Leon H. Joseph, electrician at the opera house, was next called and his evidence was the most damaging of all for the defense. The attorneys endeavored to make him say he had discussed the case with the prosecutor and fixed up the testimony, but he denied it bitterly.

Here the attorneys on both sides got into an argument, and it looked as if it would be a personal difficulty, until the sheriff made all sit down and the judge ordered the first attorney under arrest who again made a disturbance.

Attorney Latimore asked Witness Joseph if Leidenheimer, the murdered man, was not a Jew. He replied he did not know. At this instant, Mrs. Antz, sister of Leidenheimer, who was present, jumped up and said:

"You lie if you say he was a Jew. You are trying to prejudice the jury."

Judge Estell announced that all demonstrations must stop.

Rogers Ryley, of New York, who was assistant manager of the "Mr. Plaster of Paris" company, was the next witness. His testimony caused a great sensation. When he commenced to testify Miss Morrison began to cry and hide her face. He swore he heard her say to Leidenheimer the morning before the murder: "I'll put a ball through you yet very soon." He swore that he saw her the night of the murder and that she had her street dress on and was not made up for the stage, and did not have her stage dress on or her stage make-up.

The attorneys for Miss Morrison attempted to prevent Mr. Riley from telling what the duties of Leidenheimer, as the stage manager, were.

Here a dispute arose between the attorneys. Judge Estell became enraged and left the stand. He got between the lawyers, took a paper from their hands, and said:

"This farce must stop. I'll decide this controversy. Mr. Riley, you tell all you know. We are going to get at the bottom of this case, and are not going to have anything covered up."

Mr. Riley was then turned over to the defense to be cross examined.

While all this was going on Miss Morrison was spending her time in the courtroom crying and making demonstrations.

When Miss Morrison was called she arose and walked with a confident air toward the witness stand. Every eye was eagerly upon the occupant of the witness box. The seal upon her lips was about to be broken and a tale of romance, cruelty, persecution, insult and tragedy, all of which reads like a work of fiction, was about to be unraveled. Colonel Joe Clift, for the defense, took the stand through the story of her wrongs and her wanderings. She began her story as follows:

"My name is Julia Morrison James. My stage name is Julia Morrison. I am in the theatrical profession. I was born in Kansas, as well as I know. I had some foster parents. I can't state exactly how long after I was born before my mother died. I do not know whether my father lived after my real mother's death. I was married before I was fourteen years of age. I didn't know until after my marriage that they were not my real parents. Their treatment was most severe. They would put me up in a corner and take my ears and hold them against the wall and beat my head.

"My husband and myself went from LaFayette, La., to Paterson, N. J. I then clerked a short time in New York. For a while we boarded on West Fortieth street, then East Fortieth street. I then went with the 'Mr. Plaster of Paris' company.

"After I was employed by Harris, I stayed in New York awhile and rehearsed—went to rehearsals every day and worked hard. Leiden was with the company at that time. Upon the first few occasions he was very gentlemanly. He found no fault whatever. He told me I was great and excellent. I exhibited to Mr. Leiden my costomes which I had to wear.

"In Peckskill, New York," the witness continued, "Leiden came up to my room. The door was open and I was lying on the bed with my head toward the door. I supposed it was my husband who came in. The next I knew there was a pair of arms around me, and he made an indecent proposal.

It became necessary for the witness to tell what Leiden had called her, and she said, "Can't I write these horrible things?" When told she must use the language, she proceeded.

"I heard Leiden say to his assistant not to send out a lithograph of myself, as he expected to get rid of the——" Here the witness used words unfit for print.

"He frequently called me a bitch." Here the witness used language unfit to print.

Referring to the incidents before the tragedy at the Chattanooga opera house, just previous to the tragedy, she said:

"I arrived at the opera house a minute or two before 12. I heard Mr. Leiden say to somebody, 'What must I do with her?' He looked so angry that I started toward the steps. He came and shook his fist in my face. He said: 'I didn't call the rehearsal because the piece needs rehearsing, but to see if you would come.' He said, 'I would address you as a lady if I thought you were a lady, you bitch.' He said that I wasn't fit to be in a dog show. He kicked me in the abdomen and slapped me with his hand. He started to slap me again, but Mr. Breeding interfered. He wouldn't let him hit me again. He asked me why in the hell I didn't send that damned pimp of mine up, and he'd break his neck.

"I made no threat that I remember of to put a ball through Leiden. I always carried a pistol in my bosom. My husband gave it to me in LaFayette, La. I made no statement that I would see Leiden before the curtain went up that night. There is no truth in that.

"That night I went to the opera house with a maid. Mr. Breeding showed me my dressing room. I had on a street costume. The time I was to appear on the stage in the play was fifteen or twenty minutes off from the time the curtain went up. My part did not require me to absolutely dress at all. The very dress I have on Mr. Leiden told me I looked beautiful in and I had worn it in the play.

"After reaching my dressing room I took off my hat, opened my grip and took out my keys to open my trunk." That evening, she stated, Leiden had gone to the toilet room where she was, while she was sick, and had offered an indigntty, which she told to the court, and which is unfit for the prints.

"I pushed him away and pushed him out of the toilet. He slapped me violently. A colored girl came after me. The colored girl followed me up the steps. There was no one in front. I found the steps very narrow. I was just in the act of stepping up the steps when Mr. Leiden leaned over and said in a low voice, 'What in the hell do you mean, you ———; I'll kill you!' I lost consciousness here. I believed he was going to carry out his threats. I have no recollection of firing one, two or three shots. I remember nothing else until the officer came up and said, 'Come, lady!'"

At this juncture the court adjourned until Saturday.

THE USUAL HAPPENED.

Workmen Thaw Dynamite; One Dead and Others Injured.

Four quarrymen on the Tennessee Central railroad near Rockwood, Tenn., attempted to thraw out a stick of dynamite which had been frozen up in a box. The dynamite, of course, exploded, and one man, a negro, was killed and three others fatally injured, two of them dying two hours after the accident.

WILL PAY DEPOSITORS.

The Produce Exchange at New York to Resume Business.

The trustees of the New York Produce Exchange Trust Company have made all arrangements for the resumption of business.

General Samuel Thomas, vice president of the reorganized company, authorized the statement that when the doors open again every depositor who may desire his money will be paid in full.

BRYAN SPEAKS

At Banquet In Chicago On Occasion of "Jackson Day" Celebration By Democrats.

Six hundred Democrats gathered in the banquet hall of the Tremont house at Chicago Saturday evening to observe "Jackson Day" in an appropriate manner. William Jennings Bryan was the honored guest and chief orator of the occasion.

It was nearly midnight when the orators were in full swing, and Mr. Bryan's address was last on the list. Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, acted as toastmaster.

Mr. Bryan, in opening his address, recounted the political situation as it had existed at each successive "Jackson Day" banquet which he had attended in Chicago, and then coming down to later issues he discussed the currency bill, of which he said:

"The currency bill fastens us to the financial systems of the old world and subjects us to the disturbances which affect them, while it places the control of the volume of paper money in the hands of a bank trust, which will be as merciless to the people of this country as Weyler was to the reconcentrados. The fight for bimetallism, at the ratio ot 16 to 1, has not been lost. The increased production of gold has shown the advantage of more money, and has answered the arguments so often made that the parity could not be maintained because of the overproduction of silver."

Mr. Bryan declared that the Republican party is unable to enact and enforce anti-trust laws, and that the Democratic party when in power will meet the issue with a plain and positive remedy. On the subject of "imperialism," he said:

"The question of imperialism will occupy a prominent place in the next campaign. It matters not whether the war in the Philippines ends in the near future or continues until election. The people must determine the policy to be pursued in regard to the Philippines. That policy must contemplate the ultimate independence of the Filipinos or their permanent retention under American sovereignty. If the islands are to be retained permanently the inhabitants must be given the hope of full citizenship or they must be condemned to the lot of subjects. Who desires to admit them to share and share alike with us the destiny of this republic?"

The entire policy of the administration in relation to the Philippines, he declared to be utterly wrong. His speech was received with great enthusiasm.

Other speakers of the evening were General Joseph B. Doe, of Wisconsin; Thomas F. Barkworth, of Michigan; James H. Milligan, of Kentucky, and Howard S. Taylor, of Illinois.

GENERAL GREELY HURT.

Drunken Man Throws Him Out of His Own House.

A Washington dispatch says: General A. W. Greely, the chief signal officer of the army, and the well-known Artic explorer, lies in a serious condition at his home, No. 1914 G street, northwest, as the result of an assault committed on him about half-past 8 o'clock Sunday night by Joseph C. Furnace, a messenger in the employ the Adams Express company.

Furnace was drunk at the time, and having lost his way on the street, disturbed the Greely household by trying to gain admission. General Greely appeared at the door and began to remonstrate when Furnace seized him and threw him out bodily.

"FOR BREACH OF PROMISE."

Niece of General Wheeler Brings Suit Against Chicago Man.

Miss Etta Thomas, a niece of General "Joe" Wheeler, began suit in the superior court at Chicago Saturday against William H. Fahrney, a prominent west side society man, asking $100,000 damages for alleged breach of promise to marry.

Widow Jackson Invited.

The North Carolina delegation in congress sent a telegram to Mrs. Stonewall Jackson, inviting her to participate in the banquet to be given in Washington January 12, to aid the erection of a monument to General Robert E. Lee.

MORE TERRITORY SECURED.

Watson Announces That We Have Captured the Island of Sibutu.

The United States navy has taken possession of another island in the east. The news of the seizure was contained in the following dispatch:

"CAVITE, January 5, 1900.—On December 21st, Wentsbaugh, commanding the Albay, a little gunboat, hoisted the flag on Sibutu island and the chief dato provided and raised the pole. Natives and north Borneo authorities pleased. WATSON."

The island lies at the southwestern angle of the boundary line of the quadrangle inclosing the Philippine group.

CAPERS DEPRECATES WAR.

South Carolina Bishop Strongly Criticises Government's Policy.

Bishop Ellison Capers, formerly a confederate general, in his annual visit to Trinity Episcopal church at Columbia, S. C., Sunday criticised the national government in the prosecution of war in the Philippines. He lamented the fact that a Christian nation was using shot and shell to remove a less fortunate people from the way of its march of progress.

JULIA'S DEMEANOR NOT EMOTIONAL

Her Self-Possession Displeases Her Lawyers, It Is Said.

A MISTRIAL IS PREDICTED

Two Jurymen Found To Be of Questionable Qualification.

The hearing and testimony in the Julia Morrison trial was resumed at Chattanooga Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, the prisoner, Miss Morrison, being again called to the stand for cross-examination.

Miss Morrison took the stand and the letter to Manager Harris in which she made complaint of Leiden was shown to the witness, and her employment contract with Harris, and she was asked to identify the signatures. She examined them and said that they were signed by her. "The letter to Harris," she said, "was written at the dictation of my husband."

Continuing on her cross-examination in answer to a question from the state's attorney, she said: "My foster mother did not tell me why she adopted me. She said she got me in Kansas; didn't tell me where. I have never seen or made any real search for my real parents or relatives. My foster parents said my real parents were dead. I do not know the first names of my parents. Do not know their business."

A large number of depositions were introduced by the defense. Most of these were by employes of play houses in other cities, and were intended to show that Leiden's abuse of Miss Morrison was of frequent occurrence; others were from people who had known the defendent and whose depositions were to show that her character was good.

It was learned Sunday that the attorneys for the defense were somewhat disappointed at the impression Miss Morrison made on the witness stand. She was entirely too self-satisfied, and did not display enough emotion and modest reticence. She went through the ordeal most of the time with a smile on her face, and did not seem to realize the gravity of her situation.

It was also learned that one of the jurymen had killed a man and had been tried for murder, and this gave the state something to think over. Ben McGill, the juryman referred to, when a young man at school, about ten years ago, while engaged in a game of baseball, struck one of his companions on the head with a bat, inflicting an injury from which death ensued. McGill was put on trial for his life, but it appearing to the jury that the quarrel was sudden and that McGill did not intend to kill his antagonist, returned a verdict of involuntary manslaughter and the case was dismissed by the judge with a fine of $500.

Another juryman, it was learned, was a nephew of the chief counsel for the defense, and another expressed a decided opinion before he was accepted on the jury of the justification of Miss Morrison in killing Leiden. With these stories current, there is a general belief that the trial will result either in a mistrial or an acquittal.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Antz, brother-in-law and sister of Leiden, left Sunday night for Bristol, Tenn., and it is stated that they have some very startling evidence that they expect to get at that place to be introduced in the latter part of the hoaring.

GIN MAKERS COMBINE.

Six Concerns Organized and Placed Under One Set of Officers.

The organization of the Continental Gin Company has been affected with a capital of $2,000,000, and the following plants have entered the consolidation: Daniel Pratt Gin company, Prattville, Ala.; Smith & Sons, Gin and Machine company, of Avondale, Ala.; Winship Machine company, of Atlanta; Eagle Cotton Gin company, of Bridgewater, Mass.; Munger Improved Cotton Machine Manufacturing company, of Dallas, Texas, and Northington-Munger-Pratt Gin company, of East Birmingham, Ala

Strikers Return To Work.

C. C. Yonge, manager of the Sanford Lumber company's mills at Caryville, Fla., and Arthur McConnell, leader of the Knights of Labor in this district, have amicably adjusted the differences between the strikers and the mill owners, and the men go back to work.

To "Observe" Hostilities.

General Otis has cabled the war department that in accordance with instructions, Captain Reichmann, 17th infantry, now in the Philippines, has been ordered to South Africa to report upon military operations in the Transvaal.

MOTHER WAS DESPERATE.

Rushed Into Flame, Where Men Feared To Go, and Rescued Children.

Mrs. Emanuel Hoffman dashed into her burning dwelling at "Springfield" farm, near Williamsport, Md., after several men had been driven back by the smoke and intense heat, Sunday night and heroically saved the lives of her three children. The flesh was almost entirely scorched from her hands and her face and neck are painfully burned. Her two-months-old babe is also seriously burned, but physicians say its life is safe,

BRITISH SORTIE THAT FAILED

Veldt Was Thickly Dotted With Bodies of the Dead.

BOERS WERE INVINCIBLE

Red Cross Flags Were Interposed to Stop Hostilities.

The London Times publishes the following dispatch from Mafeking, dated December 26th:

"At dawn today Colonel Baden-Powell organized an unsuccessful attack upon a strong position of the enemy at Gametree, two miles from Mafeking, from which the Boers have been maintaining a desultory but annoying shell and rifle fire for several weeks. The railway has recently been reconstructed between the town and Gametree, where the Boers had destroyed it, the final repairs being made in preparation for the sortie.

During the night the armored train, with Maxim and Hotchkiss guns, under Captain Williams and troops, took up positions for attack from two sides. Captain Lord Charles Bentinck and a squadron were in reserve upon the left, while the extreme left wing was occupied by artillery under Major Panzera and a galloping Maxim of the cape police, the whole being under Colonel Hore.

"Emplacements were thrown up during the night, the order being to attack at dawn and the artillery fire to desist upon prolonged tooting of the armored train. At daybreak the guns opened fire and rapidly drew the reply of the enemy, our shells bursting within effective range. Captain Vernon gave the signal to cease firing and to advance, his squadron leading off.

"As our men engaged the position with their rifle fire it was soon found that the strength of the fort was greater than we had supposed. The enemy concentrated such an exceedingly hot fire that the advance of Captain Vernon was almost impossible, but with remarkable heroism a few men actually reached the sand bags of the fort within 300 yards of the area of the fort.

"But nothing living could exist there, since the ground was swept by Mauser and Martini bullets. The men who charged through this zone of fire suffered terribly, and in following their officers to capture the fort twenty men lost their lives. Captain Sandford was the first to fall, and Captain Vernon, already twice wounded, and Lieutenant Paton were killed at the foot of the fort. These two officers, climbing a ditch which surrounded the fort, thrust their revolvers through the enemy's loopholes only to be shot themselves the next moment.

"Gametree is surrounded with scrub which concealed many sharpshooters, and their accuracy of fire still further confussed the men who had followed Captain Vernon and who saw him and his brother officers killed. Being without commanders, they were driven off at one point, but they endeavored to scale the fort at others. They found the position of the Boers, however, almost impregnable.

"When we retired under cover of the armored train so many men had been wounded that a suspension of hostilities occurred under the auspices of the Red Cross. The veldt around the Boer position was at once dotted with flags of mercy and it was seen that our wounded were scattered within but a short radius of the fort. We had almost completely surrounded it; and, had it not been so extraordinarily well protected, we should have been in possession."

PAY WAS TOO SLOW.

K. of L. Members Quit Their Jobs at Caryville, Fla.

Members of the Knights of Labor employed at the Sanford Lumber Company's mill at Caryville, Fla., demanded a few days ago that they be paid weekly instead of monthly. The demand was refused, and Friday afternoon the hands struck. All work at the mill then ceased.

Bribery Charges Up.

The senate committee on privileges and elections began its investigation Friday of the charges of bribery made in connection with the election of Senator Clark, of Montana.

DEPRIVED OF MEDICINE,

Little Children of Christian Scientists Die of Diphtheria.

The Pittsburg, (Pa.,) Dispatch says: Diphtheria and Christian Science have had a bitter battle in a New Brighton family for the past two weeks. Diphtheria has won so far. Two children are dead, while a third child and the father are dangerously ill with the same disease.

Not until forced to do so by the local authorities would the parents permit a physician in the house, and even then the father refused to give the medicine prescribed, and the health officials were compelled to take the family in charge.

THIS IN KENTUCKY COURT.

Trial Ended When Guns Were Pulled and Two Killed.

News has been received of a general fight on Otter Creek, Clay county, Ky., in which Lige Lewis and General May were shot and killed, and four other participants seriously wounded. The fight occurred at a school house on Otter Creek, where one of the Jacksons was on trial before a magistrate for killing another Jackson,

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

A glass factory has been started at St. Helens, England, in which the whole system of blowing is replaced by an automatic arrangement of molds and blowpipes worked by compressed air. The output has been much increased.

A hard rubber steam acid pump is made by a New York firm. It is designed specially for conveying acids, chemicals or any volatile liquid. All parts which come in contact with such substance are of hard rubber. These parts are held by and mounted on iron, which takes up all the strain incident to the work performed. These pumps are operated by steam like the ordinary steam pump or by electric motor.

Several months ago a bather was diving in shallow water and fractured several of the spinal vertebræ. He was taken to Roosevelt hospital, New York City, and an operation was performed upon him for the removal of the fractured pieces of bone. The result of the operation has been very satisfactory and the improvement from day to day is marked. He is now regaining the sense of touch and has some slight control of the muscles.

As there is considerable typhoid fever in Natal, all the British troops which have been transported to South Africa have been given the option of being inoculated with the anti-typhoid serum, and, according to the London Lancet, 70 per cent. have availed themselves of the opportunity. The inoculating with serum has worked most successfully at the Indian posts where it has been tried, and the present operations in South Africa which are being conducted on so large a scale will demonstrate the availablily of the serum treatment in the prevention of enteric fever so often prevalent with armies in the field.

Hans S. Beattie, who was formerly street cleaning commissioner of New York City, considers that the street railway system might be used to help solve the garbage and ashes problem in New York City, and to aid in the expeditious removal of snow and ice. The withdrawal of 300 horses and carts from the most congested part of the city during the busy hours of the day would, in itself, be a benefit. If the street car lines should be utilized, many of the dumps which now occupy valuable piers could be done away with, and the rental value of these dumping stations if they should be released to the commerce of a port would bring in a substantial financial return to the city.

The common and old-fashioned idea is that the tints of autumn foliage are caused by frost. Stated briefly the causes are these: The green matter in the tissue of a leaf is composed of two colors, red and blue. When the sap ceases to flow in the autumn and the natural growth of the tree ceases, oxidation of the tissue takes place. Under certain conditions the green leaf changes to red; under different conditions it takes on a yellow or brown tint—due to the difference in combination of the original constituents of the green tissue, and to the varying conditions of climate, exposure, and soil. A dry climate produces more brilliant foliage than one that is damp and warm. This is the reason that our American autumns are so much more gorgeous than those of England.

BEQUEST IN A BIBLE.

Snug Sum of Money Found in Tattered Book Bought at Auction.

New Bibles are now so cheap that old ones have little or no marketable value, but the experience of a casual buyer, says the London Telegraph, may lead to a run on tattered copies of the Scriptures in search of hidden treasure—not spiritual, but material. And the fact that it cannot be discovered without examining the volumes may lead to ultimate profit, even though there may be mundane lucre between the boards.

According to the Church of England Pulpit, a young fellow named Richard Collings, employed in Smithfield market, purchased at an auction a few years ago for $1.37 an old leather trunk containing clothing, books and tools. Among the articles was a venerable, much used family Bible. A few Sunday evenings ago, during the absence of Collings from home, his wife commenced reading some of the chapters to her two young daughters, and while turning over the leaves she came upon several which were pasted together. She immediately set to work to separate them with great care, and when success crowned her efforts the good woman was intensely surprised to find hidden between the gummed pages $25 in Bank of England notes. They were enclosed in an envelope, were frayed and dirty, and on the back of one was written in ink the following remarkable bequest:

"I have worked very, very hard for this, and, having no relatives, leave thee, dear reader, whosoever shall be the owner of this Holy Book, my lawful heir."

Mitigating Circumstances.

"I beg your pardon," exclaimed the man in the automobile.

"Well, that's an improvement, anyhow," said the man who had been run over, picking himself up and looking around for his hat. "When a fellow with a delivery wagon runs over me he never stops his horse to beg my pardon."—Chicago Tribune.

SOME STARTLING RUMORS

Report Has It That Republicans Will Forcibly Resist Seating of Goebel If Found Necessary.

A special from Lexington, Ky., says: On the advice of ex-Governor Bradley, leading counsel for the Republicans in the contest being made for the state offices, they will hold out against the Democrats, even though the legislature and the state election commission decide that the Republicans are not entitled to the offices. He thinks this action would result in throwing the contests into the federal courts for final settlement.

Probably one thousand stanch Republicans will be summoned to Frankfort, ostensibly as witnesses in the contests, but each man will go heavily armed and he will be ready to fight to the death for the defeat of Goebel. Already companies of such Republicans have been formed in several of the leading cities and they have been drilled in the duties they will have to perform if the Goebel men try to take the offices. Each one of the Goebel leaders is to be covered by two of the republicans, and if they make a hostile move they are to be shot down.

Of course this action would produce a riot and Governor Taylor would have to call out the militia to quell it. He would then declare the state under martial law and he could follow this up by asking the national government to his aid. The work of preparing the militia for an outbreak has gone on steadily since the election and now it is ready for any emergency.

Signal cannon have been placed at all leading points and when they are discharged there will be a hurried gathering of the troops in the respective armories. All rabid Goebel men have been eliminated from the militia, and as it is at pressnt constituted every man in the service will fight to prevent Goebel from taking the governor's chair if ordered to do so.

Major P. P. Johnston, the Brown Democrotic candidate for lieutenant governor, in an interview said he believed Goebel was about to steal the governorship, and that he will meet with no such armed opposition from the Republicans as is threatened. He says the Republicans are afraid to fight.

Urey Woodson, national Democratic committeeman and a member of the ways and means committee, says:

"Mr. Goebel will be in possession of the governor's office between January 25 and and February 1st. Blackburn, and not Goebel, is the man who insisted on carrying the contest up to the legislature."

GILMORE WAS RESCUED.

All Doubt As To Lieutenant's Safety Is Now Removed.

Official confirmation has come from both General Otis and Admiral Watson of the first reports from Manila of the release of the American prisoners, and there is no longer any doubt that Lieutenant Gillmore, of the Yorktown, is among the number. General Otis's dispatch reads as follows:

"MANILA, January 6.—The prisoners now en route from Vigan arrived tonight, and a list of them will be telegraphed tomorrow. Captain Gillmore is among the number."

Admiral Watson's advice is as follows:

"MANILA, January 5.—Colonels Hare and Howe have recaptured all of the American prisoners, including Gillmore, now at Vigan."

Three Die In Flames.

A tenement house fire in New York Saturday resulted in three deaths and seven persons being injured. The deaths are: Mrs. Mary Sutherly, a widow; Frank Sutherly, nine years old; James Sutherly, 22 months old.

TONS OF TOBACCO BURNED.

Three Thousand Hogsheads Reduced to Ashes at Richmond, Va.

At Richmond, Va., Friday evening fire broke out in the Merchants' and Planters' tobacco warehouse at Fifteenth and Cary streets. In it were stored some 3,000 hogsheads of tobacco. Kingan & Co. suffered a loss of some $30,000; fully insured. The loss on the tobacco in the Merchants' and Planters' warehouse is estimated at $350,000, with insurance of about $300,000. The building was fully insured. Total estimated loss, $400,000; insurance, $350,000.

REMAINS NOT WANTED.

The Body of Lynched Man Refused Acceptance By His Parents.

Police Sergeant Watt, of Lynchburg, father of W. W. Watt, who was lynched at Newport News for assaulting Mrs. Simpson, on learning that his son was guilty, declined to go to Newport News and arranged by telephone for the burial. Watt's sister, who is a teacher in a Lynchburg school, also telephoned if her brother was guilty she did not want the body sent home, so it will be sent to the Richmond Medical college.

DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE MEETING.

The Democratic executive committee of Shelby County is hereby called to meet at Columbiana on Tuesday, January 30, 1900, at 11.30 a. m. Each member is earnestly requested to attend.

W. B. BROWNE, Chairman.

NO LOOKING BACKWARD.

We republish from an exchange a resume of the acquisition of territory by this government during this century. It will give some idea of the good results of the application of that policy. It is also shown to be a Democratic policy, all the territory, with the exception of Alaska, having been acquired under Democratic administrations.

The only thing about which Democrats can possibly differ is the advisability, from an economic standpoint, of applying this policy to the territory already acquired from Spain. In fact, having acquired the territory, the only question is, Shall we keep it and how? Democracy has always stood for expansion of territory, not for purposes of power, but for the advantages of increased commerce and trade, while at the same time it has stood for the extension of civil freedom to the acquired peoples.

We can not shut our eyes to the advantages to accrue from the control of these new islands, any more than we can deny the good that came from the building of the great "empire of the West." The Democratic party may commit political suicide by repudiating the teachings of Jefferson and the long line of faithful disciples, but the country will never stop to listen to the vaporings of those who try to lead it astray. The watchword of this century has been "Progress;" it will not be discarded at the close for some man's selfish ambition.

UNDER the workings of the back-tax law the farmers of this county are paying taxes on an average of at least 75 per cent of the full value of their lands. Governor Johnston's corporation lands in Walker County were assessed at less than 20 per cent of their value. That's the kind of a friend he is to the common people.

IN its last issue The Advocate said something to the effect that "on account of the Democratic examinations there were few teachers that passed, and there will be a scarcity of teachers." If our neighbor would inform itself it would be able to give more reliable information to its readers. Only those teachers working under conditional contracts were passed upon. The remainder are being passed upon now.

WILL the Court Journal tell us how much of Chap Cory's time is spent in the business management of that paper, or in the service of Johnston as a candidate—which amounts to the same thing—and if he deducts it from his salary as private secretary? Also how much time the adjutant-general has spent campaigning for the Governor, and if he deducted it from his salary? There are others the Journal might include in its statement, beginning with the Governor himself.

THE Court Journal don't like the Morgan conference because it was held in a room in the Morris Hotel. We plain people would rather risk a conference held in a rented room in a public house than one held in the backroom of the Alabama National Bank or in the Governor's private office. Near the vaults that hold the money or in the room where appointments are made is a very good place to do effectual work, but strictly honest plain people prefer a place that is rented for the purpose.

THE Court Journal complains that the Morgan committee is composed of lawyers, officeholders, and speculators. Well, the practice of law is an honorable calling; the officeholders got their commissions from the people and are responsible to them for their actions; it is a little strange that one speculator should go back on another, bu Mr. Pinckard probably knows Mr. Johnston along that line, and he is therefore for Morgan. The lawyers supporting Morgan will compare favorably with those supporting Johnston. The officeholders supporting Johnston are creatures of his own power, while the speculators in his columns are mostly his partners in various deals. Altogether we like the comparison.

THE new century question is one of figures purely, and is entirely open to mathematical demonstration. The beginning of the first century was January 1, A. D. 1. No one can deny that the 20th century begins 1,900 full years from the time the first began. The following simple addition will demonstrate it:

	Year.	Mo.	Day.
First century began......	1	1	1
Twentieth century begins	1901	1	1

Or from another standpoint: All agree that the first year ended December 31, A. D. 1. Then the 19th century would end 1,899 years after the first year ended. Therefore:

	Year.	Mo.	Day.
First year ended..........	1	12	31
Add 1,899 years	1899	0	0
Nineteenth century ends	1900	12	31

or, on December 31, 1900.

MR. BRYAN ON EXPANSION.

In a recent interview Mr. Bryan thus expresses himself on the subject of expansion:

> I am a firm believer in the enlargement and extension of the limits of the Republic. I do not mean by that the extension by the addition of contiguous territory, nor to limit myself to that. Wherever there is a people intelligent enough to form a part of this Republic, it is my belief that they should be taken in. Wherever there is a people who are capable of having a voice and a representation in this government, there the limits of the Republic may be extended. The Filipinos are not such a people. The Democratic party has ever favored the extension of the limits of this Republic, but it has never advocated the acquisition of subject territory to be held under colonial government.

In the above expression Mr. Bryan admits the Democracy of expansion. He also by implication admits that there is a difference between expansion and imperialism, and in the closing sentence defines that difference. However, he seeks to limit the sphere of extension to those people who are intelligent enough to understand at once the theories and practices of our form of government. He rather intimates that the Democratic party has always so limited the sphere of the application of this policy. Herein we think Mr. Bryan errs.

If we have read history aright, Mr. Jefferson favored the annexation of Cuba in his day. It is doubtful if the Cubans then, or now, possessed that degree of intelligence which Mr. Bryan would make the test. Really, intelligence would not always make men fit. Experience would be the better test of capability.

But it is enough for the present that the recognized leader of the Democracy has so far expressed himself as to leave no doubt that expansion is Democratic; that there is a difference between expansion and imperialism. Governor Johnston and his followers have heretofore classed all those who favor extending our territory under the general head of imperialists, and have proceeded on the idea that there is no distinction. Since Mr. Bryan has spoken the above they will have to revise their position, and they ought to be manly enough to acknowledge the injustice done Senator Morgan in calling him an imperialist. Following Mr. Bryan's own test, which we have shown to be limited, they can say no worse of the Senator than that he mistakes the ability of the Filipinos to enter into our very highly intellectual system of self-government.

Indeed, Mr. Bryan goes further in the application of this theory than Senator Morgan has ever gone. He says, "Wherever there is a people intelligent enough to form a part of this Republic, it is my belief that they should be taken in." Wherever covers a large space. Most of the South American people are intelligent enough: all the people of Europe are intelligent enough; many of the people of Asia are intelligent enough; a few of the people of Africa are intelligent enough. Mr. Bryan would reach forth the hand of grasping to the four corners of the earth, but he would leave the beclouded Filipinos to grope in the darkness of personal dictatorship, because, forsooth, they are not intelligent enough to understand our ways. There are many people intelligent enough the acquisition of whom would bring no advantages. Reason and humanity would, we think, dictate the acquisition of territory necessary to the extension of commerce, and the ultimate application to its government of the principles of home rule, principles that the most intelligent Republicans have never imbibed, and which may be best learned through experience, as our own people have learned them and as they have been applied to all our territories.

However, we await the reconstruction of Governor Johnston's position to fit the above delaration of his model.

SOME TRUST FIGURES.

The following are some of the recent increase in prices due directly to the control by trusts of the articles mentioned.

Stoves have increased 30 per cent.

Wagons have increased from $4 to $5.

Copper has doubled in price.

Fourteen-inch plows that sold for $10 now sell for $14.

Rope that sold for 9 cents per pound now sells for 12 cents.

A common stove pipe sold for 10 cents; it goes now at 20 cents.

Bolts and rods have gone up 75 per cent.

Tin has increased from $1.50 to $2 a box.

Cultivators have increased from $3 to $4.

Hoes, forks, rakes, shovels, spades and such articles have gone up to the consumer 45 per cent.

Nails, per keg, have gone up from $2.20 to $4.10; barbed wire, galvanized, from $2.40 a hundred pounds to $4.

Binder twine which cost 7 cents a pound now costs from 11 to 12½.

Glass has increased 40 per cent.

This does not include the decrease in the number of laborers in those lines of industry. In the face of these figures Governor Johnston congratulates himself that he has brought into Alabama a trust of $20,000,000 capital to further control the manufacture of iron and the production of coal. We are anxious to see whether his pet pays taxes this year or next or ever on $20,000,000 of property.

OVER in our sister State of Mississippi Mr. Sullivan has just been elected to the federal Senate. He made the race on the issue of expansion and won. Mississippi remained true to the Democratic creed, true to her own interests. We think Alabama will do likewise.

COMMITTEE MEETING.

Elsewhere will be seen a call for a meeting of the Democratic executive committee of this county on the 30th of the present month. The business of this meeting will be the arrangement for a primary or convention for the nomination of county candidates and for the selection of delegates to the State convention. Of course the date will be fixed to conform to the action of the State committee some ago. The method of nomination will be for the committee to decide.

We favor a primary election in each precinct for the selection of delegates to a county convention, and at that primary we would like to see a direct vote on the Senatorship. We also desire to see every white man in the county who will accept the principles of the party and promise to vote for its nominees invited to participate in that election and express his choice for Senator.

We hope every member of the committee will be present at the meeting and vote in favor of the above plan. We want the doors opened for recruits from the white people, and we want to see how the Democrats of the county stand on the principal issue.

As there will be few candidates for county offices a primary for that purpose would accomplish no good; but if the Democrats by ballot elect good men as delegates to the county convention they will make wise selections for county candidates. Now let the committemen begin the campaign by an energetic attendance upon this meeting, and their example will be followed by an enthusiastic support of the ticket and by victory in August.

TWENTY-TWO of the 35 members of the Morgan committee were ardent supporters of Johnston against Dick Clarke in 1896. He doesn't seem to hold his friends.

A CENTURY OF EXPANSION.

What the Acquisition of Territory Has Accomplished for Us.

One hundred years ago the Mississippi from the mouth of Red River to the Lake of the Woods was geographically the western frontier of the United States. Historically, the pioneers of Ohio and the Northwestern Territory and the unborn States of Indiana and Illinois were descending the declivity of the Appalachian Mountains and disappearing in the forests whose solitude extended from Fort Dearborn to Natchez.

Beyond the Mississippi to the Pacific was an undiscovered country, under the dominion of France, England, Mexico and Spain, a mysterious region of unexplored deserts, of illimitable prairies and plains; of nameless rivers and colossal mountain ranges; the land of dreams, of romance and adventure, as unknown as the interior of Africa today. St. Louis, New Orleans and Pensacola were foreign towns, and the name of Chicago, now one of the chief cities of the world, was not written on the map.

The entire population of the Union was about the same as that of the State of New York in 1900. Its area was not much in excess of 800,000 square miles, and its organic law had no provisions for acquiring foreign territory, for holding colonial dependencies, nor for the incorporation of alien communities.

The foundation of the empire of the west was laid by the purchase in 1803 for $15,000,000 of the province of Louisiana, which more than doubled the national domain, adding 1,171,931 square miles, comprising Alabama and Mississippi north of parallel 31 degrees, all of Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota west of the Mississippi, Nebraska, the Arkansas River, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming east of the Rocky Mountains, Oklahoma and the Indian Territory. This stupendous acquisition, now the granary of the world, the inexhaustible storehouse of the base and precious metals, rich in every element of future opulence, was denounced by Josiah Quincy, of Massachusetts, when Louisiana was admitted, as a virtual dissolution of the Union, justifying all the States in preparing for amicable or violent separation.

The annexation of Florida by treaty with Spain in 1819, of Texas by joint resolution of Congress in 1845, of Utah, Nevada, Arizona, western Colorado and New Mexico by conquest from Mexico and by the Gadsden purchase, which added more than a million square miles to our possessions, were due to the determination of the South to retain control of the Senate for the protection of slavery, but by the operation of economic laws, culminating in the war of the rebellion, all except Florida have become integral parts of the Empire of the West.

Great Britain in 1846 surrendered a doubtful claim to Oregon, Idaho and Washington, and Russia by treaty March 30, 1867, ceded Alaska, with 577,390 square miles, for $7,200,000. So that the sun never sets on our boundaries, and when at 8 his evening rays glow upon our western frontier at Behring Straits his morning beams gild the headlands of Maine.

In less than one hundred years the untrodden wilderness of 1800, ten times greater in extent than France, has become the abode of thirty million people residing in twenty-four States and three territories, sending forty-eight Senators to the national Congress, with agricultural productions that control the food markets of the whole civilized world.

Nonresident Notice.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, SHELBY COUNTY
In Chancery at Columbiana, Ala., Sixth District, Northeastern Chancery Division.
Joseph R. Davis, complainant, vs. Susan E. Davis, defendant.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit of J. L. Peters that the defendant, Susan E. Davis, is a non-resident of the State of Alabama and that her place of residence is to affiant unknown, and, further that, in the belief of said affiant, the defendant is over the age of twenty-one years.

It is therefore ordered by the Register that publication be made in THE CHRONICLE, a newspaper published in the city of Columbiana, Ala., once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring her, the said Susan E. Davis, to plead answer or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 8th day of January, A. D., 1900, or in thirty days thereafter a decree pro confesso may be taken against her.

Done at office in Columbiana, Ala., this 9th day of December, A. D., 1899.

CURRENT * CRITICISMS

By MRS. F. W. GIST.

Mrs. S. T. Rorer is still roaring away in the Ladies' Home Journal, and is now filling up space with a series of instruction on how to train a green servant. She is no doubt racking her brain and searching diligently in her effort to instruct somebody. The average Southern woman, we believe, is not only a better cook than Mrs. Rorer, but also possesses far superior skill and tact in "training a green servant." We have yet to discover a new thought or expression from her on the subject. The illustrated tableaux of fine dishes, also gotten up to fill pages of this popular journal, are very pretty to look upon and serve well for little girls and small children to trim out carefully with a pair of scissors and decorate the walls of their dolls' dining rooms with.

⁂

Paul Pry, in last Sunday's Age-Herald, writes interestingly on Dr. Savage's new book, Life Beyond Death. In her quotations from the work we find this striking thought: "I do not believe for a moment that I have a soul. If I have I might lose it. As the theologians say, I believe I am a soul and have a body." This is certainly the more rational and reassuring view to take on the subject. Mrs. Smith's entire criticism is one of the best we have seen from her pen.

⁂

Senator Pettus has complimented us with a copy of Life and Character of Nelson Dingley, and in these eulogies one finds much to admire and reflect upon, obliterating the fact that he was a partisan Republican. The notorious Dingley tariff bill brought down such a deluge of wrath, antagonism and criticism from Democrats from all over the country, one is liable to overlook the commendable traits of character and superior abilities of the man. A lesson everyone should learn and treasure up is never to confuse political differences and deficiences with personal character or actual ability. The stench of latter-day politics is in the tendency to debauch and cover with corruption the personal character of every candidate for public office. Can't our American manhood rise above these conditions? Or will they continue to trail their consciences in polluted dust of campaign lies?

⁂

One bright little woman in Alabama is continuously writing sarcastic things, mostly in jest to be sure, yet scarcely ever complimentary to her own sex, while she is ever saying a deal of small things and complimentary boomerang about some man or men. She seems to have a mania for saying "catchy things" that will take with her gentlemen friends. We don't like to see a woman resort to that kind of coquetry to win favor; in fact, no sort of coquetry will win genuine respect or deep admiration.

⁂

The Republican party in the coming national campaign can not hope to win many votes on their recent policy of expansion. Testimonials from all parts of the country are rushing out in proof that expansion is a Democratic measure, old as the hills.

⁂

Mr. Blackman, the Age-Herald cartoonist, surely has a fortune ahead if he will only persevere.

⁂

New Jersey is expanding in trust organizations beyond anything of the sort we have observed in latter-day sinfulness.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

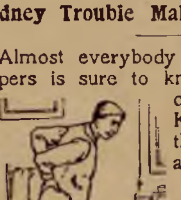
Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.



Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

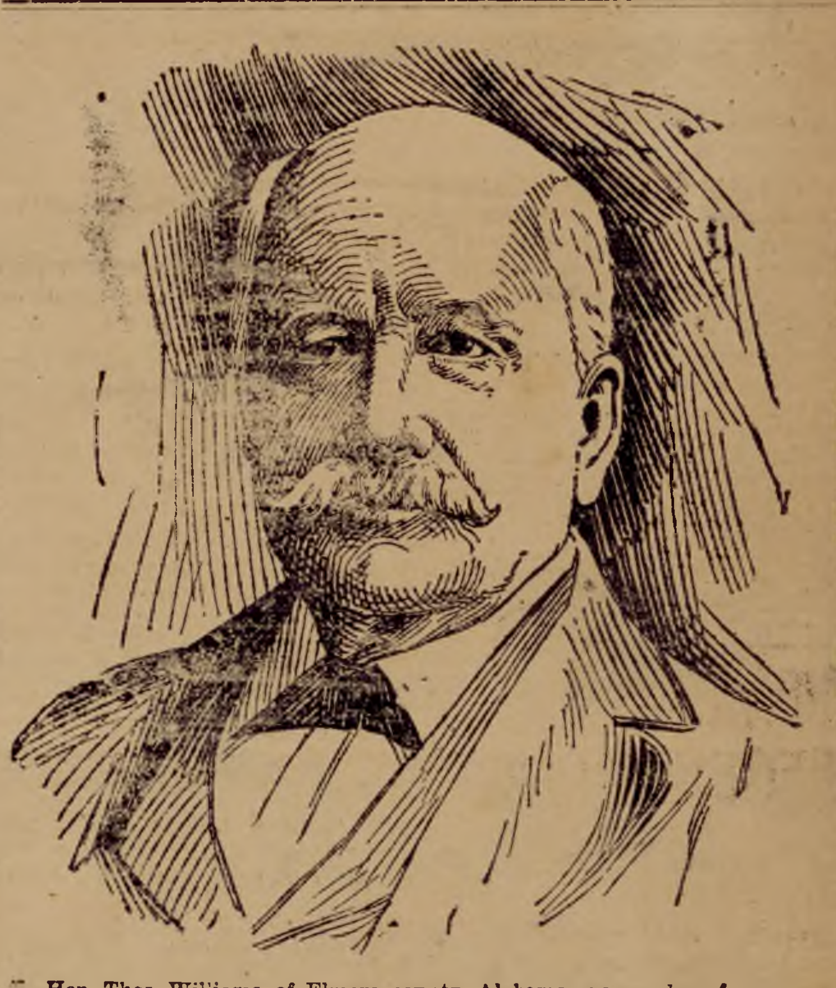
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.



Hon. Thos. Williams, of Elmore county, Alabama, ex member of congress, statesman, orator, writer and one of the best informed men on the theoretical and practical application of commercial fertilizers. He is one of the largest cotton planters in the state, and produces his great crops upon poor sandy uplands by the skillful use of commercial fertilizers. He uses the ALABAMA FERTILIZER exclusively—after having tried nearly all other leading brands of complete fertilizers. His words, like rifle balls, are few, and go straight to the mark:

WETUMPKA, ALA., September 9, 1899.

DEAR SIRS:—Speaking from experimental tests, in results I am assured the ALABAMA FERTILIZER put up by you, is not excelled by any on our market, and I commend it to the public as a genuine fertilizer productive of good results.

The bags treated by the VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVER used by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., successfully resisted the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in the fertilizers, also preventing all loss from wasting.

Yours truly,

THOS. WILLIAMS.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT ANALYSIS.

Bulletin No. 12, issued by the Alabama Department of Agriculture, shows the actual commercial value of the ALABAMA FERTILIZERS to be 19.33 per cent more valuable than all the complete fertilizers or guanos offered for sale in the State of Alabama for the season covered by said bulletin.

Bulletin No. 13, just issued by the Department of Agriculture, shows the actual analysis, from samples sent to the Department by dealers and consumers throughout the State, that the ALABAMA FERTILIZER is actually $3.54 per ton or 24 per cent better than the guaranteed analysis by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., and this answers the question so often asked, "why the ALABAMA FERTILIZER produces so much better crops than other fertilizers of equal guaranteed analysis?" The ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be shipped in the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVED BAGS. There is no other preserved bag on the market of any value.

The Commissioner of Agriculture recommends and endorses it in the following words:

"I therefore unhesitatingly say that I believe the bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVING PROCESS will resist the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in fertilizers; that the meshes of the bags are so filled by the process as to prevent all wastage, and that if generally used by manufacturers, would be of inestimable value to carriers, dealers and consumers.

(Signed) "I. F. CULVER,
"Commissioner of Agriculture."

These MUMMIA PRESERVED BAGS are almost indestructible by the weather or Fertilizer. Can be hauled in the rain without material damage to bag or contents. Fertilizers put up in these bags can be hauled out to the farm at any time and kept ready for use.

The ALABAMA FERTILIZER is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all round fertilizer for cotton and corn.

ALABAMA FERTILIZER RECORD.

It has produced nearly four bales of cotton on one acre of poor sandy upland.

One hundred and thirty-two bushels of corn on one acre of poor sandy upland.

Two thousand and forty one bushels of corn on twenty acres of poor upland.

Land and corn accurately surveyed and measured by competent disinterested and honorable men.

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 48 premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

ESTABLISHED 1880
ALABAMA
TRADE MARK

This trade mark is registered. It is our property. It is not likely to be counterfeited, as that would subject the perpetrator to the danger of heavy fine and imprisonment (see U. S. laws respecting copyrights). It is on every genuine sack of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

As required by state law the word "ALABAMA" in large letters is found on every bag of fertilizer offered for sale in this state. Some unscrupulous persons have employed this means to deceive you.

See that the above trade mark is on the bag, and take none offered you as the ALABAMA FERTILIZER without it.

Rev. J. K. Milner left several days since for Georgia and will have the pastorate of a church at Rossville. He was granted license to preach at the last meeting of Presbytery.

As the result of some strife between the united mine workers and the Montevallo Coal & Railway Company at Dogwood a few weeks ago, the union laborers have found themselves without a job. The company has decided to employ convicts in its mines, and a number have already been put to work there. The convicts, it is said, have been leased from this county and from Dallas, and are all young men. Only a few non-union men are at work in the mines alongside the convicts.

Rev. W. T. Holdridge preached his initial sermon at the Methodist church Sunday morning and made a spleddid impression upon his hearers.

H. A. Dalsheim, salesman for a dry goods house in Columbus, Ga., is visiting his family for a few days.

Weaver & Mason have dissolved partnership, Mason having withdrawn to engage in other business.

The number of pupils in school now will reach 125, and is calculated to extend beyond these figures soon.

James Evans has recently moved into the Will Tinney residence, Will having moved his family to Bolin Villa, where he will be more accessible to his work.

J. M. Brown, check clerk for Helena Coal & Transportation Co., was in town the latter part of last week visiting his daughter.

Thursday morning the fire alarm rang out and the people concentrated their physical forces upon E. Williamson's residence, which was enveloped in a conflagration of fire and smoke. At first view it seemed like a speculative attempt to extinguish the flames. However, about a half dozen good fire fighters mounted the building and began tearing off the roof and applying shower baths. Soon the pump handle was broken and all energy seemed to relax for awhile, but new determinations were grasped and the men resolved to save the burning building despite the bad luck. So they resorted to Messrs. Pope add McGowen's water supply on each side of them, and improvised a human well chain by which water was had in abundance. In half an hour after the the fire was extinguished, and not much damage was done, save that of the immediate burning and the damage done to furniture which had been moved from the building during the fire. They even went so far as to take up carpets in the front rooms. The fire originated in the kitchen while dinner was being prepared and was not discovered until it had gotten a good lease on the building. The building and furniture were partially covered by insurance; consequently a fire insurance agent was on the premises next day to adjust the damages, which were about $200.

Bird hunters are quite numerous about our city, and quail and larks can be found in large numbers in the woods and old fields near the city. Some hunt for the sport, others for profit, and one young man of the city has realized quite a snug little sum this season by shipping his birds to the market in Birmingham.

Next Tuesday evening at the White House the Christian Endeavor Society will give a social and spelling bee. Aside from the spelling bee there will be music and other things for pleasure and improvement. Let everybody go, and be sure and remember every one is expected to spell or pay a fine of 10 cents. The young people of the society promise you a pleasant time.

The miners at Aldrich inaugurated a strike this week because the company had employed and refused to discharge a laborer known among the men as a "black list" miner. The man came from Dogwood and did not prove congenial company to the union laborers. Mr. Aldrich was notified that his men would quit if the new fellow was not discharged, but he wired the superintendent to retain him; hence the strike.

Calera Cullings.

The following items were crowded out last week:

Great demand for houses.

The Holcomb-Pratt sawmill is gone.

Capt. J. R. Pratt, of Mississippi, was here two days of Christmas. Several of his old sawmill employees returned with him.

Tommie Francis, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia, is improving.

No serious trouble during the holidays in Calera. A few drunks and everybody happy.

The new pastor of the Methodist church continues the prayer meetings Tuesday nights.

Miss Bessie Jones, of East Lake, spent the holidays with her sister, Mrs. Joe Aldridge.

Miss Katie Graham, the fair young typewriter at Robert & Son's., Birmingham, and N. A. Graham, jr., cadet at the Howard, spent holidays at home.

Tuesday's accommodation from Montgomery ran into a carload of nails at crossing Monday evening. No one hurt.

Miss Mary Saxon and Miss Zora Barefield, of Dry Valley, spent holidays with their grandmother, Mrs. Howell.

Abundance of trade and freight on the three roads.

Now that the Christmas holidays are over, let all of the committeemen go to work raising the funds for fencing the Confederate graveyard at Shelby Springs. Let's have the funds ready by 1st or 15th of February. One dollar from everyone would be bountiful.

Several drummers were in town on Tuesday.

Rev. Mr. Bently preached two good sermons at the Baptist church Saturday and Sunday last.

Farmers are beginning to make arrangements for another crop.

A. M. Jones had a horse to die one day last week, and G. W. Downs a mule.

The scheme planned out by some of our stock law men to buy the poor man's cows for a little of nothing don't seem to work worth a cent. Our farmers vow that their stock may die on their hands before these would-be bosses shall have them, and they are right.

Married, at the residence of the bride's father, J. H. Martin, last Sunday evening, Mr. Robert Owens Hardrick and Miss Sallie C. Martin, Rev. S. N. Burns officiating. We were indeed sorry that circumstances were such that we could not attend, but understand that it was a nice affair. The happy couple have our best wishes for their future welfare.

Those wedding bells are beginning to sound again and "they say" this paper will not issue again before another young couple of the city will be made one. Wonder who they can be talking about?

Our town is without a marshall. The taxes and licenses are uncollected and the school funds are out. Unless a marshall is secured the school will have to stop. If our citizens do not want the school to go on they have adopted a very good plan to stop it. If they do want a school they ought to make the marshall's bond. Any government is a farce without the hearty support of the citizens.

The new revenue ordinance for this city for the present year has been prepared. It is practically the same as the old one, with but few exceptions. Boarding houses, which have been paying the same license as hotels all along, will now be required to contribute only one half of the amount into the city treasury. Those boarding teachers or pupils exclusively will not be expected to pay license, and widows are allowed "one boarder for company's sake."

Many women suffer untold agony and misery because the nature of their disease is not correctly understood. They have been led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for the many ills that beset womankind.

Neuralgia, nervousness, headache, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, rheumatism, a dragging pain or dull ache in the back, weakness or bearing-down sensation, profuse or scanty supply of urine with strong odor, frequent desire to pass it with scalding or burning sensation, sediment in it after standing in bottle or common glass for 24 hours are signs of kidney and bladder trouble.

The above symptoms are often attributed by the patient herself or by her physician to female weakness or womb trouble. Hence, so many fail to obtain relief, because they are treating, not the disease itself, but a reflection of the primary cause, which is kidney trouble.

In fact, women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same remedy.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is the great discovery of the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is easy to get at any drug store for 50 cents or $1.

To prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and book telling all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Kindly mention THE CHRONICLE, and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

ABOUT ENVELOPE ETIQUETTE.

Message Must Be Sealed to Be Deemed Entirely Correct.

The latest fad with the ultra-fashionable is the absence of the envelope. We have gone back to the days of the olden times, when the red wafers and the sealing wax and the folded paper were all that custom demanded or knew. The modern or recalled fashion has substituted the daintiest tinted wafers to match the paper, heliotrope, robin's egg blue, cerulean lilac, fawn or cream, for the mucilaged flap of the envelope. One must write on a big sheet if it is a letter; on the smaller size if notes, invitations, etc.; fold and seal, and then a wafer may be added for extra strength, or the seal alone will answer, if one desires. Sometimes the paper is folded like the cocked hats or the dainty squares, which not even the curious postman would trouble to dally with, and then, if one will, the seal and wafer may be dispensed with. Do you want to know how to fold these dainty missives? Then just ask grandma. I warrant she has not forgotten, for, if all's true that's said, she had plenty of them in her younger days. Just ask her. She'll deny her billets doux at first, no doubt, but she'll be pleased just the same to recall them and teach you how they came to her. The envelope is a barbarism evolved by a suspicious inventor, or maybe by one who was practical rather than artistic. However, fashion moves in cycles, and the cycle of the envelope is passing. If you intend to adopt this new style of sending letters be sure that your paper is heavy weight enough to stand the journey, and when you receive one in turn do not cut and slash as you have been accustomed to do with the envelope, but remove the wafers, break the seal and the writing will greet your eye untorn.—New York Press.

American Restlessness.

The restless energy of the American people is amusingly illustrated by "Ian Maclaren." A thin, alert man had immediately followed his card into Doctor Watson's study, and forestalling its reading, exclaimed: "My name is Elijah K. Higgins, and I am a busy man. You are also busy and have no time to fool away. Four days is all I can give to the United Kingdom, and I wished to shake hands with you. Good-by, I am off to Drumtochty." Germany has recently celebrated the hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the birth of her greatest writer, Goethe, whose most famous dictum deserves a fuller appreciation in the United States. "Ohne Hast ohne Rast," has been heeded but in part. 'Without haste" takes precedence over "without rest."

Keeps My Hair Soft

"I have used your Hair Vigor for five years and am greatly pleased with it. It certainly restores the original color to gray hair. It keeps my hair soft and smooth. It quickly cured me of some kind of humor of the scalp. My mother used your Hair Vigor for some twenty years and liked it very much.' —Mrs. Helen Kilkenny, New Portland, Me., Jan. 4, '99.

Used Twenty Years

We do not know of any other hair preparation that has been used in one family for twenty years, do you?

But Ayer's Hair Vigor has been restoring color to gray hair for fifty years, and it never fails to do this work, either.

You can rely upon it for stopping your hair from falling out, for keeping your scalp clean and healthy, and for making the hair grow rich and long.

THE NEXT CONVENTIONS.

LARGE CITIES NOT CLAMORING FOR THE NATIONAL GATHERINGS.

The Assemblages Where Presidential Candidates Are Nominated Found to Be Expensive Affairs—Demands Which Cities Have to Meet—Gathering Places.

The call has already been issued for a meeting of the Republican national committee, at which will be decided the time and place for holding the next Republican national convention. According to present indications the large cities are not likely to race for this honor with the zeal that they have formerly exhibited. Several of the Chicago newspapers are saying that that city does not again want either conventions at any price. St. Louis is likely to make only a perfunctory bid, if any at all, for either convention, as that city has all the advertising enterprise is can grapple with in the Louisiana purchase centennial exposition, for which it is now preparing. The big cities have come to believe that national conventions do not pay. The day of prolonged wrangles and big convention fights appears to have passed, and it was those things that made a convention of financial advantage to a city, its hotels, saloons, stores and transportation companies. Every hotly contested convention attracts aiders and abettors of the various factions as well as interested spectators by the thousand. Of late conventions have been three-day ratification meetings largely.

A national convention is a pretty expensive luxury for the city that undertakes it. It is said that the Republican convention of 1896 cost the public-spirited citizens of St. Louis $40,000. They had to pay for the building of a convention hall, the printing of the tickets and the badges, for electric lighting and other incidentals. It cost Chicago about $25,000 to entertain the Democrats in the same year, and the sum would have been larger had it been necessary to erect a convention hall.

T. E. Byrnes of Minneapolis, who was sergeant-at-arms at the St. Louis convention, says that the people of that city became very weary of the the enterprise last time before it was over. "I mean," said he, "that the bills which were incurred by my office for legitimate expenses did not make the backers of the enterprise happy. There was a shortage of almost $4000 after the citizens' committee had drummed and drummed until the entire city was tired. This shortage was finally made up by a handful of rich men, who grumbled a good deal over it. They did not receive a cent's worth of benefit from the convention and yet had to meet the bills to preserve the city's good name.

"I wrote 18,000 letters," Mr. Byrnes added, "and every one was to a man who had written to us, and who was entitled not only to a reply, but to a courteous one. What were the letters about? Tickets and convention appointments, mainly. Every letter which I answered was written manifold, and a copy of the answer was filed with the original letter. The applications for tickets began as soon as I had received my appointment and continued down to convention day, a period of six months. My correspondence was so heavy that at times I was compelled to have three or four stenographers. For these the St. Louis citizens' committee had to pay."

While Mr. Byrnes was one of the most successful sergeants-at-arms, he did not escape criticism. At a secret session of the Republican national committee in the Southern hotel, St. Louis, the day before the convention opened, one of the members arose and insisted that Mr. Byrnes be discharged on the spot. The speaker had asked for a certain number of tickets and his request had been ignored, Mr. Byrnes not even condescending to answer his letter. The offended member was a very prominent man in Republican councils; so, assuming that a mistake had happened, somebody moved to take a recess for luncheon, with the understanding that Mr. Byrnes was to be on hand after luncheon and give an explanation. According to program, Byrnes appeared. Again the offended committeeman made his bitter speech, and Byrnes responded, showing that he had sent the tickets to the member's hotel room the day before and had taken his private secretary's receipt for them, which receipt was thereupon exhibited to the amused committee. Apologies were in order. The complainant, it seemed, had not been in his room for two days and so did not know what had been going on for two days.

In Chicago, in 1896, there was also a good deal of trouble in raising the money for the entertainment of the convention. It finally came out of men who, as at St. Louis, received no benefit from it and would rather have seen it go somewhere else. These men, in both cities, are said to have served notice that in the future they would not respond to the eleventh hour appeals of this sort, and that local committees which engage to entertain national conventions must themselves be ready to pay the bills. A good many Republicans, on account of the interest of the Pacific slope in the expansion question, are thinking very favorably of San Francisco as a proper place for a convention which will renominate McKinley, and announces a definite party policy regarding the Philippines and trade expansion in the Orient. At the time, on account of the change of heart in Maryland, many leading Democrats believe that it would be a good plan to hold the Democratic national convention in Baltimore, which used to be a great convention city.

Chicago is the best convention city in the country, as far as permanent facilities go, and Kansas City is the place now making the greatest effort to secure a convention. It would not be strange if the Republicans finally went to Chicago, without any very energetic urging, and the Democrats to Kansas City. Denver and Milwaukee are among the few claimants.—New York Post.

It is estimated that Missouri farmers received over $8,000,000 for their mules in 1898. The number shipped from St. Louis was 117,50[illegible]

THE LAST OF A TRIBE.

Customs of Iowa Indians on Their Reservation in Oklahoma.

Most of the seventy-eight remnants of the once powerful Iowas live on their allotments near Perkins, Oklahoma. They are not men with the hoe, as most of their choice lands are either uncultivated or else tilled by the whites. They employ their time in eating, sleeping, dancing, grunting, visiting and worshiping. They consider all the serious doings, including horse-racing and trading squaws, as religious ceremonies.

Their religion is a grotesque mixture of paganism and Christianity. They are ardent sun-worshipers, calling often upon Jesus, who they say is the glorious orb of day. They believe in spiritual horses, dogs and ever-green prairies where no troublesome white man or bad Indian can molest them.

Bill Dole, a very unctious old limb of the expiring tribe, said: "I have eleven squaws and papooses up there and lots of spotted ponies eating grass up there on the evergreen prairies. I can see them on every cloudless day." Bill, however, got married again last week to a four-times widow. Most of their wigwams are adorned with gorgeously colored pictures of scriptural scenes.

They still persist, in spite of having been notified repeatedly not to do so, in depositing their dead on the surface of the earth. The graveyard in the old, deserted Iowa village on Bear creek, Lincoln county, is a disgusting, sickening boneyard. Gluttonous turkey buzzards and irreverent hogs fight over the remains.

Dan Tohee, a lineal descendant of the 2000-year-old royal Tohee family, officiates as chief of the little tribe. He looks very dignified, never gets drunk nor trades wives, and is not much of a liar. His brother Dave, however, seems to be the black sheep or the Tohee family. His sixth squaw died last spring, and after howling seven nights around her dead house, he put a $25 marble cross near her resting place and began preparations for a union with squaw No. 7.

The Iowas delight to drink a slightly intoxicating concoction made of fermented and boiled corn, sumach berries, sugar and wild onions. After gulping down copious drafts of the beverage they get exceedingly happy and talk about the good times coming when only Iowas will inhabit the whole of Oklahoma.

Getting some of the white man's education is one of their greatest hardships. The young Iowas, "like snails, crawl to school." They play sick, and sometimes even dead, to keep from attending. The older consider the younger ones martyrs during school hours and often help them to evade the task. Two years ago they induced the Indian department to allow them to have a school right at home. They had a costly building erected and several teachers were hired, but, alas! only about six juvenile redskins attended the school.

The Iowas hate working on the roads even worse than any other kind of labor. Eight of them started on a protracted visit to Nebraska last summer simply to escape from working three days on the roads which they travel more than any white man.

They regard all physical and other ailments as the work of "imps within" and take strong emetics and vomit the evil spirits through the knotholes into hollow trees. Perhaps, through some sort of a faith cure process this always seems to make them all right for awhile.—Chicago Record.

The Area of the Philippines.

In several government documents the area of the Philippine Islands is put at something over 114,000 square miles; in the latest at 114,326. In the "Guia Oficial de las Islas Filipinas, para 1898; Publicada por la Secretaria del Gobierno General; Manila, 1898," the area of the archipelago is given as 355,000 square kilometres, without including the Jolo (Sulu) group. As the number of square kilometres multiplied by .386052 will give the number of square miles, the area of all the islands, less the Jolo group, amounts to 137,057 square miles. Further, the statement is generally made that the archipelago of the Philippines contains from 1000 to 200 islands, and the "Guia Oficial" says the number is more than 1200. But in examining the "Derrotero del Archipelago Filipino, Madrid, 1879"—that is, the Coast Pilot of the Philippines, covering more than 1200 pages—we find that the Islas, Islitas, Isletas, Islotes, Islotillas and Farallones thereon described amount to 583. Of course, this does not include reefs, rocks or hidden dangers. —Professor George Davidson to the Geographical Society of the Pacific.

Dewey and Roosevelt Under Dentists.

According to a Spruce street dentist, both Admiral Dewey and Governor Roosevelt, the beloved "Teddy" of the Rough Riders, are arrant cowards when it comes to facing the terrors of the dental chair. In commenting on this universal dread of the pain that comes from tooth surgery, the dentist disclosed a bit of professional history none the less interesting because of its anonymity. He told of a veteran of the civil war, an officer who loves nothing better than to recount his martial adventures over a cold bottle in the Union League, and whose bravery on the field is a matter of historical record. And yet this grizzled veteran, when he finally plucked up sufficient courage to have a troublesome tooth pulled, admitted to the dentist that he had rung the door bell on three previous occasions and then skurried around the corner before the door was opened, like a truant schoolboy. After all, it's the little things in life that frighten us most.—Philadelphia Record.

Proper Quantity of Food.

Dr. Pavy, one of the most eminent authorities upon diet, says that the average man in a state of absolute rest, can live on sixteen ounces of food a day, a man doing ordinary light work can live on twenty-five ounces, and a man doing laborious work needs from twenty-six to thirty ounces. This is food absolutely free from water, and it must be remembered that everything we eat contains more or less water, so that from forty-eight to sixty ounces of ordinary food are necessary according to the work in which a man is engaged.

STATEMENT OF ALABAMA'S COAL OUTPUT.

Suit Against Loan Association—Colored Preacher Commits Murder. The Paris Exhibit—New Railroad Opened—Brevities.

The production of coal in Alabama in 1899 is estimated at 7,500,000 tons by State Mine Inspector J. DeB. Hooper. The production has increased at a very rapid rate since 1897, as is shown by the official figures for 1897 and 1898 and the estimate for 1899. The output for these years was as follows: For 1897, 5,893,771 tons; for 1898, 6,527,766 tons; for 1899, 7,500,000 tons, estimated. Increase in 1899 over 1898, nearly 1,000,000 tons. It is estimated that the production in 1900 will approximate 10,000,000 tons.

State Mine Inspector Hooper reports 40 fatalities resulting from accidents in the mines 1899, compared with 45 in 1898 and 38 in 1897. There were four fatalities in the mines in December, 1899.

Suit Against Loan Association.

A bill has been filed in the city court of Montgomery by F. F. Tennelle, against the National Building and Loan Association, asking for a receiver on the ground of alleged mismanagement on the part of that company, and that it be declared insolvent. The company has an authorized capital of $25,000,000 and a paid up capital of $4,000,000, and is doing business all over the south. B. J. Baldwin is chairman of the committee on loans, Jacob Greil, president; M. P. Legrand, treasurer, and Alva Fitzpatrick, secretary, all of whom are among the leading and wealthiest citizens and business men of Montgomery.

Colony to be Located in Limestone County

A deal is on foot now to establish a colony of Danes and Norwegians in Limestone county. A representative of the colony was in Athens this week, and before leaving he negotiated for a thousand acres of land lying near Athens on the main line of the Louisville and Nashville railroad. He will bring with him at an early date a large number of families to settle this tract of land, and also he will locate his planing mill, sash and blind and door factory in the colony as a nucleus to other industries. His name is Oliver Hansen, and he is a Norwegian, but has associated with him in business his brother and a Dane, all of whom want to come south.

Colored Preacher Commits Murder.

At Talladega Rev. Thomas Whatley, a well known negro preacher, shot and instantly killed Anna Duncan, a colored girl who resided at his home. There were but three persons in the house at the time of the shooting, the murderer, the murdered girl and Whatley's wife. It is said Whatley was drunk at the time, and claims it was an accident.

Alabama's Exhibit at Paris.

Commissioner Motz, who will have charge of Alabama's interest at the Paris fair, has made a tour of the state during which he arranged for a large number of items to be placed in the state exhibit at the fair. Birmingham and Montgomery will attempt to carry off the honors of the state in the local exhibits.

Miners Replaced by Convicts.

President George Young, of the United Mine Workers of America district of Alabama, has returned to Birmingham from Dogwood mines, in Shelby county, where he failed to effect an adjustment of the miners' wage troubles. The Montevallo Coal and Railroad company, operators of the mines, have replaced the United Mine Workers by convicts from Dallas and Shelby counties. Forty-six convicts have been leased and five non-union men are working with them. This is the third mine in the state to employ convicts.

Accidentally Killed.

A special from Cordova says that Elijah Mulligan, while out bird hunting near that place with a couple of friends, was killed by the accidental discharge of his own gun. He was crossing a fence and in some way struck the hammer of his gun. It discharged and the entire load entered his right breast, causing death in a few moments.

Fell Into a Well 70 Feet Deep.

Miss Mary Hudson, of Walden, Ga., while looking into a seventy-foot well, lost her balance and fell to the bottom. A young man who was with her at the time succeeded in rescuing her. Beyond a few scratches, she was uninjured.

Ed. N. Smith, a white man about 35 years of age, was asphyxiated at the Ensley furnace a few days ago.

State Fair Funds Exhausted.

At the meeting of the Birmingham Commercial club a few days ago, the matter of the failure of the Alabama State Fair association to meet its obligations was brought up, and the furore which it was creating over the state. After some discussion President F. Y. Anderson expressed opposition to any action in the matter, saying that it would set a precedent by which every shipwrecked corporation might look to the club to help it out. Accordingly no action was taken. However, the discussion developed the fact that a number of state newspapers have received worthless checks from the fair association in payment of advertising, and that these papers are very sore, some having roundly denounced not only the fair management, but the city of Birmingham as well. The fair management simply say that their funds are exhausted.

New Coal Mining Companies.

It is given out that the Republic Steel and Iron company are opening a mine which will shortly have a capacity of 2,500 tons a day; the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company will have several new mines in operation and old ones enlarged shortly; the Jenifer Furnace company is operating old mines at Connellsville; the Bruce Mining company has opened new mines near Cordova; the Pratt company have opened new mines in the vicinity of Blossburg and will shortly be getting out coal; the Hunter Coal company will open new mines in the vicinity of New Castle; the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron company will enlarge old mines and open new ones in the Birmingham district and other companies will get out extensive amounts of coal, adding to the general output of the district.

Progress of Steel Making

The blooming mill of the Alabama Steel and Shipbuilding company's new million dollar steel plant at Ensley has begun operations and is working satisfactorily. The first run was made a few days ago. The product was found to be perfect. In a few weeks the big steel mill will be in full blast, three furnaces being in operation now and the remaining seven being nearly completed. It will be several weeks before the steel wire and rod mill, which will consume a large part of the steel plant's output, will be ready for operation. The wire and rod mill when finished will represent an investment of $2,000,000 instead of $1,500,000, as was originally contemplated.

Gin Combine Completed.

The organization of the Continental Gin Company has been completed and the officers have been chosen. Mr. W. T. Northington has been elected president. Birmingham has been designated headquarters, and the capital stock is $2,000,000.

The following plants are in the consolidation: Daniel Pratt Gin Company, Prattville; Smith Sons Gin and Machine Company, Avondale; Winship Gin Machine Company, Atlanta; Eagle Cotton Gin Company, Bridgewater, Mass.; Munger Improved Cotton Machine Manufacturing Company, Dallas, Tex.; Northington-Munger-Pratt Company, at East Birmingham.

Machine Works Reorganized.

The Florence Machine works, organized a little over a year ago with a capital stock of only $2,500, by Messrs. N. F. Cherry, R. M. Martin and A. P. Harland, is now being reorganized with a capital stock of $20,000, and will be made one of the most complete industries of the kind in the state.

First Passenger Train.

The first through passenger over the lately finished branch of the Louisville and Nashville railroad from Pensacola to Selma arrived in the latter city Friday. The officials are well pleased with the road and say that a regular schedule passenger train will be put on in about a week.

Philadelphia Furnace in Operation.

The Philadelphia furnace at Florence made the first cast of iron a few days ago, twenty-four hours after the fires were lighted in the big plant. The Philadelphia has been idle for seven years, and has been repaired at a cost of $60,000.

STATE BREVITIES.

A number of the Louisville & Nashville shop employes at Decatur have started a co-operative store here on Second avenue. They keep all the necessaries of life.

The Talladega furnace and Highland City cotton factory are both ready to begin operations. A shortage of laborerers to operate the same necessitates the delay in starting.

W. L. Montgomery has recently moved to Decatur and established a cigar factory. His product took so well that he was this week compelled to employ a dozen more cigarmakers.

The preliminary trial of Brice McLemore at Huntsville, who is charged with the murder of Lester Carter, came to an end Friday, and Judge Stewart bound the defendant over to await the action of the grand jury, fixing his bond at $2,500. Bondsmen were promptly secured.

PICKED UP THE PIN.

And Has Had Nothing but Bad Luck Ever Since.

"These homely old superstitions we have all heard since childhood are very mysterious things," said the recording secretary of the New Orleans Ananias club to the New Orleans Times-Democrat man. "Take the one, for instance, about finding pins. Last week a friend of mine, who is rather portly, saw a pin lying on the sidewalk. He didn't want to pick it up, but was afraid to pass it for fear of bad luck, so he stooped over, slowly and painfully. As he did so he busted a pair of $2 silk suspenders and ripped a pair of $9 trousers. At the same time his $6 gold eyeglasses fell off and smashed all to pieces, but he got the pin and rose up suddenly, being mad, just in time to bring the back of his head in contact with a piece of scantling which a carpenter was carrying along the pavement. The concussion raised a bump as big as a goose egg and knocked off his new white alpine hat, which rolled into the gutter and was ruined. Nevertheless, he still hung onto the pin and stuck it under the lapel of his coat. In taking off the garment at his office he scratched himself on the back of the hand with the point, and a couple of days later inflammation set in. You see, the confounded pin was brass and probably covered with germs. Anyhow, his hand swelled up until it looked like a ham, and he hasn't been able to use it yet. As he happens to be a bookkeeper the thing has already knocked him out of a week's work and may lose him his job. The worst of it is, he doesn't dare to throw away the pin for fear of having bad luck. These old superstitions are certainly very curious—very curious indeed."

Soldier and Courtier.

Lord Kitchener of Khartum is a straightforward soldier, but he does not scorn the art of turning a compliment gracefully. It has long been said of him that he is proof against all feminine charms, and when he waited upon her majesty at Windsor, the queen was curious enough to put a pointed question. "Is it true, my lord," she asked, "that you have never yet cared for woman?" "Yes, your majesty," replied the sirdar, "quite true—with one exception." "Ah!" said the queen, "and who is she?" The sirdar bowed. "Your majesty," said he.

SHIP WRECKED; LIVES ARE LOST

Steamer Goes Down Off New Foundland Coast.

ALL ON BOARD PERISH

After the Wreck, Vessel Took Fire and Went Under In Flames---Rescue Was Impossible.

A special from St. Johns, N. F., says: The wreck and burning in St. Mary's bay of the unknown two-masted steamer, with its crew of probably sixty and possibly some passengers, all perishing, is one of the worst marine disasters in this section for a considerable period. There is not the slightest prospect that any soul aboard escaped death, as the intense midwinter cold would kill any who escaped drowning, and the ill-fated vessel was of nearly 3,000 tons burden. She went ashore before daybreak Thursday, striking a ledge at the foot of the cliff, where escape was hopeless. The crew launched the boats, but probably during the panic some were crushed against her sides, others being swamped, and all the occupants apparently perishing.

The ship was seen to be afire by residents six miles away. Attracted to the scene, they found the after half of the wreck blazing fiercely, and the forepart under water. Kerosene in the cargo helped the blaze.

At that time only three men were left on board. Two were on the bridge and one was in the rigging. Those on the bridge were safe until about 2 p. m., when they were washed overboard and drowned, the bridge being carried away.

The survivor soon after left the rigging, swam to the rocks and twice endeavored to get a footing. Failing in this, he made his way back to the rigging, where he died of exposure during the night. Many dead bodies are visible tossing in the surf. Two of them thrown up in a cove cannot be reached owing to the heavy sea. One is thought to be that of a woman.

Boats and other wreckage are strewn among the rocks for miles. Friday was more stormry than the day before; and it was impossible to reach the wreck, which had gone to pieces to such an extent that it had sunk beneath the waves.

Residents along the shore made every possible effort to rescue the survivor in the rigging, but lacking proper outfits they were unable to succeed.

A messenger who has just arrived from Peters river, reports that a trunk filled with women's clothing has been washed ashore there, as well as a garment which is either a waterproof cape such as used by a woman or man's overcoat. Nearby was found some underwear, evidently a man's, marked with the initials "J. J." This seems to indicate that the ship had passengers.

ACCURACY NEEDED.

Association of Agriculture at New Orleans Adopts Important Resolutions.

At Friday's session of the Cotton States Association of Agriculture at New Orleans, General Jastremski offered the following resolutions, which were adopted:

"Whereas, The necessity is apparent for the creation of a system of official reports emanating from officials upon whom responsibility may be placed for the accurary of their reports and estimates of cotton crops; therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Cotton States Associations of Commissioners of Agriculture does hereby petition the governors and legislators of each and every cotton state to enact laws requiring the county tax assessors to report at stated times to the state commissioners of agriculture of their respective states the number of acres devoted to the cultivation of cotton and other products, the condition of said products during the period of cultivation, estimates of yield thereof, the shipment thereof and such other information relating thereto as may be deemed useful.

"Resolved, Further, that the said reports of county assessors should be made on blanks of uniform character, furnished by said state commissioners of agriculture, and it shall be the duty of these commissioners to compile the said reports of the county tax assessors monthly and to publish the same and transmit copies to the president of the associytion for compilation and promulgation."

The next meeting will be held in Raleigh, N. C., but the date has not yet been fixed. Montgomery and Little Rock also desired the convention, but were defeated.

Year's Postal Receipts.

A statement of the gross postal receipts for December, 1899, as compared with the receipts for the same month during the preceding year shows a net increase of $199,833, or 5 per cent. The total receipts for last December were $4,162,038.

Pension For Mrs. Henry.

A pension of $30 a month, to date from October 28, 1899, has been granted by the commissioner of pensions to the widow of General Guy V. Henry, who died last October.

ALL IS MYSTERY AND SUSPENSE

Roberts' Arrival In Africa Does Not Relieve Fears.

SILENCE IN WAR OFFICE

On Buller's Movements and Strategy Depend the Safety of Beleaguered Garrison at Ladysmith.

A London special under date of January 15th says: Lord Roberts' enigmatical announcement, "No change in the situation," does nothing to allay public anxiety or to explain the mystery surrounding General Buller's movement on the Tugela river, and although there is a disposition to regard the dispatch as disposing of Saturday's adverse rumors, the week has opened in a state of suspense, almost equal to that of last week, because it is recognized that failure in General Buller's present attempt would seal the fate of Ladysmith.

Presumably "no change in the situation" refers to previous dispatches sent to the war office, which have not yet been revealed to the public. Except the announcement of the seizure of Potgieter's Drift, and of the advance of General Warren, there has been no news from the Tugela for a week. A ray of hope is in the fact that the silence prevails from the Boer side. Thus it may perhaps be fairly inferred that General Buller has not yet met a serious check.

If the announcement of General Warren's movement be correct, it is evident that General Buller's forces are spread over a very wide front—perhaps twenty-five miles—and in the event of a sudden fall of the river his operations might be full of danger. It is believed that General Buller has no good survey map of the district. This will add to his difficulties. General Charles Warren's advance probably means an attempt to sieze Hangwane hill, the main post of the Boers south of the Tugela. Upon the success or failure of these operations depends the whole future of the campaign. Until the result is known, Lord Roberts will be unable to decide how to dispose the two divisions and the reinforcements now arriving.

The news from other points is of no great importance. Boer accounts tell of another sortie from Kimberley, January 9th, in the direction of Kamfers dam, with a brief exchange of firing, but no result. A heavy detonation was heard on January 8th within Kimberley.

A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Modder river, dated January 10th, gives a rumor that Kimberley was being bombarded.

Bastards Nek, mentioned in Lord Roberts' dispatch as the locality of reconnaissance, is northwest of Colesberg.

Doubts are beginning to be raised whether it will be possible to get together anything like 10,000 yeomanry. Only a very small percentage of the applicants satisfy the standard of riding and shooting. A large number of officers from the Egyptian army have just left Cairo for South Africa to replace those killed and wounded.

EDITORS WERE SHOT.

Denver Attorney Attempts to "Clean Out" a Newspaper Office.

At Denver, Col., Saturday, Frederick C. Bonfils and H. H. Tammen, proprietors of The Evening Post, were both shot in their office by W. W. Anderson, a prominent local attorney. It is not believed that either was mortally injured.

It is understood that Anderson objected to something that had appeared in The Post and demanded retraction and that Bonfils and Tammen both attempted to put him out of the office. Then he commenced to shoot.

France Takes Possession.

The steamer Elf Branch brings news from Shanghai that French warships have taken possession of Kwong-Cahu-Wah bay, where a boundary dispute has been pending for several months.

NEGROES FOR HAWAII.

Many of Them May Be Needed For the Sugar Fields.

J. C. Leftwich, the colored Republican leader, has just returned to his home in Montgomery, Ala., from a six weeks' trip to the Hawaiian islands, where he went to investigate the labor conditions there for a big sugar syndicate.

If his report is favorable, big inducements will be offered southern negroes to go over to the Hawaiian and Samoan island sugar fields. The result of his observations will not be given out until the syndicate has his report, which will no doubt have an important bearing on Alabama labor conditions.

BRITONS RELEASE GOODS.

Secretary Hay Announces That English Government Has Taken Action.

Secretary Hay has given out the information that the British government had released the American goods on Maria and that they are now in Delagoa bay. The goods consist of flour and other provisions which the English authorities seized as contraband of war intended for the use of the Transvaal troops.

EYELIDS TWITCHED.

Embalmer's Discovery Saves a St. Louis Woman From Being Buried Alive.

At East St. Louis, Mo., Sunday morning, Mrs. Hirth emerged from a trance to find herself under process of being embalmed and prepared for the grave. The discovery was the result of the merest accident and astounded the undertaker. A movement of an eyelid saved the woman from death at the hands of the undertaker or from burial alive.

Sunday morning, while her husband watched at her bedside at the hospital, she gave a deep sigh and then seemed to breath no more. When the county physician arrived, he pronounced her dead. The county undertaker was called and shortly afterwards proceeded to embalm the body.

Mrs. Hirth was placed on the coolidg board and the work of preparing her for burial began.

On each eye a weight was placed to hold the lids. Over the face a white cloth saturated with bleaching fluid was spread. When ready to remove the bleaching cloth he noticed that one of the weights had fallen off. In replacing it he thought he detected a slight movement of the eyelash. There was no beat or pulse of sign of breath, however, so he set about preparing his instruments for the injection of the poisonous fluids used in embalming. While thus engaged he noticed a faint quiver of the eyelid. He summoned assistance and the body was removed to a bed in the hospital. The doctor was called and restoratives applied.

Gradually the woman came out of her coma and was able to move her body. She was unable to discuss her experiences, but made signs to indicate that she was conscious of all that had taken place. It is expected that she will regain some of her strength and live for a while at least.

ATLANTA BANKER DEAD.

Col. J. W. Rucker, Pioneer Citizen, Succumbs to Pneumonia.

Col. J. W. Rucker, of Atlanta, Ga., president of the Maddox-Rucker Banking Company, of that city, died at Palm Beach, Fla., Friday night at 9 o'clock.

The death of Colonel Rucker was due to an attack of pneumonia contracted some weeks ago.

Since the close of the war between the states, in which Colonel Rucker took active part as a soldier, he was engaged in business in Atlanta, being one of the first merchants of the town. In 1880 he formed with the late Colonel R. F. Maddox the banking firm of Maddox-Rucker company, in which both remained until their death.

Colonel Maddox died only a few months ago and it is a striking coincidence, that the death of these two pioneer citizens, associated for so many years in the closest relations which men can bear to each other, came in quick succession and only separated by the passage of a brief time.

COLORED LABOR EFFICIENT.

Witness Before Industrial Commission Compliments His Negro Hands.

The industrial commission in session at Washington heard the testimony of J. H. Hall, of South Glastombury, Conn., who owns extensive peach and plum orchards in Georgia. He described industrial conditions in the south, saying that a lack of thrift was one of the causes for the depressed farming industry. He said negro labor employed on his plantations in Georgia was as cheap and efficient as white labor in New England.

M'LAURIN SERIOUSLY ILL.

Retiring Governor of Mississippi Has Severe Attack of Pneumonia.

A special from Jackson, Miss. says: Governor McLarin has been confined to his room at the executive mansion for several da s with pneumonia. The disease has affected both lungs and attending physicians regard the case as very serious. This is the governor's third attack of the disease during the past three years.

Owing to the governor's illness considerable change is made necessary in the arrangement for the inauguration of his successer, Governor-Elect Longino, as he will not be able to be present.

HOISERY IS HIGHER.

Manufacturers Meet in Atlanta and Raise Prices.

The price of hosiery manufactured in the southern states has been advanced 10 per cent.

This advance was decided upon at a meeting of the Southern Hosiery Association held in Atlanta, Ga., Thursday. Representatives from twenty-two mills were present.

This is the second advance made by the association within the past few weeks, the first increase being made in Nashville last December at the time the association was organized.

ROAD IS BOYCOTTED.

Employes Declare Colorado and Southern Is Antagonistic To Them.

An extensive boycott has been declared against the Colorado and Southern railroad, running from Denver to Fort Worth, Tex., formerly the Union Pacific, Denver and Gulf railroad. The road has been declared antagonistic to its employes belonging to the railroad labor brotherhoods, and at the instance of the telegraphers, represented by the Order of Railway Telegraphers, a general boycott has been placed on the road.

RESULTS OF TALEADEGA COUNTY PRIMARY

Arrests Made in McClure Case--Shooting Affray at Corona---A Young Murderer---Mobile's New Water Works Christened.

In the Talladega county primary J. B. Woodward was nominated for tax collector; S. H. Henderson, treasurer, and B. F. Chett, county commissioner from the Fourth district. Under the majority rule adopted by the executive committee the race for tax assessor, sheriff and commissioner from the Second district will have to be run over. It will be made by J. B. Edwards and W. T. Dean for sheriff, Robert B. Burns and M. M. Duncan for tax assessor, and D. H. Thiveatt and T. E. Elliott for commissioner.

Two Arrests Made in McClure Case.

Chief of Police Lipscomb and Special Deputy Wilson, of Florence, arrested W. R. Stewart at Shoal Creek and carried him to that city as a witness before the jury of inquest. He has been released, and it is believed he disclosed nothing. Stewart is one of the parties believed to be suspected, but the action of the jury leaves McClure's assassination still a mystery, and as far from solution as ever.

Marshall Boyle, the young white man who was also arrested, charged with complicity in the murder of Judge McClure, seems to have no fears of his final acquittal.

New Soil Pipe Works.

F. E. Glenn, of St. Charles, Ill; C. A. Day, of the same place; J. F. Hatcher, of Columbus, O., and H. K. Spencer, of Chester, Ill., representing themselves and associates, have purchased the old Baxter Stove Works property in Birmingham, consisting of a block of ground, buildings and machinery, etc., and will within the next ten days commence converting the plant into a soil pipe works. The first investment will amount to $50,000. The plant will employ 150 men and will consume forty tons of pig iron daily.

A Seven-Year-Old Murderer.

Leon Ray, a seven-year-old boy, shot and killed Ruth Barnes, another child, at Barnes' home, near Beulah, a small country town in Lee county, a few days ago. A crowd of children were playing in the house, and Leon, seeing the pistol on the mantel, took it and fired at Ruth, producing instant death. He does not realize what he has done. Ruth's mother is prostrated.

Mobile's New Water Works.

Mobile's new water works system, with double reservoirs, duplicate pumping machinery and ninety miles of pipe, giving abundant supply of pure water from the hills to all parts of the city of Mobile, was inspected by the mayor and general council Friday, and then christened by Mayor Bush with a bottle of champagne. It cost upward of $500,000.

May Be Special Term.

A special term of the court may be called in Escambia county to try a negro named McCullough, charged with the murder of young James Gallaspie. Gallaspie was shot by McCullough several weeks ago. He remained in a precarious condition for some days, but he died a few days since.

Bill for Relief.

Senator Morgan has introduced a bill in the United States senate for the relief of John T. Calahan, deceased, late of Lauderdale county, in the sum of $645, in full compensation for stores, supplies, etc., supplied to the United States artillery, during the war of the rebellion.

Smallpox at Auburn.

Smallpox has broken out at Auburn, the seat of the State Agricultural and Mechanical college, and Opelika has quarantined against the place. Reports place the number of cases at from two to eight.

Well Known Politician Dead.

I. N. Carter, a well known politician, died the past week at Montgomery. Ike was a substantial farmer, and for one of his race, an astute politician. He kept himself well informed on all current topics, and was the oracle for a large following. He was a delegate of his party several times to the national republican convention.

Madison County's Finances.

In Madison county the disbursements from July 1, 1899, to January 1, 1900, were $14,529.46, and the receipts were $12,882.22. For the special road fund, $6,089.08 was received, and $6,021.95 disbursed. For the jail fund, $5,463 95 was received and $6,479.04 disbursed. Treasurer G. D. Kenney, of the county, for six months showed the following: Receipts for the general fund $82,899.97, disbursements were $84,836.61. For the special road fund, $8,110,15 was received and $8,044.02 disbursed. Nearly $9,000 has been expended during the past six months on improvements at the county jail.

Chemical Plant to be Erected.

C. A. Grasselli, of Cleveland, Ohio, president of the Grasselli Chemical company, accompanied by a party of twelve or more gentleman connected with the company, arrived in Birmingham Sunday. The company has decided to erect a chemical plant near that city, which will be the largest of the kind in the United States, with possibly one or two exceptions. They will manufacture various kinds of chemicals. The plant will represent an investment of several hundred thousand dollars.

Two Counties to Act.

The democratic executive committee of Clay county by a vote of fifteen to three decided in favor of a county convention. The date was fixed in April to conform with call of state executive committee.

The Etowah democratic executive committee has ordered primaries to be held on March 81 and April 14, the leading candidates to be voted for at the second primary.

Found Dead on the Track.

The dead body of Frank Tisdale, a well known citizen of Montgomery, was found on the railway track by a section crew near Garland. The deceased had been to Garland to visit relatives, and there was no marks of violence on his person it is thought he went out for a walk and death resulted from heart disease.

Vessels Collide.

The steamship Orion ran into the American schooner Fred H. Small in the lower channel at Mobile Saturday. The Orion was bound in, and the Small was outbound in tow of the tug E. L. Russell. The Small was struck amidship and badly damaged. She was beached at Three Mile creek.

Shooting Affray Near Corona.

J. P. Lollar shot Jabe DeLoach, at Patton Junction, near Corona. DeLoach went to Lollar's store and began abusing Lollar, it is said, and drew a chair on him. Lollar shot three times, the last ball taking effect in the head, supposed to be fatal.

Gold Discovered.

Anniston is keeping up its record for strange things. The latest is the discovery of gold almost within the city limits. Mr. O. N. Olson made the discovery Sunday on Cooper Hill, in West Anniston, and already arrangements are being made to prosecute the search further.

Proved a Failure.

The effort to hold a meeting of the Butler county democratic executive committee this week proved a failure, and a call was issued for another try on the 20th. At that meeting a proposition will be made to the populists for a white primary. Butler is Congressman Stallings' home county.

Child Fatally Burned.

At Huntsville Myrtle Sharp, a 6-year-old child, was fatally burned by her clothes becoming ignited while standing before an open fireplace. The child's mother, Mrs. Lee Sharp, was painfully burned in extinguishing the flames.

Dispensary Law Effective.

The state dispensary law, which was enacted by the general assembly last February, became effective January 1. It applies to eleven counties only.

Contract for Dallas County's Court House.

J. W. Hood & Co., of Montgomery, have secured the contract for the erection of the Dallas county court house. The bid was $87,900.

The cotton receipts of Selma have reached 63,738 for this season up to date.

Havana Customs Receipts.

The war department gave out for publication today a statement of the receipts from customs from the port of Havana, Cuba, for the month of December, 1899. The total receipts for that month were $1,108,180.

FAVORABLE REPORT ON CANAL BILL

Committee Recommends the Hepburn Measure to House.

CALLS FOR MANY MILLIONS

Committee Did Not Wait For Report of Walker Commission.

A Washington special says: The house committee on interstate and foreign commerce ordered a favorable report upon the Hepburn bill for the construction of the Nicaraguan canal. The bill is practically the same one reported by this committee in the last congress.

The committee made some changes in the original bill, inserting a new section, 3, and making verbal alterations.

FULL TEXT OF BILL.

As finally agreed to, the bill is as follows:

To provide for the construction of a canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Be it enacted, That the president of the United States is hereby authorized to acquire from the states of Costa Rica and Nicaragua for and in behalf of the United States control of such territory now belonging to Costa Rica and Nicaragua as may be desirable and necessary in which to excavate, construct and defend a canal of such depth and capacity as will be sufficient for the movements of ships of the greatest tonnage and draft now in use, from a point near Georgetown, on the Carribean sea, via Lake Nicaragua to Breto, on the Pacific ocean; and such sums as may be necessary to secure such control are hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Section 2—That after the president has secured full control over the territory in the section referred to, he shall direct the secretary of war to excavate and construct a canal waterway from a point on the shore of the Caribbean sea near Greytown, by way of Lake Nicaragua, to a point near Breto on the Pacific ocean. Such canal shall be of sufficient capacity and depth as that it may be used by vessels of the largest tonnage and greatest depth now in use and shall be supplied with all necessary locks and other appliances to meet the necessities of vessels passing from Greytown to Breto, and the secretary of war shall also construct such safe and commodious harbors at the termini of said canal and such fortifications for defense as will be required for safety and protection of said canal and harbors.

Section 3. That the president shall cause such surveys as may be necessary for said canal and harbors and in the constructing of the same.

Section 4. That in the excavation and construction of said canal, the San Juan river and Lake Nicaragua, or such parts of each as may be made available, shall be used.

Section 5. That in any negotiations with the other states of Costa Rica or Nicaragua, the president may have, the president is authorized to guarantee to said states the use of said canal and harbors upon such terms as may be agreed upon, for all vessels owned by said states or citizes thereof.

Sec. 6. That the sum of $140,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated for the completion of the work herein authorized, said money to be drawn from the treasury from time to time as the same shall be needed, upon the warrants of the president, based on estimates made and verified by the chief engineer in charge of the work, and approved by the secretary of war.

BUTLER SENDS NEWS.

Informs War Office That He Has Crossed Tugela River.

The London war office Friday morning received the following dispatch from General Buller, dated Springfield, Thursday, January 11, at 9:20, evening:

"I occupied the south bank of the Tugela river at Potgieter's drift this morning and seized Pont. The river is in flood. The enemy is strongly entrenched about four and a half miles to the north."

GOULD A STOCKHOLDER.

Report That He Is Intersted In a North Carolina Mill.

The Charlotte, N. C., Observer says: Intelligence has been received that George Gould, the New York millionaire, has become a stockholder in the Loray cotton mills at Gastonia to the amount of $250,000, and that a check for this amount has been received in Gastonia. It is also stated that another subscription of $150,000 from a northern capitalist has been sent the promoters of the new mill. These subscriptions, it is believed, will raise the capital stock of the mill to $1,400,000.

CARTOON OF QUEEN.

Paris Newspaper Men Arrested For Caricaturing Her Majesty.

A Paris dispatch says: The manager and artist of La Caricature, who published a cartoon representing President Kruger having Queen Victoria over his knees spanking her, were tried on the charge of outraging public morals.

The court acquitted the accused on the ground that in spite of the grossness of the satire it did not have the obscene character which would justify the charge.

BODIES FLOATING ON ALL SIDES

Identity of Wrecked Vessel Is Hard to Establish.

RESCUE WORK DELAYED

Duration of Stormy Weather Proves a Bar to Investigations.

Advices from St. Johns, N. F., under date of Sunday were to the effect that the gale had not yet blown itself out, and the sea was still too rough to allow boats to get near the wreck in St. Mary's bay.

As yet there is nothing to show the name of the vessel. Ten bodies have been located among the rocks and others can be seen floating about. Plans have been made for recovering these as soon as the weather permits, and it may then be possible to get at the name of the steamer from pieces of boats wedged in the clefts of the rocks.

A photograph which had been washed ashore, apparently from the wreck, represents a seaman wearing a cap upon which are the letters "S. M. S. Falke."

It appears that the ship's funnel was banded red, white and black with a white diamond. This funnel could not be that of the Falke, as she, being a North German Lloyd liner, would have a yellow funnel. It is also thought that the photograph might be one of a seaman on the German warship Falke, or one taken while the owner was on the other Falke.

The funnels most closely resembling that of the wreck are those of the American Petroleum company, which are banded black, red, white and black, and the vessel certainly had a lot of petroleum on board, as the ocean is covered with it, causing hundreds of birds to perish.

It is believed in New York that the wrecked vessel is one of three oil steamers chartered or owned by the Standard Oil company.

ENTHUSIASM IN LONDON.

Departure of Volunteers Made Occasion of Patriotic Demonstration.

Remarkable scenes of patriotism were witnessed in London Saturday evening after a short service held for the volunteers in St. Paul's cathedral.

Though many stirring scenes have marked the departure of the British troops for the front during recent months, this outburst of patriotism, on the occasion of the starting of the London volunteers, was quite unprecedented since the jubilee.

The vast audience was slow to disperse. Ladies stood upon the chairs beckoning and calling to brothers, sons and friends in the ranks. the latter signaling back. A scene of great animation ensued. The organist introduced a few bars of the national anthem in concluding the voluntary. The effect of this was magical. First the volunteers and then the congregation took up the strains, and the vast cathedral was filled with enthusiastic song.

These demonstrations were renewed by immense crowds outside. St. Paul's churchyard and Ludgate Hill were black with people, and it was impossible for the volunteers to march. Individual members were pulled out of the ranks by their friends and admirers, who raised them on their shoulders and thus carried them down Fleet street to the temple. Those who escaped hositing proceeded slowly, surrounded by clinging women.

Afterwards at the various theaters where the men were entertained and yet later on returning to the barracks, these scenes were renewed and the streets were filled until midnight with cheering people.

DEBATED THE ROUND BALE.

The Commissioners of Agriculture Were Divided On the Question.

A spirited debate on a resolution favoring the round bale marked the final session of the Cotton States' Assaciation of Commissioners of Agriculture at New Orleans. The association declined to commit itself to approval of the round bale, but adopted the resolution so far as it appeals for improved methods in handling cotton.

AGENT WAS JAILED.

South Georgia Farmers Threaten the Life of "Peg Leg" Williams.

W. A. Williams, the emigration agent, who during the past six weeks has sent 2,500 negroes out of Morgan county, Ga., into Mississippi and Arkansas, was jailed at Madison Sunday as a measure of safety, a mob of farmers having threatened his life at Greenesboro Saturday afternoon.

Williams, who is known all over the south as "Peg-leg Williams," has been in Morgan, Greene and Newton counties for some time and had engaged a number of Negroes to leave Greenesboro Saturday night for the west and was there arranging for their departure when jailed.

FRANCE SENDS WARSHIPS.

Government Anticipates Arrival of Machias at Santo Domingo.

A dispatch of Friday to The New York Herald from Santo Domingo says:

"The French government, anticipating the arrival of the United States gunboat Machias here, has ordered two more warships to Santo Domingo. The vessels are expected to reach here Saturday."

DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE MEETING.

The Democratic executive committee of Shelby County is hereby called to meet at Columbiana on Tuesday, January 30, 1900, at 11.30 a. m. Each member is earnestly requested to attend.

W. B. BROWNE, Chairman.

A TRAITOR TO HIS PARTY.

Governor Johnston has been charged with a great many things, chief among which is that he has been untrue to his party. When he disregarded the declaration of the State convention, expressed by a two-thirds vote, he gave evidence of a desire to override the party law and bend it to his own interest. In ignoring the recommendations of county committees and good Democrats and making appointments for purely personal reasons, he again showed a disregard of the party's highest law, that of local self-government. He has been accused of making combinations with Populist leaders and with conferring with them as to the control of counties and districts, and he evidently sought to bring about the disbanding of the Populist party in order to get their votes in Democratic primaries.

In a recent speech in Crenshaw County he throws off the mask entirely and comes out boldly in his true colors. He is reported to have wound up his speech with the following words, addressed to Populists:

> I am not asking you to come back into the Democratic party, but merely to exercise your right and cast a vote for your choice for United States Senator. It has been stated that pledges were required for you to participate in the primary. This I am authorized to state is not true. I want you to go in and take your chances.

There you have it in plain terms. Governor Johnston, honored by the Democratic party and seeking further honors at its hands, turns to the enemies of that party and says: "I am a candidate for the United States Senate; my race is being made in the primaries of the Democratic party. I have done much for you, and I want you to help me. I do not ask you to quit fighting my party. Just sneak into the primaries of my party like a thief and bring about the nomination of a candidate whom the majority of Democrats do not want, but who will vote for me, and then you can go back and continue your fight on the principles I profess and the men who made me."

Some days ago we found Governor Johnston taking great credit for leading the Populists back into the Democratic party, but when they declined to come back, with the brazenness of his selfish nature he begs them to come in just long enough to cast a vote for him and then go back and defeat if they can every other candidate of his party. He cares not if they elect all the State officers, all the Congressmen, all the county officials, if only they will help him to defeat the will of Democrats.

His language is plain; and it is an expression of treachery to his own party and an insult to the people to whom it was addressed. If they have the sense of honor in politics they profess to have they will repudiate the invitation and the man who made it. As for Democrats, no one among them who respects his own loyalty will fail to rebuke this brazen treachery.

In contradistinction to this position is that of Senator Morgan. He stands or falls with the organized Democracy. If there is a white man in the Populist party who will come back into the Democratic party to stay, to profess its principles and support its candidates, no heartier welcome will be extended to him than the Senator will give; but he will not, by the Senator's invitation or consent, vote in the party primaries for the weight of that vote only.

Senator Morgan is a Democrat, and he seeks election as a Democrat and by Democrats. Governor Johnston is a place hunter, and he seeks election by any method that will win. Mark this prediction: If it is necessary to his election he will bolt the Democratic caucus and by a combination with Populist members of the legislature seek election as an independent. The man who will make such a proposition as is contained in the above quotation will not stop at anything to secure election.

THE Birmingham News is taking up a subscription to pay off what the Fair Association owes the weekly papers. We will remember both the Fair Association and the News.

THE Court Journal thinks the Morgan committee did a "dirty trick" in covering the Governor's appointments in Clarke County. Men do not usually put on silk mits when they go to clean out stables.

LET all the committeemen attend the meeting next Tuesday week. Apathy caused the defeat of the Democratic ticket in 1898. If every Democrat does his duty this year we will win. Let the committeemen set the example.

WE hear something said already about fusion between the Populists and Democrats on the national ticket, but at the same time we hear of fusion with Republicans on the county ticket. If the Populists prefer the nominees of negro conventions for county officers, let them take the nominees of negro conventions for President. Let them begin at the bottom and stick to their partners.

CURRENT ✱ CRITICISMS.

By MRS. F. W. GIST.

The acquittal of Miss Morrison at Chattanooga for the killing of her theatrical manager is a wonderful display of external sentiment, chivalry, kindheartedness for the gentler sex.

⁂

The gifted editor of the New Era thinks it unwise to enter into any discussion of our political differences. She is probably correct. If we should argue till the blast of Gabriel's horn it would cut no figure among the intrigue and chicanery of Alabama politics. On political issues women must take a back seat among idiots and criminals. No matter if we are intelligent beings that is our status.

⁂

The Journal wonders why Senator Morgan has sprung the race question at this time. The Senator has a habit of expressing himself when he feels like it.

WE predict that when the local campaign comes on it will be the same old fight, a straight Democratic ticket against a conglomeration of Populists and negro convention nominees. The Populists are afraid to run a straight ticket, and they haven't the backbone to cut loose from their negro allies.

"I DO not ask you to come back into the Democratic party. I only ask you to assist my appointees to defeat the will of Democrats. When you have done that you may go back and help the negroes to beat the Democratic nominees."—Governor Johnston to the Populites.

SINCE Bryan declared himself on expansion we haven't seen any thing in the Court Journal about Morgan's imperialism. The Johnston organs got too previous on this question, and we are glad to see that they have the good sense to shut up, though they have not manliness to acknowledge their error.

THE Nicaraguan Canal bill is just about to pass, despite the opposition of Huntington and his gang. It will be the crowning work of Senator Morgan's long career, and for that he will be kept in the Senate. Its construction will do more for the development of Alabama iron and coal than all the New Jersey trusts Johnston and his partners can build up in a lifetime.

THE campaign between Morgan and Johnston is being conducted through the mails. The letter published yesterday from Senator Morgan is a severe arraignment of the Governor. If one keeps in mind the political part of the State's history as he reads it, every paragraph is an issue, every sentence an indictment. It is on such a high plain that we fear it will not be understood or appreciated by the people who are supporting the Governor.

SPEAKING of Johnston's campaign the Age-Herald says, "Never before has there been such an open and barefaced appeal to ignorance in this State." The Age-Herald is mistaken. Kolb made such an appeal, Goodwin made it and Deans made it. Johnston is only doing under cover of Democracy what has been done heretofore in open opposition to it. And he is not fooling anybody, either. His few Democratic followers are tied to him by officestrings, and the Populists recognize him as a traitor to his own party.

THE stuff one finds in the editorial columns of the Court Journal reminds one of the old-time rot of the Populist papers and politicians, appealing to the baser prejudices of the people and seeking to array one class against another. We have not seen one attempt in the Journal to set forth in reason and argument the position of its candidate on any question that pertains to the Senatorship. If the Governor is opposed to expansion tell us why, and show us some good reasons for it; if he is opposed to disfranchising the negro give us his reasons; if he believes in trusts tell us what good is in them; if he is opposed to the Nicaragua Canal give us his objections to it. Give intelligent people some intelligent reason for retiring Senator Morgan and they may do it.

Notice to the Public.

To the People of Shelby County:

In view of the continued appearance of smallpox in the county I would advise all persons, especially those living in the villages and along the public highways, to be vaccinated and revaccinated without delay. I will furnish any Doctor in the county a supply of vaccine matter, such as I do not believe will cause a bad arm, and the public should not dread this.

As these cases are in nearly every instance amongst the colored, and I will further advise that no strange negro be allowed to remain on the premises of anyone unless he can furnish evidence of a successful and recent vaccination or has the marks of smallpox (not too recent) on his person.

Respectfully,
J. H. GUNN, M. D.

Advice to Consumptives

There are three great remedies that every person with weak lungs, or with consumption itself, should understand. These remedies will cure about every case in its first stages; and many of those more advanced. It is only the most advanced that are hopeless. Even these are wonderfully relieved and life itself greatly prolonged.

What are these remedies? Fresh air, proper food and Scott's Emulsion of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Be afraid of draughts but not of fresh air. Eat nutritious food and drink plenty of milk. Do not forget that Scott's Emulsion is the oldest, the most thoroughly tested and the highest endorsed of all remedies for weak throats, weak lungs and consumption in all its stages.

$3,000 CASH PRIZE CONTEST.

Atlanta Constitution's Great Offer of 1900—The Cotton Receipts at New Orleans from September to April—Full Statistics Given for Your Guidance—An Unparalelled Offer for Our Readers.

The Atlanta Constitution offers a $3,000 cash prize contest for January, February and March, 1900, as follows:

To the person sending a yearly subscription to The Weekly Constitution, together with the correct estimate on the cotton receipts at New Orleans during the first seven months of the present cotton year (September 1, 1899, to April 1, 1900)—

$1,500 if estimate is received during January.

$1,000 if estimate is received during February.

$500 if estimate is received during March.

The above are for the exact estimates; there are besides these six prizes, ranging along, $500, $400, $250, $150, $125 and $75, amounting to $1,500, that will be paid out sure for the six nearest estimates to the New Orleans cotton receipts at any time during the three months of the contest. But you hit it exactly during January and secure the full $1,500 prize check.

The Constitution believes somebody will hit the figures exactly and expects to pay out the full amount of the prizes offered—$3,000 in all. In a Constitution contest upon the same subject in 1896 Mr. R. T. Poole, of Capels Mills, N. C., hit the exact figures and received a check for $1,000 as his prize. Mr Poole did not try to swell himself up at once, but very generously paid off a mortgage on his father's home place and with the balance he very wisely educated himself at Trinity college, Durham, N. C. He is now doing well in business in North Carolina and lives still near his old home. It is needless to say he is a warm friend of The Constitution.

As a guide in making estimates upon the New Orleans port receipts, The Constitution gives the following figures, compiled from statistics of the past four years:

SEASON.	N. O. recpts. Sep. 1–Mch. 1.	N. O. recpts. whole year. Sep. 1–Aug. 31.	Total U. S. crop for season.
1895-96..	[illegible]	1,812,167	7,157,346
1896-97....	1,936,587	2,102,470	8,757,964
1897-98....	2,432,315	2,576,165	11,199,994
1898-99..	1,851,153	2,130,296	11,274,840

The Constitution's market page will give each week the port receipts for the cotton season from which you can always see the New Orleans port receipts from September 1, 1899, up through the Friday immediately preceding the publication. This will keep you posted to within two or three days of the time you send in your estimate.

It is believed that some of the Texas crop, that as a rule is sent in bulk to New Orleans, will be diverted this year to other points because of the quarantine regulations against New Orleans. The effort of Louisiana to have quarantine raised by injunction from United States courts will not have very soothing effect upon the direction of cotton shipments to New Orleans. This is mentioned simply as a pointer in making up estimates: how much to allow, if anything, for this cause must be left to each man's judgment.

The $3,000 contest is an express contract to which The Constitution will stand in every particular. Yet it is in its nature simply an advertisement by which The Constitution, combined with this paper may be made better known in this community. Send us the subscription to The Constitution and our paper at the advertised price of the two and with it your estimate on the New Orleans port receipts, and we will forward all together for you. On April 1st we trust a $1,500 check will reach some of our subscribers to help make times even more easy round about us.

The Weekly Constitution for 1900 will be better than ever before. Its special news features are unsurpassed. The Boer-British war, the Philippine and Cuban operations, the busy session of the most important congress that has ever assembled, the beginning of the issues of the presidential campaign of this year and the debates and speeches during its progress; the final result of the November elections, the development of the south's great industrial movements; diversified farm and village industries and thousands of other important things will be found fully and freely discussed in The Weekly Constitution for the year. The Farm and Farmers' page, the Woman's Kingdom, the Southern Pulpit, the Children's Page and other interesting departments will be ably conducted and will be especially adapted to those addressed. The ringing editorials of The Constitution speaking right out in meeting exactly what it means in the advocacy of true democratic doctrine and in behalf of the great interests of the masses of our plain people, and protecting them from the grasping greed of those who would wring their earnings from their helpless hands, are alone worth the subscription price of the paper over and again.

The Constitution has long stood as the champion of the people and has sent its shafts deep into the errors and evils that threaten and beset the masses. Its complete expose of the methods of Neill, of New Orleans, and the shattering of the influence of this prophet of big cotton crops and apostle of ruinously low prices and high priest of robbery, who has cost the southern farmers hundreds of millions of dollars, ought to win for The Constitution the lasting gratitude of the whole south. The advice to farmers to organize against the trust that would increase the price of fertilizers and fertilizer materials for the home compost heap, and taking up the cudgel in behalf of the farmers against the combination that would put a fresh burden upon them, is sound and valid, and ought to be heeded. The bulwark of the people's rights and the best method of defense will often be found in a great paper, ably and fearlessly edited, upon which the people may rely, not only for news of the ordinary events of government, army and political life, but also for an alert foresight of the trend of future events that may operate to our lasting damage. The downfall of Neill; the breaking down of the fertilizer trust; the upbuilding of all southern interests, and the enlightenment of every village, farm and mountain home are among The Constitution's many high aims and great ideas for 1900. That these interests may all be well served, and with the same unswerving fidelity to the people that The Constitution has always shown, goes without saying.

The management of The Constitution, with Mr. Clark Howell as editor-in-chief, and his well disciplined corps of staff writers, brilliant contributors and special correspondents, still under the faithful leadership of Colonel William A. Hemphill as business manager, will remain the same for the new year. The Constitution's long and honorable business course, keeping faith with the people in all its contracts, contests and engagements, as well as in its consistent and conspicuous editorial fairness, places it among those reliable institutions of our country on which the people may depend.

With such a great general newspaper, covering the world news and world and national questions, you will, of course, need the best and livest local paper, giving current local topics and the latest and best news and freshest comments upon events of local interest. We trust this combination secured with The Constitution will be found best suited to all our readers. The price is merely nominal when the service is even half considered, including your estimate in The Constitution's $3,000 cash contest. To get the full benefit of the high prize send in your subscription now so The Constitution may receive it during January and record it to your credit. Make your figures very plain, unmistakably plain.

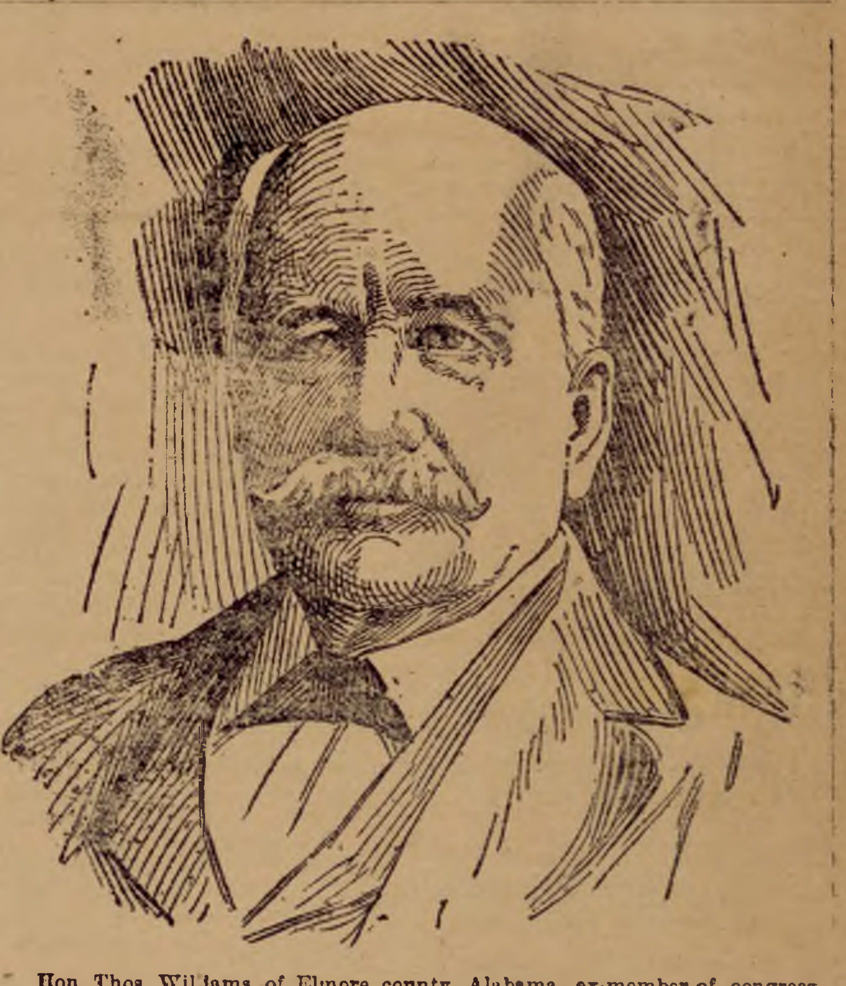
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.



Hon. Thos. Williams, of Elmore county, Alabama, ex-member of congress, statesman, orator, writer and one of the best informed men on the theoretical and practical application of commercial fertilizers. He is one of the largest cotton planters in the state, and produces his great crops upon poor sandy uplands by the skillful use of commercial fertilizers. He uses the ALABAMA FERTILIZER exclusively—after having tried nearly all other leading brands of complete fertilizers. His words, like rifle balls, are few, and go straight to the mark:

WETUMPKA, ALA., September 9, 1899.

DEAR SIRS:—Speaking from experimental tests, in results I am assured the ALABAMA FERTILIZER put up by you, is not excelled by any on our market, and I commend it to the public as a genuine fertilizer productive of good results.

The bags treated by the VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVER used by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., successfully resisted the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in the fertilizers, also preventing all loss from wasting.

Yours truly,
THOS. WILLIAMS.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT ANALYSIS.

Bulletin No. 12, issued by the Alabama Department of Agriculture, shows the actual commercial value of the ALABAMA FERTILIZERS to be 19.33 per cent more valuable than all the complete fertilizers or guanos offered for sale in the State of Alabama for the season covered by said bulletin.

Bulletin No. 13, just issued by the Department of Agriculture, shows the actual analysis, from samples sent to the Department by dealers and consumers throughout the State, that the ALABAMA FERTILIZER is actually $3.54 per ton or 24 per cent better than the guaranteed analysis by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., and this answers the question so often asked, "why the ALABAMA FERTILIZER produces so much better crops than other fertilizers of equal guaranteed analysis?" The ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be shipped in the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVED BAGS. There is no other preserved bag on the market of any value.

The Commissioner of Agriculture recommends and endorses it in the following words:

"I therefore unhesitatingly say that I believe the bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVING PROCESS will resist the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in fertilizers; that the meshes of the bags are so filled by the process as to prevent all wastage, and that if generally used by manufacturers, would be of inestimable value to carriers, dealers and consumers.

(Signed) "I. F. CULVER,
"Commissioner of Agriculture."

These MUMMIA PRESERVED BAGS are almost indestructible by the weather or Fertilizers. Can be hauled in the rain without material damage to bag or contents. Fertilizers put up in these bags can be hauled out to the farm at any time and kept ready for use.

The ALABAMA FERTILIZER is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all round fertilizer for cotton and corn.

ALABAMA FERTILIZER RECORD.

It has produced nearly four bales of cotton on one acre of poor sandy upland.
One hundred and thirty-two bushels of corn on one acre of poor sandy upland.
Two thousand and forty one bushels of corn on twenty acres of poor upland.
Land and corn accurately surveyed and measured by competent disinterested and honorable men.

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 48 premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

This trade mark is registered. It is our property. It is not likely to be counterfeited, as that would subject the perpetrator to the danger of heavy fine and imprisonment (see U. S. laws respecting copyrights). It is on every genuine sack of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

As required by state law the word "ALABAMA" in large letters is found on every bag of fertilizer offered for sale in this state. Some unscrupulous persons have employed this means to deceive you. See that the above trade mark is on the bag, and take none offered you as the ALABAMA FERTILIZER without it.

POPULIST PRIMARIES.

Called for April 28; County Convention May 5.

The Populist executive committee met here on Saturday of last week and called a primary for the 28th of April for the nomination of county candidates, with a county convention on May 5. An air of secrecy pervaded the meeting, and it has been impossible to find out what idea prevailed as to the policy to be pursued.

From one source we learn that a resolution was passed looking to fusion with the Republicans and Johnston Democrats on county officers, but this can not be confirmed. Only a few committeemen were present, hardly a quorum. Senator Deans, of this county, and Representative Reynolds, of Chilton, were present. Mr. Reynolds is thought to be a candidate for the state senate from this district.

In an interview with Mr. Pearson, chairman of the county committee, we were told that the national convention of the Populists would be held prior to the Democratic convention, and that Bryan would be their nominee for President, with a Populist for Vice-President.

There is no doubt but that the Republicans will accept a proposition to fuse if made to them by the Populists. Several of their number want office, and the probability is that a good share will be demanded for the Republican vote.

Among the candidates spoken of so far are the following:

For senator—L. H. Reynolds, of Chilton.

For representative—G. B. Deans, W. H. Sturdivant and B. W. Brand.

For sheriff—R. F. Cox, Bob McEwen and J. H. Robertson.

For tax assessor—J. S. Pitts and M. S. Wilson.

For treasurer—W. A. Tallant.

For superintendent of education—Eugene Williams.

A Violet Wedding.

Mr. George E. Mason and Miss Annie Milner were married last night at the Presbyterian church at 7 o'clock, Rev. W. I. Sinnott officiating. The attendants were Miss Pattie Mason and Mr. Henry Walthall, the ushers J. R. White and C. C. DuBose. Miss Essie Mason executed the wedding march. The costumes of the bride and her attendant were of white silk, and they carried boquets of lillies of the valley, maiden hair ferns and violets. The contracting parties were reared here, and have the best wishes of their many friends.

TELEPHONE COMPANY

Organized for Operation in Shelby County.

Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday for a telephone company to operate lines between Shelby County towns. The incorporators are Jno. B. Randall, F. H. Hardy, W. R. Oliver and others, and the capital stock is $10,000. The ultimate object will be to connect all the towns in Shelby County. The first line will probably be run from Calera to Montevallo, taking in the various mines in that section. A line to Columbiana, via Shelby, will then be considered if any inducement is offered in the way of stock or patronage by these places.

The cost of lines is from $50 to $150 per mile, the intermediate figure of $100 per mile being the probable cost in this county. The cost of operation is small, and the investment will in all probability pay a nice dividend the first year.

All towns in the county will be given an opportunity to take stock and connect themselves with the outside world.

They Should Know it.

Many women suffer untold agony and misery because the nature of their disease is not correctly understood. They have been led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for the many ills that beset womankind.

Neuralgia, nervousness, headache, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, rheumatism, a dragging pain or dull ache in the back, weakness or bearing-down sensation, profuse or scanty supply of urine with strong odor, frequent desire to pass it with scalding or burning sensation, sediment in it after standing in bottle or common glass for 24 hours are signs of kidney and bladder trouble.

The above symptoms are often attributed by the patient herself or by her physician to female weakness or womb trouble. Hence, so many fail to obtain relief, because they are treating, not the disease itself, but a reflection of the primary cause, which is kidney trouble.

In fact, women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same remedy.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is the great discovery of the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is easy to get at any drug store for 50 cents or $1.

To prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and book telling all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Kindly mention THE CHRONICLE, and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

World's Big Boats.

The English marine publication, the Syren, says: "We British pride ourselves that the aggregate tonnage of British ships approximates to the total merchant tonnage owned by the remaining maritime countries of the world, but there is another phase of the matter where a comparison with other nations places us in a position other than first. It appears we have only eleven vessels of over 10,000 gross tons—headed by the Oceanic, with her 17,000 tons. But Germany has twenty-three vessels in that category. The United States is the only other nation with vessels above 10,000 tons and she has four. The biggest ship owned by France is 8,893 tons, while Norway's greatest ship is of 3,277 tons gross. In speed Great Britain is right ahead of her competitors, having thirty-one vessels with a speed of twenty knots or more; Belgium has six, the United States four, Germany and Holland three each. France two and Russia one. Thus in speed the British flag excels the world, while the disparity between Germany and this country, so far as size is concerned, will soon be lessened, as several big vessels are nearing completion in British yards."

You're Gambling!

It's too risky, this gambling with your cough. You take the chance of its wearing off. Don't! The first thing you know it will be down deep in your lungs and the game's lost. Take some of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and stop the gambling and the cough.

"I was given up to die with quick consumption. I ran down from 138 to 98 pounds. I raised blood, and never expected to get off my bed alive. I then read of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and began its use. I commenced to improve at once. I am now back to my old weight and in the best of health."—CHAS. E. HARTMAN, Gibbstown, N.Y., March 3, 1899.

You can now get Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in a 25 cent size, just right for an ordinary cold. The 50 cent size is better for bronchitis, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, and the grip. The dollar size is best to keep on hand, and is most economical for long-standing cases.

EVENING.

Clear down the hill of day has flown
  The sun with all his legions bright
And left the moon and stars alone
  To guard the ways of heaven by night.
Just when they reached the edge of day,
  Like weary troops they paused for rest
Before they farther marched away
  Into the distant, dreamy west,
And there they built huge watch fires high
  To signal all rear-marching feet
Whose task it is to follow nigh
  As guards that cover a retreat.

For some the play of day must place
  Far out upon earth's utter marge
And needs must have a longer space
  Their larger duties to discharge
Than those whose feet are duly sent
  Along that shining pathway wide
That runs across the firmament
  Straight onward, turning not aside.

And so it comes when day is done
  That twilight time, half day, half night,
Is but the hour wherein the sun
  Doth all his scattered bands unite.
Soon as he finds his forces met
  The leader issues his commands
To strike all tents and forward set
  Upon the road to other lands.
Then from the highest peak and plain
  Day's last lone outpost is withdrawn
No more to reappear again
  Till morn looks o'er the hills of dawn.

HER MUSICAL LOVER.

By C. D.

"I do believe that Aunt Hannah will get married before me, after all," said Janet Belton, laughing roguishly.

She stood leaning over the stone wall, a bower of silver-green clematis making a wreath above her golden head, the tall red clovers and snowy daisies nodding at her feet, and she herself a fit emblem of blooming spring and freshness.

"Nonsense," said Guy Martin, who had checked his span of horses in the middle of a furrow, and stood leaning on the plow handle, a young Adonis in his shirt sleeves.

"But it's true," said Janet; "she has actually got a beau."

"Then it must be the old man who was put in the poorhouse last week, or at least Duncan Deverel, who believes that the world is coming to an end a week from next Thursday."

"Neither one nor the other," said Janet. "What do you think of Professor Keith?"

"What, the man who gives singing lessons and boards at the tavern?"

"Himself and no other."

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast!'" quoted Guy Martin. "And you and I are to dance at her wedding, I suppose, Janet?"

"If we get an invitation," said Janet, demurely. "But I happen to be in disgrace with her just now."

"What for?"

"For laughing at the professor's banjo."

"Oh, never mind," said Guy, "it's easy to make the peace again. Just compare him to Beethoven or Mozart, or any other of those immortal geniuses—offer to embroider him a necktie, and tell her you know of a new pattern for a wedding dress and, my word for it, all will be right again. Aunt Hannah under the inufluence of the tender passion! Aunt Hannah with a beau! What is this world coming to?"

"And in the meantime," said Janet, with a sigh, I must go back to the ironing, or I shall get a lecture a yard long."

"And I must devote my energies exclusively to the plow line," said Guy Martin. "If I could only turn up a pot of gold, little Jenny—
"I'd save my money and buy me a farm,
And you should be my wife."

"What nonsense!" said Janet.

"What good sense!" laughingly retorted her lover. And so they parted.

Aunt Hannah Bemis was getting dinner when her niece returned to the house. She was a short, stout lady, perilously near to forty, with a row of curls like miniature beer barrels on both sides of her face, a bulbous nose, which, however, sadly belied the characteristics of its owner, as Aunt Hannah was strictly temperate in all things, except scolding—and small black eyes. Certainly not a beauty, and yet not disagreeable to look upon. But when Miss Belton came in Aunt Hannah Bemis was wrathful in the highest degree.

"That's just like you, Net Belton," cried she, in a voice shrilly raised. "Gone half the morning and nothing done! And my two silver spoons gone that belonged to my mother before she was married—spoons as I wouldn't ha' took five dollars apiece for 'em."

"Why, Aunt Hannah, I haven't taken your silver spoons."

"I never said you had," snarled the maiden lady. "It is that plaguey organ grinder, as came here, twisting out his tunes afore the back door, and looking for all the world as if butter wouldn't melt in his mouth. And I just went into the milk-rooom to get a tumbler of buttermilk for him, as he said he preferred it to all the strong drinks as ever was brewed—and such an honest face as you couldn't suspect, not if you tried—and I never to miss 'em till I went to the tray just now, and found only the britannia ones left! Ah, me! what a world this is!"

"But, Aunt Hannah I don't understand," interposed her bewildered niece. "Did the organ grinder steal away your mother's spoons?"

"What else have I been telling you all this time?" retorted Miss Bemis. "Really, one would think you wasn't gifted with ordinary understanding. Do start about your ironing, and get something accomplished. And if you see another organ grinder comin' this way set the dog on him."

"But Aunt Hannah all organ grinders are not necessarily thieves."

"Don't argue with me, miss," sternly commanded Aunt Hannah, "but do as you are bid. Alas, that such an ennobling, science as music should have such unworthy votaries!"

"She's thinking of the professor," thought Janet, with mischievously twinkling eyes, as she pressed the wrinkles out of a dimity apron with ruffled borders.

Aunt Hannah dressed herself in her best black silk that afternoon, with a lavender ribbon at her throat and the curls touched up with a trifle extra of pomatum to give them something of the gloss of youth. Cosmetics, in their various shapes, Miss Bemis abjured, but there was no harm, as she argued with herself, in a little innocent starch sprinkled over the wrinkles of her brow, and she viewed herself, her toilet completed, with commendable pride.

"Nobody would take me to be a day over eight and thirty," said Aunt Hannah to herself.

And then she sat down to her knitting, just inside the front window, where the honeysuckles grew.

"Are you expecting anyone in particular, Aunt Hannah?" asked Janet, with great gravity.

"Dear me, no. Who should I expect?"

"Oh, I don't know. I thought it likely that the professor—"

Aunt Hannah giggled convulsively. "As if Professor Keith hadn't plenty important matters to occupy his time, without running here every other day!"

But the long June evening ebbed away, and the laggard lover came not —and at 10 o'clock Aunt Hannah retired to her room in the lowest possible spirits.

"It's a lovely moonlight night," she said to herself, as she stood behind the window curtain, sentimentally viewing the radiant landscape. "Just the very night for a promenade by the church elms—or a romantic interview on the piazza. Ah, me!"

And Aunt Hannah went to bed more disappointed than she would have been willing to confess to herself.

She was half way through the mazes of her first delicious dream, when a sound, faint and unusual, interrupted her—the sound of music.

Aunt Hannah Bemis scrambled, to her feet, wide awake in a second.

"It's that mean, miserable, thieving organ grinder again," muttered she, between her set teeth. "Thinks I hain't found out about them spoons; but he's missed his mark this time. I'll teach him."

And swash went a whole pitcher of cold water down over the musician, under the lilac bushes, not incorrectly aimed, as was testified by a smothered exclamation below.

"I hit ye, did I?" chuckled Aunt Hannah. "I'm glad of it. Served ye right; clear out of here, you miserable creetur. I'll unloose old Growler and send for the constable. Yes, that's right, show us a clean pair of heels. Don't leave your old music-box behind. Ha! ha! ha!"

And with a chuckle Aunt Hannah retreated, closing the window with a slam.

"I've settled him, I calculate," she said to herself.

Early the next morning Janet went out into the garden to gather some fresh lettuce for a breakfast salad, while Aunt Hannah boiled the coffee; but presently she returned, breathless.

"Oh! aunty, you never told me you had a serenade last night."

"A sere—which, child? I don't know what you're talking about."

"Look!" and Janet held up a battered and broken banjo.

"It's Professor Keith's; found it under the lilacs."

"Professor Keith's!" Aunt Hannah's lower jaw dropped—she sat staring like one in a disagreeable dream.

"I am so sorry I slept so soundly, Aunt Hannah," said Janet, "I should have enjoyed the music."

Aunt Hannah sank into a chair with clasped hands.

"I've done it now," she groaned hysterically.

"Done what, aunty?"

"I threw a pitcher of water on him and called him all the names you ever heard of. I supposed, of course, it was the chap that stole my silver spoons. Oh, dear! oh, dear!"

And Aunt Hannah began to cry, while Janet burst into a peal of irresistible laughter.

"Don't fret about it, aunty, dear," she consoled her relative at last. "If he loves you truly he won't mind a little cold water. He'll know there was some misunderstanding."

But the inference was that Professor Keith did not love Miss Bemis truly, for he left town the same day and never again made his appearance.

For love is a tender plant and easily chilled, and the pitcher of cold water had settled the question.

And Janet was married first.

TWENTIETH CENTURY'S DAWN.

The Friendly Islanders will be the First People to Hail its Advent.

"The first people to live in the twentieth century will be the Friendly Islanders, for the date-line, as it may be called, lies in the Pacific Ocean just to the east of their group," writes John Ritchie, Jr., in the Ladies' Home Journal, of "Where the Next Century will Really Begin." "At that time, although it will be already Tuesday to them, all the rest of the world will be enjoying some phase of Monday, the last day of the nineteenth century (December 31, 1900). At Melbourne the people will be going to bed, for it will be nearly ten o'clock; at Manila it will be two hours earlier in the evening; at Calcutta the English residents will be sitting at their Monday afternoon dinner, for it will be about six o'clock; and in London, "Big Ben,' in the tower of the House of Commons, will be striking the hour of noon. In Boston, New York and Washington half the people will be eating breakfast on Monday morning, while Chicago will be barely conscious of the dawn. At the same moment San Francisco will be in the deepest sleep of what is popularly called Sunday night, though really the early, dark hours of Monday morning, and half the Pacific will be wrapped in the darkness of the same morning hours, which become earlier to the west, until at Midway or Brooks Island it will be but a few minutes past midnight of Sunday night."

MAN AND WIFE REUNITED.

For Thirty-Three Years Each Thought The Other Dead.

James F. Bailey, a prosperous farmer, left Rock Stream for California thirty-three years ago. He was one of a party of about twenty who started from Elmira. Mrs. Bailey and one daughter remained in Rock Stream. They were to make the journey by rail a year later. Bailey and the party, of which he was a member, went to Pittsburg and descended the Ohio and Mississippi to Memphis. At that point the New Yorkers joined a party which was going to California by way of the trail which passed through San Antonio, Texas, crossed the Rrio Grande at Dona Ana, New Mexico, and entered California at the Needles. At Dead Man's Pass, near the Devil's River, east of Fort Lancaster, Texas, the party fought a severe battle with Mescalero Apaches. Bailey was dangerously wounded. It was thought that he could not recover. After the Indians were driven off the party moved to Fort Lancaster, where Bailey was left.

Letters were sent back to Rock Stream, which detailed the story of the fight and said that Bailey would be dead before the letter reached Memphis. Mrs. Bailey gave birth to her second child, a son, about a month after the arrival of the news of her husband's alleged death. Three months later Mrs. Bailey and her children moved to Corning, where in 1872 she was married to Raymond Crocker, by whom she also had two children. Crocker died in 1887 and Mrs. Crocker returned to Rock Stream. Bailey arrived in Rock Stream on a recent morning. He called on one of his old-time friends and asked where Mrs. Bailey was buried and where his children were. He was told that she was at the Bailey homestead, west of town, alive and well. The other details of the story were also told him. He went at once to the homestead. Mrs. Crocker opened the door, recognized Bailey and fainted.

When she recovered, Bailey told her that he was in a hospital at Fort Lancaster for nearly nine months, suffering from arrow wounds in the lungs and abdomen, that when he was able to travel he started homeward, but that at San Aantonio he met Joseph Wilson, also from Rock Stream, who told him that Mrs. Bailey and one child had died six months before, and that the other child had been adopted by its grandparents. Mr. Bailey said that he again turned westward, and settled in Tucson. Later he began ranching near the Santa Catarina Mountains. He married again in 1874. Two sons were the result of the union. The second Mrs. Bailey died about five years ago. The six children are all married, and have children of their own.

After Mr. Bailey and Mrs. Crocker had told their stories, Mr. Bailey insisted that they be married again. He said that nothing but a wedding would do. Mrs. Crocker readily assented. Mr. Bailey wired his Arizona children to come East at once with their families. The wedding ceremony was performed in the Bailey homestead in the presence of the children and their families. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey then left for Cienaga, Arizona, where they will reside.

Old Letters From President's.

There has lately been found in a town near Bridgeport, Conn., a valuable collection of old letters of nearly a century ago, among them several by George Washington, Andrew Jackson, Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, James Monroe and John Quincy Adams. The letters were found among some old papers and books belonging to one of the old families in the State, and are in the best condition, although they have been stored away for nearly one hundred years. The Washington letter was written to a Connecticut member of the family when the General was with the army on the Hudson River, and pertains to the probable movement of his and the enemy's troops.

The letters of John Quincy Adams and Andrew Jackson are peculiarly interesting, as they are both written to the same friend, on the same day in March, 1824, and each asks the common friend to say what he thinks the chances of each are for President. This was in the days when the Vice-President was elected in the same count as the President, the one receiving the greatest number of votes being chosen President. Each asks his correspondent what he should do when elected, and how he should act toward his friend and rival. The Jackson letter is also very valuable, and is one of the most characteristic letters in existence written by the General.—Boston Transcript.

Captivity Preserves Wild Animals.

The trade in wild animals has been unusually brisk for several years now, and the importations have steadily increased. In spite of this, however, prices, instead of advancing for most of the animals, have fallen; the reason for this is attributed to the fact that expeditions for capturing wild animals in their natural homes are more numerous than ever before, and they are better equipped for their work than in the past. Consequently more wild animals of nearly every description come to the civilized countries in captivity than in the days of Nero, when imperial Rome boasted of thousands of wild animals caged in its confines. While it is generally reported that many of our wild beasts are rapidly being exterminated, it is nevertheless true that they will never become extinct so long as their kind can be bred in captivity. This is now an accomplished fact with nearly all of the birds and animals.

"I understand you are an athlete," remarked the landlady to the new boarder.

"Yes, ma'am," proudly answered the n. b.; "I am the champion high-jumper from Jumpersville."

"That being the case," said the landlady, "I will have to ask you to pay your board in advance. I've had all the experience with the jumpers I care for."

Wild With ECZEMA

Hands and Limbs Covered with Blisters and Great Red Blotches. Scratched Until Almost Wild. Burned Like Fire. Sleep Impossible. CUTICURA Remedies Bring Speedy Relief and a Permanent Cure at a Cost of Only $2.

I was a sufferer for eight years from that most distressing of all diseases, Eczema. I tried some of the best physicians in the country, but they did me little good. The palms of my hands were covered and would become inflamed; little white blisters at first would appear, then they would peel off, leaving a red, smooth surface which would burn like fire and itch; well, there is no name for it. On the inside of the upper part of both my limbs great red blotches, not unlike hives, would appear, and as soon as I became warm the burning and itching would begin. Night after night I would lie awake all night and scratch and almost go wild. I heard of CUTICURA REMEDIES, got them and gave them a thorough trial, and after a few applications I noticed the redness and inflammation disappear. Before I had used one box there was not a sign of Eczema left. I can truthfully assert that $2.00 worth of CUTICURA REMEDIES cured me. There has been no sign of its return anywhere upon my body since I wrote you I was cured, nearly four years ago. Hardly a month passes but what I receive a letter or some one calls and wishes to know how I got cured, if I had Eczema bad, and if the cure has been permanent, etc., etc. I always take pleasure in enlightening them the best I can.

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema, the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurement, as in pimples and ringworm, the awful suffering of infants and the anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter, and salt rheum—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That

Cuticura

Remedies are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No statement is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy, have made them the standard skin cures and humor remedies of the civilized world. The treatment is simple, direct, agreeable, and economical, and is adapted to the youngest infant as well as adults of every age. Bathe the affected parts with hot water and CUTICURA SOAP to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales, and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without hard rubbing, and apply CUTICURA Ointment freely, to allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and lastly take CUTICURA RESOLVENT to cool and cleanse the blood. This sweet and wholesome treatment affords instant relief, permits rest and sleep in the severest forms of eczema and other itching, burning, and scaly humors of the skin, scalp, and blood, and points to a speedy, permanent, and economical cure when all other remedies and even the best physicians fail. CUTICURA THE SET, price $1.25; or, CUTICURA SOAP, 25c., CUTICURA OINTMENT, 50c., CUTICURA RESOLVENT, 50c., sold throughout the world. MILLIONS OF MOTHERS

Use CUTICURA SOAP exclusively for baby's skin, scalp, and hair. It is not only the purest, sweetest, and most refreshing of nursery soaps, but it contains delicate emollient properties, obtained from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, which preserve, purify, and beautify the skin, scalp, and hair, and prevent simple skin blemishes from becoming serious. For distressing heat rashes, chafings, inflammations, and eruptions, for crusted, itching irritations of the scalp, with dry, thin, and falling hair, for red, rough hands, and shapeless nails, and simple infantile humors, it is absolutely indispensable.

BRITISH LOSSES WERE HEAVY

GENERAL WARREN'S FORCES WERE DRIVEN BACK ACROSS THE TUGELA RIVER.

OVER FIFIEEN HUNDRED DEAD

Hard Fighting Took Place At Spion Kop and Vicinity---News From Both Sides.

A London dispatch under date of Sunday says: General Buller reports that Warren's troops have retreated south of the Tugela river. The Boers say that the British loss is 1,500 killed. It is believed that this includes the wounded. The Boers also claim that 150 of the English troops surrendered at Spion kop.

General Buller further states that Spion Kop was abandoned on account of lack of water, inability to bring artillery there and the heavy Boer fire. General Buller gives no list of casualties. His whole force withdrew south of the Tugela river with the evident intention of reaching Ladysmith by another route. Following is the text of General Buller's dispatch, dated Spearman's camp, Saturday, January 27th, 6:10 p. m.

"On January 20th Warren drove back the enemy and obtained possession of the southern crests of the high tableland extending from the line of Acton Homes and Hongers poort to the western Ladysmith hills. From then to January 25th he remained in close contact with the enemy..

"The enemy held a strong position on a range of small kopjes stretching from northwest to southeast across the plateau from Acon Homes, through Spion kop to the left bank of the Tugela.

"The actual position held was perperfectly tenable, but did not lend itself to an advance, as the southern slopes were so steep that Warren could not get effective artillery position, and water supply was a difficulty.

"On January 23d I assented to his attacking Spion kop, a large hill, indeed a mountain, which was evidently the key to the position, but was far more accessible from the north than from the south.

"On the night of January 23d he attacked Spion kop, but found it very difficult to hold, as its perimeter was too large and water, which he had been led to believe existed in this extraordinary dry season, was found very deficient.

"The crests were held all that day against the severe attacks and a heavy shell fire. Our men fought with great gallantry. I would especially mention the conduct of the Second Cameronians and the Third King's Rifles, who supported the attack on the mountains from the steepest side and, in each case, fought their way to the top, and the Second Lancashire Fusilliers and Second Middlesex, who magnificently maintained the best traditions of the British army throughout the trying day of January 24th, and Thorncroft's mounted infantry who fought through the day equally well along side of them.

General Woodgate, who was in command at the summit, having been wounded, the officer who succeeded him decided on the night of January 24th to abandon the position and did so before dawn January 25th.

FROM BOER HEADQUARTERS.

The following was sent out from Boer headquarters, Modder Spruit, under date of Thursday, Jan. 25: Some Vryheid burghers from the outposts from the highest hills of the Spion kop group rushed into the laager saying that the kop was lost and that the English had taken it. Re-enforcements were ordered up, but nothing could be done for some time, the hill being enveloped in thick mist.

At dawn the Heidelberg and Carolina contingents, supplemented from other commandoes, began the assent of the hill. Three spurs, precipitions projections, faced the Boer positions. Up these the advance was made. The horses were left under the first terraces of rocks.

Scaling the steep hill the Boers found that the British had improved the opportunity and intrenched heavily. Between the lines of trenches was an open veldt, which had to be rushed under a heavy fire not only from rifles, but from lyddite and shrapnel from field guns. Three forces ascended the three spurs, co-ordinately under cover of fire from the Free State Krupps, a Creusot and a big Maxim.

The English tried to rush the Boers with the bayonet, but their infantry went down before the Boer rifle fire as before a scythe.

The Boer investing party advanced step by step until 2 o'clock in the afternoon when a white flag went up and 150 men in the front trenches surrendered, being sent as prisoners to the head laager.

The Boer advance continued on the two kopjes east of Spion kop. Many Boers were shot, but so numerous were the burghers that the gaps filled automatically. Toward twilight they reached the summit of the second kopje, but did not get further.

The British Maxims belched flame, but a wall of fire from the Mausers held the English back. Their center under this pressure gradually gave way and broke, abandoning the position.

Firing continued for some time and the Fusiliers and the Light Horse serving as infantry, threw up thier arms and rushed out of the trenches.

The British dead left on the battlefield number 1,500.

The effect of the abandonement of Spion kop by the English can hardly be gauged as yet, but it must prove to be immense.

GOVERNMENT CRITICISED.

All the editorials in London papers of Sunday morning breathed the calm of determination. No one will allow that one reverse could deter the country from the object it has set itself to attain, whatever the sacrifices which may be involved.

Very frank criticisms of the government, however, is beginning to be heard even in quarters that have hitherto refrained. The Daily Mail bodily throws all the blame upon Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Lord Lansdowne and Lord Wolseley.

INJUNCTION REFUSED.

Judge Speer Decides Against Dady In Georgia and Alabama Railroad Case.

At Macon, Ga., Saturday, Judge Speer, in the case of Dady against the Georgia and Alabama railway, refused the injunction sought to prevent the consolidation of the Seaboard Air-Line system. He referred to the fact that causes substantially similar were pending in the federal jurisdiction of Virginia and North Carolina, holding that the court which first took cognizance the case should carry it to its termination.

He further held that only a majority vote of stockholders was necessary for such consolidation in Georgia and that it was not properly maintainable, that because the defendants, John Skelton Williams, occupied the position of a member of the voting trust, president of the Georgia and Alabama and of the Florida Central and Peninsular, that the merger or consolidation brought about through his instrumentality should be enjoined.

An interesting part of the decision is that which bears upon the competitive character of the two roads. Tracing their general trend and calling attention to the fact that after leaving Savannah they are in nowisee connected save through the intermediary of one or two shallow rivers on which small steamboats occasionally ply and that intervening the two lines are powerful competitive systems, he says: "It is not difficult to perceive that the contemplated system of the Seaboard Air-Line, instead of tending to defeat competition, must invariably tend to preserve it."

NOT PUERTO RICO.

Senate Committee Decides That Name Shall Be Spelled "Porto."

The senate committee on Porto Rico has decided so far as it can decide, that the island shall be known as Porto Rico and not as Puerto Rico, as fixed by a recent executive order. At a meeting of the committee Saturday in connection with the Foraker bill, providing a form of government for the island, the spelling of the name was unanimously decided upon.

The committee went over the bill in detail, deciding upon many changes in phraseology and some alterations in the general provision of the measure.

AUSTRIA SENDS WARSHIP

To Hong Kong, China, For Protection of Her Interests.

A serious view is taken in diplomatic circles in Vienna of the situation in China. The Neue Freie Presse thinks that other powers will follow the example of France and send warships to protect their subjects. The Austro-Hungarian cruiser Zonta will arrive at Hong Kong in a few days and will be at the disposal of the Austro-Hungarian minister.

LONG WAR PREDICTED

By Dr. Leyds In An Interview For a Berlin Paper.

The Deutsche Teges Zeitung (Berlin) publishes an interview with Dr. Leyds which represents him as having said: "The war will certainly last a very long time. The Transvaal will decidedly not be the first to seek peace, and will refuse any proposals on the basis of the status quo."

Actor Reed Improving.

Roland Reed, the actor, who has been ill in St. Luke's hospital in New York for several weeks, is reported to be resting easily. His physicians say he is on the road to recovery.

BOOM IN RAILROAD BUILDING.

Over Five Hundred Miles Now Under Construction In Alabama.

A Montgomery dispatch says: Alabama is enjoying an uprecedented degree of prosperity in the way of railroad development. Something like 500 miles of new road are now in course of construction, some of it being almost completed and some of it just being commenced on. This means an increase of about 15 per cent in the railroad mileage of the state.

ASKS FOR BOND.

Hunter Arrives In Atlanta and With His Attorneys Appears In Court.

Ex-Auditor Thomas J. Hunter, charged with embezzlement by the Atlanta and West Point railroad, arrived in Atlanta early Friday morning. With him were William P. Hill, special legal representaeive of the road, and John W. Rodgers, Pinkerton detective. The three men were direct from Tangier, Morocco. Shortly after their arrival in the city, they went to the office of Mr. Hill.

At 9 o'clock Hunter appeared in the superior court room before Judge Lumpkin and made application through his attorney for a bond to avert the only other alternative of going to prison on the three indictments found by the Fulton county grand jury charging him with conspiracy and embezzlement in the sum of $40,000 from the Atlanta and West Point railroad during his term of office as auditor.

Judge Lumpkin fixed his bond at an aggregate of $30,000.

Ten thousand dollars of this bond was to insure his presence at the trial on the first indictment charging him with conspiracy jointly with former Ticket Agent Albert Howell, Sr., to defraud the road of $21,000.

Fifteen thousand dollars of the bond was to insure his presence at the trial on the second indictment charging him with embezzlement of $20,000.

Five thousand dollars was to insure his presence at the trial on the third indictment charging him with embezzlement of $250 from the agent of the road at West Point.

Hunter did not make the bond in court. He was carried to the office of Sheriff Nelms in the building and allowed to consult with his attorney in reference to the bond.

Hunter remained in the office of Sheriff Nelms until 1:45 o'clock, at which time he was taken to the Tower.

"I am feeling very well," said the prisoner to a newspaper man as he sat in the court room waiting the hour for the hearing as to his bond. "I am glad to get away from Morocco. I was in that country about a month.

"You can appreciate the fact, no doubt, that I am a little rattled just now, and can't talk much. I would be glad to tell you all about Morocco another time.

"We had a pleasant voyage over, and I have been well treated by everybody since we left Tangiers."

After inquiring about several friends Hunter lapsed into silence, except for an occasional word with his attorney.

Hunter had but five cents on his person when he was taken into custody by the order of the American consul in Morocco, and this was in coppers of the American coinage. He had been traveling under the name of Stevens, the detective says, and had assumed the name after leaving New York.

The prisoner sat quietly through the hearing for a bond. He did not appear at all nervous, but shook hands cordially with several friends who came up to speak to him after he entered the courtroom.

WILL ACQUIT DELEGALES:

Georgia Supreme Court Renders Decision In Riot Cases.

The decision of the Georgia supreme court in the case of Delegale vs. the state, goes a long way toward clearing up the murder cases of McIntosh county, growing out of the riots there last August.

John and Edward Delegale, negroes, were charged with killing Mr. Joseph Townsend, who was trying to arrest them without a warrant, for riot.

They were sentenced to the penitentiary for life, but appealed the case to the supreme court. Edward Delegale was granted a new trial by Judge Seabrook, but John was not so fortunate. The supreme court now gives him one.

Edward Delegale is to be released from custody in a few days, and John is sure of an acquittal under the sweeping decision of the supreme court.

The exciting times in McIntosh county last August when the soldiers were called out to preserve order have resulted in no one's absolute acquittal yet, except a few negroes for riotous conduct.

Henry Delegale, arrested for rape, and about whom all the trouble started, is free; Edward Delegale is to be freed and John Delegale cannot be convicted under the supreme court's decision.

Many of the riot cases are now pending in the supreme court.

DYNAMITE DISASTER.

Five Men Killed, Eight Hurt and Much Property Damaged.

Five men killed and eight badly injured is the result of a run-away train and the explosion of dynamite that followed on the Central railroad of New Jersey at Ashley, Pa., Thursday night. The complete list of the dead is as follows: Frank McLaughlin, brakeman; Peter Fray, engine wiper; Michael Bird, brakeman; Charles Haney, an unknown tramp.

Eight men were injured, all of whom, it is thought, will recover.

Many houses in the vicinity were badly damaged, and the inmates were injured, although none seriously.

MEASURE RECONSIDERED.

The Hepburn Canal Bill Is Recalled For Amendment.

Friday the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce reconsidered the Nicaragua canal bill which had been reported with an appropriation section so as to make $10,000,000 available, with authority to contract for the entire excavation, construction, defense and completion of the canal at a total cost not exceeding $140,000,000.

SPION KOPF WAS VACATED

Boers Made Place "Too Hot" For Britons.

"I AM SORRY" SAYS BULLER

The Hill Had Been Captured and Taken Possession of By General Warren's Troops.

The London war office publishes the following dispatch from General Buller, dated at Spearman's camp, Thursday, January 25, noon:

"General Warren's garrison, I am sorry to say, I find this morning had, in the night, abandoned Spion Kopf."

General Buller reports that the British casualities January 24 were:

Killed—Officers 6; non-commissioned officers and men, 18.

Wounded—Officers, 2; non-commissioned officers and men, 142.

Missing—31 men.

Total in killed and wounded and missing on January 24th, 209.

The killed includes Col. Buchanan Riddell of the King's Royal Rifles. He served in the Niger war of 1881. It is not clear whether the casualties include those at Spion Kopf or only those resulting from fighting prior to the Spion Kopf engagement.

General Woodgate, who was wounded Tuesday, is dead.

CAUSES CONSTERNATION.

Whatever may be the explanation of abandonment of Spion Kopf by the British, it will doubtless have the same temporary moral effect as a reverse. It appears to have been so entirely unexpected at the war office that General Buller's dispatch caused something in the nature of consternation. The lobbies were soon crowded and there was evidence on all sides that the news was keenly felt.

The only official comment was, apparently, General Warren found the position too hot to hold. Business on the stock exchange became very flat Friday. Consuls dropped five-eighths, leading a general decline.

Nowhere, however, in spite of the depression, is there the least sign of abatement in the determination to carry the war to a successful issue. The cabinet met Friday afternoon under the presidency of Lord Salisbury, and doubtless the ministers fully canvassed the new situation, though primarily summoned to discuss the terms of the queen's speech.

Under other circumstances the news from Ladysmith showing greatly improved sanitary conditions, the plentifulness of provisions, and the strengthening of the fortifications until the place is regarded as impregnable, would have inspired the nation, but these good tidings to the British are overshadowed by the anxiety as to the situation on the Upper Tugela and the thought that the heavy losses suffered during the struggle Tuesday night have counted for naught.

Military circles made an effort to conceal their chagrin, expressing the gravest fears as to the ultimate fate of Ladysmith. Such authorities as Major General Sir Frederick Carrington, who is under orders for South Africa, and Lord Clifford, who won the Victoria cross while scouting for Lord Wolseley during the Zulu war, would not be surprised to hear of the capture of General White's forces within a week. Lord Gifford, who knows the country like a book, could not understand how in the world General Warren ever got to the top of Spion Kopf without ascertaining what positions command it.

The poorness of the maps, it was pointed out, could hardly be an excuse for this, as there must be with General Warren several scouts, to say nothing of officers who at one time or another have served at Ladysmith, and whose mere hunting expeditions would have given them knowledge of the country. While General Warren is not blamed for retreating under what is supposed to have been heavy shell fire, he is severely criticised for occupying a position to which he could not bring up his artillery.

AVAILABLE FUNDS

For Rivers and Harbors As Reported By General Wilson.

General Wilson, chief of engineers, reports to congress that on the first of the year the funds available for river and harbor work included the following: Virginia, James river, $143,923; North Carolina, Cape Fear river, at and below Wilmington, $120,518; South Carolina, Winyah bay, $358,542; Georgia, Savannah harbor, $606,455; Florida, St. John's river, $243,556; Hillsboro bay, $122,531. Also, Cumberland sound, Georgia and Florida, $856,690.

VICTIMS OF BUBONIC.

Twenty-Nine Deaths Out of Thirty-Nine Cases In Honolulu.

News from Honolulu, per steamer Miowera, says: The total number of deaths up to the time the Miowera sailed for this port, was 29 out of 39 cases. Two were whites and another was a half-caste. The other deaths were about equally divided between Hawaiian natives and the Orientals. Six other whites who caught the disease were believed to be convalescent.

CONTRACT AWARDED.

Extension of the Alabama and Florida Railroad to Be Completed.

The Alabama Construction company of Mobile has secured the contract for building the extension of the Alabama & Florida railroad from Andalusia to Geneva, a distance of forty-five miles. The contract calls for the completion of the read October 1, 1900. The price to be paid for the road is understand to be about a half million dollars. The construction company will put a large force of men on the work at once, and push it to an early completion.

This extension is a part of the Louisville & Nashville branch road which is to run from Georgiana, a station on the Mobile and Montgomery division fifty-two miles south of Montgomery, to Mariana, Fla. The road has already been constructed between Georgiana and Andalusia.

Suit to Recover University Lands.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the University of Alabama in Birmingham Phares Coleman and Sterling Wood, the committee of alumni appointed to bring suit against the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron company for recovery of 400 acres of university lands sold through the state authorities at $12.50 per acre, which sale has since been declared to have been inadvisable and null and void by the trustees, a bill was reported which was ordered to be filed after some modifications suggested are made.

It is expected that the legal action for recovery of the lands will begin in a few days. The Sloss company, it is understood, will bitterly resist the suit. That is the sale which caused such a sensation two months ago.

The committee also received a proposition for lease of two tracts of university lands for coal mining purposes in Tuskaloosa and Walker counties, the latter being near lands sold to the Sloss company. The price offered was $10 minimum, with a royalty of 5 cents per ton on coal mined.

Special Day Observance Suggested.

Hon. John W. Abercrombie, state superintendent of education, has addressed a letter to the teachers of the state calling attention to the importance of the observation of "special" days as a part of the school work, and especially of impressing lessons of patriotism and morality upon the young by fitting observances of the birthday anniversaries of great and good men. He suggests, in view of the fact that at the present time much is being said and written about the origin and growth of American institutions, that February 22, the anniversary of the birth of Washington, be set apart as a time for a celebration, and requests that each teacher in the state co-operate in rendering a suitable programme which he has prepared.

Young Girl Accidentally Killed.

At Gate City the 7-year-old daughter of Walter Jones, a prominent rolling mill man of that place, was accidentally shot and killed by the latter. The accident happened with a weapon which was thought to be unloaded. Mr. Jones was examining it while sitting before the fire. He snapped it while pointed toward the fire, which resulted in its discharge, the ball rebounding from the back of the grate and striking the little girl. Death resulted within three hours.

Hearing Set for February.

The house committee on rivers and harbors Monday set the hearing for the delegation seeking further appropriation for the VanHoose canal to the Warrior river on February 20.

Tuskaloosa Co. Will Vote on Dispensary.

The Tuskaloosa county democratic executive committee, in session at Tuskaloosa Monday, passed an important resolution, providing that at the April primary a vote be taken on whether the people desire a dispensary or not, and also their choice for United States senator.

Steel Car Axles.

The first steel car axles ever made in Alabama were made in Anniston Monday in the rolling mill department of the Southern Car and Foundry Company, with steel from the Alabama Steel and Ship Building Company.

Morgan Returns to Washington.

Senator Morgan has returned to Washington to look after the Nicaragua canal bill now pending in congress. Some amendments to the bill as reported by the committee have been introduced, and the senator felt that his presence in Washington while these were under consideration was necessary. He has cancelled his appointments to speak in Russell county.

A TEST VOTE AT FRANKFORT

Democratic Contestant Seated By the Kentucky Legislature.

STRONG POINT FOR GOEBEL

Party Lines Were Closely Drawn and Vote Was Close.

The first actual test of strength between the Republican and Democratic forces in the Goebel-Taylor contest came at Frankfort, Saturday, and by the admission of the Republican leader, proved a very clear majority for Goebel.

The Democrats claim the result of the struggle as decisive, while the Republicans, although freely admitting a defeat, declare they will fight to a finish and have still strong hopes of retaining Governor Taylor in his seat.

The fight came on the vote of the house in the contest by H. S. Van Meter, of Fayette county, for the seat heretofore held by Henry S. Berry. Both sides realized that the test of the real strength would be made on this issue, and every effort was made to get out the largest possible vote. There were before the contest fifty-nine Demcrats, including Speaker Trimble, in the house, and forty-one Republicans. The latter had claimed confidently that they would be able to swing at least fifty votes, with excellent chances of two or three additional.

The Democrats claimed to be certain of fifty-two votes. The vote in favor of Van Meter was 51 to 45. Hays, Republican, and Sledge, Democrat, were absent. Berry had no vote, because of his personal interest in the contest. Speaker Trimble did not vote.

There was much wrath in the Republican ranks over the failure of E. H. Hays, of Pulaski county, to vote. failed entirely to put in an appearance at the statehouse and was seen at the depot a few minutes before a train arrived. After that the Republicans saw no more of him, nor could the members of the committee locate him, although they spent the afternoon in search.

Adjutant General Collier hurriedly impressed an engine on the Louisville and Nashville railroad and made a flying trip to Lexington in the effort to find Hays and bring him back. On reaching Lexington he was informed that Hays had gone. He was compelled to return without his man.

The Democratic leaders, without exception, claim that the seating of Van Meter foreshadows accurately the seating of Goebel.

The house now stands 60 Democrats, including Van Meter and Speaker Trimble, and 40 Republicans. The senate 26 Democrats and 12 Republicans.

The Democrats on a vote in the gubernatorial contest can have but a possible maximum vote of 24, as Goebel will have no voice and Senator Hill, a Goebel man, is incapacitated by illness and has never qualified. Both sides admit the senate to be very evenly divided. Seventy votes are necessary on joint ballot to seat Goebel as governor.

DUNHAM QUITS PLANT SYSTEM.

General Superintendent Sends In His Resignation.

There was some surprise in railroad circles when it was learned that Major Branford Dunham, general superintendent of the Plant System, had tendered his resignation to President R. G. Erwin. Major Dunham's reasons for resigning were not made public.

Major Dunham was very close to President H. H. Plant during his life time, and it was by Mr. Plant's appointment that he went to Savannah as general superintendent on February 15, 1895, succeeding Mr. R. G. Fleming.

Captain W. B. Denham, superintendent of the fourth and sixth divisions of the Plant system, will succeed to the general superintendency of the entire Plant system.

Honors For Nansen.

The prince regent of Bavaria has conferred the order of St. Michael, first-class, on Dr. Nansen, the explorer.

LOFTIN LEAVES HOGANSVILLE.

Negro Postmaster May Secure a Position In Washington.

I. H. Loftin, postmaster at Hogansville, Ga., who has been a thorn in the flesh to the citizens of that town, left Thursdry night for Washington, where he goes to accept a position in one of the departments.

It is stated upon authority, although repeatedly denied by the friends of Loftin, that the postmaster will resign in a few days and will become a permanent resident of the national capital. The boycott declared against the office is still effective and only negroes patronize it.

EXPERTS TESTIFY

In Snell Murder Trial As To the Prisoner's Mental Condition.

A Washington dispatch says: The taking of expert testimony consumed the larger part of Friday in the Snell murder trial. The defense showed, by the Snell family physician, that the defendant had symptoms of epilepsy and introduced experts to show the existance of insane intervals in epileptic subjects.

ANOTHER KENTUCKY MUDDLE.

Gov. Taylor Will Not Issue Blackburn's Commission as Senator.

It is not likely that United States Senator-Elect Blackburn will receive any commission from Governor Taylor, of Kentucky, until the present gubernatorial contest has been finally settled. Governor Taylor, it is stated on excellent authority, will assume the position that if it is decided he is illegally the governor of Kentucky, the legislators who elected Blackburn, and who were declared elected at the same election at which he was a candidate for governor, were also illegally elected, and have not, therefore, the power to choose a senator.

The taking of evidence in the contest ended Monday, and the arguments have commenced.

CLAYTON'S RESOLUTION.

Alabamians Wants to Remove Troops from Cuba July 4.

Representative Clayton, of Alabama, Monday introduced the following resolution. "That on July 4, 1900, the military and naval forces of the United States be withdrawn from the island of Cuba, and that the government thereof be left to the Cuban people.

"Further, That the president of the United States be, and is hereby directed to make proclamation of this resolution and all proper orders for the execution thereof."

A BIG DEAL CONSUMMATED.

Will Develop Properties in East Tennessee and Virginia.

The Virginia Coal and Iron company has filed in the register's office at Bristol, Va., a mortgage for $10,000,000 to secure funds to carry on a gigantic development of property in southwestern Virginia and east Tennessee. The developments contemplated by the company have not all been made public, but it means the building of more coke ovens and furnaces.

MAGNETIC HEALER

Found Parboiled in a Bath Tub at Grand Rapids.

Professor A. Leflamboy, a magnetic healer, was found dead in a bath tub at Grand Rapids, Michigan, Monday. His body had been parboiled to such a degree that the flesh fell from the bones when it was lifted out. On the bathroom floor lay his brother George unconscious, who, it is supposed, was overcome with horror at the discovery of his brother's body.

The Fertilizer Question.

The fertilizer traffic is under fire in South Carolina. Senator J. C. Alexder, president of the state farmers' alliance, has issued a call to all of the alliances in the state to meet and decide upon a plan of fighting the alleged trust.

The house of representatives has passed a bill to reduce the inspection tax on fertilizers 5 cents a ton, hoping to avoid high prices, and serious consideration is being given the proposition to establish a state guano factory at the penitentiary.

Inventory of Henry B. Plant's Will.

Judge Lynde Harrison, one of the executors of the will of the late Henry B. Plant, filed the inventory of his estate with the appraisal in the probate court at New Haven, Conn., Monday. It amounts to $16,952,000, and includes all of his estate except the real estate which belonged to him in Florida, and which is not subject to appraisal and inventory except in the courts of that state.

Spanish Steamer Lost.

The Spanish steamer Vallez has founded off the coast of Bilboa with thirteen of the crew being drowned.

Union Men Locked Out.

On January 6, the employees of the Southern Saddlery company at Chattanooga organized a local branch of the national harness and saddle makers' union. On Saturday last they were notified by the company that their shop must be strictly non-union. Monday morning the men found themselves locked out.

Twenty-two Officers Killed.

General Buller wires from Spearman's Camp, January 29, that the casualties among the officers of the Fifth division and mounted brigade at Spion Kop January 24 were: Killed, 22; wounded, 20; missing, 6.

Received a Life Sentence.

At Macon, Ga., W. D. Smith, alias Henry Smith, was convicted in the superior court and sentenced to life imprisonment. Smith and his wife boarded with Mrs. Susie Hillard, but on account of not paying board, Smith was sent away. Smith, on being refused permission to see his wife by Mrs. Hillard, dashed acid in her face, permanently blinding her.

THE WAY TO ADVERTISE.

C. B. Duran & Co. have a large advertisement in this issue. They are in business to stay, and have taken newspaper space by the year. This is the proper way to get returns from advertising, and we invite our readers to watch their space for bargains.

If every business man in the town will take the same amount in proportion to the size of the business we will guarantee this paper to be read by every family within ten miles of this place once a month. This done, if the town does not receive a thousand more bales of cotton next fall than last we will give three months advertising to every merchant free. We make this open offer good for two weeks, when if not accepted it will be withdrawn.

The trade of all the farmers within ten miles of Columbiana will amount to more than $100,000, and there is more than that amount of cotton made within that radius. If by the expenditure of the amount we propose in advertising will catch one-half of the cotton made within the ten miles the profits to the town would more than double the cost.

We made this proposition privately before the last season opened. It was declined, and the receipts to date are at least eight hundred bales short. Now we make the proposition publicly, and we do it to see if our town wants to do the business it professes. We may be expected to go on booming the town without cost to the town, for loyalty's sake, but loyalty don't pay expenses, and we are not going to do it. If our proposition is not accepted it will not be necessary for us to announce it. Our readers will know it by looking through the advertising columns, and they will also know that our town is not in favor of expansion.

Now let some enterprising business man call a meeting, get the people together, and we are ready to start a furore that will bring results.

THE CAMPAIGN IS ON.

It may be said that the campaign in this county is now open. No Democratic candidates have appeared, but the call has been issued for a convention to nominate a candidate for the legislature, and the time is at hand for a discussion of the issues involved. Upon the election of a legislator from this county a great deal depends, and the nomination of a candidate for that office is a thing which calls for careful consideration. Some important issues are involved.

First and formost of these is the federal Senatorship, which will have to be settled by the next legislature. The reelection of Senator Morgan is at this time of the utmost importance to all our people, and those who are true to their own interest will vote for that candidate for the legislature who will assist in returning him to the Senate.

There are many State and local issues at stake. The cause of education needs the care of able men, men of judgment, men who will not hesitate to aid in the betterment of our educational system as well as to provide more school money.

The tax rate in this state and county is getting to be very burdensome, and we need in the legislature men competent to remodel the financial system of the State as to decrease expenses.

There are getting to be too many officeholders to draw salaries from the people's pockets, and we should send men to the legislature who will be able to command attention on this point.

We have a road law in this county which is an expensive nuisance, and it ought to be modified or repealed.

Some of our localities want relief from the illegal sale of whisky, and we want a representative in the legislature who is firm and will represent the wishes of the people on that point.

These are but a few of the issues involved. The best way for our people to provide for the election of a safe, competent legislator is to come into the Democratic primaries, select the best men in each precinct to attend the county convention, nominate the best man in the county and elect him as a Democrat. By this means he will command the respect of his fellow members, command influence, and do something for the good of the people of the county.

The way is open. Our committee has invited all conservative white voters to join in the primaries. Let those who have their own and their neighbors interest at heart make up their minds now to join in the nomination and election of a competent representative, one who will vote for Morgan and do something for his county.

THE Court Journal is not near so slobery over the Populites since the announcement of Howard.

KENTUCKY has two governors. If she had one like ours she would find him enough.

LET all the white men in Shelby County who desire good government through competent officials come into the Democratic beat meetings and help to nominate the candidates and then to elect them. Those Populists who are opposed to fusing with the negro party are especially invited to join us.

THE Court Journal says the candidacy of Howard is a Morgan trick. That makes the Populists smile and say bad words.

HOWL OF A DEFEATED CANDIDATE.

In a lengthy editorial in the Montgomery Journal we find the following paragraph:

> The men who are today supporting Morgan under the leadership of the Montgomery Advertiser have persistently, in season and out of season, struggled to keep the white people divided. They have control of the Democratic party machinery here and there and are using it to maintain Pouplist supremacy in such counties as they fear might elect a Johnston Democrat to the legislature. Notably is this true in counties like Chilton and Shelby.

There are some insinuations in this which in behalf of the Democracy of Shelby County we resent.

The men who are supporting Morgan in this county are not doing it under the leadership of the Montgomery Advertiser or anybody else. They are free men and have a right to support whom they please, and they please to support Senator Morgan because they regard him as the most worthy of their support of all the candidates; certainly more worthy their support than the man who by his machine methods defeated a revision of the constitution and thereby fastened upon them a continuation of Aldrichism and negro domination in county politics.

We denounce as utterly and wilfully false the intimation that the Democrats of Shelby County have struggled to keep the white people apart. They have been loyal to every platform and every candidate of their party; they have fought negro fusion and defended Governor Johnston against its attacks when led by the very men with whom he is now dickering to defeat the will of Democrats; they are now inviting all white men into their primaries, in contradistinction to the action of Johnston's Populist friends who are conniving with that boodle boss of the negroes, W. F. Aldrich, to divide the county offices and prevent the election of a Morgan representative. If this is the objection the Journal has to the Shelby County Democrats it will continue to have it.

When the Journal says that the Democratic machinery in this county has been used to maintain Poplism it states an untruth which is an open insult to our Democrats and at which the Populists will smile in pity for the ignorance of the Journal's editor. The Democratic machinery in this county is in the hands of Democrats, and they do not propose to turn it over to the lackeys of Aldrich and Johnston: they prefer defeat to nominal success obtained by bootlicking politics of the Johnston stripe. If Governor Johnston had done half as much for the Democracy of this county as he has done against it by toadying to the mongrel opposition, he would have more respect here if not more support.

Let the Journal know this truth: Nine-tenths of the Democrats in this county are for Morgan; they will nominate a Morgan man for the legislature; they will elect him over the opposition of the Deans-Johnston-Aldrich combination, and they are going to do it with the votes of white men.

The fact is the plain people, the loyal Democrats, the honesty loving white men are against Johnston, and Journal's vaporings are the wail of a defeated demagogue.

STRANGE that it's always the defeated candidate that cries fraud.

THE political strife in Kentucky has resulted in the assassination of Senator Goebel. Martial law has been declared by Taylor, and Goebel has ordered the militia to go home. The State has two governors and no order.

THE Court Journal has quit bragging and gone to whimpering. We've often seen whipped curs do that.

BECAUSE the Democrats of Chilton and Shelby won't endorse Reynolds for the senate and let Deans go to the legislature as a Democrat the Court Journal don't like it. Sorry, but we can't do that. We offerred them a chance to get into the caucus, but they preferred to stick to Aldrich and his negroes.

SINCE the Populites in Choctaw went for Morgan the Court Journal has begun to denounce Populism.

THE Court Journal charges that money was used in Crenshaw. That is to say, the Democrats sold themselves for cash. The Journal is stooping to that low state of pique and anger at defeat when it makes such a charge against intelligent and honorable white men. Either that, or it is measuring the Morgan campaign methods in the Johnston quart cup.

HOWARD had better come over here and put him out a candidate for representative and senator. Those that are slated are for Johnston.

TWO more counties, Marengo and Crenshaw, fell into the Morgan column last Saturday, with three members. In Marengo the Governor made no fight, but in Crenshaw he had things his own way till three days before the primary, when the friends of Senator Morgan went into the county and took it. So far ten counties have acted. The Senator has carried five, the Governor two, Oates one, and two uninstructed. Of votes the Senator has ten, the Governor four and Oates one. Two more counties act Saturday, and the big fight will come in April.

Advice to Consumptives

There are three great remedies that every person with weak lungs, or with consumption itself, should understand. These remedies will cure about every case in its first stages; and many of those more advanced. It is only the most advanced that are hopeless. Even these are wonderfully relieved and life itself greatly prolonged.

What are these remedies? Fresh air, proper food and Scott's Emulsion of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Be afraid of draughts but not of fresh air. Eat nutritious food and drink plenty of milk. Do not forget that Scott's Emulsion is the oldest, the most thoroughly tested and the highest endorsed of all remedies for weak throats, weak lungs and consumption in all its stages.

$3,000 CASH PRIZE CONTEST.

Atlanta Constitution's Great Offer of 1900—The Cotton Receipts at New Orleans from September to April—Full Statistics Given for Your Guidance—An Unparalelled Offer for Our Readers.

The Atlanta Constitution offers a $3,000 cash prize contest for January, February and March, 1900, as follows:

To the person sending a yearly subscription to The Weekly Constitution, together with the correct estimate on the cotton receipts at New Orleans during the first seven months of the present cotton year (September 1, 1899, to April 1, 1900).

$1,500 if estimate is received during January.

$1,000 if estimate is received during February.

[illegible] if estimate is received during March.

The above are for the exact estimates; there are besides these six prizes, ranging along, [illegible], $150, $125 and $75, amounting to $1,500, that will be paid out one for the six nearest estimates to the New Orleans cotton receipts at any time during the three months of the contest. But you hit it exactly during January and secure the full $1,500 prize.

The Constitution believes somebody will hit the figures exactly and expects to pay out the full amount of the prizes offered—$3,000 in all. In a Constitution contest upon the same subject in 1896 Mr. R. T. Poole, of Capels Mills, N. C., hit the exact figures and received a check for [illegible] as his prize. Mr. Poole did not try to swell himself up at once, but very generously paid off a mortgage on his father's home place and with the balance he very wisely educated himself at Trinity college, Durham, N. C. He is now doing well in business in North Carolina and lives still near his old home. It is needless to say he is a warm friend of The Constitution.

As a guide in making estimates upon the New Orleans port receipts, The Constitution gives the following figures, compiled from statistics of the past four years:

SEASON.	N. O. rec'ts. Sept. 1–March 1.	N. O. rec'ts. whole year. Sep. 1-Aug. 31.	Total U. S. crop for season.
[illegible]	[illegible]	1,812,167	7,157,346
[illegible]	[illegible]	2,102,470	8,757,964
[illegible]	[illegible]	2,576,165	11,199,994
[illegible]	1,851,153	2,130,296	11,274,840

The Constitution's market page will give each week the port receipts for the cotton season from which you can always get the New Orleans port receipts from September 1, 1899, up through the Friday immediately preceding the publication. This will keep you posted to within two or three days of the time you send in your estimate.

It is believed that some of the Texas crop, that as a rule is sent in bulk to New Orleans, will be diverted this year to other points because of the quarantine regulations against New Orleans. The effort of Louisiana to have quarantine raised by injunction from United States courts will not have very soothing effect upon the direction of cotton shipments to New Orleans. This is mentioned merely as a pointer in making up estimates: how much to allow, if anything, for this cause must be left to each man's judgment.

The $3,000 contest is an express contract, which The Constitution will stand in every particular. Yet it is in its nature simply an advertisement by which The Constitution combined with this paper may be made better known in this community. Send us the subscription to The Constitution and our paper at the advertised price of the two and with it your estimate on the New Orleans port receipts and we will forward all together for you. On April 1st we trust a $1,500 check will reach some of our subscribers to help make times even more easy around about us.

The Weekly Constitution for 1900 will be better than ever before. Its special features are unsurpassed. The Boer-British war, the Philippines and Cuban questions, the busy session of the most important congress that has ever assembled, the beginning of the issues of the presidential campaign of this year and the debates and speeches during its progress; the final result of the November elections, the development of the south's great industrial movements; diversified farm and village industries and thousands of other important things will be found fully and freely discussed in The Weekly Constitution for the year. The Farm and Farmers' page, the Woman's Kingdom, the Southern Pulpit, the Children's Page and other interesting departments will be ably conducted and will be especially adapted to those addressed. The ringing editorials of The Constitution, speaking right out in meeting exactly what it means in the advocacy of true democratic doctrine and in behalf of the great interests of the masses of our plain people, and protecting them from the grasping greed of those who would take their earnings from [illegible] are alone worth the subscription price of the paper over and again.

The Constitution has long stood as the champion of the people and has sent its shafts deep into the errors and evils that threaten and beset the masses. Its complete exposé of the methods of Neill of New Orleans and the shattering of the influence of this prophet of big cotton crops, and apostle of [illegible] and high priest of [illegible], who has cost the southern farmers hundreds of millions of dollars, ought to win for The Constitution the lasting gratitude of the whole south. The advice to farmers to organize against the trust that would increase the price of fertilizers and fertilizer materials for the home compost heap, and taking up the cudgel in behalf of the farmers against the combination that would put a fresh burden upon them is sound and valid and ought to be heeded. The bulwark of the people's rights and the best method of defense will often be found in a great paper, ably and fearlessly edited, upon which the people may rely not only for news of the ordinary events of government, army and political life but also for an alert foresight of the trend of future events that may operate to our lasting damage. The downfall of Neill, the breaking down of the fertilizer trust, the upbuilding of all southern interests and the enlightenment of every village, farm and mountain home are among The Constitution's many high aims and great ideas for 1900. That these interests may all be well served, and with the same unswerving fidelity to the people that The Constitution has always shown, goes without saying.

The management of The Constitution with Mr. Clark Howell as editor-in-chief and his well disciplined corps of staff writers, brilliant contributors and special correspondents, still under the faithful leadership of Colonel William A. Hemphill as business manager, will remain the same for the new year. The Constitution's long and honorable business course, keeping faith with the people in all its contracts, contests and engagements, as well as in its consistent and conspicuous editorial fairness, places it among those reliable institutions of our country on which the people may depend.

With such a great general newspaper, covering the world news and world and national questions, you will, of course, need the best and livest local paper, giving current local topics and the latest and best news and freshest comments upon events of local interest. We trust this combination secured with The Constitution will be found best suited to all our readers. The price is merely nominal when the service is even half considered, including your estimate in The Constitution's $3,000 cash contest. To get the full benefit of the high prize send in your subscription now so The Constitution may receive it during January and record it to your credit. Make your figures very plain, unmistakably plain.

Hon. Thos. Williams, of Elmore county, Alabama, ex-member of congress, statesman, orator, writer and one of the best informed men on the theoretical and practical application of commercial fertilizers. He is one of the largest cotton planters in the state, and produces his great crops upon poor sandy uplands by the skillful use of commercial fertilizers. He uses the ALABAMA FERTILIZER exclusively—after having tried nearly all other leading brands of complete fertilizers. His words, like rifle balls, are few, and go straight to the mark:

WETUMPKA, ALA., September 9, 1899.

DEAR SIRS:—Speaking from experimental tests, in results I am assured the ALABAMA FERTILIZER put up by you, is not excelled by any on our market, and I commend it to the public as a genuine fertilizer productive of good results.

The bags treated by the VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVER used by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., successfully resisted the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in the fertilizers, also preventing all loss from wasting.

Yours truly,
THOS. WILLIAMS.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT ANALYSIS.

Bulletin No. 12, issued by the Alabama Department of Agriculture, shows the actual commercial value of the ALABAMA FERTILIZERS to be 19.33 per cent more valuable than all the complete fertilizers or guanos offered for sale in the State of Alabama for the season covered by said bulletin.

Bulletin No. 15, just issued by the Department of Agriculture, shows the actual analysis, from samples sent to the Department by dealers and consumers throughout the State, that the ALABAMA FERTILIZER is actually $3.54 per ton or 24 per cent better than the guaranteed analysis by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., and this answers the question so often asked, "why the ALABAMA FERTILIZER produces so much better crops than other fertilizers of equal guaranteed analysis?" The ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be shipped in the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVED BAGS. There is no other preserved bag on the market of any value.

The Commissioner of Agriculture recommends and endorses it in the following words:

"I therefore unhesitatingly say that I believe the bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVING PROCESS will resist the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in fertilizers; that the meshes of the bags are so filled by the process as to prevent all wastage, and that if generally used by manufacturers, would be of inestimable value to carriers, dealers and consumers.

(Signed) "I. F. CULVER,
"Commissioner of Agriculture."

These MUMMIA PRESERVED BAGS are almost indestructible by the weather or Fertilizers. Can be hauled in the rain without material damage to bag or contents. Fertilizers put up in these bags can be hauled out to the farm at any time and kept ready for use.

The ALABAMA FERTILIZER is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all round fertilizer for cotton and corn.

ALABAMA FERTILIZER RECORD.

It has produced nearly four bales of cotton on one acre of poor sandy upland.
One hundred and thirty-two bushels of corn on one acre of poor sandy upland.
Two thousand and forty one bushels of corn on twenty acres of poor upland.
Land and corn accurately surveyed and measured by competent disinterested and honorable men.

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 48 premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

ESTABLISHED 1880
ALABAMA
TRADE MARK

This trade mark is registered. It is our property. It is not likely to be counterfeited, as that would subject the perpetrator to the danger of heavy fine and imprisonment (see U. S. laws respecting copyrights). It is on every genuine sack of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

As required by state law the word "ALABAMA" in large letters is found on every bag of fertilizer offered for sale in this State. Some unscrupulous persons have employed this means to deceive you.

See that the above trade mark is on the bag, and take none offered you as the ALABAMA FERTILIZER without it.

What you save on one purchase helps you to make another. Call on us. C. B. Duran & Co.

W. P. Thomas and John S. Leeper of Birmingham were over Sunday on a visit to friends here.

A Mr. Ives, of Connecticut, is the guest of C. W. Cary, of Montevallo. He was in our city yesterday.

We regret to announce the death of little Purnie, daughter of Mrs. Paralee Smith, of Lewis, on the 28th of January.

J. H. Hammonds don't intend to be undersold, especially on tobacco and snuffs. You only have to go in and see his prices.

No further news has been heard from the Aldrich Robbins contest case It has not yet been brought up in the House.

Both furnaces are in blast at Shelby now, a large amount of iron is being made and shipped. Business is good there in consequence.

Received at Mrs. Armstrongs, new line of ladies and children's hose, extra quality. None like them ever been in this town.

The coldest weather of the season has been experienced this week, the thermometer going down to 12 degrees above zero this morning.

A great many mortgages are being filed for record, and it looks as if the farmers are going into the cotton business a little heavy this year.

Dr. F. M. Peterson, president of the Montevallo school, preached in the Methodist church here on Sunday last to a good congregation, who were highly entertained.

We learn that arrangements have been made for resuming work on the school building at Montevallo, and that it will completed as soon as the weather permits.

C. B. Duran & Co. are getting in their full stock of groceries, and they are selling goods cheap. Already they have received a good share of the trade, and they are in the market for your custom.

COMMITTEE MEETING.

Democratic Primaries Called for April 14.

There was not a full attendance of the Democratic Committee Tuesday, but a quorum answered to roll call by beats.

After some discussion of the situation it was decided to call primaries or beat meetings, as each beat desires, on the 14th of April for the selection of delegates to the county convention to be held here on April 21, at which time delegates to the State and senatorial conventions will be selected and a candidate for representative nominated.

The chairman was instructed to include in the call an invitation to all white voters to participate in the primaries or beat meetings, in the language of the resolution passed by the State committee. That resolution reads as follows:

"Be it resolved by the Democratic State executive committee of Alabama that we hereby cordially invite all conservative white voters, irrespective of past political associations or differences who can unite with us in the effort for pure and economical government, and who will support the nominees and principles of the Democratic party, to participate in the primaries of the party throughout the State.

"Resolved, further, That all persons participating in the primaries, conventions or mass meetings of the party hereafter to be held thereby pledge themselves to support the nominees of such primaries, conventions or mass meetings, whether municipal, county, state or Federal."

The committee adjourned to meet on the 21st of April.

COTTON MILL.

Our People Agitating the Question of a Factory.

The matter of establishing a cotton mill has been discussed among our people for some time in a quiet way and all have agreed that nothing would be better for the town.

Last week the discussion took a practical turn, and a meeting was held Friday night. Eleven business men held a brief session, and took the matter up in a serious view.

The result of the meeting was that a committee of three was appointed to go to Talladega and investigate the practical details from the mills there. This visit will be made during the present week, and upon their report will depend the future action of those interested.

The leading idea is to proceed upon a business-like basis, and if it is found to be possible to establish a small mill upon home capital it will no doubt be done.

One gentleman who was present said that he was pleased with the sensible view taken by all present, and it looked to him like they meant business.

Shelby.

A son of Capt. Bush, a recent graduate of Auburn, is in Shelby studying the works here preparatory to taking a special technological course.

A. T. Clarke, Jr., arrived in town last Saturday and we understand will begin service in the company's office this week. He is said to have had several years of experience in office.

There was a Union meeting last Sunday night of the young people of Shelby The subject was Temperance, Miss Kittie Avery and Miss Maude Clarke gave select readings. The principal address was by Prof. Dowell, whose eloquent words were enjoyed and approved by all. A. T. Clarke, Jr., added to the interest of the occasion by his skillful playing of the clarinet.

Rev. James Davis, who has been pastor for the past two years of Bethlehem and Bay Springs Baptist churches, has moved to an adjoining county where he is in the coaling business for the company.

Teachers that Passed.

The following teachers examined in the county passed at the recent examination of papers by the State board:

Miss Minnie McGibbony, Miss Janie Robinson, W. H. Bird, H. E. Jones, Mamie Storrs, Miss Carrie Upshaw, Miss Eva Farr, Geo. Porter.

Dr. J. S. Lightcap, Dentist,

Will be at Columbiana February 5-6 7. Parties wanting dental work done will do well to consult him. Office at the White House.

John E. Morriss, of the Saginaw Lumber Co., was in the city Monday. Mr. Morriss has been spoken of as a candidate for representative, but we learn that he declines to run.

Read the advertisement of Johnston & Co., in this issue. They are increasing their stock of groceries all the time, and also the amount of business done. They are accommodating, and make it a rule to please, both in quality of goods and prices.

News reached here late yesterday that the hotel at Shelby was burned yesterday morning. The building was owned by the Shelby Iron Co., and was being run by Mrs. Wade. A total loss was sustained, but we do not know the amount.

Gordon DuBose, the banker, has increased his capital stock to $15,000. This establisment has been peculiarly successful, this increase representing profits. He has now more than $45,000 of deposits, with more than 50 per cent of it in cash on hand.

Burgess Little, the popular young banker of Montevallo, was married recently to Miss Dora Fonde, of Mobile, a former pupil in the Industrial School for Girls. Mr. Little has made quite a success of his business, and is very deserving of the prize he has secured. The couple have the best wishes of many friends for their future.

They Should Know it.

Many women suffer untold agony and misery because the nature of their disease is not correctly understood. They have been led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for the many ills that beset womankind.

Neuralgia, nervousness, headache, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, rheumatism, a dragging pain or dull ache in the back, weakness or bearing-down sensation, profuse or scanty supply of urine with strong odor, frequent desire to pass it with scalding or burning sensation, sediment in it after standing in bottle or common glass for 24 hours are signs of kidney and bladder trouble.

The above symptoms are often attributed by the patient herself or by her physician to female weakness or womb trouble. Hence, so many fail to obtain relief, because they are treating, not the disease itself, but a reflection of the primary cause, which is kidney trouble.

In fact, women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same remedy.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is the great discovery of the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is easy to get at any drug store for 50 cents or $1.

To prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and book telling all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Kindly mention The Chronicle, and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

COOKING A HUSBAND.

A Few Simple Rules for Making Them Tender and Digestible.

In selecting your husband you should not be guided by the silvery appearance as in buying mackerel, or by the golden tint, as if you wanted salmon. Be sure to select him yourself, as tastes differ. Don't go shopping for him, as the best are always brought to your door. When bought, tie him in the saucepan with a strong cord called Comfort—as the kind called Duty is apt to be weak. Husbands sometimes fly out of the saucepan and become burned and rusty on the edges, since, like lobsters and oysters, you have to cook them alive. Make a clear, strong, steady fire out of Love, Neatness and Cheerfulness. Set him as near this as seems to agree with him. If he sputters and fizzles don't be anxious. Some husbands do this until they are quite done. Add a little sugar in the form of Kisses, but no vinegar or pepper. A little spice improves husbands, but it must be used with judgment. Don't stick any sharp instrument into him to see if he is becoming tender. Stir him gently, watching the while lest he should lie too close to the saucepan and so become tasteless. You cannot fail to know when he is done. If thus treated you will find him very digestible, agreeing nicely with you and the children.

The fastest train on record for regular running at high speed is shortly to be put on the railroad between Manchester and Liverpool, England. The distance of forty miles will be traversed in twenty minutes. The road is a single rail system, the invention of M. Behr.

Half a Bottle Cured Me

"About thirty years ago I bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor to stop my hair from falling out. One-half a bottle cured me. A few days ago my hair began to fall out again. I went to the medicine shelf and found the old bottle of Hair Vigor just as good as when I bought it."—J. C. Baxter, Braidwood, Ill., Sept. 27, 1899.

Keeps Thirty Years

Ayer's Hair Vigor is certainly the most economical preparation of its kind on the market. A little of it goes a long way. And then, what you don't need now you can use some other time just as well.

It doesn't take much of it to stop falling of the hair, restore color to gray hair, cure dandruff, and keep the hair soft and glossy. There's a great deal of good and an immense amount of satisfaction in every bottle of it.

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

ANECDOTES OF GENERAL LAWTON.

A New Version of the Charge by Which El Caney Was Captured.

Some National Guard officers who served in the Spanish-American War were discussing General Lawton's death and his service in Cuba. One of them told the following stories concerning his conduct at El Caney where he wore the white helmet which was the cause of his death:

"On the morning of July 1 General Lawton was sent with a force of about 5,000 men to take El Caney, while the balance of the troops were to be engaged at San Juan. As dusk fell after the first day's fighting we viewed with alarm the thin blue line which surrounded San Juan. Many of us, tired out with the long, hot day's work, having broken camp that morning at 3 o'clock, fell asleep on the damp hillside of San Juan trying to gain a few moments' rest before the struggle which we knew was inevitable the next day. Grave doubts were expressed if we could hold our position against the Spaniards, and it will be remembered there was a consultation of officers at which it was suggested that our troops be withdrawn, a plan which was violently opposed by General Wheeler and others. About midnight we were awakened with the pleasing intelligence that General Lawton had captured El Caney with a very small loss, I think five, and that he was rapidly moving to join our right, which would be done by daybreak. This he accomplished, and it is doubtful if save for this if our troops could have held their position. Our joy was somewhat tempered by the fact that General Lawton's loss at El Caney was much heavier than at first reported.

"I have seen some mention since the death of General Lawton of the order sent to him by General Shafter to withdraw his troops from El Caney, a proceeding which would have been disastrous to our forces, but I have never seen the statement given to me by the same staff officer. He told me that as General Lawton stood directing the troops an aide from the staff of General Shafter rode up and said:

"General Lawton, General Shafter directs you to withdraw your troops.

"At first General Lawton was nonplussed; then turning to the aide he said: 'This is too serious an order to be received verbally and I shall require it in writing from General Shafter.' He well knew that General Shafter was eight miles in the rear and that a written order from him could not be received before the charge was ordered. This much is a matter of history, but I do not believe that the whole story has been told.

"General Lawton knowing that the aide would soon reduce the order to writing at once sent orders to his officers to charge. The aide returned in about twenty minutes with the written order, having only retired a short distance to write and he delivered it to General Lawton just as the whole American force stormed across the field in that last desperate, successful attempt to take El Caney. When he handed the written order to the General, Lawton pointed to the charging troops and said: 'As you see, the troops have already commenced to charge. Tell General Shafter that nothing could stop them now.'

"Thus the capture of El Caney was due to General Lawton's perseverance under difficulties."

A Matter of Temperature.

The little one's mother had said, "Now doctor, if there is any rise of temperature"—she was great on temperature, by the way—"I will send for you at once. As you know, I have a clinical thermometer, and can take the temperature myself without troubling you to come in for the purpose." Just as I was going to bed I was startled by a violent ring at the bell, and, hastening to the door, saw a terrified domestic, who gasped, "Oh, Sir, please, Sir, do come round at once! Miss Marjory is worse. Missus said I was to tell you her temperature is 108, and is risin' fast."

Scarcely waiting to put on my hat, I rushed round to the house of my little patient, and discovered the whole family assembled in the sick room awaiting the end of poor little Marjory, the mother wringing her hands in agony and crying dreadfully. "What's the temperature now?" I almost shouted in my agitation. "Oh!" sobbed the mother, "I haven't dared to look since. My poor darling! It was 108, and they say that 105 is always fatal," and she broke down completely. Without wasting any more time, I turned down the blanket, and—found that the thermometer had been thrust between the child's side and arm, and the bulb embedded in a freshly applied hot poultice!—Chamber's Journal.

Infantile Exclusiveness.

There is a little Sixteenth street girl, still under six, who may be described as the limit in the matter of sensitiveness. Likewise, she has her points in respect to dead gameness. She was taken out to Takoma Park about a week ago to spend a few days with her aunt. The tot played around in the front yard of her aunt's pretty home for a while. Then her aunt let a playful little fox terrier into the front yard, saying to the child:

"This is your little four-footed cousin."

Five minutes later the aunt returned to the front yard to call the kid into the house, but she wasn't anywhere to be seen. The fox terrier was playing alone. There was a scrambling hunt for the tot, and all kinds of alarm, but the little girl didn't turn up. The aunt hustled into town. The little girl was home with her mother.

She had walked to the Seventh street road as soon as the fox terrier pup was presented to her, and, not having the price of a ride into town on the cars, had asked the driver of a grocery delivery wagon to give her a lift in. The driver took her home.

"Why didn't you stay at auntie's?" her mother asked her, in surprise.

"She introduced me to a dog!" replied the haughty young person.—Washington Post.

PRISONERS OF THE BOERS.

A Captive British Officer Descibes Life in Pretoria.

The Paris Figaro publishes a long letter which an English officer, a prisoner of war in Pretoria, has written to a member of his family.

The writer, who signs himself "Reggie," says: "We are completely cut off from all news of the outside world, and are not allowed to see the newspapers. We know, however, of Ladysmith being bombarded.

"Here we are prisoners of war, and I assure you it is a pitiful condition. Sometimes I feel as if I were going mad and wish I had been shot. We had hoped we should be exchanged or released on parole, but the Boer authorities do not appear to understand what parole means, and seem to think we should not keep our word.

"As far as health goes, we are all well and very well treated. We sometimes receive visits from those in command at Pretoria—the Secretary of War, field cornets, chief magistrate and others. They are all very polite, but are under the firm impression that their prisoners are not well treated by us, and they are convinced that our troops use 'dum dum' bullets.

"At first we were nine officers prisoners and about 180 men, but the other day our number was increased by forty-five officers almost all officers of the Gloucester regiment and Royal Irish Fusiliers, with Colonel Carleton, so that now we are about fifty-four officers and 1,400 men.

"In front of the building there is a veranda on which we sit and watch the people go by. The government gives us canned beef, bread and water to drink, and from time to time lime juice.

"Once a week we get potatoes. Happily we are now allowed to buy whatever we please, so we have been able to organize a mess, and our menu is reinforced by bacon, porridge, preserved vegetables, potted meats and pickles.

"Each day we send out our orders and the things come later. Of course, when taken prisoners we had only what was on our persons, so we had to purchase many necessities, such as sponges, soap, tooth brushes, hair brushes and combs. The Transvaal government, however, has given to each of us an iron bedstead, with mattress and pillow, a pajama suit, slippers, flannel shirt, pocket handkerchief, towels, socks, etc. We also received ready made suits, as our khaki uniforms were too much worn.

"We officers live in a large building that was formerly used as a school house. The men are still kept on the race course. We are certainly far more comfortable than we were on the race course, for this is a stone building, while on the race course are nothing but zinc sheds. It is, however, not so warm as the race course prison. We are not so much annoyed by flies, but at night there are a good many mosquitoes. We are guarded night and day by a strong police force, although none of us has any intention of trying to escape. We are surrounded by iron palisades. Behind the house there is a small grass plot, on which a little zinc hut has been erected to serve as a kitchen.

"Here tents have been put up for servants. We were allowed to bring ten men from the face course to act for us. There are also tents for the guard and a zinc hut which does duty as a bathroom. We rise at half-past six o'clock and indulge in a cold bath. When I am dressed I walk around the building eight times, which makes a mile.

"At half-past eight we breakfast on porridge, bacon, sardines, butter, jams and tea or coffee. They give us the tea and coffee and bread and the rest we buy. After breakfast we generally read and smoke until lunch time, at one o'clock, when we get beer, bread, butter, jam and water. The afternoon seems very long. At half-past four we have tea and at seven dinner. Aftter dinner some of us play whist or chess, while others read. I generally go to bed at half-past nine o'clock. Our checks are provided. They are countersigned by the senior officers and cashed."

Strong-Throated Auctioneers.

"Preachers' sore throat" is recognized by all writers on throat diseases, but it is not necessarily confined to preachers. Lawyers and others who overtax their voices at times suffer from it as frequently as do preachers. Auctioneers do not have sore throat. A successful auctioneer, as far as voice is concerned, is provided naturally with abnormally strong vocal chords. These he strengthens by continual use, so that in a few years the voice and throat are the strongest part of him. He is liable, however, as others to suffer from other troubles, and has his share of them, too. It is the same way with a singer. His voice is the strongest part of him, and almost every other organ suffers before his throat does.

The public do not know how many there are who try auctioneering and find that they cannot hold out. The voice of every man is not suited for continuous work. Auctioneer work means several hours of constant vocal exercise each day. The reason the preacher's overworked throat goes back on him now and then, is that his use of the vocal chords is not constant, for ordinarily the greater effort is seldom more than once a week. Another thing that operates against the preacher and in favor of the auctioneer is that the preacher seldom speaks in the open air, while the auctioneer finds the most use for his voice in the open air. Open air is the most wonderful strengthener of the voice. A marked example of this is the fact that circus performers and circus followers generally, who work in tents and open air, never have sore throats.—Washington Post.

WAS VANDERBILT'S BARBER.

Anton Gegenheimer Tells of His Experiences with the Millionaire.

"To Tony, the barber—$2,000." When Cornelius Vanderbilt had written in his will the clause leaving $2,000 to the barber who had shaved him for over thirty years he could not remember the man's last name or address. A World reporter talked with the barber yesterday. "Yes," said Anton Gegenheimer—for he is "Tony"—when seen at his home, 76 Essex street, Brooklyn, "I am the man who shaved Mr. Vanderbilt and cut his hair for thirty years. I shaved him first in 1868, on Fourth avenue, on the east side, between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets." "Did you always shave him at the shop?" asked the reporter. "No. I used to go to his house. First I went to shave him at Thirty-fourth and Park avenue, and later at his new Fifth avenue mansion. I shaved him every morning at 7:30 before he was taken sick. After that I shaved him every day at 9:30 a. m. After he had the stroke I used to shave him most of the time in bed. I always shaved him in his bedroom. I used to cut his hair—that is, trim it—every eight or ten days. I used to cut it short in the back and short on top—just left it long enough so I could part it on the right side. I never put much grease in his hair. I only used bay rum as a rule, because he liked his hair to be dry. We had no regular barber chair. We had a very high-backed chair, something like one of these new-fashioned dining chairs. It had a headpiece on it like a barber's chair. He had all his own outfit, but I used my own razors. His razors—he had bought them in England, I think—were too thick. He had a plain, solid silver shaving cup and a silver-handled shaving brush. I used the regular barber's soap. I used to go over his face twice each time. Mr. Vanderbilt did not like a close shave—just smooth, that's all. Every time I cut his hair I trimmed his mutton-chop whiskers." Anton Gegenheimer, who is a quiet, undersized man, with gray hair and mustache, shaved William H. Vanderbilt, the father of Cornelius, for seven years and up to his death. "Yes," said Mr. Gegenheimer, "I shaved William H. Vanderbilt just one hour before he died, in 1885."—New York World.

HOME OF GEROME.

To most people Leon Gerome is better known as a painter than as a sculptor, but of late years he has achieved some triumphs in marble. His home is on the fashionable heights of Montmartre, Paris. The entrance to the three-story edifice is by a large hall and staircase, on the walls of which are numerous pieces of sculpture by Gerome himself, to say nothing of the bronzes and costly bric-a-brac he has accumulated.

The salon faces the landing on the staircase. The dining room is arranged with a gallery for musicians which gives access to the bedrooms on the floor above. It is upholstered in bright warm red.

The studio is on the third floor, and here for forty years Gerome has worked. An Abyssinian cat is the lord of this studio, and it is well to be on good terms with him, for he resents intrusion. All sorts of studies are scattered about, and the artist's love for ancient armor is betrayed by his fine collection. The most treasured of his trophies are two helmets in beaten silver with Damascus work of fine gold tracery.

Strange Epitaphs.

Visitors in the Presbyterian cemetery at Dover, Del., found in a distant section of the cemetery, some forty feet apart, graves of three young women. They are the wives of Alexander McClyment, a former assemblyman and well-known citizen of the early part of the century. On the slab of Sarah, who died in 1811, is inscribed: "Oh monster! My heart is torn asunder by this ghastly wound." In 1816 Elizabeth, the second wife, died, aged 22, and her tomb contains words even stronger: "Insatiate archer! Would not one suffice?" But in 1825, when Elizabeth, the third wife, died at the age of 25, the sorrow-stricken husband wrote: "Thy shaft fell thrice and thrice my peace was slain!"—Chattanooga Times.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieves the Suffering from Overwrought Nerves.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I am so grateful for the benefit derived from the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I wish you to publish this testimonial that others may know the value of your medicine. I was suffering such tortures from nervous prostration that life was a burden. I could not sleep at all and was too weak to walk across the floor without aid. The disease had reached a condition where my heart was affected by it, so that often I could not lie down at all without almost suffocating. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like magic. I feel that your medicine has been of inestimable benefit to me."—Miss Adele Williamson, 196 N. Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.

New "Bob" Evans Story.

The following somewhat irreverent story is going the rounds of the press in relation to "Fighting Bob" Evans. Dressed in a plain suit of clothing, he went to church on a recent Sunday and seated himself in a vacant pew about midway up the aisle. Soon afterward a gentleman and a lady walked in and seated themselves in the same pew. The gentleman stood it as long as he could and then passed his card over to Bob, which read as follows: "I pay $2,200 annually for this pew." Bob glanced at the card and then passed it back with the following written on the other side: "You pay too damned much." The preacher then announced his text: "It is blessed to dwell together in the house of the Lord."—De Kalb Chronicle.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and healing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes, for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. Cuticura Soap combines delicate emollient properties derived from Cuticura, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated or toilet soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in One Soap at One Price, viz., Twenty-Five Cents, the best skin and complexion soap, the best toilet and best baby soap in the world.

GRIM DEATH CLAIMS GOEBEL

ASSASSIN'S BULLET FINALLY ACCOMPLISHES ITS DASTARDLY WORK.

BECKHAM IS INAUGURATED

Address Issued to People---Democratic Legislative Headquarters Removed to Louisville.

A Frankfort special says: The bullet fired by an unknown assassin Tuesday morning, January 29th, ended in the life of General Goebel at 6:45 o'clock Saturday evening. The only persons present at the deathbed were Goebel's sister, Mrs. Braunacker, and his brother, Arthur Goebel, of Cincinnati, who had been in constant attendance at Governor Goebel's bedside.

Justus Goebel, another brother, who had been hurrying from Arizona as fast as steam would carry him in a vain hope of reaching his dying brother in time for some token of recognition, arrived forty minutes too late.

Oxygen was frequently administered the dying man during the afternoon in an effort to keep him alive at least until his brother's arrival, but in vain. By the cruel irony of fate the train on which Justus Goebel was traveling to Frankfort was delayed several hours from various causes, and when Mr. Goebel finally reached the city it was only to learn that his brother was dead.

SUFFERS RELAPSE.

Governor Goebel's condition Friday night and well into the morning was considered so much improved that for the first time since he was shot down in front of the courthouse, hopes were entertained of his ultimate recovery. About noon Saturday Governor Goebel had a relapse and steadily grew weaker with each hour. There was practically no rally from that time until his death.

At 2:50 p. m. Goebel's physicians had abandoned hope. Efforts were then made to keep him alive until his brother from Arizona could arrive.

Among bitter partisans of both parties deep grief is manifested, and already a movement has been started to erect a fitting monument for Governor Goebel's memory on the spot in the state house grounds where he was shot.

Within a few moments the following announcement had been prepared and was silently handed about hotel and in the streets:

ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE.

To the People of Kentucky—It is with profound sorrow that we announce the death of Governor William Goebel. In his last moments he counseled his friends,to keep cool and bow to the law in all things. We, his his friends and advisers, beg of the people of Kentucky, in this hour of affliction, to carefully abstain from any act of violence or any resort to mob law. It would be his wish if he were alive that there should be absolutely no stain on his memory by any imprudent act of any who were his friends. The law is supreme and must in time be re-established and all wrongs he and his party have suffered will find their proper redress.

Joe C. S. Blackburn, W. S. Pryor, Urey Woodson, C. M. Lewis, J. B. McCreary, John K. Hendrick, James Andrew Scott, Lewis McQuown, B.W. Bradburn, S. J. Shackleford, C. C McChord, South Trimble, speaker of the house; L. H. Carter, speaker pro tem of the senate.

This was the first intelligence given the public of the death of Mr. Goebel.

BECKHAM SWORN IN.

Exactly one hour after the death of Mr. Goebel, Acting Governor J. C. W. Beckham was sworn in as governor of the state, the oath being administered by S. J. Shackelford, clerk of the court of appeals.

It had been determined to keep secret the news of the death of Governor Goebel until Lieutenant Governor Beckham should have been formally inducted into office, and the delay was made greater by the inability of Dr. McCormick to leave the bedroom of Governor Goebel and make the proper certificate of death. Until this had been done, the Democratic attorneys were unwilling that the oath of office should be administered.

The ceremony took place in a small room on the same floor as that in which Governor Goebel died, and but a few doors to the west of it. In the room at the time of the administration of the oath were Senator-elect Blackburn, Colonel Bennett H. Young, Colonel Philip Thompson, Eph Lillard, J. H. Illis, Lieutenant L. E. McKay, S. J. Shackelford, clerk of the court of appeals; Dr. P. W. Wells, Colonel Harry McKay, Colonel Jack Chinn, Kit Chinn, Dr. McCormick, Joseph Blackburn, Jr., and three representatives of the press.

The first official action of the new Democratic governor was the appointment of a new adjutant general and his last as acting governor was an order removing Adjutant General Collier and Assistant Adjutant General Dickson.

The new governor seemed to be deeply affected by the position in which circumstanses had placed him, and he did not reveal much joy over the congratulations which those in the room showered upon him, although he accepted them gratefully.

Saturday night Governor Beckham issued a proclamation announcing the death of Governor Goebel.

HEADQUARTERS AT LOUISVILLE.

Louisville is to be the seat temporarily at least, of the Democratic state government of Kentucky. Governor Beckham and several of his chief advisers reached that city Sunday, and it is the purpose to make Louisville the headquarters of the executive and legislative branches of the state government as long as the presence of troops keeps them from Frankfort or until the present conflict of authority in the state is settled.

A Costly Undertaking.

Major Bathurst, who was wounded at the battle of Colenso, arrived at Southampton Saturday on board the Servia. He says there are 20,000 Boers at the Tugela river, but that General Buller can get through if he is prepared to sacrifice 5,000 or 6,000 men.

Bodies Coming From Manila.

A cable from Manila received from the quartermaster's department states that the Hancock sailed for San Francisco on January 19, with the bodies of 462 dead soldiers. The Indiana is expected in immediately with 200 bodies and the Ohio with 138 arrived at San Francisco last Friday.

TO END SCOTT CASE.

Committee Will Recommend That the Affair Be Closed.

The senate committe on privileges and elections decided to recommend that no further proceedings be taken in the case of the protest of Senator Scott, of West Virginia, continuing to hold his seat in the senate.

The committee was unanimous with one exception, Senator Pettus, who will probably present a minority report.

TAYLOR RESTRAINED

Until Feb. 8th From Interferring With Meetings of the Kentucky Legislature.

Saturday morning Judge Cautrell, of the circuit court at Frankfort, granted a temporary injunction restraining Governor Taylor from interfering with the meetings of the legislature and from removing the seat of the legislature to London, Ky. The temporary injunction is to remain binding until February 8, when the hearing to make it permanent will be heard before Judge Cantrell at Georgetown, Ky.

No attempt will be made to secure personal service of the writ of injunction upon Governor Taylor.

Immediately after the issuance of the writ Judge Cantrell instructed Sheriff Suter, of Franklin county, to make no effort to present the order of court. The judge directed that it be allowed to remain binding without service, because of the danger threatening the man who should undertake the task and the results that might ensue owing to the excited state of the public mind.

LUMBER COMPANY WINS.

End of Big Damage Suit at Jacksonville, Fla.

One of the longest trials ever held in the United States court at Jacksonville, Fla., was determined late Saturday evening by a verdict in which the plaintiff was given damages.

The case was that of L. Bucki & Son Lumber company against the Fidelity and Deposit company, of Maryland, and action was for damages alleged to have arisen from issuing of two attachments against the property of the plaintiffs in Jacksonville more than two years ago. After the trial, which began on January 18th, the jury returned a verdict giving the plaintiff damages for a sum of $10,880 and allowance for solicitor's fees of $7,500.

PRIVATE OPERATORS

Installed In Governor Taylor's Exclusive Quarters at Frankfort.

A Frankfort dispatch says: Governor Taylor has provided against the delay and inconvenience of receiving and sending telegrams in his present exclusive quarters by means of messengers. He has had two wires run into his office and has his own operators within the office.

Promised Public Buildings.

The senate committee on public buildings and grounds has authorized favorable reports on the bills authorizing public buildings at Selma, Ala., and Natchez, Miss., each to cost $100,000.

TO FILL ROBERTS' SEAT.

Utah Special Election Is Called For April 2d Next.

President Ben E. Rich, of the southern Mormon headquarters in Chattanooga, Tenn., has received a telegram from Governor Heber M. Wells, of Utah, stating that he had called a special election for April 2d for the election of a congressman to succeed Brigham H. Roberts, who was refused his seat by the recent congress.

TAYLOR IGNORES HABEAS CORPUS

Clash Between Civil and Military Authorities Narrowly Averted.

WALKER WAS RELEASED

Governor Acted of His Own Volition In the Matter.

A Frankfort special says: Governor Taylor Saturday afternoon refused to acknowledge the existence or permit the service of a writ of habeas corpus issued by Judge Moore, of the county court. Taylor thus tacitly suspended the writ of habeas corpus in the courts of Franklin county for the release of Alonzo Walker, a stenographer, who was arrested and put into confinement after pinning a notice of writ of injunction on Governor Taylor's chambers in the executive building, Something which, under the constitution of the state of Kentucky, cannot be done legally except in cases of rebellion or invasion. When Sheriff Suter returned his writ unserved to Judge Moore, the latter announced that he would see that the sheriff was given power sufficient to enforce the mandate of his court. In so declaring he used the following words:

"No attempt will be made to enforce the writ until Monday. At that time another demand will be made for the body of Alonzo Walker, and if it is refused, a sufficient number of men will be given to Sheriff Suter from Franklin county and adjourning counties, as well, to enable him to take possession of the capitol grounds and carry out the purpose of the writ."

Thus civil and military authority in Kentucky came face to face at last and unless the ministers of one or the other should recede from the positions they occupied there could be but one outcome, and that was civil war.

WALKER RELEASED.

Such a crisis, however, was averted when Governor Taylor, Sunday morning, ordered the release of Walker.

While not recognizing in his action the existence of the writ of habeas corpus which had been sworn out in behalf of Walker, Governor Taylor, by releasing the man, removed the most threatening sign of trouble. The commanding officers of the troops which guard the capitol grounds are careful to say that the situation is entirely a military affair, and that they extend the writ of habeas corpus very little consideration, but whether they regard it or not, Walker is free, and Sheriff Suter will not be called upon to summon force in the attempt to secure his release.

The appalling consequences which would follow such an effort on the part of the sheriff were too much for the more conservative members of the Democratic party, and it was decided Sunday that no matter what Judge Moore should say as an individual, there would be no attempt to take possession of the capitol grounds by force of arms.

When Walker was released notice was served upon him that the charge against him was still pending, and could be pushed at any time if the military authorities should so decide.

Various rumors were circulated in regard to the reasons for the sudden release of Mr. Walker, among them being a report that his release, by order of Governor Taylor, was in deference to a telegram from Washington advising his discharge.

Governor Taylor was too busy to be seen in regard to the matter, but Adjutant General Collier emphatically dnied that any such reason existed for Walker's release.

WATTERSON ROASTS RAILWAY.

Says the L. & N. Caused the Present Troubles In Kentucky.

Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, has given out a statement which in part says:

"The head and front of our present troubles in Kentucky, at once the source and the resource of the revolutionary proceeding by which Republican government has been for the time being struck down and a military dictatorship set up in its place, is the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company.

"In the recent state campaign it supplied material resources in such abundance as to draw out all the dangerous elements of society and to put into activity all the forces of political adventure. The two leading parties to the contest were as nothing by comparison with its gigantic machinery for corrupting the election."

The Porto Rican Tariff.

The senate committee on Porto Rico has concluded its consideration of the bill providing a form of government for the island. The rate of duty provided on articles brought from Porto Rico to the United States and for articles taken from the United States to Porto Rico is 25 per cent of the Dingley law rate.

Delegal Set Free.

Edward Delegale, one of the negroes convicted of the killing of Mr. Joseph Townsend, near Darien during the riots in McIntosh county in August, was released from custody at Savannah, Ga., Friday. The verdict of the jury was set aside by Judge Seabrooke.

Legislators Pray For Goebel.

The South Carolina legislature held special prayer services Friday for Governor Goebel, of Kentucky, conducted by the chaplain.

NO INTERFERENCE SAYS M'KINLEY

President Will Hands Off In Kentucky Troubles.

FOR PRESENT, AT LEAST

Decision At Cabinet Meeting. Kentuckians Visit President.

A delegation of Kentucky Democrats, consisting of Senator-elect Blackburn and Representatives Rhea, Wheeler, Smith, Allen and Gilbert and Colonel Phil Thompson, called upon President McKinley Friday at the white house to protest against federal interference in the contest in Kentucky. Senator Lindsay arrived soon after the delegation had been admitted and was immediately ushered into the president's private office, where the conference was in progress. Senator Blackburn and Representative Rhea acted as spokesmen.

They explained their deep solicitude lest a collision should occur between the warring elements in Kentucky and made the report that Governor Taylor had solicited federal intervention the text of their protest. They assured the president that the law and constitution of Kentucky had been strictly followed by the Democrats in the contest over the governorship, and that they proposed to stand by the law. The crisis that had arisen, they desired should be met in the courts and determined by the law.

The Democrats, they asserted, would abstain from violence. They simply desired a lawful and orderly settlement of the controversy. Federal intervention would only aggravate matters, intensify the excitement and almost certainly lead to trouble and perhaps loss of life. They earnestly appealed to the president to avert such a calamity by abstaining from interference of any sort. Senator Blackburn and Representative Rhea said that they were going to Kentucky and counsel peace and obedience to the law.

Senator Lindsay endorsed what his colleagues had said about the Democrats acting within the law and constitution. The federal troops to Kentucky would, in his opinion, create anarchy and chaos.

The president in reply expressed his great anxiety over the situation, his profoundest wish that violence be avoided and that the contest should be legally determined.

He assured the delegation, in a general way, that he deplored the situation, and that federal intervention would come only as a last resort, after having been invoked by the proper authority under the law and constitution.

While the president spoke in general terms, the delegation expressed themselves as perfectly satisfied with his assurances.

DSSCUSSED AT CABINET MEETING.

After the cabinet meeting Friday afternoon, the following statement was made:

"The president has decided that no cause has yet arisen to justify the intervention of the national government in Kentucky, and has so informed the governor."

Some significance may attach to the use of the word "governor" in this statement, inasmuch as the reply was directed to Taylor.

"TROUBLE JUST BEGUN,"

Says Mark Hanna In Regard To Kentucky Fight.

Senator Marcus A. Hanna, of Ohio, on being asked for an expression of opinion concerning the state of affairs in Kentucky, said:

"Regarding the political situation there I will say nothing. Of course it is a shocking state of affairs that a citizen, walking the streets of a city, a free man, can be shot down by an assassin hidden behind a screen.

"No matter what the provocation may have been, murder is never justifiable. The public affairs of any state may be depended upon to take care of themselves without the intervention of a lawless band of armed men.

"I know Kentuckians well. In a crisis like the present one their judgment is not always the best, and for that reason I fear that trouble in Frankfort is only begun."

BOER LINES THINNING.

Many Are Leaving Beleaguering Force To Meet Invaders.

A London dispatch says: Heliograms flashed from Ladysmith three days ago say that the Boer investment lines then were thinning, and the burghers were moving in force toward the Tugela, indicating that a collision was expected there. This intelligence bears out other signs that General Buller purposes a fresh attack.

Lord Kitchener has been traveling from army to army in northern Cape Colony, and General French, by instructions, is now in Cape Town consulting with Lord Roberts.

OFFERS INDIVIDUAL REWARD.

Governor Taylor Will Pay For Capture of Goebel Assassin.

Governor Taylor, of Kentucky, personally offers a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the man who shot Governor Goebel. In making the offer of the reward, Governor Taylor states that the authorities of Franklin county, in which the crime was committed, have never requested him to officially offer a reward, and he, therefore, offers $500 as an individual.

PEACE REIGNS IN KENTUCKY

Conference Between Democrats and Republicans Results in Agreement.

BECKHAM TO BE RECOGNIZED AS GOVERNOR

Order Convening Legislature at London Revoked, and Troops Will Be Withdrawn From State Buildings--Taylor Will Arbitrate.

If the agreement drawn up Monday at the conference of representatives of the republican and democratic administrations, held at the Galt house in Louisville, is accepted and carried out the strife which has rent Kentucky from end to end for the past few weeks will be ended. The agreement was reached shortly after midnight and arrangements were immediately made to have it drawn up and signed. This was slow work, however, and it was after 2 o'clock when the conferees separated. The democrats gained nearly every point they contended for, and the republican representatives, Lieutenant Governor John Marshall, General Daniel Lindsey and Attorney David Fairleigh, gave assurance that the agreement would be accepted by Governor Taylor.

The agreement provides in order to leave no question as to the title of William Goebel and J. C. W. Beckham to the offices of governor and lieutenant governor respectively, that the general assembly shall pass a resolution in joint assembly validating the acts on that subject since the legislature has been prevented by troops from holding its regular session at Frankfort.

As soon as the legislature does this Beckham's title to the office of governor is not to be questioned. The democrats grant immunity to Governor Taylor and his associates from prosecution for treason, usurpation of office or contempt of court for what has been done since the shooting of Goebel. These matters are to be held in abeyance until next Monday. The republican legislature is to be withdrawn from London immediately and no filibustering or other attempts of this character is to be resorted to by the republicans to obstruct the carrying out of this agreement in the legislature.

It was agreed that the board of election commissioners sitting as a contest board should be allowed to meet at Frankfort without molestation.

The republicans asked that some provision for a repeal or modification of the Goebel election law be included in the agreement. The democrats agreed that to two leading republicans and two leading democrats should be left the matter of changes in the Goebel law.

The acceptance of this agreement by the principals is the only element of uncertainty now remaining in the situation.

Taylor Willing to Arbitrate.

Governor Taylor Monday night made a distinct and positive offer to submit the merits of his claim to the gubernatorial chair of Kentucky to any three fair-minded men in the world, these three men to be selected by the United States supreme court. He will allow them to arbitrate the case and will abide by their decision.

Should Go Above Eight Cents.

Price, McCormick & Co., cotton men, of New York, sent their constituents and newspapers the following telegram Saturday night, relative to the cotton price outlook: "Remnant of crop should command 8½ cents shortly."

Calhoun Populists.

The populist executive committee of Calhoun county held a meeting at Jacksonville Saturday and decided to make a fight for county offices. Beat meetings will be held on the 25th of March to select delegates to the county convention, which will be held in Jacksonville on the first day of April.

Two Guards Shot.

Two state convict guards, W. W. Harlan and A. J. Raiford, attempted to terorrize the town of Portland, Asticly county, Arkansas. They resisted the local officers and both guards were shot and killed. Hanlan came from Columbus, Ga., and Raiford from White county, Arkansas.

A Cold-Blooded Murder.

A cold-blooded murder occurred near Mansfield, Tex. An assassin called James Jarman, a farmer, to the door and shot him as he stood by the side of his wife. Two Winchester bullets passed through the man's body.

CHARGES OF FRAUD.

Committee Held Session and Decided to Have Full and Thorough Investigation.

Some of the electors of Russell county, enraged at the methods of certain candidates at the Girard box last Saturday, are determined to right the wrong, and the democratic committee, which met in Seale Monday decided to sift the alleged fraud to the very bottom.

The better element of both factions of the party say that the corruptible element of Girard beat shall not longer control in the politics of the county and the wholesale purchase of votes in that precinct last Saturday is scathingly denounced.

The committee held a very harmonious session and decided to have a full and thorough investigation of the charges made by four candidates for county offices that many illegal votes had been cast in the county last Saturday. The contestants are granted till February 15 to gather and submit their evidence, and the contestees are then given until the 21st to rebut it.

If it is found that sufficient illegal votes were cast at Girard box to change the result in any county office, then it is most probable that the whole vote of the precinct will be thrown out and a new primary election ordered in the county. This seemed to be the sentiment of the committee, and in case it is carried out the next primary will be held under the Pettus primary election law, so that the fraudulent voting may be reached by the laws of the state, and the instigators properly punished.

Supreme Court Settles Controversy.

The United States supreme court Monday decided the controversy between the United States and the Tennessee & Coosa Railroad company over the land grant of that company in the state of Alabama. The court held that the decision of the circuit court of appeals for the Fifth circuit had been correct in awarding the land to the railroad company, so far as the road had been completed, but it remanded the case for further investigation of the award of the grant on six miles of the proposed road which had not been completed within the time required.

The University's Enrollment.

The enrollment at the University of Alabama for the present session has now reached 245 net. This is the largest enrollment in any one session since the close of the war between the states. The highest enrollment since the surrender up to this time was 241, in 1885 86. There will be between fifty and sixty graduates turned out at the approaching commencement in June.

The foregoing refers to the attendance at the University proper. The figures from the medical department at Mobile will doubtless swell the total to 400 or over.

Morgan Wants to Honor Soldiers.

Senator Morgan has introduced a joint resolution in the United States senate appropriating $10,000 to erect a monument to the soldiers who fell in the battle at Talladega, November 9, 1818, under General Andrew Jackson, commanding the Tennessee volunteers.

Saw Mill Burned.

The main saw mill of the Indiana Lumber company, near Byrd Spring, south of Huntsville, was destroyed by fire. The loss is $8,000, partly covered by insurance. Fty men are thrown out of employment. A. O. Hamilton, manager of the company, and others are positive that the mill was set on fire.

Kidnapped Child Restored to Parent.

After an absence of nearly eight years, little Dorsey Young, who was kidnapped by her father, Jack Young, from her grandfather's home in Birmingham, returned to Birmingham Monday, having been restored to her mother and relatives through a series of most exciting incidents. During this long separation this little girl has undergone many strange experiences. The child has endured hardships and vicissitudes which are almost startling in their nature.

Texas Wants to Honor Goebel.

A movement was set on foot Monday in the Texas legislature to erect a monument the memory of Governor Goebel, of Kentucky. The money will be raised by popular subscription, the legislators to head the list, and will be sent to Kentucky with the understanding that Texas is to have the credit of erecting the monument out of respect and sympathy to the deceased and his relatives

TO RESTRAIN GOV. TAYLOR

An Injunction Is Asked For By Legislators.

COURT ISSUES ORDER

Notice Is Tacked On Taylor's Door At the State Capitol---Must Appear In Court.

At Frankfort, Friday morning, the Democratic attorneys filed with Judge Cautrill in the Franklin county circuit court a petition asking for an injunction to restrain Governor Taylor from interfering with the meetings of the legislature.

The petition covers the full situation, and asks that Taylor and Marshall be restrained from attempting to exercise the power of governor and lieutenant governor.

The petition sets up the claim that Goebel is governor and Beckham is lieutenant governor. South Trimble, speaker of the house, appears as the plaintiff in the case.

The court issued the following order to W. S. Taylor and Collier:

You and each of you are hereby notified that on Saturday, February 3, 1900, we will ask for an order of injunction restraining you and each of you and all others from interfering with meetings of the general assembly of the commonwealth of Kentucky in any manner whatever, or from assembling said legislature at said city of London, Laurel county, Kentucky, upon petition this date filed in the Frankfort circuit court and from committing any of the wrongs or unlawful acts therein set forth. Said motion will be made before the Hon. James E. Cantrell of the fourteenth judicial district of Kentucky, in the circuit court room in the court house at Frankfort, Ky., at or about the hour of 11 o'clock a. m.

Service of the notice on Governor Taylor was secured, despite the most stringent orders to the sentries to allow nobody to pass in or out of the capitol grounds.

Orders to this effect were given early in the morning, but were revoked later, and those having passes were allowed free access to all parts of the capitol square.

As soon as word was brought to Governor Taylor that the petition for the injunction had been filed the orders were renewed, but they were not renewed quick enough. Alonzo Walker, the stenographer for the Democratic attorneys, gained entrance to the grounds before the renewal of the order, and watching his chance, pinned a copy of the notice on the door of the executive mansion, which action constitutes a legal notice to Governor Taylor.

Walker was at once placed under arrest and confined in the guardhouse.

Several of the Republican members of the legislature, especially those living in the eastern part of the state, left Frankfort, Friday, for London, where Governor Taylor called the legislature to meet in session.

GOEBEL IMPROVES.

The condition of William Goebel Friday night was considered better than at any time since he was shot. The iron will and determination of the wounded man that he will not die by an assassin's bullet is, however, still considered the main factor in sustaining him, but on Friday night the attending physicians for the first time held out some hope for his ultimate recovery.

BRIDGES DONS STRIPES.

Former County School Commissioner Begins Serving Time.

W. M. Bridges left Rome, Ga., Thursday night to serve four years in the penitentiary camp at Worth, 80 miles south of Macon.

Bridges will be given a bookkeeper's position and wear the regular convict garb. The prisoner will work for the Canda Lumber company.

FILES BIG MORTGAGE.

Standard Telephone Company of Atlanta Pledges Its Property.

The Atlanta Standard Telephone Company has filed a mortgage for $600,000 on all its property, franchises, privileges of every description.

The mortgage was made to the City Trust, Safe Deposit Company of Philadelphia. The mortgage was issued to secure bonds and to take up another mortgage of $500,000 in favor of the Atlanta Trust and Banking Company.

The company will issue bonds of $100 denomination to redeem those now outstanding of $1,000 denomination. The new bonds will bear 5 per cent interest and are payable in gold.

MARQUIS OF QUEENSBURY,

The Author of Boxing Rules, Dies In England.

A London dispatch announces the death of the Marquis of Queensberry. Though the news of his demise is of first interest to English aristocracy, it will be received with interest throughout the English-speaking world.

The name of the Marquis of Queensberry had long been associated with the boxing rules of which he was the author.

THE CHRONICLE.

F. W. GIST, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Entered in the post-office at Columbiana Ala., as second class matter.

ONE cotton factory will do this town and county more good than all the politicians, officeholders and pap suckers that can be crowded into the whole territory.

BOTH sides are claiming fraud in Russell, and the local candidates will contest the returns. We take no stock in cries of fraud until it is proven.

LET the bonded debt of this country be paid, discontinue the issue of bonds, prevent the issue of bank notes thereon, and every banker in the land would be a howling advocate of free silver.

WE have one representative of the national banks trying to get into Congress in the person of W. F. Aldrich, and another in the person of Joseph F. Johnston. Strange to say Populists are supporting both.

COTTON was worth yesterday in New York 8¼ cents, with an upward tendency. The indications are that the price will go to 9 cents before the month is out. An overcrop will put it down again at the opening.

ONE significant feature of the Russell primary was that the country beats, the wool hat regions, went for Morgan, while the floating vote about the public works voted for Johnston. The sturdy, intelligent agricultural people usually know the value of a faithful representative.

SENATOR Morgan was laboring for the free coinage of silver when Johnston was lending money on gold mortgages, engineering combinations of capital and presiding over the fortunes of a national bank. Not until the latter became a candidate was he heard in defense of the white metal.

SINCE the days of Jefferson has the Democratic party been opposed to the national banking system and the issue of currency based on bonds. A national bank stockholder in the United States Senate as a representative of the Democratic position on this issue would be like the devil in the pulpit.

WE still have that pretty State Fair check. It now has another endorement on the back, "No prospect of payment." It is filed away as a memento of a monumental fraud. This time it was the fault of the Fair Association; the next time Birmingham gets any free advertising it will be the fault of the newspapers.

THE Advocate ought really to be ashamed of taking Billy Sturdivant's five dollar bill for announcement. Billy ought to sue the Advocate for obtaining money under false pretenses. Billy Boy, we are sorry, but the slate is made up, and you'll have to give up that pass after this year.

THE trust advocates and corporations are all loud in their denunciations of a 50-cent dollar, but the most of them are made up of 10-cent stock. We would rather have a dollar composed of 50 cents worth of silver and 50 cents worth of government backing than a dollar in stock composed of 10 cents in money and 90 cents in water.

THE Democratic party is opposed to trusts, and yet Joseph F. Johnston, a promoter of trusts, who boasts of bringing trusts into his State, is asking Democrats to send him to the Senate. Does anybody suppose he would strain himself fighting as a Senator what he has fostered as Governor? Would the devil make a good preacher?

SOME time ago the Court Journal found fault with the managers of the Morgan campaign committee. Let's see who is managing the Johnston menagerie in Jefferson. B. F. Roden, the president of the gas company, the president of a brewery, a leader in the fight against the dispensary for Birmingham. Since so many wool hat precincts have gone for Morgan the Governor don't seem inclined to rely on them so largely.

THERE will be but one race in the Populite primary this year, and that will be for assessor. The rest are slated, and here they are: For representative, G. B. Deans; for sheriff, R. F. Cox; for collector, J. H. Robertson; for treasurer, W. A. Tallant; and for superintendent, Eugene Williams. Nobody else need apply unless they can get the people to smash the slate.

WE wonder why Chairman Pearson don't call his primary. Is he hoping that the people will rise up in their wrath and prevent fusion? They won't do it; they haven't got nerve enough. They will do just what the Judge, the Senator and the Congressman have planned for them to do.

THERE is not white supremacy as long as one body of white men combine with the nominees of negro conventions and the other side buy or steal the negro vote. So long as either condition exists the negro is master of the situation as completely as if he held all the offices. The negroes have nominated every Republican candidate for the Presidency since Grant; they have named the Congressman from this district for three terms and are about to take the fourth; they have named three of the present officers of this county and elected most of the others. The only safe remedy is their disfranchisement. This is a subject which requires plain language, and we are using it.

SHELBY County needs her best man in the legislature this winter. She don't need any professional politician, chronic officeseeker, second-rate preacher, or user of railroad passes. She needs a good staunch man, a man who knows something and has the nerve to follow his own conception of right. In short, we want a man with brains, an honest heart and a backbone. If the Democrats nominate such a man we believe he will be elected. If they can't find such a man, then we will have to get our representative from some other county who does send a good man. The next legislature will be composed of a very different class from the last, and small bores will be nonentities.

THE Governor's back tax law would be a good thing if it was enforced. W. F. Aldrich reports his capital stock at $100,000, worth par. His assessment is $35,000. The law says the difference shall be assessed to the stockholders or the company. Why is this not done? We have asked this question for two years. If it isn't done this year we are going to tell the people why, and we are not going to wait many moons to do it. When pretending Congressmen escape taxation the reason ought to be known, as well as those who aid him in doing it.

TO COTTON GINNERS.

The past ginning season again demonstrated the incomparable superiority of The American Cotton Company's Roundlap bale. Not only were farmers benefitted who had their cotton put up in Roundlap bales, but even the patrons of the old style gins profited by the presence of the Roundlap competition.

Although last year the American Cotton Company largely increased the number of its presses in the South, installing all that it was able to build, the demand in New England and abroad for cotton baled by this process greatly exceeded the supply. The Company is preparing this year to add largely to the number of its presses. The Company's works are running day and night building presses, which will be leased to responsible ginners, who own or are prepared to build modern gin houses in good cotton districts, on a rental which is ultimately repaid by the cotton buyer in the premium for cotton in Roundlap bales.

Information concerning leases will be supplied by Mr. T. W. Pratt, Huntsville, Ala., or Mr. A. R. Nininger, Montgomery, Ala.

$3,000 CASH PRIZE CONTEST.

The Atlanta Constitution's Great Offer of 1900—The Cotton Receipts at New Orleans from September to April—Full Statistics Given for Your Guidance—An Unparalelled Offer for Our Readers.

The Atlanta Constitution offers a $3,000 cash prize contest for January, February and March, 1900, as follows:

To the person sending a yearly subscription to The Weekly Constitution, together with the correct estimate on the cotton receipts at New Orleans during the first seven months of the present cotton year (September 1, 1899, to April 1900)—

$1,500 if estimate is received during January.

$1,000 if estimate is received during February.

$500 if estimate is received during March.

The above are for the exact estimates, [illegible] besides these six prizes, ranging along, [illegible], $450, $250, $150, $125 and $75, amounting to $1,500, that will be paid out are for the six nearest estimates to the New Orleans cotton receipts at any time during the three months of the contest. But you hit it exactly during January and secure the full $1,500 prize check.

The Constitution believes somebody will hit the figures exactly and expects to pay out the full amount of the prizes offered—$3,000 in all. In a Constitution contest upon the same subject in 1896 Mr. R. T. Poole, of Capels Mills, N. C., hit the exact figures and received a check for $1,000 as his prize. Mr. Poole did not try to swell himself up at once, but very generously paid off a mortgage on his father's home place and with the balance he very wisely educated himself at Trinity college, Durham, N. C. He is now doing well in business in North Carolina and lives still near his old home. It is needless to say he is a warm friend of The Constitution.

As a guide in making estimates upon the New Orleans port receipts, The Constitution gives the following figures, compiled from statistics of the past four years:

SEASON.	N. O. receipts Sep. 1-Mch. 1.	N. O. receipts whole year. Sep. 1-Aug. 31.	Total U. S. crop for season.
1895-96	[illegible]	1,812,167	7,157,346
1896-97	[illegible]	2,102,470	8,757,964
1897-98	[illegible]	2,576,165	11,199,994
1898-99	1,851,153	2,130,296	11,274,840

The Constitution's market page will give each week the port receipts for the cotton season from which you can always see the New Orleans port receipts from September 1, 1899, up through the Friday immediately preceding the publication. This will keep you posted to within two or three days of the time you send in your estimate.

It is believed that some of the Texas crop, that as a rule is sent in bulk to New Orleans, will be diverted this year to other points because of the quarantine regulations against New Orleans. The effort of Louisiana to have quarantine raised by injunction from United States courts will not have very soothing effect upon the direction of cotton shipments to New Orleans. This is mentioned simply as a pointer in making up estimates; how much to allow, if anything, for this cause must be left to each man's judgment.

The $3,000 contest is an express contract in which The Constitution will stand in every particular. Yet it is in its nature simply an advertisement by which The Constitution combined with this paper may be made better known in this community. Send us the subscription to The Constitution and our paper at the advertised price of the two and with it your estimate on the New Orleans port receipts and we will forward all together for you. On April 1st we trust a $1,500 check will reach some of our subscribers to help make times even more easy around about us.

The Weekly Constitution for 1900 will be better than ever before. Its special news features are unsurpassed. The Boer-British war, the Philippine and Cuban operations, the busy session of the most important congress that has ever assembled, the beginning of the issues of the presidential campaign of this year and the debates and speeches during its progress; the final result of the November elections, the development of the south's great industrial movements; diversified farm and village industries and thousands of other important things will be found fully and freely discussed in The Weekly Constitution for the year. The Farm and Farmers' page, the Woman's Kingdom, the Southern Pulpit, the Children's Page and other interesting departments will be ably conducted and will be especially adapted to those addressed. The ringing editorials of The Constitution, speaking right out in meeting [illegible] what it means in the advocacy of true democratic doctrine and in behalf of the great interests of the masses of our [illegible] people, and protecting them from the grasping greed of those who would [illegible] their earnings [illegible] are alone worth the subscription price [illegible]

The Constitution has long stood as the champion of the people and has sent its shafts deep into the errors and evils that threaten and beset the masses. Its complete exposé of the methods of Neill, of New Orleans, and the shattering of the influence of this prophet of big cotton crops and apostle of ruinously low prices and high priest of robbery, who has cost the southern farmers hundreds of millions of dollars, ought to win for The Constitution the lasting gratitude of the whole south. The advice to farmers to organize against the trust that would increase the price of fertilizers and fertilizer materials for the home compost heap and taking up the cudgel in behalf of the farmers against the combination that would put a fresh burden upon them is sound and valid and ought to be heeded. The bulwark of the people's rights [illegible] the best method of defense will often be found in a great paper, ably and fearlessly edited, upon which the people may rely not only for news of the ordinary events of government, army and political life but also for an alert foresight of the trend of future events that may operate to our lasting damage. The downfall of Neill, the breaking down of the fertilizer trust, the upbuilding of all southern interests and the enlightenment of every village, farm and mountain home are among The Constitution's many high aims and good ideas for 1900. That these interests may all be well served, and with the same unswerving fidelity to the people that The Constitution has always shown, goes without saying.

The management of The Constitution with Mr. Clark Howell as editor-in-chief and his well disciplined corps of staff writers, brilliant contributors and special correspondents, still under the faithful leadership of Colonel William A. Hemphill as business manager, will remain the same for the new year. The Constitution's long and honorable business course, keeping faith with the people in all its contracts, contests and engagements, as well as in its consistent and conspicuous editorial fairness, places it among those reliable institutions of our country on which the people may depend.

With such a great general newspaper, covering the world news and world and national questions, you will, of course, need the best and livest local paper, giving current local topics and the latest and best news and freshest comments upon events of local interest. We trust this combination secured with The Constitution will be found best suited to all our readers. The price is merely nominal when the service is even half considered, including your estimate in The Constitution's $3,000 cash contest. To get the full benefit of the high prize send in your subscription now so The Constitution may receive it during January and record it to your credit. Make your figures very plain, unmistakably plain.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT ANALYSIS.

Bulletin No. 12, issued by the Alabama Department of Agriculture, shows the actual commercial value of the ALABAMA FERTILIZERS to be 19.33 per cent more valuable than all the complete fertilizers or guanos offered for sale in the State of Alabama for the season covered by said bulletin.

Bulletin No. 13, just issued by the Department of Agriculture, shows the actual analysis, from samples sent to the Department by dealers and consumers throughout the State, that the ALABAMA FERTILIZER is actually $3.54 per ton or 24 per cent better than the guaranteed analysis by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., and this answers the question so often asked, "why the ALABAMA FERTILIZER produces so much better crops than other fertilizers of equal guaranteed analysis?" The ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be shipped in the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVED BAGS. There is no other preserved bag on the market of any value.

The Commissioner of Agriculture recommends and endorses it in the following words:

"I therefore unhesitatingly say that I believe the bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVING PROCESS will resist the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in fertilizers; that the meshes of the bags are so filled by the process as to prevent all wastage, and that if generally used by manufacturers, would be of inestimable value to carriers, dealers and consumers.

(Signed) "I. F. CULVER,
"Commissioner of Agriculture."

These MUMMIA PRESERVED BAGS are almost indestructible by the weather or Fertilizers. Can be hauled in the rain without material damage to bag or contents. Fertilizers put up in these bags can be hauled out to the farm at any time and kept ready for use.

The ALABAMA FERTILIZER is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all round fertilizer for cotton and corn.

ALABAMA FERTILIZER RECORD.

It has produced nearly four bales of cotton on one acre of poor sandy upland.
One hundred and thirty-two bushels of corn on one acre of poor sandy upland.
Two thousand and forty one bushels of corn on twenty acres of poor upland.
Land and corn accurately surveyed and measured by competent disinterested and honorable men.

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 48 premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

ESTABLISHED 1880
ALABAMA
TRADE MARK

This trade mark is registered. It is our property. It is not likely to be counterfeited, as that would subject the perpetrator to the danger of heavy fine and imprisonment (see U. S. laws respecting copyrights). It is on every genuine sack of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

As required by state law the word "ALABAMA" in large letters is found on every bag of fertilizer offered for sale in this state. Some unscrupulous persons have employed this means to deceive you.

See that the above trade mark is on the bag, and take none offered you as the ALABAMA FERTILIZER without it.

A NEW COAL MINE.

Shelby Coming to the Front as a Mining Center.

The Birmingham News says that the Alabama and Mississippi Coal Co. will begin the shipment of coal about Saturday over the new branch being constructed by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad from Echols, a little station on the Mineral, near Tacoa, 20 miles below Birmingham in Shelby County. The road will be completed about Wednesday, and as soon as the sidetrack is completed at the mines coal will be shipped. Right now coal is being carried by wagon to Echols and loaded on railroad cars there. The output of the mines will be in a few weeks something like 400 tons of coal per day. Mr. T. Spencer is one of the principal owners, and he states that orders have already been taken in for 1,000 cars of coal, which will mean steady work for three months. Other offers have been made for the product, and it is believed that enough orders will be taken within a few days to cause the mines to work all through the summer. The coal is of very good quality. The Louisville & Nashville is putting down over a mile and a half of spur track to get to these mines.

Shelby County is forging to the front as a coal mining county. With mines at Aldrich, Dogwood, Maylene, Hargrove, Gurnee, Helena and this new one she is an important factor in this industry. The demand for coal is heavy and the price is good. This year will be a profit maker to all the mine owners.

Shelby.

On the 31st day of January the Dennemora House was entirely destroyed by fire. When discovered the flames were bursting out of the roof of the east wing. An alarm was sounded, and a large number of men soon gathered. By earnest efforts a great deal of furniture was saved, though most of it in a damaged condition. Some silver ware, crockery and carpets were lost. Mr. and Mrs. Wade, who were running the hotel, were the largest losers. Soon after was discovered hose was attached to a hydrant and a powerful stream of water turned on the house occupied by Mr. William Crossett, and though it was but a few feet from the burning building it was saved. The post-office building was also saved by a continuous application of water to the roof.

A serious accident occurred during the fire, a falling chimney striking Thomas Bierly, one of the Company's engineers, on the head. Dr. Parker dressed the wound, and the patient is expected to recover.

The new hotel building will be opend this week by Mr. and Mrs. Wade.

Mrs. Franklin and Mrs. Harrell, who have been visiting in town, have returned home, the former to Mississippi and the latter to Bridges, Ala.

The population of Shelby was increased last week by the arrival of a very young gentleman at the home of T. O. Sparks and a daughter at the home of Bremond Bristow.

Mr. William Francis and wife have moved into the house corner of Second street and Parker avenue.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist church gave an oyster supper at the public schoolhouse on the 2nd. The net receipts were about $15.

The Baptist Sunday school has recently purchased a library. Miss James, tutor in Captain Christian's family, was a leader in this enterprise.

"Brother Tom" Roberts gladdened his many friends by a visit to our town last week. He was here over Sunday, and led the Epworth League at 3 o'clock, which for his convenience in A. H. Avery's parlor. In spite of his infirmity he led the meeting with his old-time vigor and helpfulness.

Amos Weaver, while loading a wagon with guano at this place Tuesday, had the misfortune to get his shoulder knocked out of place.

One night last week the prisoners of the jail with a piece of iron succeeded in removing the cement of their cell, and in twenty-four hours would have made their escape, but fortunate Deputy Sheriff Walthall missed the piece of iron and in making a search for it discovered the plan by which the prisoners were to make their escape.

On last Friday morning about 11 o'clock the residence of J. W. M. Page, on East College street, caught on fire from a spark from the chimney, which would have burned the house, but the timely discovery of the flames by the school children who gave the alarm, brought the neighbors to the scene, and in a little while the flames were put out.

They Should Know it.

Many women suffer untold agony and misery because the nature of their disease is not correctly understood. They have been led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for the many ills that beset womankind.

Neuralgia, nervousness, headache, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, rheumatism, a dragging pain or dull ache in the back, weakness or bearing-down sensation, profuse or scanty supply of urine with strong odor, frequent desire to pass it with scalding or burning sensation, sediment in it after standing in bottle or common glass for 24 hours are signs of kidney and bladder trouble.

The above symptoms are often attributed by the patient herself or by her physician to female weakness or womb trouble. Hence, so many fail to obtain relief, because they are treating, not the disease itself, but a reflection of the primary cause, which is kidney trouble.

In fact, women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same remedy.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is the great discovery of the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is easy to get at any drug store for 50 cents or $1.

To prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and book telling all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Kindly mention THE CHRONICLE, and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

"Nature Abhors a Vacuum."

Nothing in the world stands still. If you are well and strong day by day the blood supplies its tide of vigor. If you are ill, the blood is wrong and carries increasing quantities of diseased germs. SCENERY

Now Painted Upon Tough Brown Paper for Portability.

Except as regards the part that mechanism plays, the scenic artists of Italy are the best in the world, as effective painters, and the fact is so well recognized in these days of almost all scenery being done by contract—a resident scenic artist is getting to be a rarity—that a great trade of this sort has sprung up between the painters of Italy and the managers everywhere. And this is particularly so as regards companies that come to America. So heavy has been the cost of transporting tons of scenery, and so exacting have the customs officials been of late years, that the generality of managers at one time found it cheaper to have new scenes painted after they arrived. But the Italian system has largely done away with all this, for it includes the painting of the scenery on large sheets of a peculiarly tough sort of brown paper, these being numbered and joined together with unerring accuracy. A recent grand opera production in this country depended scenically upon these sheets of paper alone, and not even the oldest playgoer in the house could distinguish any peculiarity. Of course, the sheets are spread upon canvas in the ordinary way, and a "toucher-up" is required after they are spread, but the system is imenseful useful when a new production is taken from one capital to another at a great distance, and the Italian artists are sending their sheets to managers all over the world.

The German empress, it is said, spends more upon her clothes than any other lady.

I am Past 80 and Not a Gray Hair

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for a great many years, and although I am past eighty years of age, yet I have not a gray hair in my head."—Geo. Yellott, Towson, Md., Aug. 3, 1899.

Have You Lost It?

We mean all that rich, dark color your hair used to have. But there is no need of mourning over it, for you can find it again.

Ayer's Hair Vigor always restores color to gray hair. We know exactly what we are saying when we use that word "always."

It makes the hair grow heavy and long, too; takes out every bit of dandruff, and stops falling of the hair. Keep it on your dressing table and use it every day. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Write the Doctor

If you do not obtain all the benefits you desire from the use of the Vigor, write the Doctor about it. He will tell you just the right thing to do, and will send you his book on the Hair and Scalp if you request it. Address,

The Spot on Which She Stood.

"The very spot on which you stand,"
He said, "is dear to me!"
He held the gentle maiden's hand,
And pressed it lovingly.
She looked up in his eyes—he heard
Her sigh a sigh or two.
And heaven, though she spoke no word,
Was opened to his view.

"Ah, yes, the spot beneath your feet
Is dear to me," he cried—
"The place on which you stand is sweet,
By you 'tis sanctified!"
She sighed again, but ere she spoke,
Without the least ado,
The ice on which they loitered broke
And both of them went through!

An Insinuation.

Husband—That tramp I met at the gate told me he weighed 250 pounds.

Wife—What a story teller! Why, he told me when I fed him that he only weighed a hundred.

Husband—Yes, my dear, but that was before he had eaten those biscuits of yours.

Drawn From Life.

Critic—I must congratulate you on the villain of your play. He leaves the impression of having been drawn from the life.

Author—He was. I may say to you that he is an exact portrait of myself as my wife depicts me in our hours of ease.—Brooklyn Life.

How He Succeeded

Hixon—You are the only man I ever heard of who started out to build a house for $4,000 and actually succeeded in finishing it within the limit. How did you manage it?

Dixon—Oh, that was an easy matter. I had my architect draw up plans for a $2,000 house. See?—Chicago News

The Worst Way.

Stranger—The cars don't run very regularly on this line, do they?

Native—Not very. Are you in a hurry?"

Stranger—Yes, I am. I want to get down to the ferry the worst way.

Native—O! you do? Well; this is the way you want to go.—Philadelphia Press.

Then It Went Off.

In the commanding general's quarters all was darkness.

"I tell you what," whispered the alarm clock to the military brush, "those Boers aren't in it with me."

"No?" was the sleepy reply.

"No. Now watch. Here's where I catch the general napping."—Philadelphia North American.

Willing to Keep the Secret.

Hartupp—Look here, old fellow, there's something I want to tell you.

Smiller—Is it a secret?

Hartupp—Yes; but I don't mind telling you. I want a loan of one hundred dollars.

Smiller—You may depend upon me; I'll not whisper a word about it.—Brooklyn Life.

Hoping for Better Luck.

"Of course, Maggie, if you intend to get married, that is your business," said the mistress to her cook; "but you mustn't forget that marriage is a very serious matter."

"Yes, ma'am: I know it is sometimes," replied the domestic; "but maybe I'll have better luck than you did."—Chicago Post.

THE DEFENS OF THE GOOSE BONE.

A Good Word in Favor of an Ancient Weather Prophet.

A correspondent sends us the following defense of the goose bone as a weather prophet: To show that the popularity of the goose breast-bone has some scientific foundation it should be remembered that the goose lives to be one hundred years old, unless it meets with some melancholy accident. Such an extended sphere of observation gives the goose an instinct for atmospheric probabilities. It becomes as familiar with indications of air currents and thermal conditions as man is with Prince Albert or Tuxedo coats, and this instinct it transmits from generation to generation; hence it anticipates climatic conditions and supplies itself with nitrogenous food, which enriches the blood and colors the breast-bone. Again, as the breast-bone of the goose is the bow of the ship that breaks the storm, its blood rushes to the part which most requires it, and this colors the breast-bone. Farmers who are in close contact with nature nearly all believe the prediction of the goose bone, and there is a legend that in General Washington's famous crossing of the Delaware he was influenced by the views of local agriculturists as to the freezing of the river, and that those opinions were founded upon observation of the breast-bone of a wild goose. Was this the reason that Benjamin Franklin once proposed the goose as the emblematic bird of the United States?—Philadelphia Record.

Well Brought Up Little Japs.

From one end of Japan to the other a child is treated like a sacred thing. Each little one is put at birth under "the protection of the public." Each little one carries its name and address clearly marked on a ticket worn around the neck. This is useful not only in case the child is lost or wanders away, but in case of the conflagrations which suddenly lay low the modern villages of Japan. In case of the outbreak of a fire, it is customary for some one to go from house to house, calling out the little folks, who are then removed in a body to some place of safety, leaving the elders to protect their property untrammeled by the harrowing thought that some child is missing in a corner of the house. The first duty in case of fire is to protect the little folks.

The beautiful behavior of Japanese children is always commented upon by English and American travellers. It is the result of a system of careful education, which clothes boys and girls, rich and poor, with "a garment of perfect courtesy." "The lesson is inculcated without robbing infancy of a moment of thoughtless happiness. A great deal can be said in praise of this system of domestic education which gains the desired end without snubbing, weary scolding or punishments. —Philadelphia Inquirer.

Wars for a Trifle.

Mr. Chamberlain's Parliamentary apology for the Transvaal War on the ground that he meant to grant the Boer concessions but was misunderstood recalls the war between Poland and Sweden in 1654. In that year, a Polish nobleman became obnoxious to the laws of his country, by reason of his having committed a crime. He fled to Sweden, whereupon John Casimir, king of Poland, wrote to Charles Gustavus, king of Sweden, demanding the surrender of the criminal. The king of Sweden, on reading the dispatch, noticed that his own name and titles were followed by two "etceteras," while the name of the king of Poland was followed by three. The missing "etcetera" so enraged the king of Sweden that he at once declared war against Poland. The war was carried on with great bitterness until 1660, when a peace was signed at Oliva, near Dantzig. A contemporary writer (Kochowsky) poured out his lamentations on the war in these terms: "How dear has this 'etcetera' been to us. With how many lives have these two potentates paid for these missing eight letters. With what streams of blood has the failure of a few drops of ink been avenged."—Collier's Weekly.

Character in Finger Nails.

In days when superstition was more prevalent than it is now the shape and appearance of the finger nails were considered to have reference to one's destiny.

To learn the message of the finger nails it was necessary to rub them over with a compound of wax and soot, and then to hold them so that the sunlight fell fully on them.

Then, on the horny, transparent substance certain signs and characters were supposed to appear from which the future could be interpreted.

Persons having certain kinds of nails were credited with the possession of certain characteristics. Thus a man with red and spotted nails was supposed to have a hot temper, while pale, lead-colored nails were considered to denote a melancholy temperament.

Narrow nails were supposed to betray ambition and a quarrelsome nature, while round-shaped nails were the distinguishing marks of lovers of knowledge and people of liberal sentiment.

Conceited, narrow-minded and obstinate folk were supposed to have small nails, indolent people fleshy and those of a gentle, retiring nature broad nails.

Philippine Women.

The women are not all homely looking, although they are very young in life. Their hair, which is of a jet-black, silky texture, is allowed to hang in a loose, flowing mass, and in many cases reaches almost to the feet. Their eyes are black and brilliant. They are remarkably clean in dress for such a dirty, muddy country. White, red and light yellow seem to be their favorite colors. A waist with a draw-sting at the neck, made of some light, fluffy material, and a red piece of dress goods neatly wrapped around them, reaching to the knees, goes for a dress. The headdress is worn only on official or special occasions. They wear no stockings or shoes, but have much dignity. — Correspondence Indianapolis News.

TOADS AND FROGS.

Some of the Superstitions Concerning Them in Various Places.

Some traits of "The Mediaeval Toad" were recounted in a paper written by Mrs. Frances M. Butler of Snow Hill, Md., and read by Mrs. John C. Wrenshall at the last monthly meeting of the Baltimore Folklore Society. In the time of Shakespeare, it stated, the toad was credited with secreting a poisonous venom while in hiding which it spat out indiscriminately at man and beast. The cattle plague in England and many mysterious human deaths were attributed to the work of the toad. The spider was supposed to equal the toad in venom, but in these days toads eat spiders with apparently impunity.

The American toad Mrs. Butler stated, is larger, not so dark, and more agile than its English brother. Toads are imported into England from Austria, packed in moss, and sold at $15 or $20 a hundred.

In physic the toad, or part of it, has always been credited with great powers. For instance, the right eye of a frog wrapped in russet cloth and hung around the neck was supposed to cure the right eye of the wearer of bleariness. The same was true of the left eye of the frog for the left eye of the wearer. A toad, dead or alive, placed at the back of the neck was supposed to stop nose bleed. Dried and powdered, the frog was supposed to be an irresistable love philter.

It is related of the American Indans that they believed that a council of the gods was held for producing light at night. The whippoorwill made the moon out of a large frog, and the coldness of the moon is attributed to the frogs natural coldness.

Another tradition related of savage tribes is that the toad quarrelled with the woodpecker and caused the Deluge. It is said that they disputed over honey which the toad was induced to climb a tree in order to obtain. Then the woodpecker knocked the toad out of the tree, and in revenge the toad drank up all the water on earth, leaving the birds dry and thirsty. In a subsequent quarrel the toad incautiously danced about, burst, and the water covered the earth in a flood.

In Maryland the bite of the toad is considered poisonous if not deadly. An old superstition is that handling toads will cause warts to grow on the hands.

Tales from the South African Front.

The son of Mr. E. Lunn, of Kirkgate, Wakefield, writes as follows:

"I was in company with a sergeant in charge of some wounded Boer prisoners. One of these was lying on a stretcher and was being carried in when he whipped out a revolver and aimed at an officer near. The sergeant was carrying his gun on his shoulder with the barrel in front of him. He quickly dashed the revolver out of the Boer's hand, clubbed his own rifle as he would a striking hammer, and dashed the prisoner's brains out where lay. He was not satisfied with one blow, but had three, and beat the man's head to a pulp. The captain did not see what the prisoner had done, so ordered the sergeant's arrest. A comrade slipped out of the marching line, and asking to be excused, saying he thought the sergeant's circumstances needed some explanation, and told the captain how things stood. The captain gave the order for the sergeant's release, congratulating him, and thanking him for saving his life."

The same writer continues:

"I saw a Lancer who pitied an old Boer because of his gray hair and whiskers. The Lancer said that when he pushed him out of the way, he could not give him the thrust because at the moment he thought of his old father. Well, the Lancer got five yards or so past him, when the old boy aimed and fired at his preserver, but the bullet missed. A comrade, who saw the act, rode back, and thrust the Boer through the heart with his lance, giving him a second thrust to make sure."—Westminster (England) Gazette.

Had the Dead Wood on Her.

"I will," she exclaimed. "I will not live with you another day!"

"You'll leave me, will you?" he calmly asked.

"Yes; I will."

"When?"

"Now—right off—this minute."

"You'll go away?"

"Yes, sir."

"I wouldn't if I were you."

"But I will, and I defy you to prevent me. I have suffered at your hands as long as I can put up with it."

"Oh, I shan't try to stop you," he quietly replied. "I'll simply report to the police that my wife has mysteriously disappeared. They'll want your description, and I will give it. You wear No. 7 shoes; you have an extra large mouth; you walk stiff in your knees; your nose turns up at the end; eyes rather on the squint; voice like a a——"

"Wretch, you wouldn't dare do that," she screamed.

"I certainly will, and the description will go in all the papers."

They glared at each other a moment in silence. Then it was plain to be seen he had the dead wood on her.—Ohio State Journal.

Browning's Courtesy to Servant.

To Robert Browning a man was a man, whether he was served by many people or was the servant of others. On one occasion his son Barrett had hired a room in a neighboring house to exhibit his pictures, and, in the temporary absence of the artist, Mr. Browning was doing the honors to a roomful of fashionable friends. He was standing near the door when an unannounced visitor made her appearance, and of course he shook hands with her, greeting her as he did the other arrivals.

"Oh, I beg pardon," she exclaimed, "but, please, sir, I'm the cook. Mr. Barrett asked me to come and see his pictures."

"And I'm very glad to see you," returned Mr. Browning, with ready courtesy. "Take my arm and I will see you round."

DON'T WORRY.

A Few of the Epigrammatists' Shots at Woman's Chief Foe.

Worry is the father of insomnia. Worry is forethought gone to seed. Worry is discounting possible future sorrows so that the individual may have present misery. Worry is not one large individual sorrow; it is a colony of petty, vague, insignificant, restless imps of fear, that become important only from their combination, their constancy, their iteration. Worry is the traitor in our camp that dampens our powder, weakens our aim; under the guise of helping us to bear the present and to be ready for the future worry multiplies enemies within our mind to sap our strength. Worry must not be confused with anxiety, though both words agree in meaning originally, a "choking," or a "strangling," referring, of course, to the throttling effect upon individual activity. Anxiety faces large issues of life seriously, calmly, with dignity. Anxiety always suggests hopeful possibility; it is active in being ready and devising measures to meet the outcome. Worry is the dominance of the mind by a single, vague, restless, unsatisfied, fearing and fearful idea. The mental energy and force that should be concentrated on the successive duties of the day is constantly and surreptitiously abstracted and absorbed by this one fixed idea.

Wrapping Up the Coin in Paper.

One of the lesser, but established newer customs of the city is that of wrapping up in paper coins thrown to the organ grinder, says the Sun. There are no monkeys now to climb up and take the money; they are not permitted to be carried in the city, and if they were they could not climb to the upper stories of the tall flats and tenements. The money from them must be thrown down. The organ-grinder cannot leave his organ—he carries about nowadays a big organ on wheels—to pick up or to hunt for the money; that work is now attended to by somebody else who goes about with the organ-grinder, to help, if necessary, to pull the organ and to look after and pick up contributions. And even so, with somebody doing nothing else but look for them, some coins would be lost if thrown from windows high in the air to strike upon the pavement below and bound up and away. Hence the common practice in these days of doing up in a piece of paper the coin thrown from a high window. The paper deadens the fall and keeps it from bounding, and it serves also to mark where the coin lies.

Automobile Weddings.

Betrothed couples who go with the times now drive motor cars to church for the wedding ceremony. The latest of these up-to-date marriages has been celebrated at St. Germain l'Auxerrois. The bridal party drew up to the porch, not in stately equipages, but in a long procession of some twenty horseless vehicles of the newest pattern. A large crowd had gathered to witness the arrival. Cheers went up, mingled with humorous remarks, when the cortege of motors appeared. The bride's and bridegroom's carriages were decked out with white lilac, chrysanthemums and ferns.

Nervous Women

are ailing women. When a woman has some female trouble she is certain to be nervous and wretched.

With many women the monthly suffering is so great that they are for days positively insane, and the most diligent efforts of ordinary treatment are unavailing.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

comes promptly to the relief of these women. The letters from women cured by it proves this. This paper is constantly printing them.

The advice of Mrs. Pinkham should also be secured by every nervous woman. This costs nothing. Her address is Lynn, Mass.

VOL. XV. COLUMBIANA, SHELBY COUNTY, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1900. NO. 9.

BULLER IS BALKED AGAIN

HIS EFFORT TO RELIEVE LADYSMITH DOOMED TO DISMAL FAILURE.

ABANDONS FORMER POSITION

London Admits Correctness of Boer Report, Telling of British Defeat.

London accepts as true the Boer statement that General Buller has once again failed to succor the beleagured inhabitants of Ladysmith. These statements were passed by the British censor at Aden and are read in the light of Mr. Balfour's announcement in the commons that General Buller is not pressing his advance.

Mr. Winston Churchill wires that Vaalkrantz was impracticable, for the guns which were needed to support a further advance. His cablegram leaves General Buller on Tuesday night sending a fresh brigade to relieve the tired soldiers of Vaalkrantz.

The descriptive writers with General Buller were allowed a rather free hand again in explaining the ugly position which the British held and the natural obstacles which had to be overcome. So it is easier to infer that with Boer riflemen and artillery defending them, these hills, ravines and jungles have not been overcome and thus the public is prepared in advance for bad news.

Heliograms from Ladysmith dated Monday describe the effect General Buller's cannonade had on the worn garrison. Hope ran high that the long period of inactivity and tedium was drawing to a close. The crash of guns was almost continuous for ten hours and at times it seemed as though as many as twenty shells burst in a minute.

BRITONS WERE OUTFLANKED.

A dispatch dated Frere Camp Feb. 8, probably written with the advanced lines, says:

"The forces of the enemy our on both our flanks and continue to render our position extremely difficult to maintain."

This makes evident that General Buller after devoting Wednesday to bringing more artillery and troops across the Tugela, was badly in need of re-enforcements. It is more patent that it is impossible for him to advance until the artillery has been enabled to take up forward positions for the purpose of subduing the Boer guns on both flanks.

Almost all the critics now point out that the mere pushing through to Ladysmith without securing a decisive victory on the way there would only add danger to what is already a critical situation.

Another Frere camp dispatch says a Boer prisoner asserts that the burghers expected General Buller to cross at Skiets drift and that thousands of Boers were being posted at Doorn kloof to oppose such a passage, while on the captured hill there were only a few hundred Johannesburghers. This tends to increase the anxiety of those who believe that General Buller has scarcely begun the serious part of his advance.

RETIRE FROM KOPJE.

The British who were in possession of the kopje at Molons drift abandoned it after a bombardment by Boer cannon Thursday morning and retired across the Tugela river to their former position.

BATTLE GROUND SELECTED.

Corbett and Jeffries Will Meet In San Francisco.

The twenty-five round battle between James J. Corbett and James J. Jeffries for the world's heavyweight championship will take place before the National Athletic club of San Francisco on or about April 1 next.

JONES INTRODUCES BILL

As a Free Coinage Substitute For Financial Measure.

Senator Jones, of Arkansas, has introduced a free silver coinage substitute for the pending currency bill. The substitute provides that "from and after the passage of this act the mints of the United States shall be open to the coinage of silver and there shall be coined dollars of the weight of 412½ grains, troy, of standard silver 9-10 fine as provided by the act of January 18, 1837, and upon the same terms and subject to the limitations and provisions of law regulating the coinage and legal tender quality of gold."

IN JURY'S HANDS.

The Celebrated Molineaux Case at New York Closed.

A New York dispatch says: Assistant District Attorney Osborne, Friday night, completed his argument in the trial of Roland B. Molineaux for the murder of Mrs. Kate J. Adams. Recorder Goff charged the jury Saturday morning, and the twelve men at once took up the question of the guilt or innocence of the prisoner.

LAWTON BURIED.

With Imposing Ceremonies Body Is Laid to Rest In Historic Arlington.

A Washington special says: Major Henry W. Lawton was buried Friday in the National cemetery at Arlington. The services at the grave were preceded by those at the Church of the Covenent in the city, where President H. M. Stryker, of Hamilton college, delivered a funeral oration that has seldom been equaled in beauty of expression, nor could it have been in more perfect accord with the spirit of the solemn occasion that called it forth.

Never in the history of the capital has there been a more representative gathering of the nation's official life to pay a last tribute to the nation's honored dead. No mark of military pomp and ceremony that the regulations could provide was wanting to render the occasion solemn and impressive. Nearly all the available troops of the regular military remaining in this country were called out. Three thousand men, infantry, cavalry and artillery, followed the flag-draped caisson to the grave.

Lawton was to the people the ideal American soldier whose exploits in three wars made his name a household word and who being a soldier, first and only, died in the line of duty, leaving nothing to his children but the heritage of an honored name.

It was in tribute to this soldier's ideal that American generosity for weeks past had swelled the "Lawton Fund" beyond all expectations of its originators, and in further tribute Friday that the great ourpouring of people filled the streets long before the hour when the services at the Church of the Covenant were to commence.

But mere official formulæ were dwarfed beside the deep popular demonstration that the burial of the dead soldier called forth. Every department of the government paid its official tribute. Flags hung at half mast.

The president and his cabinet, representatives of the supreme court, of the house and senate, and of the army and navy, all combined to fill the darkened church to its utmost. But these official representatives of the people were lost in the great crowds that surrounded the church and lined the streets along which the procession passed.

President McKinley was among the early comers, accompanied by the secretary of war. They came to the church with Adjutant General Corbin, who, assisted by Colonel John Bingham, had charge of the official arrangements. The secretary of the navy, the secretary of the interior, the attorney general and secretary of agriculture were also there.

The supreme court was represented by Chief Justice Fuller and several of the associate justices. Admiral Dewey was absent from Washington, but was represented by Captain A. S. Barker. Ex-Secretary Alger was also present by proxy, having sent from Michigan Mr. Victor Mason, his secretary while in the war department, who brought a great wreath of flowers for the already overladen casket.

The Presbyterian burial service was read by Rev. Hamlin, pastor of the church, and President Stryker then arose to deliver the oration.

After the oration the casket, lightened of part of its burden of flowers, was lifted to the shoulders of troopers, borne down the aisle to the street, past the great crowd outside and raised to the caisson waiting at the door.

The waiting ranks of the cavalry moved forward and closed about it as a guard of honor and formed into line. Then with a rumble of wheels and a clash of trace chains, field and siege batteries joined the procession, and the hero of three wars moved on his last march to his final resting place on the Virginia hillside beyond the Potomac.

ALMOST A CONFESSION.

A Prisoner Throws Some Light on the Goebel Assassination.

Two men suspected of complicity in the murder of Governor Goebel were arrested in a boarding house at Frankfort Friday. Their names are Silas Jones, of Whitley county, and Gottschalk, of Nelson county.

The authorities expect to obtain important evidence from Jones, who has already made a partial confession. He declares that he personally knows nothing of the crime, but says that Harlan Whittaker, who was arrested immediately after the shooting knows a great deal about the crime.

STRIKERS GET DEMANDS.

Core Makers Win a Victory at Cleveland, Ohio.

The Core Makers' strike which was inaugurated at a number of foundries in Cleveland, O., several weeks ago has terminated in a victory for the strikers. The men are receiving $2.50 a day as demanded, get pay for time and a half for over hours and double pay for work on Sundays and holidays.

DEMOCRATS FIRM.

Taylor's Action Does Not Change the Aspect of Affairs In Kentucky.

A Louisville special says: The collapse of the peace negotiations through Governor Taylor's rejection of the Louisville agreement and the latter's action in calling off the London legislature and partially withdrawing the troops have left the fight over state offices divested of many of its warlike features, but in a worse legal tangle than ever.

The receipt of the news from Frankfort Saturday afternoon was followed immediately by a gathering of Democratic leaders at the Willard hotel. At this conference were Senator Blackburn, Governor Beckham, General Castleman, President Carter, of the senate, Speaker Trimble, and others. At its conclusion Governor Beckham sent to the legislature a message reciting the failure of the peace negotiations and the conditions existing at Frankfort as seen by him and recommending that the legislature continue its sessions in Louisville, as he could not guarantee their personal security nor protect them from unwarranted interference at Frankfort.

Acting upon this suggestion, the legislature decided to remain in Louisville for the present, and both houses adjourned to meet at the court house Monday at noon.

The Democratic members do not accept Governor Taylor's action in ordering away part of troops as restoring a condition under which they may return to the capital. They say they would feel safer with the militia than with "the irresponsible armed mountaineers who for weeks have been gathered about the state buildings" left to menace them.

The positions of the two governments are irreconcilable, and while they are maintained a clash can only be deferred.

BAD FOR LADYSMITH.

Boers May Now Succeed In Capturing the Beleaguered Town.

A London special says: General Sir Redvers Buller's army is once more south of the Tugela river; General MacDonald is back at Modder river, and, apparently, the Boers have lost none of the ascendancy they have held so long.

The third great attempt to end the siege of Ladysmith results in utter failure, and even the most optimistic Britisher fails to hold out any hope that Ladysmith can now be saved from the Boers.

It is regarded as certain that the garrison, so long bravely defended by General White's forces, must fall into the hands of General Joubert's army.

The besieged city has been short of rations for weeks and it is feared that the situation there is desperate in the extreme. It is now feared that General Joubert will make another attack on the garrison, taking advantage of his rout of the British under Buller, and forcing the latter back to a position south of the river, and making it impossible for the British army to interfere with the attack on the city.

There is much doubt as to the ability of General White to make another resistance, as his supply of ammunition must be nearly exhausted and his men are no doubt suffering from the long siege and privation. They will have no heart to fight the Boers, knowing that if General Buller's fresh and strong troops can do nothing with the enemy their own weak batteries and depleted stock of ammunition and cheerless men cannot hope to hold out long in a battle.

MOLINEAUX CONVICTED.

Verdict of Jury Was "Murder In the First Degree."

A New York dispatch says: After deliberating seven and a half hours the jury returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree against Roland B. Molineaux, charged with the murder of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams by poison on December 28, 1898.

Bartow S. Weeks, counsel for the defense, made the usual motion, and Recorder Goff adjourned court until February 16, when he said he would hear the motion and sentence the defendant.

The announcement of the verdict of guilty was received in the uptown districts and about the clubs apparently with great surprise. Many of the club men seemed to be staggered by the announcement and it was the main topic for discussion.

LIABILITIES OVER A MILLION.

One Time Famous Stock Broker Is Now a Bankrupt.

A New York dispatch says: Anthony W. Dimock, twenty-five years ago a famous stock operator, head of the firm of A. W. Dimock & Co., bankers and brokers, Wall street, filed a petition in bankruptcy Saturday. His liabilities are set down at $1,292,735; his assets $150.

Coal Admitted Free.

On the proposal of M. DeWitte, the minister of finance, the czar of Russia has consented to the importation of coal, exclusively for the use of the Russian railways free of duty until September 1, next.

ROOSEVELT SAYS NAY.

Denies That He Will Accept Nomination For Vice President.

The New York Press says: Roosevelt is not a candidat for the Republican nomination for vice-president, Woodruff is. Roosevelt told Senator Platt and Chairman Odell, of the committee, that he would not take the nomination. He told them, too, that he had written a letter to his friend. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, to that effect.

ARREST SOLONS SAYS TAYLOR

Warrants For Democratic Members of Legislature.

TO FORCIBLY GET QUORUM

Beckham, However, Says He Is Prepared to Proctect Them at All Hazards.

The tension under which the Kentucky Republican state legislature at London has been laboring, especially during the past week, reached a crisis Friday, when the following message from Governor Taylor was received by a member:

> "Have warrants issued for members of the house and put in the hands of sergeant-at-arms to serve."

The warrants were made out late in the day and given to Sergeant-at-Arms Cecil of the house. A form of warrant for absent senators was also made out, but it was decided to withhold the issuance of warrants from the senate until Saturday, so that Lieutenant Governor Marshall could attach his signature.

The rigid secrecy that characterized Thursday's proceedings was maintained, but it was very apparent despite all efforts to conceal it, that all the legislators were laboring under a fever of excitement.

The message from Governor Taylor to issue the warrants was received just before the house convened Friday morning. The intelligence was passed secretly to members, and an air of suppressed excitement became plainly visible.

When the senators gathered in the senate chamber prior to the convening, several members from the house joined them and were informed of Governor Taylor's message. The secrecy that has marked the proceedings of the executive sessions covered the names contained in the warrants. A list of a number of members to be brought to London had been prepared, but whether warrants were issued for all of them could not be ascertained. Five detectives have arrived in London, and every effort has been made to keep their identity a secret.

Two of them are in the town in the interest of the Democrats and three for the Republicans. The effect of the governor's message was apparent. Senator Cox said:

"We mean business. We will have a quorum in the house and a quorum in the senate. We will be in working order and ready to transact business by Monday. Further than that I have nothing to say."

Late in the afternoon the house warrants were issued and the excitement quieted down with the sudden calmness that indicated an approaching storm.

DEMOCRATS IN LOUISVILLE.

The Democratic legislature met in Louisville Friday morning, having present in each house a quorum of the total membership. Governor Beckham made the announcement that he is prepared to protect the legislature from arrest, and that he will do so.

These developments marked the first steps toward carrying out the plans announced some days ago by the Democrats to set up a state government in Louisville that have been taken since those plans were developed by the peace government.

Some commotion was caused among the legislators by reports from London and Frankfort that warrants were about to be sworn out for the arrest of enough Democratic members to make a quorum for the Republican legislature now meeting at London. When told of this, Governor Beckham said:

> "No member of the legislature who comes to Louisville need fear arrest. I shall not allow any member of the general assembly to be arrested."

When asked what measures would be adopted to prevent such arrests should they be attempted, Governor Beckham replied that he was fully prepared to protect the legislature and to arrest any person who interfered with its members. Further than this he would make no statement.

It is known, that since the appointment of General Castleman as adjutant general arrangements have been made to provide a defensive force ample for the safety of the Democratic state officers.

The legislative sessions were held in the court house, the senate meeting in the chancery courtroom, the house in the county courtroom. Twenty senatars—or more than a quorum—were present when Lieutenant Governor Carter called that body to order. Regular business was taken up where it was dropped at Frankfort.

WHEELER IS DELAYED.

Asks House Committee To Aid Tennessee River Appropriation.

General Joe Wheeler, writing the chairman and members of the rivers and the harbors committee of the house, from Paniquem, island of Luzon, under date of January 6th, asks their active efforts in securing an appropriation for the Tennessee river below Chattanooga. General Wheeler says the death of General Lawton has delayed his departure for home.

OUR GARRISONS ARE HARASSED

Insurgents Keep Up Their Guerrilla Warfare.

SHOOT BURNING ARROWS

Town of Albay Is Almost Destroyed. Attempts Made To Ambush Americans At Every Opportunity.

A Manila special says: Of late the insurgents in Albay province, Luzon, have adopted harrassing tactics against towns which the Americans have garrisoned. They camp in the hills and mountains and constantly fire upon the American outposts. When the troops sally against them they scatter, returning when the Americans retire.

They shoot burning arrows, and have thus burned a large part of the town of Albay. Indeed, most of the larger towns in the province are practically deserted, except by the garrisons. Scarcely any of the inhabitants return to their homes. They are camping in the interior, and it is supposed armed insurgents prevent them going back. It is reported that there is much suffering among them owing to lack of food. As a result of these conditions the hemp business in that section is seriously hindered and ships going for cargoes are compelled to take gangs of coolies to do their landing. Hemp held in the interior is quite inaccessible.

General Bell will take two regiments and a battery through the provinces of North Camarines and South Camarines, going there on transports. Many insurgents retreated to that part of the island from Cavite and Batangas provinces.

Another expedition will soon start to garrison towns along the north coast of the island of Mindanao.

Guerrilla warfare continues south of Manila. Two attempts have been made to ambush the Americans. Colonel Schwan, while returning to Manila with his staff and an escort of 100 from Batanges, was attacked by the insurgents. The latter were dispersed, but the Americans had seven men wounded.

Lieutenant Colonel Beacom, with six companies of the Forty-second infantry, had a two hours' fight with General Pio del Pilar's command, which attempted to ambush the Americans along the trail through Morong province near the lake. Here also the insurgents were dispersed, but the Americans had several wounded, among them a captain.

General Bell is operating southward through Zambales province with a small force.

Another expedition is proceeding northward from Subig. It is reported that the insurgent general, Alejandro, has recovered from his wound and has assembled a large force in that district.

The bubonic plague continues. Eight cases were reported last week among the natives and Chinese. There is no excitement, however, and business and social life in Manila are undisturbed.

Smallpox is prevalent among the natives along the railroad, and in the towns on the northern coast. Two officers of the Thirty-sixth infantry have died of the disease and another officer and several soldiers have been stricken.

CAN NOW CONSOLIDATE.

Judge Waddill Renders Decision Favorable To S. A. L. System.

What is claimed to be the last legal barrier to the consolidation of the various lines composing the Seaboard Air Line system was removed Saturday by Judge Waddill, sitting in the United States circuit court at Richmond when he delivered his opinion refusing Ryan's application for injunction.

The state senate committee at Richmond has, by a vote of 10 to 20, decided to report favorably the bill to incorporate the proposed new line from Richmond to Washington.

GAS PIPE LEAKED.

Result Was Death of Man, Wife and Infant Son.

Martin Jordan, an engineer, his wife, Mary, and their five months' old boy, were asphyxiated by gas last Saturday night in their home in Chicago.

A leak in a gas pipe in the basement deluged the house with gas and when found by other members of the family had been dead for several hours.

Conflagration In San Salvador.

A cablegram from San Salvador, Central America, states that the city has been visited by a serious fire. The total loss is estimated at $1,000,000.

CANNOT ARREST.

Kentucky Legislators Are Exempt to State Constitution.

Judge Alex P. Humphrey, one of the leading lawyers of Louisville, Ky., said Friday morning that any arrests of legislators would be illegal, and that habeas corpus proceedings would certainly result in the release of the arrested members. Many people, including some members of the legislature, he said, had confused the constitution of the United States and the constitution of Kentucky.

PEARLS OF THOUGHT.

There is only one grade of honesty.

What does the work of man is a man.

Chance never helps the men who do not work.

No palm of victory without the dust of conflict.

A heart full of love means a mouthful of blessings.

Love of virtue is as native to man as love of knowledge.

A life of pleasure makes even the strongest mind frivolous at last.

The happiness of your life depends upon the character of your thoughts.

Money cannot always command happiness, but happiness can command money.

As there is no royal road to knowledge, there is no easy way to work out a worthy reform.

A German proverb says, honor the old, instruct the young, consult the wise and bear with the foolish.

Generosity, to deserve the name, comprises the desire and the effort to benefit others, without reference to self.

Could you see every man's career in life you would find a woman clogging him—or cheering him and goading him.

To the young man who would rise in the world there is but one word of caution—be thorough, if you do not want to be numbered among the world's failures.

Each individual experiences in life that which will sooner or later uplift, no matter how direful and seemingly unholy the process through which he must pass may be. . . . The need and circumstance of the individual have developed the existing condition, and through it, from stage to stage, that soul will climb.

SERVED TIME FOR HIS FRIEND.

Why Sullivan and Reilly Changed Names on the Way to Prison.

A simple escape from prison is nothing remarkable, but there are very few men shrewd enough to get out from behind prison bars and be free for months without letting the authorities know anything about it.

That is what James Reilly did. He was sentenced to an imprisonment of two years in the Eastern penitentiary, and served only 15 months. Probably his escape would not have been discovered for many months if he had not been arrested in Pittsburg several days ago for robbing a jewelry store. Two men, who were with him escaped. Captain of Detectives Miller thinks they are the same men who were with him when he was arrested here, and who served out the 15 months' sentence with him. When he heard that Reilly had been arrested in Pittsburg he refused to believe it until he found, upon investigation, that the man at the penitentiary as Reilly was not Reilly, but James Sullivan.

There has been many tales of affection and loyalty among crooks, but none of them exceeds the story of James Sullivan's sacrifice for his friend. He was with Reilly and two other crooks known as Devlin and Hoyt when they were arrested here in July of 1898.

Sullivan, Hoyt and Devlin were sentenced to 15 months each in the Eastern penitentiary. Reilly, who was an old offender, got a sentence of two years.

Sullivan knew that there were detainers against his friend, charging him with serious crimes in other cities, so on the way to prison he suggested that they take each other's name, thus giving Reilly an opportunity to elude the authorities when his (Sullivan's) term expired.

The plan was adopted and, owing to the remarkable similarity of the two prisoners, was carried out successfully. Sullivan knew the risks he ran, but when he was arraigned before Magstrate Ladner recently with conspiracy to aid prisoner in escaping, he never murmured. His counsel waved a hearing and was held in $2000 bail for trial.—Philadelphia Times.

Learned Kansas Girls in the Corn Field.

Corn would still be standing in the fields of Marshall county, Kan., if the women had not turned out and helped to gather it. The crop was unusually large this year and help was not only scarce, but was not to be secured at any price. The women, seeing that men could not be secured, and that the crop was going to waste, turned out and husked the corn themselves. Among those who turned their attention to corn husking were the two accomplished and college-bred daughters of Charles Mulhern, a farmer living near Beattie, Kan. Mamie is 20 years old and quite pretty, a splendid Latin and Greek scholar; her sister Kate is 18, a high school girl, bright, vivacious, intelligent and good looking, but they harnessed their own teams, drove to the fields and gathered corn until their father's crop was safely housed. This was their first experience at corn husking.—Washington Evening Star.

Only Dead Footpads Wanted.

Chief of Police Broder of St. Joseph, Mo., posted a notice at headquarters offering a reward of $100 for every footpad killed by an officer.

"Mind you," the chief says, "this offer is not for live ones. They must be dead. I must have the coroner's certificate that the man was a footpad or a safe blower, and that he has been planted under six feet of cold sod before the reward will be paid. The only way to stop this flourishing industry is to kill off a few bad men. It's the footpad's hide that I will pay $100 for, not a live robber's; we have too many of them now."—Kansas City Journal.

PEACE PROPOSAL FALLS THROUGH

Taylor Refuses To Sign the Louisville Agreement.

EVERYTHING IS CHAOS

Troops Withdrawn and Legislators Ordered To Frankfort.

A Frankfort dispatch says: Nearly every Republican committeeman was in the city Saturday. Several Republican members of the legislature were among the number, including Senator Kirk and Johnson and Representative Lewis.

Shortly before 11 o'clock the doors of the capitol were opened and the state delegates went to the assembly room, the first time it has opened since the shooting of Governor Goebel.

At 11 o'clock Governor Taylor accompanied by Private Secretary Todd, Secretary of State Caleb Powers and Thatcher entered the assembly rooms. His arrival was the signal for a wild outburst of cheering, men standing on chairs and yelling and waving their hats in greeting. The doors were then locked and a guard placed at the door.

After a two hours' session Governor Taylor definitely decided that he would not sign the Louisville agreement, and decided to allow the matter to be settled in the courts and will abide by their decision.

Shortly after the meeting the following statement was given out:

"After mature deliberation and conference with my friends from every section of the state, I have concluded to allow this controversy to take its due course, vigorously contesting every inch of ground and upholding the rights of the people to the uttermost. If those rights be destroyed, the responsibility for that destruction must rest with those who sit in judgment.

"It is due to say that the eminent gentlemen, my friends, who secured the proposition resulting from the Lousville conference, acted in perfect good faith, from the highest motives of patriotism and did the very best they could. W. S. TAYLOR,

During the conference Governor Taylor stated to the members that there were two courses to be pursued. First, to sign the Louisville agreement; the second to quietly withdraw the troops, allow the legislature to reconvene in the capitol building in Frankfort; to call off the session now being held in London and to ignore the Louisville agreement entirely. Several speeches were made and it was soon apparent that the sentiment of the gathering was very strongly in favor of the second course, and this was adopted.

PROCLAMATION ISSUED.

The following proclamation was issued Saturday afternoon:

FRANKFORT, KY., Feb. 10, 1900.—The excitement recently prevailing in this city having to some extent subsided and there appearing now to be no necessity for the general assembly to remain in session in London, I do hereby by this proclamation reconvene the same in Frankfort, Ky., February 12, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon.

W. S. TAYLOR,
Governor of Kentucky

Orders were at once issued to Gen. Collier to prepare for the departure of the troops, and in a very short time a large number of them were ready to leave. Six companies left Saturday night; more departed Sunday and only a small detachment remained by Monday morning. These, it is said, are retained only as a peace guard.

Word was at once sent to the members of the Republican legislature, in session in London, that the next session would be in Frankfort, and a prompt reply was received to the effect that they would all leave in a body on Sunday, and be in Frankfort Monday.

The action of Governor Taylor now returns the gubernatorial fight to the exact position it occupied on the day following the Goebel assassination, with the additional complication that there was then but one legislature and one governor in fact, whereas there are now two claimants for the position, and two separate bodies, each claiming to be the lawmaking power of Kentucky.

CHANDLER OPPOSES BILL.

Senator Declares He Cannot Support Financial Measure.

The financial debate was continued in the senate Saturday by Mr. Chandler, who opposed the gold standard and strongly urged the double standard. In beginning his speech he said:

"The passage of the bill without adequate recognition of the desire and determination of the American people that silver shall be remonetized is a defiance of the Republican platform of 1896, and without such recognition in the bill I cannot give to it my vote. It would be unqualified gold monometallism, and to advocate it is an abandonment of Republican principles."

VESSEL IN DANGER.

Steamer Gate City Goes Aground Off East Moriches.

A New York dispatch says: The sea grows rougher and the Gate City is still aground off East Moriches, were she struck Friday. The outlook is considered bad now. Sixteen men and the crew were brought ashore Sunday, so as to make the work of taking off the remainder in case of immediate danger as easy as possible.

THE * CHRONICLE.

F. W. GIST, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Entered in the post-office at Columbiana Ala., as second class matter.

"Be it resolved by the Democratic State executive committee of Alabama that we hereby cordially invite all conservative white voters, irrespective of past political associations or differences who can unite with us in the effort for pure and economical government, and who will support the nominees and principles of the Democratic party, to participate in the primaries of the party throughout the State.

"Resolved, further, That all persons participating in the primaries, conventions or mass meetings of the party hereafter to be held thereby pledge themselves to support the nominees of such primaries, conventions or mass meetings, whether municipal, county, state or Federal."

SEEK YE THE WHOLE TRUTH.

To read the Johnston organs one gets the idea that to be a Democrat one must bow down and worship Mr. Bryan as the silver god of Democracy, that no man who does not believe in free silver is a Democrat, and that there is no other tenet in the party creed.

We agree with the Johnston organs in so far that silver is a Democratic doctrine, and we believe that it has always been so from the inception of the Constitution—that first great declaration of Democracy—down to the Chicago platform; but we do not agree with them that silver is all of Democracy, no more than we believe that immersion is all of the Baptist faith or that shouting is all of Methodism.

If the Johnston organs are the peculiar disciples of Democracy, let them preach the whole doctrine or let them stand aside. What else is Democratic that they are opposing? Let us put ourselves to the test and see who are orthodox and who the heretics.

From the time when Mr. Jefferson purchased Louisiana, when Andrew Jackson subdued Florida, when Polk reclaimed Texas, when California and Oregon and all the great West were brought into the Union—against the very same objections now being urged to the acquisition of Hawaii, Porto Rico, Cuba, and the Philippines—the Democratic party has stood for the expansion of territory and the extension of commerce. Are the Johnston organs Democrats when they oppose it?

Nearly every Democratic national platform has contained a denunciation of national banks and a demand that to the Government be left the sole power to issue money and emit bills of credit. Are the Johnston organs Democrats when they seek the selection of a national bank president to make the national laws?

The Democratic party has denounced trusts and the combination of wealth as detrimental to labor. Are the Johnston organs Democrats when they support an organizer of trusts who boasts of bringing to his State great aggregations of capital to crush out the smaller individual industries? Is it Democratic to put into existence great blocks of stock the face of which calls for $20,000,000 but whose real value, in the Governor's own words, is only $2,000,000?

The Democratic party has always stood for an equal distribution of the burdens of taxation. Are the Johnston organs Democrats when they sing the glories of an administration which has picked out a few corporations in this county for examples while others are paying on but one-third of the well-known value of their property?

But this is enough. We have named four great principles of Democracy which Johnston is violating and in which his organs are upholding him; while they have found fault with some of the friends of Morgan—not with the Senator himself—for being untrue to but one. Let these one-idead teachers of political economy cast the beam from their own eyes, and they will be more competent to help us remove the mote from those of our brethren who can not see silver, as we see it, as the other half of the dual money of our Constitution. Let Joe Johnston and his organs learn the Democratic creed in its whole purity before they seek to teach the truth to a man who proclaimed Democracy in the United States Senate when these infantile Democrats were in their swaddling clothes.

THE Court Journal says:

> Johnston's following is a compact and homogeneous mass of people of similar views and policies and working to a definite purpose.

We move to amend so as to read: "Johnston's following is a conglomerate and incongruous mass of appointees and office-seekers, of heterogeneous views and one policy—anything to get elected—working for a boss who knows nothing but obedience to his will."

BE CONSISTENT.

The Johnston organs are making a great row because Dick Clarke is a candidate for the legislature in Mobile County, and the only reason for their objection is that he bolted the national ticket in 1896. From a partisan standpoint their objection is a good one; but the bars are down, and all bolters are invited back into the party. That invitation was given at the instance of Mr. Johnston when he was a candidate for governor. If a bolter has the right to vote in a primary he has a right to be voted for if his friends desire to do it. This is a matter resting solely with the Democrats of Mobile County. If they have the right to invite Dick Clarke to vote in their primary they have an equal right to vote for him in the same primary. But these Johnston organs ought to be consistent. While they object to the nomination of Dick Clarke as a Democrat, they are willing to have L. H. Reynolds, a Populist, endorsed by Democrats as a Democratic candidate for the senate from this district. Mr. Reynolds is a bolter of longer standing than Mr. Clarke, and has gone further in his opposition to the Democratic party than the latter. He has not only refused to support our national ticket, but he has supported every opposition candidate for governor and congressman since our acquaintance with him. Yet the Johnston people are willing to take him as a Democrat, without any works meet for repentance, because he is for Johnston. If Clarke was for Johnston his return to the party would be heralded with the sound of trumpets and much tooting thereof. The inconsistency of some selfish politicians makes one tired.

IT is being hinted that certain Populists are kicking against fusion so hard that Chairman Pearson is afraid to order his primary.

THE back tax commissioner has no powers that the law does not give to the assessor or collector, and his work is only to do what they have left undone. So with other features of the business administration.

THE road law in this county is proving to be a good thing—for the superintendents who get a dollar a day, the hands who get a job and the contractors who put up sign boards. It ought to do somebody some good, since it costs the people over $7,000.

THE declaration for the gold standard is not the worst feature of the pending financial bill. It is the perpetuation of the bonded debt which threatens the evil to the masses. It is a good thing for the national banks, enabling them to issue money on the credit of the government, while the people pay the expenses.

THE Court Journal has never deigned to answer our question, Why does it object to leaving the nomination of representatives and their instruction for Senator to a primary in Jefferson, and why is it unwilling to let a majority of the white voters of Montgomery County say who shall represent them? Will the Journal answer this question, or not?

CURRENT * CRITICISMS

By Mrs. F. W. GIST.

The Alabama Woman's Press Association will meet in Montgomery on April 25 and 26. Every woman journalist or authoress in Alabama is invited to be present. It is hoped that something profitable will be done at this meeting, something that will benefit journalism in this State. The men's press association has been meeting for years and has never accomplished anything except a frolic. If we can't do better, let us quit at once.

⁂

The New Era, of Birmingham, and the Rome Georgian have consolidated, having an Alabama and a Georgia department, edited respectively by Mrs. Ball and Mrs. Mosely. From an editorial standpoint we believe Mrs. Ball will outstrip Mrs. Mosely, though the Rome Georgian was a popular and well-edited paper. We hope Mrs. Ball has made no mistake. She will have more readers, consequently more fame, but we doubt its financial wisdom. Notwithstanding our political differences, we wish Mrs. Ball all success.

We are under lasting obligations to Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. White and Mrs. German for their thoughtful kindness during our recent seige of sickness in the family.

Advice to
Consumptives

There are three great remedies that every person with weak lungs, or with consumption itself, should understand. These remedies will cure about every case in its first stages; and many of those more advanced. It is only the most advanced that are hopeless. Even these are wonderfully relieved and life itself greatly prolonged.
What are these remedies? Fresh air, proper food and
of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Be afraid of draughts but not of fresh air. Eat nutritious food and drink plenty of milk. Do not forget that Scott's Emulsion is the oldest, the most thoroughly tested and the highest endorsed of all remedies for weak throats, weak lungs and consumption in all its stages.

☞ Hon. Thos. Williams, of Elmore county, Alabama, ex-member of congress, statesman, orator, writer and one of the best informed men on the theoretical and practical application of commercial fertilizers. He is one of the largest cotton planters in the state, and produces his great crops upon poor sandy uplands by the skillful use of commercial fertilizers. He uses the ALABAMA FERTILIZER exclusively—after having tried nearly all other leading brands of complete fertilizers. His words, like rifle balls, are few, and go straight to the mark:

WETUMPKA, ALA., September 9, 1899.

DEAR SIRS:—Speaking from experimental tests, in results I am assured the ALABAMA FERTILIZER put up by you, is not excelled by any on our market, and I commend it to the public as a genuine fertilizer productive of good results.

The bags treated by the VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVER used by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., successfully resisted the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in the fertilizers, also preventing all loss from wasting.

Yours truly,
THOS. WILLIAMS.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT ANALYSIS.

Bulletin No. 12, issued by the Alabama Department of Agriculture, shows the actual commercial value of the ALABAMA FERTILIZERS to be 19.33 per cent more valuable than all the complete fertilizers or guanos offered for sale in the State of Alabama for the season covered by said bulletin.

Bulletin No. 13, just issued by the Department of Agriculture, shows the actual analysis, from samples sent to the Department by dealers and consumers throughout the State, that the ALABAMA FERTILIZER is actually $3.54 per ton or 24 per cent better than the guaranteed analysis by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., and this answers the question so often asked, "why the ALABAMA FERTILIZER produces so much better crops than other fertilizers of equal guaranteed analysis?" The ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be shipped in the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVED BAGS. There is no other preserved bag on the market of any value.

The Commissioner of Agriculture recommends and endorses it in the following words:

"I therefore unhesitatingly say that I believe the bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVING PROCESS will resist the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in fertilizers; that the meshes of the bags are so filled by the process as to prevent all wastage, and that if generally used by manufacturers, would be of inestimable value to carriers, dealers and consumers.
(Signed) "I. F. CULVER,
"Commissioner of Agriculture."

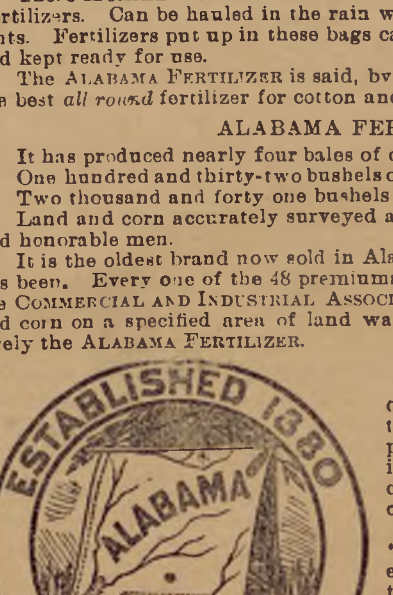
These MUMMIA PRESERVED BAGS are almost indestructible by the weather or Fertilizers. Can be hauled in the rain without material damage to bag or contents. Fertilizers put up in these bags can be hauled out to the farm at any time and kept ready for use.

The ALABAMA FERTILIZER is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all round fertilizer for cotton and corn.

ALABAMA FERTILIZER RECORD.

It has produced nearly four bales of cotton on one acre of poor sandy upland.
One hundred and thirty-two bushels of corn on one acre of poor sandy upland.
Two thousand and forty one bushels of corn on twenty acres of poor upland.
Land and corn accurately surveyed and measured by competent disinterested and honorable men.

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 48 premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA FERTILIZER.



This trade mark is registered. It is our property. It is not likely to be counterfeited, as that would subject the perpetrator to the danger of heavy fine and imprisonment (see U. S. laws respecting copyrights). It is on every genuine sack of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.
As required by state law the word "ALABAMA" in large letters is found on every bag of fertilizer offered for sale in this state. Some unscrupulous persons have employed this means to deceive you.
See that the above trade mark is on the bag, and take none offered you as the ALABAMA FERTILIZER without it.

COAL OUTPUT.

Production of Alabama for the Last Yecr.

The State mine inspector is receiving reports from the coal mines of the State, and the figures already in show a large increase over the year 1898.

From the official figures already in 6,613,526 tons of coal are accounted for. Eighty-six mines are accounted for, and 11,529 employees at the mines. During the year 1898 the production of all the mines in Alabama amounted to 6,466,741 tons. With incomplete returns in the figures for the year 1899 show an increase of 146,785 tons. This last figure will be increased three fold before the entire report is completed.

The following table shows the production by counties:

County.	Mines.	Employees.	Tons.
Jefferson	41	6,758	4,150,379
Bibb	4	1,168	904,887
Walker	18	2,134	904,178
Shelby	9	435	343,213
Tuscaloosa	6	709	209,749
St. Clair	2	143	52,252
Marion	1	95	17,395
Blount	1	32	12,699
Winston	2	25	9,395
Etowah	2	30	9,378
Total	86	11,529	6,613,526
1898	....	11,388	6,466,741
Increase	....	141	146,785

The returns already in show increases in the output in Bibb, Etowah, Marion, Shelby, Jefferson and Winston. It is believed that with the many mines now being opened and being put in operation that the output during the year 1900 will be between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000 tons. Many new mines are being opened up in Jefferson and Walker.

The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company is now working on an export order for coal amounting to 7,800 tons. The coal is for Mexico, and is being shipped via Pensacola by rail then by boat via Tampico and Vera Cruz. It will be used by the Mexican Central Railroad The coal is being shipped from Blocton.

Messrs. McMillan & Thetford have purchased the office building next door to the bank, which they in future occupy as an office. They will make some needed imyrovements, and will soon be ready to receive their clients in comfort. They are building up a large practice.

Several applicants for census enumerator for this county have been heard of. This precinct will have two enumerators, we are informed, and we also learn that Mr. Aldrich has recommended persons for appointment. The supervisor for this district is J. J. Sims, of Talladega County, who will have the naming of the enumerators.

Nine cent cotton is actually in sight at last. It was quoted in New York yesterday at 8⅞, and the market was steady. Some was sold in Birmingham at 8¾. September futures are, however, a cent lower, showing that it is unsafe to make a big crop for a continuation of good prices. Those who have held their cotton will get 9 cents for it before the month is out.

From a Texas paper we get the information that J. F. Norris, a Shelby County boy, won the first prize in a recent oratorical contest at Baylor University at Waco. Young Norris will be remembered as the son of James Norris, a former citizen of this place. He is a ministerial student at the institution named above, and is winning laurels as an orator. He is already doing pastoral duties in connection with his studies.

J. T. McClanahan, of Mansfield, La., is in the city. He is a native of this place and has many friends and acquaintances here who are glad to see him. He is the editor of the Mansfield Journal, and has a kindly feeling for the craft. Mr. McClanahan feels a lively interest in Alabama politics, and is watching the Senatorial race quite closely. Like most of those who view it from an unbiased stand point he thinks it would be a calamity to retire the great Senator.

Our neighboring town of Montevallo is talking of building a cotton factory. Montevallo is peculiarly adapted to an industry of this character, having an abundant supply of water and being in easy reach of coal. She receives a large amount of cotton each season that could profitably be made into thread or cloth before shipping. There is plenty of home capital there to build a factory, and we hope to see it invested and pushed by our enterprising neighbors to a successful issue.

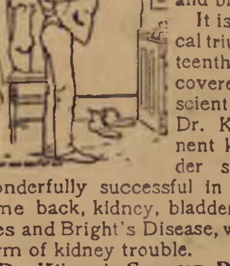
DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.



It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

They Should Know it.

Many women suffer untold agony and misery because the nature of their disease is not correctly understood. They have been led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for the many ills that beset womankind.

Neuralgia, nervousness, headache, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, rheumatism, a dragging pain or dull ache in the back, weakness or bearing-down sensation, profuse or scanty supply of urine with strong odor, frequent desire to pass it with scalding or burning sensation, sediment in it after standing in bottle or common glass for 24 hours are signs of kidney and bladder trouble.

The above symptoms are often attributed by the patient herself or by her physician to female weakness or womb trouble. Hence, so many fail to obtain relief, because they are treating, not the disease itself, but a reflection of the primary cause, which is kidney trouble.

In fact, women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same remedy.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is the great discovery of the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is easy to get at any drug store for 50 cents or $1.

To prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and book telling all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Kindly mention THE CHRONICLE, and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

The Imperial Gas Lamp

Covered by U. S. Patents.

Admittedly the BEST light on the market and the most economical.

The Imperial burns common stove gasoline and gives a 100 candle power light at a cost of one cent per day.

One Gallon will burn 60 hours.

The needle keeps the burner clean, so it will not clog, and the generating tube being in center of flame, insures a light that will not go out. There is no odor, no smoke and no flicker. The light can be raised or turned down just as with a gas jet or lamp. The IMPERIAL is the most perfect light on the market and everything pertaining to it is the best to be had. IT WILL PAY TO INVESTIGATE.

The reason kettles sing is a very simple one. As the water gets hot, little bubbles of steam are formed at the bottom of the kettle. These in their rush upwards strike the sides of the kettle, and set the metal it is made of in vibration, thus causing the humming sound we call singing. You will notice that a large copper kettle, the sides of which are thin, will emit a much louder and more musical note than a common iron kettle.

Removing a Bridge With Electricity.

A novel means of tearing down a wooden bridge at Clinton, Ind., was recently employed. The bridge crossed the Wabash river, and was constructed of wood, with stone piers and abutments, having a total length of 735 feet. In constructing a new bridge it was necessary to remove the old structure without injuring the stonework. It not being found possible to take down the bridge in the allotted time, heroic measures were determined on, and it was decided to use electricity to burn through the chords. To cause the collapse of the three spans, 27 timbers, each nine inches square, had to be cut through, and this was accomplished by looping over them pieces of iron resistance-wire, stretched by sash weights, through which a heavy current was passed. It took an hour and 40 minutes to wreck each of the three spans, and an examination of the timbers showed that the wire had burned down five inches on the sides before the timbers broke. The cut made was quite sharp, and the wood was charred only for about one inch in depth.

STATE NEWS SUMMARY.

Current Events From all Parts of Alabama Briefly Chronicled.

THE TREASURY OVERFLOWING WITH MONEY

Largest Balance in a Quarter of a Century—Increase is Over Half a Million—Railroad Assessments. Mine Inspector's Report.

The heavy increase in the tax rate by the last general assembly is having a telling effect on the condition of the state treasury. There is probably the largest balance in the treasury now in the history of the state, or at least for the last quarter century. At the close of business Thursday the balance in the treasury was $1,013,716.07. On the corresponding date last year the balance in the treasury was $500,172.92, showing a gain this year over last of $513,543.15. This big increase is largely due to the special tax levied by the last legislature for the soldiers and public schools. Of the increase $262,000 comes from this source. Also included in the estimate is $56,000 received from the sale of university lands, and $24,340 unexpected interest money. These items foot up a total of $342,340, and makes a showing for all of the increase save $171,203. This balance in the increase is made up by the unexpected balances of the several departments. There are $17,566 to the credit of the agricultural department, and $18,605 to the credit of the convict fund, among the special funds mentioned above.

Tax payers have been unusually prompt this year in settling with the state. The per cent of payments is much greater than at this date a year ago. Up to the close of business Thursday the receipts from October 1, 1899, were as follows:

State tax	$ 926,969.93
Special soldiers' tax	172,722.25
Special school tax	172,472.70
Poll tax	104,270.38
Licenses and other sources	414,013.36
Total	$1,790,448.62

The total receipts to the corresponding date last year from all sources were $1,345,761.21.

The total disbursements since October 1, 1899, have been $948,314.28, as against $920,831.58 to the corresponding date a year ago, showing an increase this year over last of $27,482.70.

Mine Inspector's Report.

Chief Mine Inspector Hooper has filed his January report with the governor. The inspector makes the very gratifying report that no serious accidents occurred in the mines during the month. In the text of the report he says:

"For the month of January I have no fatal accidents to report, and but three minor accidents occurred durthe month. The convict mines continue their unprecedented record of absence from fatal accidents.

Hibernians to Aid the Boers.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, Dominion of Alabama, will show their practical sympathy for the Boers in the war which the latter are now waging with the British. A per capita tax of 50 cents will be sent from the state to the national treasurer of the Hibernians at Washington for the purpose of adding to the fund that is now being gotten up to equip a hospital corps for sick and wounded Boers. There are several hundred members of the organization in this state, and between $300 and $500 will be raised for the fund.

Railroad Assessments.

The state board of railway assessment has concluded its work of assessment for the next year. The board is composed of the governor, the secretary of state, the auditor and the treasurer, with the attorney general as legal adviser. The work of the board shows an increase in the assessments of the railroad property of the state of about three-quarters of a million dollars.

Appropriation Recommended.

The secretary of the interior has recommended an appropriation of $25,000 for the Alabama Agricultural and Mechanical college.

Two Men Killed By an Explosion.

At the iron mines of Wilson & Worthington, at Rock Run, Foreman G. W. Cross and a negro named Gus Leach were killed by a premature explosion. Mr. Cross and the negro were preparing to make a blast when the explosion occurred. Both of them were horribly mangled and instantly killed.

Tax Collector Lang Dead.

Tax Collector F. B. Lang died at his home near Hurtsboro. He, his wife and daughter were all ill with pneumonia at the same time, and Mrs. Lang is not expected to live. Miss Lang is improving and will doubtless recover. Mr. Lang was one of Russell's most prominent and useful men. He had served one term as tax collector and was nominated for re-election last Saturday by a large majority.

Alabama's Coal Output for 1899.

State Mine Inspector J. B. Hooper has almost completed the work of compiling figures on last year's coal production in Alabama. From the official figures already at hand, 6,613,526 tons of coal are accounted for. This coal came from eighty-six mines, which employ 11,529 men. There are about fifteen more mines yet to be heard from and their returns will add fully 600,000 more tons to the above figures. The out of 1898 was 6,466,741 tons. It is thus shown that last year's production as accounted for up to date has exceeded that of 1898 by 146,785 tons. This increase will go to three-quarters of a million tons, so it is expected when complete returns come in. Jefferson county shows the greatest production, turning out almost two-thirds of the state's output. So far as accounted for its production last year amounted to 4,150,379 tons, against 4,032,720 during the year 1898, showing, with incomplete figures in, an increase of 117,659 tons. There are yet several Jefferson county mines to be heard from.

Addition to Dallas Cotton Mills.

The contract for the erection of the addition to the Dallas mills in Huntsville, has been let to George B. Hinman, of Atlanta. The addition will be as large as the present building, and will accommodate 25,000 spindles, as well as 1,250 Draper looms of the latest pattern. It is understood that the building will be completed by October 1. The addition will make the Dallas one of the largest mills in the south. The new machinery will be devoted almost exclusively to the manufacture of cloth for the Oriental trade, a number of orders already having been placed with brokers for China and Japan.

Republican Conventions.

The republican convention of Tuskaloosa county met Saturday. The six delegates were instructed for McKinley as president and William Vaughan, of Birmingham, as state chairman. Franklin county gave Bingham three delegates and Vaughan one. Vaughan also carried Crenshaw, Geneva and Covington counties.

Another Cotton Mill for Anniston.

The splendid success of the three large cotton mills which Anniston already has in operation has caused the inauguration of a movement to build a fourth mill, to cost $100,000, by home capital. L. H. Kaplan already has a $1,000 check up for his part, and many others have expressed their willingness to take stock.

Negro Burned to Death.

Amos McElderry, a negro who is said to be 111 years old, was burned to death at McElderry's station, Talladega county. He lived alone in a three-room cottage, and being very feeble his simple wants has been provided for for several years by members of the McElderry family, to which he formerly belonged.

New Enterprise in New Decatutr.

A Greater New York company has purchased the site and buildings of the old United States Rolling Mill Stock company at New Decatur and will erect thereon a large bridge manufactory. An ordinance has been passed granting the company exemption from taxation for five years.

Cut to Death.

At Swanson coal mines, Blount county, Adam Jefferson and John Hogan, miners, became involved in a difficulty in which Hogan was cut to death by Jefferson. Jefferson surrendered and claimed that the deed was done in self defense.

Negro Preacher Killed.

While cutting timber in a swamp near Cuba, Joe Govin, a negro preacher, was struck on the head by a falling limb. His skull was crushed, death resulting in about two hours.

BRIEFLY TOLD.

The Marion county grand jury returned twenty-five true bills.

A switch engine ran over Joe Rodgers, a negro, at Blocton, and killed him instantly.

Will Golson, the slayer of Chief Deputy Sheriff Warnock, was executed in Birmingham Friday.

John Gilmore, a young man about twenty years of age, died at his home at Bera, in the western part of Calhoun county. His death is attributed to excessive cigarette smoking.

Athens has now had a trial of a month of her new law regarding the traffic in whisky, and the report of the town dispensary shows January sales over $1,000. It is estimated that the city will net in the neighborhood of $6,000 this year from her one saloon.

At the regular monthly meeting of Tuscumbia's City Council an ordinance was passed providing a tax of $1 on every male and $2 on every female dog within the city limits.

The Chattahoochee river is higher than it has been before in twenty-five years. The river showed a rise of 26 feet Sunday, and the gauge showed it was still rising at the rate of 18 inches per hour.

AMERICAN GIRL IN LONDON.

Miss Secor, as Mrs. Dewar, Will Be Lady Mayoress of the Big City.

An American girl will be lady mayoress of London. The details of the story afford quite the most interesting subject for chatter among all the doings of American society folk at home or abroad. A convincing instance of the foresight and shrewdness of the American girl is shown in her recent disposition, now that she has the habit of marrying foreigners quite firmly established, to look for something besides titles. In engaging herself to Thomas Dewar of London, Miss Rosamond Secor of New York has done no more than follow the example of Miss Mary Leiter, who once married clever George Curzon, with no title in sight. At present Miss Leiter is Lady Curzon, and is vicerine of India. Not having sought a title, she has secured it, and much more. Miss Rosamond Secor, who is doubtless also far-seeing, is to marry, according to a report now confirmed by her friends in this city, Mr. Thomas Dewar, merchant and politician. He is 50 years old and one of the richest merchants in London. He has been a member of the London county council, and in 1897 and 1898 was sheriff of London. This places Mr. Dewar in line to become lord mayor, and as there is little danger in London of departing from the precedent, this practically assures the position of lady mayoress of the greatest city in the world for the charming New York girl who is now Miss Secor. Later there may come a title. In any case there will be position, pomp and influence, for it is by no means a commonplace thing to be mayor of London, and the lady mayoress is regarded as the city's queen. Miss Secor is a beauty and favorite at home. Her father was the late William H. Secor, a New York lawyer, and the family residence is on West Eighty-second street, near Riverside drive. Miss Secor is but 20 years old, and represents a thoroughly American type of beauty. Artists delight in painting her dark eyes and hair, with her unusually fair complexion, and the pose of her head is singularly attractive. Early last summer Miss Secor went to England with a party of friends. As she arrived in the height of the London season she was immediately received in society, where she was made much of because of her personal charm. She met Mr. Dewar shortly after her arrival, and the engagement just announced is the result of the romance then immediately developed.—New York Herald.

After an experimental study of more than five years at the psychological laboratory of the Saltpetriere, M. Vaschide has concluded that the brain is always active, and there is no such thing as dreamless sleep. He has watched the sleep of 36 subjects ranging in age from 12 months to 80 years, and his own observations have been checked by those of 46 other persons. He finds that the dreams of deep sleep differ from the hallucinations that come at the moment of falling asleep and that of waking. The superficial sleep reflects more the sensations of every day, while the dreams of deep sleep are more continuous, more logical, farther from reality, and have more to do with one's earlier existence.

I Had a Bad Cough

"I had a bad cough for six weeks and could not find any relief whatever. I read what a wonderful remedy Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was for coughs and I bought a bottle. Before I had taken a quarter of it my cough had entirely left me."—L. Hawn, Newington, Ont., May 3, 1899.

Quickly Cures Colds

Neglected colds always lead to something serious. They run into chronic bronchitis which pulls down your general health and deprives you of sleep; or they end in genuine consumption with all its uncertain results.

Don't wait, but take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral just as soon as you begin to cough. A few doses will cure you then. But it cures old colds, too, only it takes a little more time. We refer to such diseases as bronchitis, asthma, whooping-cough, consumption, and hard winter coughs.

If you've just taken cold a 25 cent bottle is all you'll need. For harder cases a 50 cent bottle is better. For chronic troubles, and to keep on hand, the $1.00 bottle is most economical.

FALLING HAIR

Save Your Hair with Shampoos of Cuticura SOAP

And light dressings of CUTICURA, purest of emollient skin cures. This treatment at once stops falling hair, removes crusts, scales, and dandruff, soothes irritated, itching surfaces, stimulates the hair follicles, supplies the roots with energy and nourishment, and makes the hair grow upon a sweet, wholesome, healthy scalp when all else fails.

Millions of Women

Use CUTICURA SOAP exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and healing, red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients, and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines, in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

All that has been said of CUTICURA SOAP may be said with even greater emphasis of CUTICURA Ointment, the most delicate, and yet most effective of emollients, and greatest of skin cures. Its use in connection with CUTICURA SOAP (as per directions around each package), in the "ONE NIGHT CURE FOR SORE HANDS," in the "INSTANT RELIEF TREATMENT FOR DISFIGURING ITCHINGS AND IRRITATIONS," and in many uses too numerous to mention, is sufficient to prove its superiority over all other preparations for the skin.

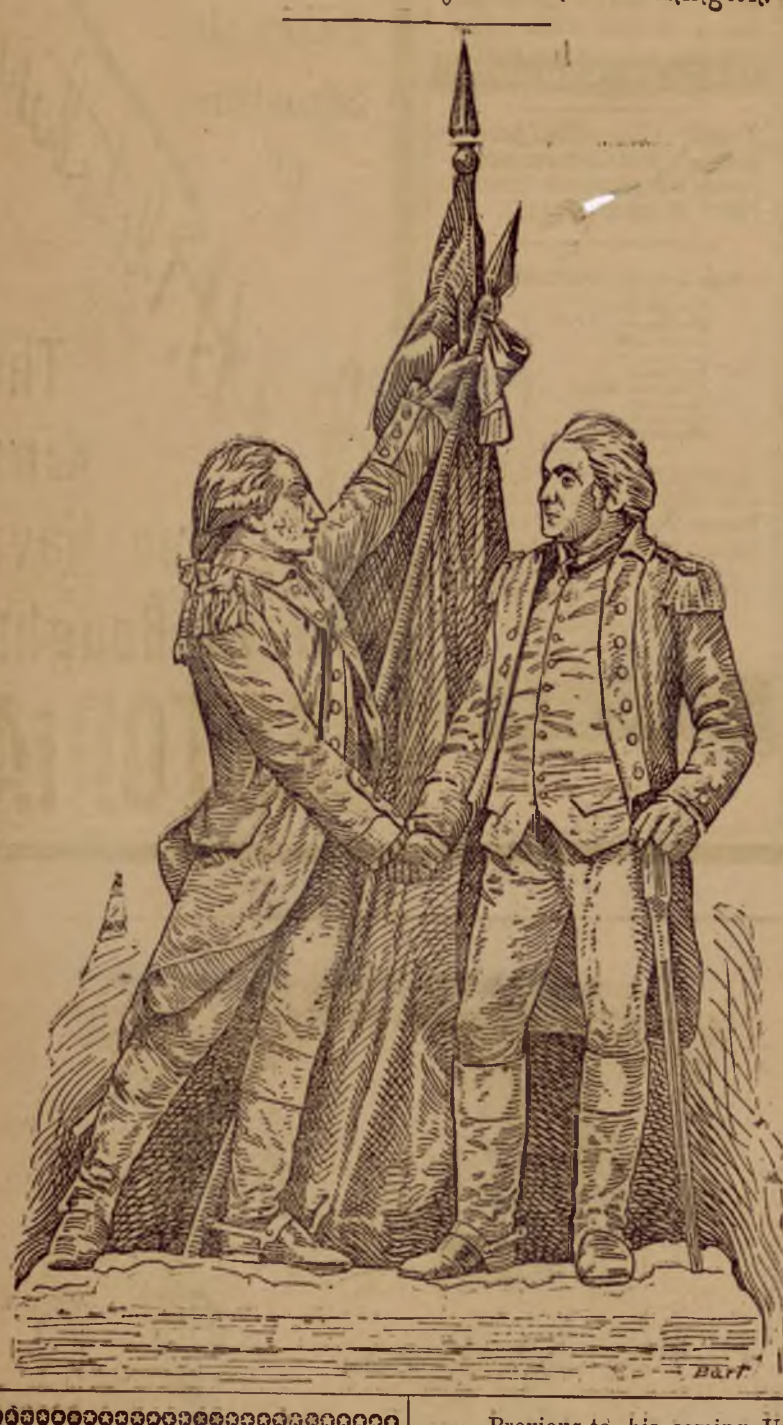
THE CHRONICLE.

Democratic at all Times and Under all Circumstances--Consequently Opposed to Monopolies.

VOL. XV. COLUMBIANA, SHELBY COUNTY, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1900. NO. 10.

Bartholdi's Statue of Lafayette and Washington.



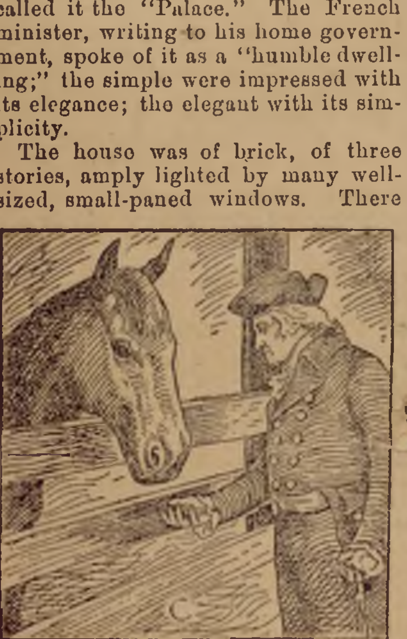
Washington as President.

A Glimpse at the Life During His Two Terms.

MUCH to everybody's astonishment, at his inaugural Washington announced that, as in the Revolution, he would allow only his expenses to be paid, would receive no salary. Yielding to the plea of relieving less wealthy successors of the embarrassment of this example, he consented, afterward, to receive a yearly salary of $25,000, which he used at once in expenses incident to the office and in entertaining.

The house selected was that on the corner of Cherry and Franklin streets, near Franklin Square, New York City, referred to varyingly as No. 10 and as No. 3 Cherry street, and known as the Franklin House. It was the property of Mrs. Samuel Osgood, wife of one of the two members of Congress deputed to select a Presidential residence. It came into her possession through her first husband, Walter Franklin, the builder, a deceased merchant prince of New York. One of the largest, finest houses in the city, though not in the most fashionable quarter, it had been rented formerly as residence for the presidents of Congress. Small idea of it can be had from anything but a picture or an inventory; descriptions of it differ as widely as the describers. Quakers called it the "Palace." The French minister, writing to his home government, spoke of it as a "humble dwelling;" the simple were impressed with its elegance; the elegant with its simplicity.

The house was of brick, of three stories, amply lighted by many well-sized, small-paned windows. There was a heavy brass knocker on the single-paneled door on Cherry street, the main entrance, reached by short flights of steps, one at each side of a tiny porch. A vestibule projecting from the house formed the entrance on Franklin street. It was, for a private citizen, a large house, though simple, substantial. It was well fitted up. For repairs and refurnishing, Congress paid Mr. Osgood $8000.



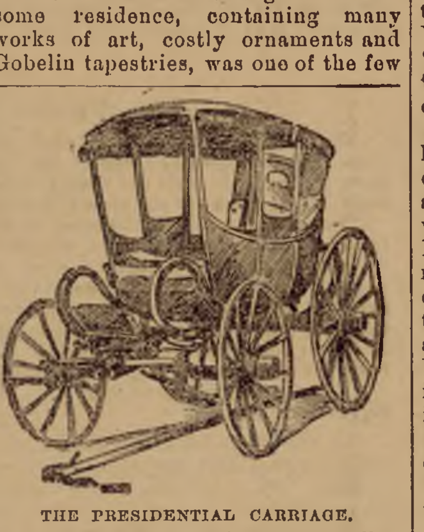
A DAILY DUTY WHILE PRESIDENT WAS TO FEED HIS OLD WAR HORSE, NELSON, A LUMP OF SUGAR.

A Quakeress, Mrs. Sarah Robinson, niece of Walter Franklin, the builder of the house, wrote to a friend or relative:

"April 30th of the fourth month, 1789.

".... Great rejoicing in New York on the arrival of George Washington .... Previous to his coming, Uncle Walter's house, in Cherry street, was taken for him, and every room furnished in the most elegant manner. Aunt Osgood and Lady Duer had the whole management of it. I went the morning before the General's arrival to look at it. The best of furniture in every room, and the greatest quantity of plate and china I ever saw; the whole of the first and second stories is papered, and the floors covered with the richest kind of Turkey and Wilton carpets. The house did honor to my aunts and Lady Kitty; they spared no pains nor expense on it. Thou must know that Uncle Osgood and Duer were appointed to procure a house and furnish it. Accordingly they pitched on their wives as being likely to do it better. I have not yet done, my dear. Is thee not almost tired? .... There is scarcely anything talked about now but General Washington and the Palace."

In addition to the complete furniture, including china and plate selected by "my aunts and Lady Kitty," the President brought on by sea from Mount Vernon a quantity of pictures, vases, ornaments, Sevres china and silver. Chancellor Livingston's handsome residence, containing many works of art, costly ornaments and Gobelin tapestries, was one of the few more elegantly fitted out than that of the President.



THE PRESIDENTIAL CARRIAGE.
(It has recently been added to the collection of relics at Mount Vernon.)

The house was really too small for public purposes, and for Washington's big "family," in which term he included accompanying ex-aides and private secretaries—five in all—as well as his foster-children, Nelly and George Washington Parke Custis.

Mrs. Washington arrived a month [illegible]r than the President. Systematic [illegible]ning did not begin until her coming. There were levees, dinners, and draw[illegible] rooms, with pretty ceremony, oile[illegible] with wealth and sustained with d[illegible]ity.

The President[illegible] time was overrun with hand-shakers, politicians, friends and foreigners. He was compelled to institute certain hours for receptions, or levees, and to provide—which provoked comment as "aristocratical"—that seeing him should be prearranged. The levees were appointed at first for two days weekly—Tuesday and Friday—from two to three; later for one day only, Tuesday, from three to four. None were expected whose standing was not of a certain importance, and no ladies.

"Gentlemen, I feel the weight of years; I take a pair of sixes on my shoulders to day," was the half-jocular greeting which the clergy in Philadelphia, then the capital of the nation, received from George Washington when they paid their respects to him on his last birthday as President of the United States. It was on the twenty-second of February, 1797, when he entered his sixty-sixth year, and when only ten days remained to him of his Presidential term. It had been the custom for several years to bestow upon his birthday some of the forms of ceremonial observance that had commemorated the natal days of the Royal Georges. There was ringing of bells; salutes were fired; the members of Congress waited upon him; the militia paraded, and in the evening there was a public ball. At the last it was noted that the President had relaxed much of his formality; that he was not only cheerful, but that he had attempted in his somewhat clumsy way to be jocose.

In September, 1796, declining a re-election, Washington published to the people of the United States his Farewell Address—an epitome of his characteristic and prescient views. There is not in the writings of Hamilton or of Madison or of Jefferson a sentence breathing just the beneficent, prayerful spirit of the Farewell Address of Washington.

On the 3d of March, 1797, the day before retiring from office, he gave a dinner to the President-elect and Mrs. Adams, establishing the custom that has since prevailed, that the outgoing shall entertain the incoming President, a courteous usage that has more than once seated bosom enemies together at a dreary feast. At Washington's hospitable table were also the foreign ministers and their wives, and Robert Morris, Bishop White and others. President Washington chaffed President-elect Adams on "entering servitude," and in an especially good humor raised his glass and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, this is the last time I shall drink your health as a public man; I do it with all sincerity, wishing you all possible happiness."

The effect was not enlivening. Social regret at the departure of the Washingtons was sincere. Mrs. Liston, wife of the British minister, shed tears.

In a few days the Washingtons retired to Mount Vernon.

Washington's Landed Estate.

At the time of his death he was supposed to be the largest landholder in the country, being possessed of 51,395 acres, exclusive of the Mount Vernon estate, his town properties, and the real estate of his wife. The value of his property at his death, again excluding the Mount Vernon estate and the property of his wife, was estimated at $530,000. The estate at Mount Vernon included 8000 acres. In Ford's "Washington" an account is given of the stock of the Mount Vernon property.

It appears that in 1793 Washington had fifty-four drought horses on the estate, 317 head of cattle, 634 sheep, and "many" hogs. The live stock was valued at his death at $35,000. In addition to the draught horses already mentioned, he had in 1799 "two covering jacks and three young ones, ten she asses, forty two working mules and fifty-one younger ones." Mount Vernon was a community in itself, including some 300 persons. Washington had his own blacksmith shop, his own brickmaker and masons, his carpenters, shoemaker and weavers. We can readily understand how it was that while he was President he was continually thinking of Mount Vernon.

An Old Relic.

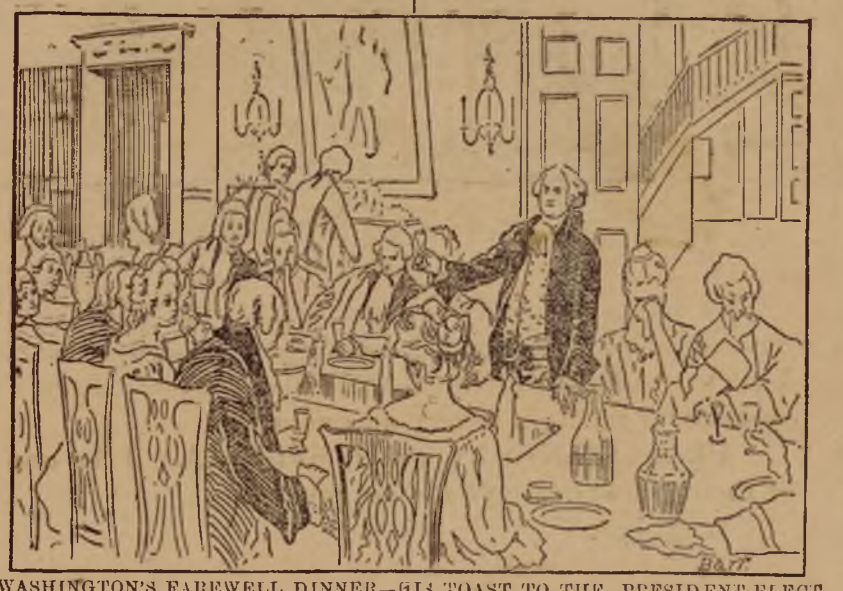
A Pennsylvania druggist rummaging about among accumulated rubbish in his garret, found an old iron oven that once belonged to Martha Washington. With it were letters proving authenticity, and an unbroken chain of ownership up to the finder's mother. He places much value on the relic.

Could Have Shot Washington.

"It was once in my power to have shot General Washington," said a British soldier to an American as they were discussing the events of the great struggle after the concluding of peace.

"Why did you not shoot him then?" asked the American. "You ought to have done so for the benefit of your countrymen."

"The death of Washington would not have been for their benefit," replied the Englishman. "We depended upon him to use our prisoners kindly, and we'd sooner have shot an officer of our own!"



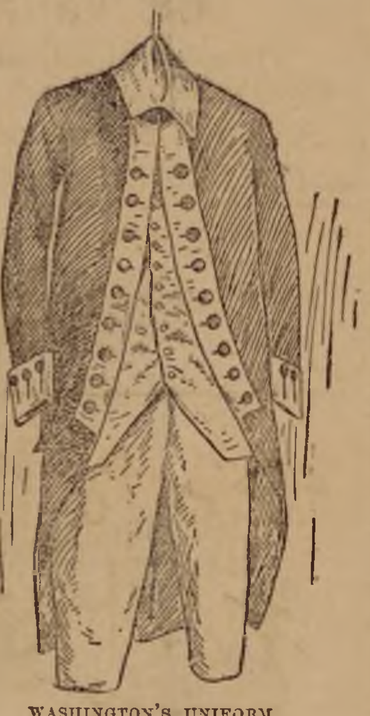
WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL DINNER—HIS TOAST TO THE PRESIDENT-ELECT.

PERSONAL RELICS OF WASHINGTON.

The Uniform He Wore at the Close of the Revolution Preserved.

JUST now, when the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Sons of the Revolution and the Sons of the American Revolution are celebrating Washington's Birthday, and the holiday is being fitly observed all over the United States, the personal relics of General Washington and the relics of colonial days that are on exhibition in the National Museum in the National Capital form a most interesting collection.

In the collection is a complete camp equipage, which comprises in part several canvas tents in as good condition as they were when used as a shelter by the commander-in-chief of the Continental forces.



WASHINGTON'S UNIFORM.

In General Washington's famous camp chest many of the articles are left just as they were when he got through with them for the last time. There is pepper in the pepper boxes and salt in the salt box.

Washington's uniform worn at the time he resigned his commission as commander-in-chief at Annapolis consisted of a coat of dark blue cloth, with buff facings, a buff cloth vest, with small buttons of plain gilt metal, and breeches of buff cloth. His dress suit comprised a buff woolen vest, spangled and embroidered along the edges of the collar and the front with cloth-covered buttons, and a pair of woolen "smalls," with cloth-covered buttons. The buff breeches for overwear were of silk, adorned with large buttons.

One of Washington's Love Affairs.

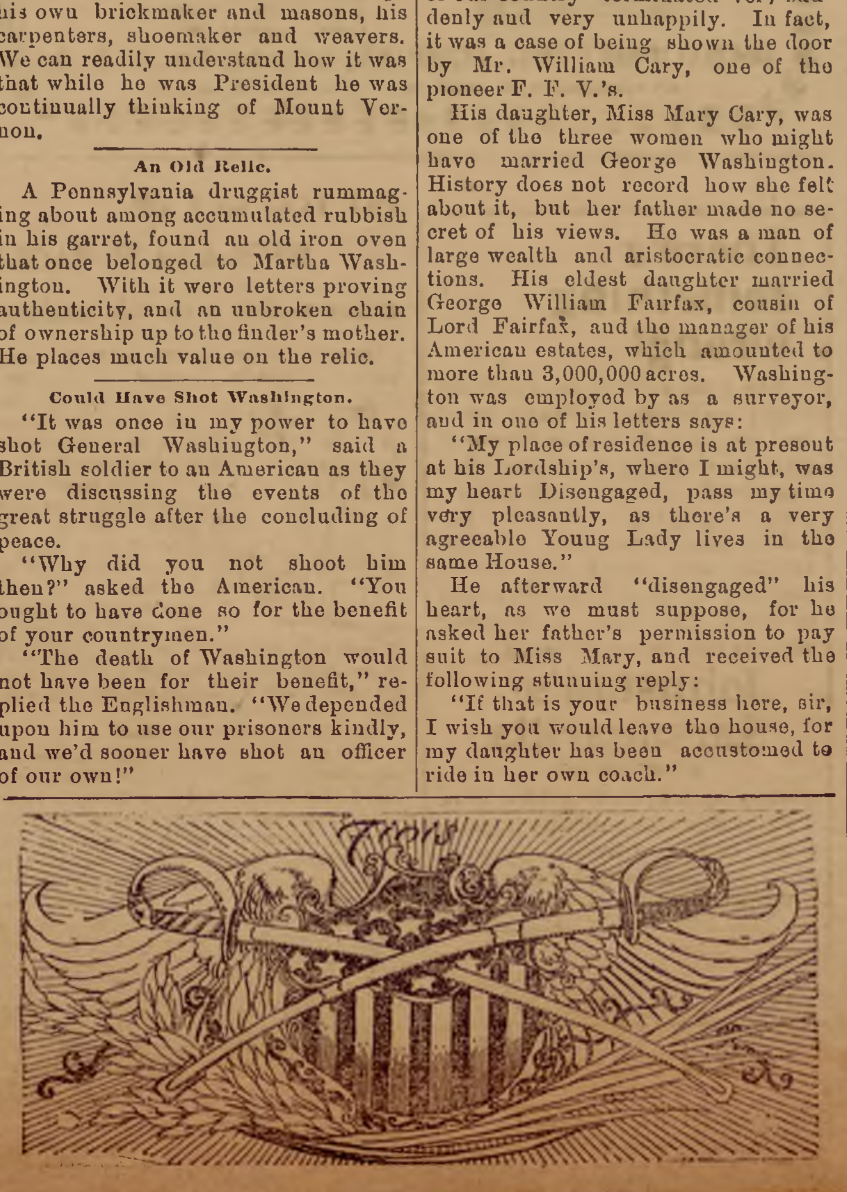
One of the love affairs of "the father of our country" terminated very suddenly and very unhappily. In fact, it was a case of being shown the door by Mr. William Cary, one of the pioneer F. F. V.'s.

His daughter, Miss Mary Cary, was one of the three women who might have married George Washington. History does not record how she felt about it, but her father made no secret of his views. He was a man of large wealth and aristocratic connections. His eldest daughter married George William Fairfax, cousin of Lord Fairfax, and the manager of his American estates, which amounted to more than 3,000,000 acres. Washington was employed by as a surveyor, and in one of his letters says:

"My place of residence is at presout at his Lordship's, where I might, was my heart Disengaged, pass my time very pleasantly, as there's a very agreeable Young Lady lives in the same House."

He afterward "disengaged" his heart, as we must suppose, for he asked her father's permission to pay suit to Miss Mary, and received the following stunning reply:

"If that is your business here, sir, I wish you would leave the house, for my daughter has been accustomed to ride in her own coach."



CONSTITUTION DON'T APPLY

In Question of Government For Our Colonies

IS THE VIEW OF M'KINLEY

President Is Credited With Statement That Plenary Powers Will Extended Over Islands.

A statement made by President McKinley to Henry Loomis Nelson as to the American policy toward the newly acquired islands has been published in the New York papers.

The article is vouched for as an authoritative interpretation of the president's views.

According to Mr. Nelson "it is Mr. McKinley's belief, and it will be his purpose to carry the belief into operation, that the constitution does not apply to any of our new islands; that those people are not fit for self-government beyond that proposed for Hawaii; that our new possessions must not be permitted to injure any of our protected interests and that free trade with Porto Rico is right because our protected interests will not be injured thereby.

"The president believes—and this is the most important statement that can possibly be made touching his present beliefs—that congress has plenary power over Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines.

"He holds that congress may pass one tariff law for Porto Rico, another for Hawaii, another for the Philippines and that all may be different from that of the United States.

"It does not appear likely to his mind that any question can ever arise as to the civil rights of the people of these places.

"Mr. McKinley's attitude, then, toward the natives is benevolent. He desires to elevate them, to educate them, and he hopes that, in the end, they will become worthy of being entrusted with local self government. He does not think any of these natives are worthy now, except the few in Hawaii, upon whom it is intended to bestow the suffrage—a few more than possessed the suffrage under the Dole government.

"Mr. McKinley holds that the constitution only applies to a territory when it sets up thereby a treaty or by legislation. Upon this point there are authorities in his favor, but he goes beyond the authorities and holds that congress is not bound by the limitation when it enters upon the task of legislatingit, i. e.:

"It may refuse to the natives and to the American citizens who may go to our colonies, the right of jury trial, the right of free speech, the right to bear arms, the right of peaceable assemblage and of petition, freedom from unwarrantable arrest, freedom from search, and those rights which the constitution guards so jealously. But the main purpose of the president is to deal with the islands as markets for America and as the subject of commercial exploitation generally.

"The president is a thorough believer in the moral and intellectual value of commerce, and he proceeds on the theory that when a nation is doing well as a buyer and seller, it is presumptively well governed and its people are morally sound. He looks forward to benefiting the natives by expanding the blessings of Protestant Christianity and civilization by means of commerce."

It is important to digress a moment, says Mr. Nelson, for the purpose of saying that the president is largely under the influence of certain clergymen, one of whom considers he is the chosen champion of Protestantism in its imaginary war with Romanism, and this accounts in a large measure for his conviction that in spreading Christianity and civilization among the heathen he is gaining and keeping the approval of good Americans. Mr. McKinley is a loyal Methodist and is naturally stirred and moved by the enthusiasm and spirit of that important denomination.

It does not follow, on the president's theory, that if free trade is established between this country and Porto Rico there should not be a protective tariff against the products of the Philippines and Cuba; for Cuba is talked about naturally, in administration circles and in congress as if its annexation to this country was a matter of course.

One thing is settled definitely in respect to the Philippines. The open door is not to be applied to them. The Republican party will not consent to give the Asiatic world an opportunity to land its goods in the Philippines free of duty, to enjoy whatever modified tariff there may be established between the Philippines and this country.

KELLY-KENNY IN PURSUIT.

Cronje and His Army Retreating to The Fastness of the Hills.

Dispatches of Friday from Jacobsdal, Orange Free State, were to the effect that General Kelly-Kenny was still pursuing the Boers. He has now captured more than one hundred wagons. The Highland brigade re-enforced him after a forced march.

General French has left Kimberley to join in the pursuit of the Boer army.

THE SENATORIAL CAMPAIGN.

The Result to Date of the Counties That Have Acted.

All the early counties have now acted, Walker and Dale being the last to have primaries before April 14. Twelve counties have so far voted on the Federal senatorship, and these will send sixteen representatives to the next general assembly of Alabama. Of these twelve counties Senator Morgan carried six, Governor Johnston three, and Gen. Oates two. The face of the returns in Russell county gave Governor Johnston a majority of 61, but a contest was filed, and the two county's representatives are for that reason not includin the table of either candidate. Morgan and Macon counties have also held primaries and nominated candidates for the legislature, but they are to be instructed for senator at another primary on the 14th of April, so they are not included in the table. So far as instructed the nominees for representatives are as follows: For Senator Morgan—Limestone 1, Colbert 1, Clarke 2, Marengo 2, Crenshaw 1, Walker 1, total 8. For Governor Johnston—Marshall 1, Jackson 2, Winston 1, total 4. For General Oates—Coffee 1, Dale 1, total 2. To be instructed—Morgan 2, Macon 1, total 3. Contested—Russell 2.

The Russell contest comes up before the executive committee of the county Tuesday.

Miss Wheeler to be Married.

The announcement of the engagement of Lieutenant W. W. Fiscus, Nineteenth United States Infantry, now stationed in the Philippines, to Miss Aunie Wheeler, the youngest daughter of Gen. Joe Wheeler, has just been received by the lieutenant's sister, Dr. Blanche F. Graves, of Philadelphia. Lieutenant Fiscus' engagement with Miss Wheeler dates from the time he was a cadet at West Point, where General Wheeler's two sons were his classmates.

Cherokee Primaries.

The democratic and populite parties have each ordered primaries for officers of Cherokee county, the democrats for April 14 and the populist about two weeks later. The indications are that there will be three tickets in the field—two party tickets and one independent.

The report of County Treasurer Whorton, just published, shows $4,336.29 in the county treasury.

Senatorial Campaign Opens in Jefferson.

The senatorial campaign opened in Jefferson county Monday night with a large meeting at Lewisburg, the principal speakers being Hugh Morrow in the interest of Senator Morgan, and Felix Blackburn and C. P. Bedlow in the interest of Governor Johnston.

Col. Wyley Urged for Appointment.

The appointment of Lieutenant-Colonel A. H. Wyley, of Alabama, as a member of the Philippine commission is being urged in Washington. Wyley's experience in Santiago, where he codified the laws of that province, is regarded as making him a desirable candidate.

Child Burned to Death.

The 16-months-old child of Mrs. W. H. Fruiticher, of Birmingham, was burned to death a few days ago. The little one had in some manner gotten too near the grate and caught on fire.

Alabama Man Consul.

The president has sent the following nominations to the senate:

John A. Mulky, of Alabama, to be consul at Tuxpan, Mexico.

Navy Commander William C. Gibsono, to be captain; Lieutenant Commander R. G. Davenport, to be commander; Medical Inspector J. C. Wise, to be medical director; Surgeon F. Z. Derr, to be medical inspector.

To be second lieutenant, signal corps: William C. Harles, of Forida; Lee Hart Ghooker, of Nevada, and Hugh L. Matthew, of Tennessee.

All on Board Were Lost.

It is reported that the schooner Hardcastle capsized last Friday at Roanoke, Va., marshes, and all on board, with the exception of the captain, were lost. The Hardcastle was a small schooner and did not carry a crew of more than seven men.

Whittaker Taken to Frankfort.

Harlan Whittaker and James Sutton, suspected of connection with the assassination of Governor Goebel, were taken from Louisville to Frankfort Monday. They were handcuffed and shackeled together.

Rev. A. Sisk, a well-known Missionary Baptist, formerly of Jackson county, died near Maxwell, Franklin county.

ROBERTS' ARMY ENTERS JACOBSDAL

Red Coats Take Full Possession of Captured Boer Town.

THEY ARE WELL RECEIVED

Fears of the Inhabitants Were Quickly Allayed.

Advices from Jacobsdal, Orange Free State, state that Roberts' troops entered the captured town Sunday. The utmost order prevails there. Military police patrol the streets, but not a stick of furniture has been taken. A sentry has been placed before each store, and the soldiers are allowed to enter and purchase what they require.

Everything is so peaceful that the inhabitants express the utmost surprise, as it had been diligently reported that the British occupation meant instant looting.

Judging from the conversations of the inhabitants, the Free State is weary of the war. It is openly said that President Steyn betrayed the people. When the latter became satisfied there was no truth in the stories of the looting proclivities of the British, the townspeople welcomed the troops as friends. Since the battle of the Modder river, the town has not been garrisoned, but has been merely used as a hospitable depot.

When the Boers fired on the British Wednesday, the townspeople protested. Although the British shelling considerably frightened the women, the shells were only directed at a ridge beyond the town, which was intrenched.

The German hospital remains in beautiful order. It is clean and sanitary, and the wounded on both sides are equally well attended.

A correspondent talked with a number of the Boer wounded, and they acknowledged that the British movements had nonpulsed the burgher commanders. Even now, it is added, they are under the impression that the sole object was the capture of Jacobsdal. When informed of the relief of Kimberley, they were at first incredulous and then astounded. The landrost remains in the town.

Other advices from Jacobsdal stated that General Cronje, with 10,000 men, was in full retreat toward Bloemfontein with General Kelley-Kenny fighting the rear guard and harassing the retreat.

The Boers captured a large convoy as a result of Thursday's fighting at Riet river. The British casualties were comparatively slight in view of the tremendous bombardment. Less than thirty men were wounded and but one killed.

General French's division was enthusiastically welcomed at Kimberley. The officers dined at the club in the evening. The news of the entry into Kimberley has greatly cheered the troops, who are working splendidly.

ROBERTS ISSUES ADDRESS

Urges Free State Burghers to Cease Fighting England.

A dispatch from Cape Town says: Lord Roberts has issued a proclamation to the burghers of the Orange Free State, saying that he feels it his duty to make known to all the burghers the cause of the coming of the British as well as to do all in his power to terminate the war, and that he issues the proclamation in order that if the burghers should continue fighting they may not do so ignorantly, but with a full knowledge of their responsibility before God for the lives lost in the campaign.

LETTERS MADE PUBLIC.

Position of L. & N. In Kentucky Fight Is Explained.

Milton H. Smith, president of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, has given out for the benefit of the public the correspondence which passed between the officers of his road and Henry Watterson, of The Louisville Courier-Journal, bearing on the Kentucky election for governor.

The correspondence is highly interesting, as it furnishes a missing link in the tragedy of which Governor William Goebel was the victim.

DECISION FINALLY REACHED.

Kentucky Democratic Legislators Will Meet In Frankfort.

The adjournment of the Democratic legislature at Louisville Saturday to meet in Frankfort revives interest in the political contest and promises to put an end to the lull which has prevailed during the last few days.

There were more Democratic members in Frankfort Saturday night than had been together at any one time since they adjourned and fled to Cincinnati, Louisville and other points to avoid being arrested by the militia and taken to London, where the Republican legislature was then sitting.

More Canadian Volunteers.

Three hundred mounted Canadian volunteers for service in South Africa, the third section of the Canadian contingent, arrived at Halifax N. S., Sunday, from Toronto and Kingston and will sail for Cape Town at once.

Passed Appropriation Bill.

Late Saturday afternoon the house passed the legislative and judicial appropriation bill after having it under consideration four days.

THE * CHRONICLE.

Entered in the post-office at Columbiana Ala., as second class matter.

CALL FOR COUNTY CONVENTION.

By direction of the Democratic executive committee of Shelby County a convention of the Democratic party of said county is hereby called to meet at the courthouse in Columbiana at 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, the 21st day of April, 1900, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Representative and selecting delegates to the State and Senatorial conventions.

For the purpose of selecting delegates to said county convention beat meetings or primaries as each beat may determine will be held in each beat on Saturday, the 14th day of April, at such hour as the beat committeemen may fix for their respective beats.

The following invitation, in the language of the resolution by the Democratic State executive committee, is hereby extended:

"Be it resolved by the Democratic State executive committee of Alabama that we hereby cordially invit call conservative white voters, irrespective of past political associations or differences who can unite with us in the effort for pure and economical government, and who will support the nominees and principles of the Democratic party, to participate in the primaries of the party throughout the State.

"Resolved, further, That all persons participating in the primaries, conventions or mass meetings of the party hereafter to be held thereby pledge themselves to support the nominees of such primaries, conventions or mass meetings, whether municipal, county, state or Federal."

The number of delegates to which each beat will be entitled will be as follows, based on the vote for Governor at the last State election:

Beat	Delegates
1—Columbiana	9
1—Shelby	3
2—Spring Creek	2
3—Calera	5

W. B. BROWNE, Chairman.

IT has been demonstrated that a bale of cotton made into thread before it is shipped leaves three times as much money in the community as does a bale shipped raw. The local mills in North Carolina used more cotton last year than was made in that State, and her cotton was worth to her three times what the crop of this county was worth in proportion. Ours is a small start, but there is no good reason why within six years every bale of cotton raised in this county should not yield to us this increased profit.

THE cotton crop of this town this season will be about 1,000 bales. This will yield to the town about $35,000. If manufactured into cloth it would bring to the town at least $100,000. This is a plain proposition, and needs no comment. Let us act upon it. The price of one crop will build the mill. The balance will be profit to the cotton producers, the factory operatives and the stockholders. The merchants will get their share from all these

IN this issue will be found the call of Hon. W. B. Browne, county chairman, for a convention of the Democratic party, to be held on April 21st, with beat meetings on the 14th, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for representative and selecting delegates to the State and Senatorial conventions. It will now be in order for those who want to represent this county to announce their candidacy.

THE Hon. Billy Sturdivant says that "owing to the unsettled condition of politics in this county," he withdraws from the race for representative. He gives the wrong reason. The truth is that he withdrew because of the settled condition of politics—the settlement being unfavorable to William.

THE Advocate wants somebody to tell it what the Democratic party believes in. It would be a waste of time. The Advocate could never understand the high plane of principles that makes a man a Democrat.

THE Hon. Billy Sturdivant has taken our advice and retired from the race for representative. If he had read THE CHRONICLE and followed its advice he would have saved his five-dollar bill.

THE Johnston forces still refuse to let the people vote on the senatorship in Jefferson. The Governor is evidently afraid of the people in his own county.

BUT HALF THE TRUTH.

The Court Journal, with its characteristic demagoguery, is dragging up Senator Morgan's record on the Blair educational bill, a measure which the Senator helped to defeat about fifteen years ago. The Journal is using this incident in an attempt to show that Senator Morgan was and is opposed to the education of the poor children, and makes the bald assertion that in the defeat of this measure the Senator prevented the donation by Congress of $7,000,000 to the common schools of Alabama.

In this the Journal, as in all its charges, presumes upon the forgetfulness or ignorance of its readers, and attempts to make out a case on a small part of the truth only. Fortunately, however, some of us remember the Blair bill and Senator Morgan's opposition to it, and we distinctly remember the objectionable features of the proposed donation which made it a vicious piece of legislation under a cloak of charity.

A brief recital of the main points of the measure will serve to show this. This bill did propose to donate to the common schools a large sum of money, Alabama's share of which would have been something like $7,000,000; but there were contingencies. The following are those which formed the basis of Senator Morgan's opposition:

The donation had to be accepted in a limited time.

Each State was required to appropriate an amount equal to her proportion before she could share in the distribution.

The State and federal appropriations were required to be distributed among the white and colored children of school age in proportion to the ratio of illiteracy of the two races.

The results to Alabama would have been that in order to share in the appropriation our legislature would have been compelled to appropriate each year three times the amount we were then appropriating to common schools, or an amount that would have doubled our tax rate. This increase would have come out of the pockets of the white property owners, the negroes at that time paying but an insignificant proportion of the taxes. In the distribution, however, the negroes would have received nearly five-sevenths of the whole, while the whites would have received but little more than two-sevenths.

The Blair bill was simply a scheme to force the white people to educate the negro children, and to burden themselves beyond their ability to do it. If the Journal is at all informed on public questions it knows that Senator Morgan in opposing this vicious measure protected the interests of the white property owners of his State, then just recovering from the effects of reconstruction and civil war.

The Journal dare not reprint this bill, together with the ratio of illiteracy then existing, and let its readers judge the Senator's position for themselves. It prefers to state half the truth to catch the uninformed, though it displays its own ignorance or knavery in doing it.

Advice to Consumptives

There are three great remedies that every person with weak lungs, or with consumption itself, should understand. These remedies will cure about every case in its first stages; and many of those more advanced. It is only the most advanced that are hopeless. Even these are wonderfully relieved and life itself greatly prolonged.

What are these remedies? Fresh air, proper food and

of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Be afraid of draughts but not of fresh air. Eat nutritious food and drink plenty of milk. Do not forget that Scott's Emulsion is the oldest, the most thoroughly tested and the highest endorsed of all remedies for weak throats, weak lungs and consumption in all its stages.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

Hon. Thos. Williams, of Elmore county, Alabama, ex-member of congress, statesman, orator, writer and one of the best informed men on the theoretical and practical application of commercial fertilizers. He is one of the largest cotton planters in the state, and produces his great crops upon poor sandy uplands by the skillful use of commercial fertilizers. He uses the ALABAMA FERTILIZER exclusively—after having tried nearly all other leading brands of complete fertilizers. His words, like rifle balls, are few, and go straight to the mark:

WETUMPKA, ALA., September 9, 1899.

DEAR SIRS:—Speaking from experimental tests, in results I am assured the ALABAMA FERTILIZER put up by you, is not excelled by any on our market, and I commend it to the public as a genuine fertilizer productive of good results.

The bags treated by the VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVER used by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., successfully resisted the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in the fertilizers, also preventing all loss from wasting.

Yours truly,
THOS. WILLIAMS.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT ANALYSIS.

Bulletin No. 12, issued by the Alabama Department of Agriculture, shows the actual commercial value of the ALABAMA FERTILIZERS to be 19.33 per cent more valuable than all the complete fertilizers or guanos offered for sale in the State of Alabama for the season covered by said bulletin.

Bulletin No. 13, just issued by the Department of Agriculture, shows the actual analysis, from samples sent to the Department by dealers and consumers throughout the State, that the ALABAMA FERTILIZER is actually $3.54 per ton or 24 per cent better than the guaranteed analysis by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., and this answers the question so often asked, "why the ALABAMA FERTILIZER produces so much better crops than other fertilizers of equal guaranteed analysis?" The ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be shipped in the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVED BAGS. There is no other preserved bag on the market of any value.

The Commissioner of Agriculture recommends and endorses it in the following words:

"I therefore unhesitatingly say that I believe the bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVING PROCESS will resist the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in fertilizers; that the meshes of the bags are so filled by the process as to prevent all wastage, and that if generally used by manufacturers, would be of inestimable value to carriers, dealers and consumers.

(Signed) "I. F. CULVER,
"Commissioner of Agriculture."

These MUMMIA PRESERVED BAGS are almost indestructible by the weather or Fertilizers. Can be hauled in the rain without material damage to bag or contents. Fertilizers put up in these bags can be hauled out to the farm at any time and kept ready for use.

The ALABAMA FERTILIZER is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all round fertilizer for cotton and corn.

ALABAMA FERTILIZER RECORD.

It has produced nearly four bales of cotton on one acre of poor sandy upland.
One hundred and thirty-two bushels of corn on one acre of poor sandy upland.
Two thousand and forty one bus[illegible] of corn on twenty acres of poor upland.
Land and corn accurately sur[illegible] and measured by competent disinterested and honorable men.

It is the oldest brand no[illegible] old [illegible] Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of th[illegible] premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND IN[illegible]RIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified [illegible]ea of land was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA [illegible]ERTILIZER.

ESTABLISHED 1880 ALABAMA TRADE MARK

This trade mark is registered. It is our property. It is not likely to be counterfeited, as that would subject the perpetrator to the danger of heavy fine and imprisonment (see U. S. laws respecting copyrights). It is on every genuine sack of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

As required by state law the word "ALABAMA" in large letters is found on every bag of fertilizer offered for sale in this state. Some unscrupulous persons have employed this means to deceive you.

See that the above trade mark is on the bag, and take none offered you as the ALABAMA FERTILIZER without it.

Questions Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for billiousness or indigestion. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration or heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Hall Drug Co.

COTTON FACTORY

Columbiana Mill is an Assured Fact.

251 SHARES GONE

All Taken by Homefolks as a Popular Move.

COLUMBIANA MANUFACTURING CO.

Organized with a Capital Stock of $50.000 on a Business Basis that is Bound to be a Success.

Our people have been talking about building a cotton mill in this quiet little town, and for some days steps have been taken in that direction. A subscription list was presented to the citizens about a week ago, and up to Tuesday night 204 shares of $100 each had been subscribed. It was proposed to start with a capital of $35,000.

Tuesday night a meeting of the subscribers was held in the office of the probate judge, at which a large majority of the shares were represented. Judge A. P. Longshore was made chairman of the meeting, and J. T. Leeper acted as secretary. The subscription list was called, and some increases were made in the amounts taken. The general plans of the project were discussed, and an organization was perfected.

Some visiting gentlemen were invited to take stock, and Messrs. H. A. and A. L. Jackson, of Wilsonville, subscribed for 30 shares. These, with the increases, ran the subscription up to 251 shares. A motion prevailed to raise the capital stock to $50,000.

It was then moved to fix the number of directors at five, which was amended to include the president and vice-president. The following officers and board of directors were unanimously elected:

President—Gordon DuBose.
Vice-president—A. P. Longshore.
Directors—H. A. Jackson, W. Browne, J. R. White, Henry Milner and W. G. Parker.

W. G. Parker was elected as commissioner to receive and collect for subscriptions.

With the organization thus completed the meeting adjourned. In a few days the incorporation of the Columbiana Manufacturing Company will be completed in all its legal details and work will begin.

The plan of subscrimption is simple, and puts the taking of stock within the reach of all. The shares of stock are of the par value of $100, and $5 per month will be paid on each share for the first five months, beginning with the first of March. At the end of five months the stock will be subject to a call of $20 per share to be paid within thirty days. In case of default of any of these payments ninety days' grace are to be allowed before the stock is forfeited. No one person is to be allowed to hold a majority of all the stock, and no stock can be sold without giving the company the refusal of it.

It is proposed to begin the making of brick within the next sixty days. The first five payments on the stock will cover the cost of the material, and the 20 per cent assessment will if needed pay for the building. The stock will then be worth the amount paid in, and if necessary can be used to raise the money for the machinery.

This is a simple business plan and is entirely feasible, having succeeded admirably elsewhere. All these small mills are paying handsome dividends, some as high as 93 per cent last year.

The directors here are all business men, and they will have no trouble in carrying the plan to success. There will be a cotton mill in operation in this town within twelve months almost without a doubt.

The subscription is still open, and every citizen is invited to take some stock. Several are already in who hold only one share, but they are welcome, and a hundred more are wanted. The mill is assured, but every additional share will hasten it to the dividend point. The money as fast as taken in will be put into property and will be safe. The amount already subscribed will put in 1,000 spindles, and will go far toward the consumption of the cotton produced in this vicinity.

The people of Columbiana are promised a rare treat in the near future in an entertainment to be given by Mrs. Stevens Collins, well known here as the sister of Hon. W. B. Browne. Mrs. Collins has distinguished herself in London, as well as in this country, and possesses rare talent. She is a lady of superior intelligence and culture. She is a lineal descendant of the celebrated William Bradford, of Boston. She is connected with some of the noble families of England, and at one time resided in Kensington Palace, the birthplace of Queen Victoria, having often entertained with recitations and readings Princess Louise and others of the royalty in London. It goes without saying that our people will have an opportunity of attending an entertainment in every way doubly worth the price of admission. Mrs. Collins lends her aid to the Presbyterian church, which is sorely in need of funds. Let everybody attend the entertainment, which will be given on March 22.

If you buy clothes that are thrown together you get them cheap: when you have them made by a skilled workman you get a valuable article that is attractive and decent. Just so with your printed stationery. When it is done by an experienced printer who has nice type and good taste you present a decent appearance to the business world. That is the kind you get at this office at prices in proportion to the quality.

They Should Know it.

Many women suffer untold agony and misery because the nature of their disease is not correctly understood. They have been led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for the many ills that beset womankind.

Neuralgia, nervousness, headache, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, rheumatism, a dragging pain or dull ache in the back, weakness or bearing-down sensation, profuse or scanty supply of urine with strong odor, frequent desire to pass it with scalding or burning sensation, sediment in it after standing in bottle or common glass for 24 hours are signs of kidney and bladder trouble.

The above symptoms are often attributed by the patient herself or by her physician to female weakness or womb trouble. Hence, so many fail to obtain relief, because they are treating, not the disease itself, but a reflection of the primary cause, which is kidney trouble.

In fact, women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same remedy.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is the great discovery of the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is easy to get at any drug store for 50 cents or $1.

To prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and book telling all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Kindly mention THE CHRONICLE, and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

The Imperial Gas Lamp

Covered by U. S. Patents.

Admittedly the BEST light on the market and the most economical.

The Imperial burns common stove gasoline and gives a 100 candle power light at a cost of one cent per day.

One Gallon will burn 60 hours.

The needle keeps the burner clean, so it will not clog, and the generating tube being in center of flame, insures a light that will not go out. There is no odor, no smoke and no flicker. The light can be raised or turned down just as with a gas jet or lamp. THE IMPERIAL is the most perfect light on the market and everything pertaining to it is the best to be had. IT WILL PAY TO INVESTIGATE.

A broken stitch, like the "little rift within the lute," is the beginning of trouble. "I am tired, not ill." "It will soon pass away." "I don't believe in medicine." These are the broken stitches that lead to serious illness. Nature is wise and in Hood's Sarsaparilla she has furnished the means to take up broken stitches. Why? Because it starts at the root and cleanses the blood.

PELICANS IN THE BIG MUDDY.

Great Colony of the Birds on an Island in the Missouri River.

From the St. Louis Republic: Pelican bend, in the Missouri river, near St. Charles, Mo., is the scene of a great annual gathering of pelicans. There is a big flat bar in the river there which has endured far beyond the usual span of a bar's existence in the treacherous, shifting current of the Missouri. This bar is the semi-annual stopping place of vast flocks of pelicans that migrate from south to north in the spring and from north to south in the fall. Persons who have observed their habits claim that they invariably arrive at Pelican bend on September 4, and remain until cold weather sends them south. The pelican is not an attractive bird. He offends both the eye and the nose. But he is commendably regular in his habits. The parent birds catch fish and after eating their fill deposit the others in their pouches under their bills and carry them to their young. These pouches will hold from three to eight pounds of fish. They are elastic, and when distended to their utmost nearly touch the ground. When empty the pouch lies closed up under the big bill and is merely a mass of wrinkles. It is this pouch that gives the pelican his characteristic and disagreeable odor, caused by particles of decaying fish. The pelican's legs are short and strong, and its feet have large webs. It is not a fast swimmer nor a rapid flyer, but it is practically tireless in both air and water. On land it is awkward and unwieldy. Its feathers are pure white except for a fluffy tuft of brown plumage that is seen on the top of the head for about six weeks in the early autumn. This tuft disappears in August and leaves a pimply bald pate that is not pleasant to view. At first the skin is red, then pink, then a straw color. By November 1 the skin on the head hardens into a horny crest, which grows as the winter progresses until by the time the bird arrives at its breeding place in the northwest it is so prominent that it is called the "centerboard" because of its resemblance to the centerboard of a sailboat. When properly cured, the pelican skins and plumage are largely used in women's garments and hats.

My Hair Was Coming Out

"About a year ago my hair was coming out very fast. I bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor to stop this. It not only stopped the falling, but also made my hair grow very rapidly, until now it is 45 inches in length and very thick."—Mrs. A. Boydston, Atchison, Kans., July 25, 1899.

It Feeds the Hair

Have you ever thought why your hair is falling out? It is because you are starving your hair. If this starvation continues your hair will continue to fall.

There is one good hair food. It is Ayer's Hair Vigor. It goes right to the roots of the hair and gives them just the food that they need. The hair stops falling, becomes healthy, and grows thick and long.

Ayer's Hair Vigor will do another thing, also: it always restores color to faded or gray hair. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Write the Doctor

If you do not obtain all the benefits you desire from the use of the Vigor, write the Doctor about it. He will tell you just the right thing to do, and will send you his book on the Hair and Scalp if you request it. Address,

FRENCH ENTERS KIMBERLEY

DROVE CRONJE'S BOER TROOPS FROM VARIOUS POSITIONS ALONG THE WAY,

BURGHERS BEGIN A RETREAT

England Elated at Good News and Great Praise Is Accorded Gen. French.

A London special under date of February 17, says: General Cronje, with a start of a day or two, is in full retreat from Lord Roberts, moving northward.

General French, with the cavalry, simply staid over night at Kimberley and then pushed on to get in touch with the retiring enemy. A long Boer wagon train is moving toward Bloemfontein, followed presumably by a large force of British infantry. In their hasty departure the Boers lost quanties of supplies and amunition.

Military opinion in London is that Lord Roberts will not push far after the Boers immediately because of the present problems and the need of rest for the troops. He has to feed 70,000 persons in his army and the whole Kimberley population. He must rebuild the railway from Modder river to Kimberley and revictual the latter.

General French lost a few men only in action, but the forced marches and heat have probably made many ill. Numbers of remounts must be provided.

Lord Roberts has wrought a genuine preliminary success and the impression is that he has done enough for the present. He will need to prepare for another strike. All over England there have been evidences of public joy.

In every theater and public meeting, around the railway stations and in the streets there have been expressions of gladness and jubilation over the news. The newspapers are editorially rejoicing.

Those who read the news closely see only one disturbing factor in the Cape situation, and that is the pressure of the Boers toward Lord Roberts' line of supply through De Aar, which was never more important than now.

The Boers, under Commandants Delarrey and Gobler, are making a persistent effort to penetrate to the railway. They have pushed General Clements back to Arundel and have outflanked him. All are within sixty miles, or two days' hard march of the central railway.

Doubtless Lord Roberts has left considerable forces along the line and can send back more if necessary.

A special dispatch dated two days back, and just transmitted from Chieveley, says that an important move was then pending there, although contrary indications are found in the fact that 750 ambulance bearers have been temporarily disbanded and the further fact that traction engines are arriving at Durban from the front to be sent to Lord Roberts. More artillery is being sent to Lord Roberts from Cape Town.

GEN. FRENCH'S MOVEMENTS.

The following from Riet River, Orange Free State, tells how General French reached Kimberley:

"General French, in command of the cavalry division and with a strong force of horse artillery, left Modder river Sunday morning for Ramban, twelve miles east of Enslit, where the whole division concentrated. The next day he made a rapid march to Riet river, where a party of Boers contested his passage at Dekiel and Water Fall drifts. After some hours' shelling General French drove the Boers away and crossed the river.

"Yesterday (Tuesday) the column continued its march to Klip and Romdaval drifts on the Modder river, where again a short engagement ensued, General French shelling the Boers vigorously and forcing a passage.

"The Boers precipitately retreated, leaving five laagers in the hands of the British, besides a great quantity of cattle and 2,000 sheep.

"The rapidity of General French's march, and the overwhelming nature of his force, enabled him, in spite of the difficulties of water transportation, to thoroughly outwit and surprise the Boers. The British casualties were slight."

PLUMBERS MAKE DEMANDS.

Strike For Shorter Work Day and a Fixed Wage Scale.

The plumbers and gas fitters of Savannah, Ga., are on a strike. They want both shorter hours and increased wages. They have demanded a nine-hour day every day but Saturday, which they want fixed at eight hours for a day's work. They want the scale of wages fixed at $1.50, $2 and $3 a day, according to experience.

The employing plumbers assert that the strike will not materially affect them and declare, if necessary, they can get out their tools and go to work themselves.

DEPARTMENT ACTS.

Secretary Hay Will Investigate Ex-Consul Macrum's Charges.

The state department has taken steps to make sure of the position it has assumed toward ex-Consul Macrum, in anticipation of an inquiry from congress, by directing an investigation into every phase of the allegations contained in that officer's statement, including especially a thorough investigation of the conditions under which the consular mail and cable service were conducted.

SUIT WAS POSTPONED.

Judge Cantrill Will Hear Taylor-Beckham Injunction Case.

A Frankfort dispatch says: The hearing of the injunction suit of Governor Beckham against Governor Taylor and Lieutenant Governor Marshall was postponed Friday to February 21st, when, unless some agreement is meantime reached, the matter will come up before Judge Cantrill at Georgetown.

MOLINEUX SPEAKS.

Condemned Man Denounces His Prosecutor and the New York Newspapers.

At New York, Friday, Roland B. Molineux was sentenced to die in Sing Sing prison during the week of March 26 for the murder of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams. He made a statement asserting that he had not been fairly convicted, and that "yellow journalism" had put a price on his head.

After denouncing the newspapers and making quite an extended argument in his own behalf, the defendant paused, either to regain his composure or to control his temper, and went on speaking with remarkable clearness and angry vehemence.

"I denounce and despise," he said, "the act of the district attorney in attempting to villify the reputation of the pure and lovely woman who bears my name. It was the act of a blackguard and a villainous lie.

"Now, your honor (to the recorder), I am prepared for sentence. I am not afraid."

Recorder Goff, in pronouncing sentence, reminded the defendant that his counsel had already presented all the facts to the jury and that the court had but the one duty to perform.

General Molineux was asked about the fund which it was proposed for him to defray expenses he had been under by the trial, and he said, when inquiry was made regarding his acceptance:

"Absolutely and under no circumstances would I accept such a thing."

The attorneys for Molineux have filed an appeal, and the appeal will stay the execution of the sentence indefinitely. Molinex will, however, be taken to Sing Sing prison.

NO RESPONSIBILITY.

Government Won't Pay Claims For Depredations By Soldiers.

A Washington dispatch says: The house committee on war claims has reported adversely the bill for the relief of Eugene A. Stone, of Greenville, S. C. This bill asked for an appropriation of $6,992.50 for damages to property by United States troops during the war with Spain. The report is of wide importance to the south as it defines the position of the committee with regard to the claim bills, hundreds of which have been introduced this session from all states where troops were mobilized and encamped.

Several of them have been offered from Georgia, the larger number coming from around Chickamauga, Athens, Americus, Albany and Savannah. The report says:

"The idea that the Federal government is liable or ought in any view to pay for the depredations committed by soldiers is not entitled to serious consideration. The whole claim is for depredations committed by soldiers during the war with Spain. The committee reports adversely and recommends the bill to lie upon the table."

TEMPORARY PEACE.

Truce Is On Between Contending Factions In Kentucky.

A Frankfort special says: The agreement to postpone the Taylor-Beckham suit operates as a temporary truce in the legal battle over the state offices, and it is not probable that there will be any decisive changes in the situation till then, unless the return of the Democratic legislature to Frankfort adds some unexpected feature.

A part of the attorneys on both sides held a meeting Friday afternoon and discussed several plans for consolidating the various injunction cases in order to avoid a clash between the different state courts in which they are pending, but a final understanding was not reached.

CRONJE'S TROOPS DISPERSED.

Lord Roberts Sends News of General French's Successes.

The London office makes public the following dispatch from Field Marshall Lord Roberts:

"JACOBSDAL, February 16—The following from General French was received this morning:

"'I have completely dispersed the enemy from the southern side of Kimberly, from Alexandersfontein to Oliphantsfontein, and am now going to occupy their ground. Have captured the ememy laager's and supplies of ammunition. Casualities about twenty of all ranks wounded.'"

"'Kimberly cheerful and well.'"

Manager Cooper Testifies.

The proceedings in the Clark case at Washington, Friday, reached almost the high point of interest attained Thursday. The principal witness of the day was Mr. Walker Cooper, one of Mr. Clark's managers in the campaign.

Kimberley Seige Raised.

Friday afternoon the Commercial Cable Company, at New York, sent out the following: "We are advised that telegrams can now be accepted for Kimberley, South Africa, at sender's risk, and not exceeding twelve words."

BOLO MEN AGGRESSIVE.

War In Philippines Being Kept Up By the Insurgents.

A Manila special says: Insurgent forces estimated to number 5,000 soldiers, mostly Bolo men, attacked the American garrison in the convent at Daopoga in the province of Albay during the night of February 5. They were repulsed, however, after they had burned much of the town. One lieutenant wounded was the only loss sustained by the Americans.

JEFFERSON'S DEBUT.

HOW HE FIRST PLAYED "RIP VAN WINKLE."

It Was In His Little Room in a London Lodging House and It Almost Caused His Arrest as a Lunatic—He Tells the Story.

From Joseph Jefferson's "Reminiscences": "My approaching appearance was the important dramatic event of my life. I had been five years from America and was on my way home, and I felt satisfied that if this new version of 'Rip Van Winkle' succeeded in London, my way was quite clear when I returned to the United States. On Sunday evening, being alone in my lodgings, I got out for my own admiration my new wig and beard, the pride of my heart, and which I was to use in the last act. I could not resist trying them on for the twentieth time, I think. So I got in front of the glass and adjusted them to my perfect satisfaction. I soon became enthused, and began acting and posing in front of the mirror. In about twenty minutes there came a knock at the door. 'Who's there?' said I. 'It's me, if you please,' said the gentle but agitated voice of the chambermaid. 'May I come in?' 'Certainly not,' I replied, for I had no desire to be seen in my present make-up. 'Is there anything wrong in the room, sir?' said she. 'Nothing at all. Go away,' I replied. 'Well, sir,' she continued, 'there's a policeman at the door, and he says as 'ow there's a crazy old man in your room, a-flingin' of his arms about and a-goin' on hawful, and there's a crowd of people across the street a-blockin' up the way." I turned toward the window, and to my horror I found that I had forgotten to put down the curtain, and, as it seemed to me, the entire population of London was taking in my first night. I had been unconsciously acting, with the lights full up, to an astonished audience who had not paid for their admission. As I tore off my wig and beard a shout went up. Quickly pulling down the curtain, I threw myself on a chair, overcome with mortification at the occurrence. In a few minutes the comical side of the picture presented itself, and I must have laughed for an hour. I had been suffering from an attack of nervous dyspepsia consequent upon the excitement of the past week, and I firmly believe that this continuous fit of laughter cured me."

In the new Brooklyn bridge there will be four cables used to support the structure, and measured from pin to pin on the anchor chains they will be 2985.08 feet in length in the case of the outer cables, and 02 feet shorter in the case of the inner cable. The cables are to be made up of steel wire in 37 strands, and each strand will contain 281 wires laid straight. The wire employed for this purpose is .165 inch in diameter and in the entire cable there will be 10,397 wires clamped into cylindrical form by bands of cast steel which carry the suspenders for the support of the floor beams. After these permanent bands are in place they will be covered with steel plates so arranged as to shed water. The length of the centre span of the new bridge is to be 1600 feet.

Mountain toothache is a new addition to our bodily ills. It has attacked engineers and laborers on the Jungfrau railroad at a height of 8500 feet above sea-level as a jumping toothache that attacks several teeth at a time, lasts seven or eight days and leaves the patient with a swollen face, which it takes another week to reduce. After that, the teeth are acclimatized and give no further trouble.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

It is said that successful trials of a telephonic apparatus without wire have been had in Italy. The instruments were installed on moving trains. The details of the experiments and apparatus are very meagre.

Three "cures" for tuberculosis are at present competing for professional favor in Italy—two of them, that of Cervello of Palermo—and that of Ruata of Perugia, consisting of medicated inhalations, and the oldest of them, that of Maragliano of Genoa, proceeding by sero therapy.

For many years efforts have been made from time to time to measure the heat radiated from some of the brightest stars. The most successful attempt appears to be that of Professor Nichols at the Yerkes observatory. With the aid of an apparatus recalling the principle of the Crookes radiometer, he has ascertained that the star Vega, which shines very brilliantly near the zenith in midsummer evenings, send to the earth an amount of heat equal to that of an ordinary candle six miles distant. Arcturus, the star celebrated by Job, and which has a somewhat fiery color, radiates about twice as much heat as Vega.

FOR MIDDLE-AGED WOMEN.

Two Letters from Women Helped Through the "Change of Life" by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I first wrote to you I was in a very bad condition. I was passing through the change of life, and the doctors said I had bladder and liver trouble. I had suffered for nine years. Doctors failed to do me any good. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, my health has improved very much. I will gladly recommend your medicine to others and am sure that it will prove as great a blessing to them as it has to me."—MRS. GEO. H. JUNE, 901 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Relief Came Promptly

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I had been under treatment with the doctors for four years, and seemed to get no better; I thought I would try your medicine. My trouble was change of life, and I must say that I never had anything help me so much as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Relief came almost immediately. I have better health now than I ever had. I feel like a new woman, perfectly strong. I give Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound all the credit, and would not do without her medicine for anything. I have recommended it to several of my friends. There is no need of women suffering so much for Mrs. Pinkham's remedies are a sure cure."—MAHALA BUTLER, Bridgewater, Ill.

OPINIONS DIFFER ON TARIFF BILL

Republicans Find It Hard To Reach Agreement.

HOLD LONG CONFERENCES

Efforts Made By Committees To Arrive At Harmonious Understanding Regarding the Measure.

A Washington special says: The efforts to unite the Republicans of the house on a PortoRican bill failed again Sunday, and after prolonged conferences, it was stated that matters were substantially where they were after the first meeting.

A long conference was held Sunday night at the residence of Representative McCall of Massachusetts, between the committee appointed at a Republican conference Saturday night, representing the Republicans in favor of the pending Porto Rican tariff bill, and a committee agreed upon by those Republicans who are opposed to the measure. The latter committee was made up of Messrs. Powers, of Vermont; Crumpacker, of Indiana; Lorimer, of Illinois; McCall, of Massachusetts, and Littlefield, of Maine.

Preliminary to this meeting the opponents of the bill to the number of about ten, had assembled at Mr. McCall's house during the afternoon and determined upon the stand they would take and upon their five representatives. Mr. Weeks, of Michigan, was among those at the afternoon session and he remained with the committee of five to participate in Saturday night's meeting.

NO AGREEMENT REACHED.

Propositions pro and con were made by both sides, but none of those made on behalf of the advocacy of the pending bill amounted to abandonment of the principle of the issue, viz: The right of the United States to levy a tax on imports from Porto Rico; and as its opponents consider this the fundamental objection to the measure, no agreement could be reached.

It was stated after the conference by members opposed to the bill that both sides were practically in the same position as they had been before the meeting, and that there was no probability of another gathering before the conference of Republicans called for Monday night. From their statements it was evident they intended to maintain the position they have held all along, that under the constitution the government has no right to tax the products of territory under control of the United States.

It was suggested by opponents of the pending bill that the whole matter be left in the hands of the president with the understanding that Porto Rico should have free trade with the United States, but this was objected to and nothing came of it. The opponents of the committee bill also suggested that the original bill introduced by Mr. Payne providing for free trade be substituted on the floor of the house for the committee bill, but this likewise failed to receive favorable consideration by the advocates of the pending measure.

Considerable talk was indulged in over the proposition made by the committee bill advocates to fix a time limit during which the tariff of 25 per cent against the imports of Porto Rico shall remain effective, this time varying from two years to an indefinite period, but the opposition indicated their unalterable opposition to any tariff, no matter how short the time of its imposition may be.

With a view to meeting some of the objections to the bill, its advocates suggested a change in its title, which would indicate that it was intended as an exigency measure for the purpose of raising revenue, but this also found no favor with the opposition who reiterated thier hostility to the bill on principle. One of the advocates of the measure after the conference expressed it to be his opinion that bill finally would become a law with a provision limiting the time during which it shall remain in force.

CASTELLANE BACK IN PARIS.

Undecided As To What He Will Do To Editor Rodays and Figaro.

Count Boni de Castellane, who, with the Countess de Castellane, left New York February 15th on the steamer La Gascogne, appeared in the chamber of deputies at Paris Saturday afternoon. In conversation with the Associated Press, the count said:

"I have not yet had the opportunity to consult all my friends, which I shall do before I reach a final decision as to what definite steps I shall take as to The Figaro and De Rodays. However, it has been agreed to institute proceedings against the Figaro for libel."

Democratic Clubs Name Date.

The executive committee of the National Association of the Democratic clubs has decided to hold the next annual meeting of the Democratic clubs at Indianapolis, September 5th.

IN FAVOR OF DEMOCRATS.

Certificates Are Awarded to the Contestants for State Offices in Kentucky.

The state contest board at Frankfort on Monday awarded certificates of election to all of the democratic contestants for minor state officers. Immediately afterward the contestants were sworn in, they repaired to the state house in a body, where they made a formal demand on the republican incumbents for possession of the offices, but the demands were not acceded to.

The democratic contestants sworn in are Secretary of State C. B. Hill of Clark county, Attorney-General Robert G. Breckenridge of Boyle county, Auditor Gus G. Coulter of Graves county, Treasurer Wilbur Hager of Boyd county, Superintendent of Public Instruction H. V. McChesney of Livingston county. Clerk of the Court of Appeals Shackleford administered the oath of office to all the contestants.

Immediately after the swearing in of the democratic state officials, injunctions were filed by each of the new officials, seeking to oust the present incumbents from office and enjoining them from exercising the rights, duties and prerogatives appertaining thereto. The installation of the democratic officials will have the effect of tying up tightly every branch of the state government pending a decision of all of the contests by the courts. From now till then the state will be practically without a state government. Auditor Coulter sent out notices to all county clerks, circuit court clerks, sheriffs and trustees of jury funds that he had been elected and qualified as auditor and warned them to pay over no public moneys to any other than himself upon penalty of prosecution on their official bonds.

KANSAS CITY SELECTED.

Democrats Will Assemble in National Convention on July 4.

The democratic national committee has decided to hold the national convention in Kansas City on July 4, next. There were only two cities contesting for the honor—Kansas City and Milwaukee. The vote to go to Missouri was 40 to 9. The committee issued the following call:

"The national democratic committee, having met in the city of Washington on the 22nd day of February, 1900, has appointed Wednesday, 4th of July, as the time, and chosen the city of Kansas City, Mo., as the place for holding the national democratic convention. Each state is entitled to a representation therein equal to double the number of its senators and representatives in the congress of the United States, and each territory, Alaska, Indian Territory and the district of Columbia shall provide six delegates. All democrat conservative reform citizens of the United States, irrespective of past political affiliations and differences, who can unite with us in the effort for pure, economical and constitutional government, and who favor the republic and oppose the empire, are cordially invited to join us in sending delegates to the convention."

TO AMEND PORTO RICAN BILL.

Conference Requests Committee to Reduce Duty From 25 to 15 Per Cent.

At the conference of house republicans Monday on the Porto Rican bill, assurances were given that the president believed the measure constitutional and would approve it if it came to him, and an agreement was reached to limit the operation of the bill to two years, and to reduce the duty imposed by it from 25 to 15 per cent. of the American tariff. As a result the republican leaders claim that the bill will have the support of all the republicans except four, Messrs. McCall, of Massachusetts, Littlefield of Maine, Lorimer of Illinois and Crumpacker of Indiana, and that this loss will be offset by affirmative votes of the opposition. They claim the passage of the modified bill is certain.

Turley a Candidate.

At an informal meeting, in Memphis, of several prominent democrats from Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee, it was decided to place the name of United States Senator Thomas B. Turley, of Tennessee, before the national democratic convention for the nomination of vice president.

Senator Clark, of Wyoming, Monday introduced a bill for the admission of Arizona as a state.

WE WILL GIVE WHAT IS ASKED

Filipino Constitution Outlined By Schurman.

HE GIVES ITS DEFINITION

Forecasts Document Soon To Be Published At Washington Regarding Philippine Government.

President Schurman, of Cornell university, and former head of the Philippine commission, delivered an address before the student body of the Armour institute at Chicago Friday, in which he forecasted the report and recommendations of the commission soon to be published at Washington.

President Schurman said that he had recommended to the president a government and constitution for the Philippines identically the same as that framed by educated Filipinos, which is practically the governmental policy outlined by Thomas Jefferson for the government of the vast territory acquired by the Louisiana purchase. President Schurman said further he was happy to state that President McKinley had accepted the recommendations and was sending out a second commission to put this government in operation.

"To avoid any mistane on the subject," said the speaker, "the constitution drawn up by Pedro A. Paterno, Aguinaldo's prime minister in 1898 will be published alongside with the constitution adopted by the commission so that it may be seen the two are identical, with only slight elaboration in the American form. This constitution also agrees with the request that leading Filipinos have been making of us day after day.

"The newspapers have not given publicity to the fact that we are to give the Filipinos the very government they themselves ask, but our government is now striking off 15,000 copies of the report that it may inform those who have been so solicitous in regard to the kind of government their friends, the Filipinos, would obtain from us."

Continuing, the speaker said that after a careful study of the island tribes he became convinced that the plan of Great Britain in the government of the Malays—signing peace pacts with the individual chiefs of the the tribes—was the most satisfactory one. The results upheld his opinion, for in the southern row of islands, where this policy was followed, not a gun had been fired and the American flag had been held an honored emblem. This policy was not adopted in regard to the middle islands, which are inhabited by the Visayan tribe, the largest in the group of islands, because of the fact that the most peculiar of civil governments prevail there.

The influence of Spain, said President Shurman, permeates the entire country, and its half million of inhabitants. Owing to the domination of Spain during the many generations that have passed chieftains have disappeared and the great population is left leaderless by the removal of Spanish rule. There are no chiefs in this portion of the country with whom the commission could have begun operations to affect a peace pact.

Just now it would be as much as their lives are worth for the natives to come forward and accept the government offered, for the Tagals having taken away their arms, would come from the north and in ambush assassinate many. It is only this fear that keeps the Visayan tribe from unanimously and voluntarily becoming the active ally of the United States.

Explosion Kills Seven.

By the explosion of a sawmill boiler at Pullman, Ark., seven men were killed.

CROSSING HORROR.

Train Strikes Crowded Carriage and Five of the Occupants Instantly Killed.

Shortly after midnight Saturday night the midnight express on the Lehigh Valley railroad struck a carriage, containing seven persons, at Tuttle's crossing, about twenty-five miles east from Rochester, N. Y., instantly killing five of the occupants, fatally injuring another and badly bruising the other. All were members of a family who had spent the evening at a friend's house, near Tuttle's crossing, and were on their way home.

Those killed were: Mrs. Amy Smith, forty-eight years old, Bert Smith, twenty-three years old; Miss Miranda Smith, twenty-four years old; Glee Smith, fourteen, and Catherine Smith, eight years old.

The injured are Porter Smith, husband of Mrs. Smith and father of the other victims. Gardner Smith, twenty-one years old.

Before reaching the crossing the carriage was stopped and Mr. Smith listened for the train, but did not hear it in the howling gale. The horses had just crossed the track in safety when the engine of the express crashed down upon the carriage and its occupants.

Gardner Smith, who was the least injured, crawled to a station nearby and secured assistance.

The bodies of Mrs. Smith and her daughter Miranda were carried off for a mile on the cowcatcher of the engine. The bodies of the little girl and her two brothers were found near the scene of the accident.

COTTON AT NINE CENTS.

Eighteen Thousand Bales Sold In Texas At That Figure.

Inman & Read of Houston, Texas, have just perfected a sale to Price, McCormick & Co., of New York, of 18,000 bales of cotton. The staple was of high grade and brought nine cents, the transaction involving over $1,000,000 cash.

INTO OPEN SWITCH.

Wreck On L. & N. Kills Fireman and Disables Two Engineers and a Flagman.

Train No. 2, northbound, on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, was wrecked half a mile north of Flomaton, Ala., at 4:05 o'clock Sunday morning, killing one negro fireman and injuring both engineers and another fireman.

The train, which was a double header on account of heavy mardi gras traffic, had been somewhat late, and was running at a high rate of speed in order to regain her schedule time.

When half a mile north of Flomaton she ran into a switch which had been set for the Pensacola branch to allow a freight train to pass to that division, and which had not been reset for the main line. When the forward engine of No. 2 struck the switch the wheels went between the open points and almost immediately were on the ground. Engineer Copeland immediately applied the brakes, but before the train could be sufficiently checked, both engines had plowed the gravel for a distance of 100 yards, and turned over.

TRANSPORT HANCOCK ARRIVES.

She Comes From Manila With 506 Dead Bodies Aboard.

The United States transport Hancock has arrived at San Francisco from Manila via Nagasaki and is in quarantine. The Hancock brings 100 discharged soldiers, ten cabin passengers and 506 dead bodies. Two soldiers died on the voyage.

BRYAN AND SEWALL TALK.

Nebraskan's Former Running Mate Goes To Meet Him.

Arthur Sewall, of Maine, who ran with Bryan in 1896 on the National Democratic ticket, has demonstrated very effectually how high the Nebraskan stands in his estimation and regard.

He climbed out of bed in Atlanta at an early hour to get aboard a special train and go down the Southern road as far as Williamson, Ga., to meet Mr. Bryan and have a long friendly talk while on his way to Atlanta.

Shortly before his departure for Washington Mr. Sewall said concerning his talk with Mr. Bryan:

"I enjoyed seeing Mr. Bryan again very much.

"We discussed the political situation briefly. Br. Bryan and I are in perfect accord on all of the issues of the day. If you know what his views are you know what mine are."

COSTLY FIRE IN BIRMINGHAM.

Property Aggregating $140,000 Destroyed By the Flames.

The explosion of a gasoline stove in the basement of the Metropolitan hotel in Birmingham, Ala., Friday afternoon, was followed by a fire which burned that building and the Hewlett block adjoining, both three stories high, causing a loss estimated approximately at $140,000, the insurance on which amounted to about three-fourths of the loss. The fire spread rapidly, and great difficulty was encountered by the firemen in reaching it.

Before the flames were gotten under control everything on Twentieth street from First avenue to Morris avenue was a wreck, but a strong fire wall back of the Hewlett building and the Metropolitan hotel prevented the fire from extending any further toward Nineteenth street.

SCATHING TALK BY MR. TILLMAN

The South Carolina Senator Accuses Morgan of Discourtesy.

SPEECH WAS SENSATIONAL

The Hawaiian Government Bill Under Consideration.

Throughout the session Saturday the senate had under consideration the Hawaiian government bill. The discussion took a wide range, but the basis of it was an amendment offered by Mr. Platt, of Connecticut, as to the appointment and tenure of offices of the judges of the Hawaiian courts. Mr. Tillman of South Carolina embraced the opportunity to deliver a characteristic speech, in course of which he made an attack upon Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, for alleged lack of courtesy, and vigorously opposed many provisions of the bill, particularly those which related to suffrage.

"The oligarchy which exists in Hawaii," declared Mr. Tillman, "and which this bill perpetuates is powerful and unscrupulous. It is an autocracy greater than ever existed outside Russia. I sympathize with the senator from Connecticut in his efforts to secure a properly appointed judiciary for the islands—a judiciary not controlled by the oligarchy which now has its grip on the islands."

Referring to an incident which occurred the other day in which Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, declined to yield to Mr. Tillman to reply to a statement made by Mr. Wolcott, of Colorado, concerning the "suppressed vote," Mr. Tillman said:

"I have felt indignant at the treatment I received from Senator Morgan. Never in my experience in the senate have I been treated so discourteously by a member of the senate."

Mr. Morgan endeavored to interrupt Mr. Tillman, but the latter waved him aside, saying:

"I decline to yield to the senator. He has put himself outside the pale of courtesy and consideration so far as I am concerned."

Mr. Tillman then explained the circumstances of Mr. Morgan's refusal to permit him to reply to Mr. Wolcott.

"When I arose to explain the situation in South Caralina as it was presented by the senator from Colarado," said Mr. Tillman, "the senator from Alabama said:, 'No, I cannot permit you to speak now. I'll leave you to fight it out some other time.' It was the first time in my experience that I had ever been refused a hearing in like circumstances. No Republican would have denied me the privilege, because there is no man on that side of the chamber so lacking in courtesy and decency."

Mr. Tillman then explained that under the present constitution of South Carolina there were about 114,000 registered voters, 14,000 of whom were colored. Ninety-nine per cent of the white vote in the state, he said, was Democratic. In the summer primaries 90 per cent of the registered votes were cast. At these primaries the contests for the state offices were made.

"There is no lethargy in the politics of South Carolina," said Mr. Tillman. "We have as much politics to the square mile as any state in the union. There is no Republican party in the state. The Republican machine is composed of federal office holders who control the patronage and send the delegates to Republican national conventions. The elections in November are simply ratifications of the primaries. Naturally the results being a foregone conclusion only 4,000 or 5,000 voters turn out in each district to vote."

After calling attention to the fact that at the general election in Massachusetts in 1890 only 285,000 votes were cast out of a voting population of 665,000; and that at the same election in Connecticut the vote was 125,000 out of 224,000 legal voters, he said:

"Why do they accuse us of the south of suppressing the vote when they are doing the same thing in Massachusetts? Why, we don't do half the devilment in South Carolina as this bill proposes to do in Hawaii. This bill will give four or five years more of contract labor—of slave labor—to the sugar barons, who in remitted duties on sugar will make $8,000,000."

Wire and Rod Mill Will Begin Work.

The wire and rod mill will begin operation about the middle of the week. Last week the machinery was run for several days in order to detect any flaws. It is now in readiness.

Births and Deaths in Jefferson.

Dr. J. W. Barclay, county health officer, has made his report of the number of births and deaths in Jefferson county during the year 1899. The report shows a total of 2,233 births and 1,695 deaths.

To Pay War Claims.

A bill was sent to the house by Secretary of War Root Monday, paying claims for damages done by troops during the Spanish-American war, which contains an appropriation of $13,345 for citizens of Alabama.

Fire at Pratt City.

Pratt City was visited by another disastrous fire Monday night, which destroyed fifteen houses, entailing a loss of $20,000. The fire originated in a Negro drug store in the Drennen building and is supposed to have been caused by a new style lamp that was being tested. The Drennen building contains twelve stores, and this, together with the livery stable on the same lot, was entirely destroyed.

Supposed Dynamiters Arrested.

In Mobile the police arrested L. Cohen, John Williams and W. H. Hall, believed to be the men who overpowered the night watchman and attempted to dynamite the safe of the American door and sash factory in New Orleans. In a valise belonging to the men was found nitro-glycerine, dynamite, time fuses, pincers, skeleton keys, jimmies and other high-grade burglar tools.

Cut His Throat in Sheer Madness.

Suffering from the effects of debauchery, it is suspected, Thomas R. Wilson made a horrible attempt Monday morning to terminate his existence.

Just before the Blossburg accommodation pulled out of Blossburg Wilson was perceived standing on the track hewing at his throat with a razor. The fireman of the train and others ran to the man and induced him to throw the razor away.

Committee Left for Washington.

The Warrior canal committee of the Commercial club of Birmingham left Monday for Washington, and they will go before the rivers and harbors committee of the house of representatives to present the claims of this section in the matter of the Warrior canal. In the party that went to Washington were James A. Van Hoose, who has devoted the greater part of his time for the past two or three years to an effort to arouse interest in the proposed canal.

BRIEFLY MENTIONED.

At Centreville E. L. McKinley shot and killed Mace Boyd. The difficulty arose over, it is said, a judgment which Boyd had obtained against McKinley about two years ago.

The building of several wood working plants in Huntsville has made that city a big market for all kinds of timbers. Hickory, oak, ash, walnut, gum and poplar are in great demand, and owners of land upon which that timber stands have a new source of revenue opened up for them.

At an informal meeting, in Memphis, of several prominent democrats from Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee, it was decided to place the name of United States Senator Thomas B. Turley, of Tennessee, before the national democratic convention for the nomination of vice president.

Senator Clark, of Wyoming, Monday introduced a bill for the admission of Arizona as a state.

COL. BRYAN SPEAKS IN THE GATE CITY

Atlantians Are Entertained With An Address In the State Capitol.

MUCH ENTHUSIASM SHOWN

He Explains Difference Between Empire and Expansion.

W. J. Bryan entertained a big audience in the hall of the house of representatives at Atlanta, Ga., Friday night with one of his characteristic speeches.

The crowd which gathered in the hall was probably the largest that ever assembled in as small a place before in the Gate City. As early as 6 o'clock the audience began to gather, coming not only from Atlanta, but from points in the vicinity of the city, and long before the hour set for the speaking arrived the house was comfortably filled. There was an evident purpose in the mind of all there to hear what the Nebraskan had to say at the cost of convenience and after the aisles were filled the crowd pushed in at the doors and as far back as the walls to the rear of the entrances upturned faces could be seen, men and women trying to get sight of Colonel Bryan.

With the hall in [illegible] packed condition Bryan arrived with the committee of the Young Men's Democratic League. With three policemen immediately in front of the party it took fifteen minutes for them to reach the speaker's chair, and having arrived, he was partially exhausted as a result of the trip to the platform.

It is difficult to estimate the number of people who were turned away, having failed even to obtain a place near the doors from which they could peer into the room, but the number was roughly estimited by many at between 1,000 and 2,000. The seating capacity of the house is comparative small, but the large majority of those present were standing in the wide aisles, packed uncomfortably close together, but cheerful to a degree under such circumstances.

With the exception of one person who raised his voice from the center of the hall at stated intervals to announce that 'we will have a Nebraskan for president next year," there was no interruption. To the supporter who predicted his election Colonel Bryan expressed his thanks, but urged upon him the necessity for closer attention. In this position the crowd remained for two hours.

Colonel Bryan enunciated with decision the position he has occupied and occupies still on the subject of imperialism. His distinction between expansion and imperialism was appreciated by every one in the vast audience.

"An empire," said Colonel Bryan, "is a different thing from expansion. We expanded when we wook in Florida, when we enlarged the republic by the addition of Louisiana and when we took in Texas. Now it is not expansion that is being proposed, but the changing of a republic into an empire. We are going abroad to get a foreign race for subjugation. The flag is to stand there in the Philippines over men who are taxed without representation."

In scathing terms the speaker handled the sentiment of "philanthropy and five per cent" as expressed by the secretary of the treasury and repeated by other Republican speakers.

The only reference during the address to the war in South Africa was the wish that England might have occasion to need more men on the continent than she has there at present.

At the close of the address it was fully twenty minutes before Colonel Bryan could escape from the crowd that pressed around anxious to shake his hand.

RAILWAY MORTGAGED.

Object Was To Secure Bonded Indebtedness--Road Very Prosperous.

The LaFayette railway, extending from Opelika to LaFayette, Ala., twenty-one miles, has filed a mortgage in the probate court at Opelika to J. C. Griffin, trustee, for $40,000.

The mortgage is to secure bonds for that amount issued by the company, and the mortgage includes the entire track, road-bed and equipment of the company. The road is very prosperous and pays good dividends.

NEPHEWS UNDER ARREST.

Two Men Charged With Murder of the Roberts Family In Florida.

Tom Hammond and C. C. Geary were arrested in Jacksonville, Fla., by Sheriff Broward, charged with the murder of the entire Roberts family some days ago.

The murdered family consisted of the aged mother, maiden sister and son. The men arrested are both nephews of the murdered man.

The theory of the officers is that eight or ten thousand dollars was taken from the safe in the house, and that five hundred dollars found in the safe after the murder was left as a blind.

PRESIDENT CRITICIZED

At Conference of "Eastern Anti-Imperialists" In Philadelphia.

The second day's session of the eastern conference of anti-imperialists at Philadelphia was characterized by the adoption of a strong resolution condemning the expansion policy of the administration. During the discussion President McKinley was severely criticised and held personally responsible for the "criminal aggression of the country."

CALL FOR COUNTY CONVENTION.

By direction of the Democratic executive committee of Shelby County a convention of the Democratic party of said county is hereby called to meet at the courthouse in Columbiana at 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, the 21st day of April, 1900, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Representative and selecting delegates to the State and Senatorial conventions.

For the purpose of selecting delegates to said county convention beat meetings or primaries as each beat may determine will be held in each beat on Saturday, the 14th day of April, at such hour as the beat committeemen may fix for their respective beats.

The following invitation, in the language of the resolution by the Democratic State executive committee, is hereby extended:

"Be it resolved by the Democratic State executive committee of Alabama that we hereby cordially invite all conservative white voters, irrespective of past political associations or differences who can unite with us in the effort for pure and economical government, and who will support the nominees and principles of the Democratic party, to participate in the primaries of the party throughout the State.

"Resolved, further, That all persons participating in the primaries, conventions or mass meetings of the party hereafter to be held thereby pledge themselves to support the nominees of such primaries, conventions or mass meetings, whether municipal, county, state or Federal."

The number of delegates to which each beat will be entitled will be as follows, based on the vote for Governor at the last State election:

1—Columbiana	9
1—Shelby	3
2—Spring Creek	2
3—Calera	5
4—Montevallo	9
5—Tylers	1
6—Helena	3
7—Elliottsville	4
8—Yellowleaf	1
9—Wilsonville	6
10—Harpersville	7
11—Spearman's	2
12—Highland	1
13—Bold Springs	1
14—Vandiver	1
15—Sterrett	2
16—Vincent	5
17—Pelham	2
18—Dunnavant	1

IT is said that eight months are required by manufacturers to deliver cotton mill machinery. The demand is so great that the makers are making their own terms.

WE look upon the Governor's refusal to submit his claims to a primary election in Jefferson as an admission of weakness before his own people. Even his organs do not attempt to explain his action in any other way.

THE Advocate wants to know why all the ballot-box stuffers are against Johnston. If the Advocate will name any ballot-box stuffers—those whom it knows to be such—who are against him, we will answer its question.

THE price of cotton has reached 9¼ cents. The indications are that it will go to 10. Some big fortunes have been made in the staple, but the producer has realized but little more than half of the increase. Still he has made something, if he doesn't lose it on the coming crop.

THE Advocate rejoices that W. F. Aldrich will soon be in his seat in Congress from this district. So; the Advocate prefers to be represented by the nominee of a negro convention, a corporation president, a stockholder in a national bank, a man who pays but one-third his tax dues, a man who will vote with the Republicans in all their nefarious plans of government. If the Advocate is satisfied with these things we are glad it is. We prefer to be represented by a man who was the choice of a majority of the white people and who is in line with his people on public issues.

ONE of the objections urged against Senator Morgan is that in all his term of service he has never put an Alabama man into office. This a very appropriate objection, coming from the Johnstonites, who consist mainly of men who have been put into office by the Governor. But we acknowledge the shortcoming on the Senator's part. He has no appointees to whoop him up. Of course we Morgan supporters would all like to have good fat offices at his hands, but we wont get them. We are not for him on account of the offices we expect to get. We leave that incentive to the Johnston supporters entirely. We are for Morgan on account of his peculiar ability and fitness, his honesty and loyalty to his party. We may suffer financially in devotion to principle, but we will have a clear conscience.

WE find that there is a strong sentiment among the Democrats of this county for a primary election to nominate candidates for county offices. There are some strong reasons urged pro and con. The matter should be thoroughly discussed before the meeting of the committee in April, and that plan adopted which will give most general satisfaction and at the same time result in the selection of the very best men for office. The first element of success is the hearty support of our own people. Which will better secure this, a primary or a convention? The next question is, Which will draw more strength from the opposition? We hope to see this matter wisely decided, and our columns are open to its full discussion.

MONTEVALLO ITEMS.

Showing Spirit of Progress in Our Sister City.

Something of the enterprise existing in Montevallo is shown by the following items published in the Age-Herald under date of February 22.

W. G. Robinson, of Birmingham, was here yesterday looking after the Robinson Mining Company's ore beds, which are being opened. The quality of ore is said to be the finest in the State. Two washers are being put in and lumber is being cut for forty houses for operatives.

Negotiations are pending for the location of a cotton factory and knitting mill here. The Southern Railway, through W. L. Henderson, its land and industrial agent, is lending valuable assistance to the enterprise.

The Montevallo Land and Improvement Company is being organized, which will put some choice property on the market and probably erect some houses for rent or sale. There is a great demand for houses. In one dwelling of eight rooms there live five families, aggregating twenty persons.

Banks Bros. are preparing to put in a steam brick machine, with a capacity of 30,000 brick per day.

Quite a number of Connecticut men are in town, having bought interests in valuable coal property near here.

Shelby.

Mrs. J. F. McLane is convalescent.

John O. Anchors has removed his family to Brighton, where he has secured employment. D. C. Glenn has moved into the house formerly occupied by Mr. Anchors.

Assistant Postmaster McLane has charge of the Russell library.

The store of W. E. Merrell came near being burned on Wednesday of last week. Mrs. Merrell heard the crackling of the flames and called Mr. Merrell, who attached a hose to the hydrant and succeeded in extinguishing the fire.

A union service of the young people was held last Sunday night in the Congregational church, Clarence Abbet presiding. The occasion was the birthday anniversary of the Christian Endeavor. Some account was given in several interesting readings of Christian Endeavor in all lands, with an exposition of certain special features of the work, such as The Quiet Hour, The Tenth Legion and The Forward Movement in Missions, known as the Macedonian Phalanx.

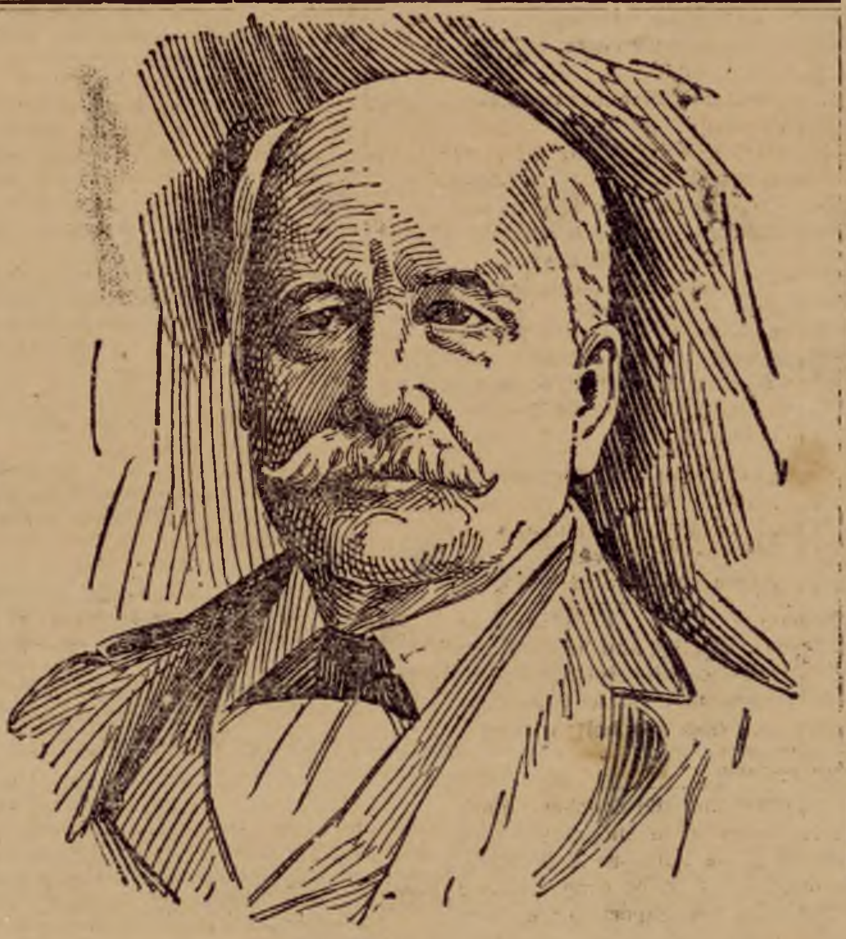
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.



Hon. Thos. Williams, of Elmore county, Alabama, ex-member of congress, statesman, orator, writer and one of the best informed men on the theoretical and practical application of commercial fertilizers. He is one of the largest cotton planters in the state, and produces his great crops upon poor sandy uplands by the skillful use of commercial fertilizers. He uses the ALABAMA FERTILIZER exclusively—after having tried nearly all other leading brands of complete fertilizers. His words, like rifle balls, are few, and go straight to the mark:

WETUMPKA, ALA., September 9, 1899.

DEAR SIRS:—Speaking from experimental tests, in results I am assured the ALABAMA FERTILIZER put up by you, is not excelled by any on our market, and I commend it to the public as a genuine fertilizer productive of good results.

The bags treated by the VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVER used by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., successfully resisted the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in the fertilizers, also preventing all loss from wasting.

Yours truly,
THOS. WILLIAMS.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT ANALYSIS.

Bulletin No. 12, issued by the Alabama Department of Agriculture, shows the actual commercial value of the ALABAMA FERTILIZERS to be 19.33 per cent more valuable than all the complete fertilizers or guanos offered for sale in the State of Alabama for the season covered by said bulletin.

Bulletin No. 13, just issued by the Department of Agriculture, shows the actual analysis, from samples sent to the Department by dealers and consumers throughout the State, that the ALABAMA FERTILIZER is actually $3.54 per ton or 24 per cent better than the guaranteed analysis by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., and this answers the question so often asked, "why the ALABAMA FERTILIZER produces so much better crops than other fertilizers of equal guaranteed analysis?" The ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be shipped in the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVED BAGS. There is no other preserved bag on the market of any value.

The Commissioner of Agriculture recommends and endorses it in the following words:

"I therefore unhesitatingly say that I believe the bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVING PROCESS will resist the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in fertilizers; that the meshes of the bags are so filled by the process as to prevent all wastage, and that if generally used by manufacturers, would be of inestimable value to carriers, dealers and consumers.

(Signed) "I. F. CULVER,
"Commissioner of Agriculture."

These MUMMIA PRESERVED BAGS are almost indestructible by the weather or Fertilizers. Can be hauled in the rain without material damage to bag or contents. Fertilizers put up in these bags can be hauled out to the farm at any time and kept ready for use.

The ALABAMA FERTILIZER is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all round fertilizer for cotton and corn.

ALABAMA FERTILIZER RECORD.

It has produced nearly four bales of cotton on one acre of poor sandy upland.
One hundred and thirty-two bushels of corn on one acre of poor sandy upland.
Two thousand and forty one bushels of corn on twenty acres of poor upland.
Land and corn accurately surveyed and measured by competent disinterested and honorable men.

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 48 premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

ESTABLISHED 1880 ALABAMA TRADE MARK

This trade mark is registered. It is our property. It is not likely to be counterfeited, as that would subject the perpetrator to the danger of heavy fine and imprisonment (see U. S. laws respecting copyrights). It is on every genuine sack of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

As required by state law the word "ALABAMA" in large letters is found on every bag of fertilizer offered for sale in this state. Some unscrupulous persons have employed this means to deceive you.

See that the above trade mark is on the bag, and take none offered you as the ALABAMA FERTILIZER without it.

Advice to Consumptives

There are three great remedies that every person with weak lungs, or with consumption itself, should understand. These remedies will cure about every case in its first stages; and many of those more advanced. It is only the most advanced that are hopeless. Even these are wonderfully relieved and life itself greatly prolonged.

What are these remedies? Fresh air, proper food and

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Be afraid of draughts but not of fresh air. Eat nutritious food and drink plenty of milk. Do not forget that Scott's Emulsion is the oldest, the most thoroughly tested and the highest endorsed of all remedies for weak throats, weak lungs and consumption in all its stages.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. City Election.

Notice is hereby given that an election has been called, ordered and will be held at the Court House, in the city of Columbiana, on the first Monday in April, 1900, (being April 2. 1900) for the election of a mayor and five aldermen, to compose the board of mayor and aldermen for the city of Columbiana.

J. T. Leeper,
Mayor.

Home-ground meal on sale at C. B. Duran & Co's.

J. C. Bannister, of Wilsonville, was in town Tuesday.

J. E. Ruffin, of Helena, was over a day or two this week.

J. H. Weldon, of Wilsonville, was in the city Monday.

Louisiana sugar house molasses on tap at C. B. Duran & Co's.

Mrs. Gordon DuBose is visiting in New Orleans this week.

Editor Graham, of the Sentinel, was in the city Tuesday.

Henry Grady flour for sale by C. B. Duran & Co.

County court is in session this week and a big crowd is in town.

Next Monday applicants for license to teach school will be examined at this place.

Seed Irish potatoes—Peerless, Early Rose and Triumph—at C. B. Duran & Co's.

Lost, strayed or stolen, one mayor. His return here will be liberally rewarded.

W. A. Parker has purchased the interest of B. L. Moore, and is now the sole proprietor of the livery stable.

George Taylor and Amos Daniel, two of Wilsonville's sterling Democrats, were in town Monday.

George Porter and Miss Olla Richardson, former residents of this place, were married at Irondale last Sunday.

Gordon DuBose visited Talladega Monday in the interest of the cotton mill, seeking information in regard to the cost of machinery and the details of building.

When you write a letter on a badly printed note head or on an out of date one the business world laughs at you and puts you down as a pretender.

One hundred shares, or $10,000, of the cotton factory stock has been paid in cash and the money is on deposit in the bank. This is a good start towards building the mill.

The second quarterly conference for this circuit will be held on April 29 and 30; that for Wilsonville on the 27th of the same month, and for Harpersville on May 26 and 27.

Does It Pay to Buy Cheap?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the more severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the only remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in severe throat and lung troubles, "Boschees German Syrup." It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy exporation, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try one bottle. Recommended many years by all druggists in the world. Hall Drug Co.

JAIL DELIVERY.

Five Prisoners take French Leave of their Apartments.

Some time Sunday night five prisoners, all white men, escaped from the county jail here, and left for parts unknown. Their names are as follows, with the crimes charged against them:

Carlie Ledbetter, bigamy.
Jim Patterson, assault.
Howard Wood, burglary.
William Jones, burglary.
Thos. Horton, burglary.

The last three were put in for breaking into a store at Pelham. Ledbetter was charged with bigamy, an account of which was given in this paper some time ago. Patterson was jailed on Sunday last.

These men occupied the lower tier of cages in the jail, where, as had been the custom, they were allowed to stay outside the cells for exercise. In the corner of the corridor is a patch on the iron floor, where former escapes have been effected. This patch was rather insecure, and the men succeeded in tearing it off, after which they dug a hole through to the outer corridor, from which they had easy egress.

One man, doubtless the smallest, had evidently gone out in advance and secured a piece of heavy iron pipe, with which the others worked. They had broken up their chairs and used the posts for levers.

The colored prisoners, who occupy the upper cages, say that the men went out about 4 o'clock in the morning. They heard the noise, but could not tell what was being done. There was some evidence of fire having been used to soften the thin iron patch.

Captain Walthall has only followed the established custom in allowing the prisoners to have their inner cell doors open at night, though the practice has resulted in one or two deliveries before. The patch was quite insecure, and an escape was only a matter of a little work.

Ledbetter has a wife and children in Elmore County, and some time ago came here and married the daughter of Mr. Sewell, of the Weldon neighborhood. Patterson was a notorious character in this section. The other three men were tramps and unknown.

We trust there will be a large attendance from Wilsonville, Calera, Montevallo and Shelby to hear Mrs. Collins at College building on the evening of March 22d. Mrs. Collins has entertained some of the largest audiences in the United States and in London. She is an artist of the purest type, and every one within reach should hear her. She lends her aid to our Presbyterian church, and the proceeds go towards purchasing new pews for the church. People in our neighboring towns will surely be glad to help us when they are sure of their money's worth in the entertainment. In order that no one may be deprived of hearing her we have placed the price for adults 35 and children 20 cts.

Appropos of the cotton mill Banker DuBose and Judge Longshore are contemplating the building of a canal for boats from here to the Coosa River. In view of the proposed improvement of the Coosa, the canal would give us splendid shipping facilities, and as it would cost only about $1,500,000 to build it we feel assured that by the time the factory is in operation boats will be running up to Columbiana. Then when the Nicaragua Canal is completed we will ship the product of our mill direct to Japan.

If you want your job printing done in the latest style and in a neat manner bring it to this office, where we have a variety of type to select from and a printer who knows how to print correctly, tastily and substantially. Don't ask us for prices on second-class work, because we don't do that kind. Our prices for first-class work as low as any, but on other classes we don't even make bids.

The county paper fights the battles of its partty, makes enemies, loses the fight, gets froze out by the opposition, and is left to root hog or die by its own people, and finally passes from hence. This is the usual course of a paper that sticks to principle, while the one that has no principle flourishes with the patronage of the very people it has abused the most.

J. P. Roberts and Miss Lizzie Hebson were married at Sylacauga on the 22nd of February, Rev. T. P. Roberts, of this place, father of the groom, officiating. From the Mountain Home we note that the wedding was a brilliant affair. Those who attended from here were J. R. White, Mrs. A. M. Elliott, Rev. T. P. Roberts and wife and Harry Roberts. Joe's many friends here wish him much joy.

A meeting of the white voters of Columbiana will be held on next Monday night for the purpose of nominating a citizens' ticket for mayor and aldermen for the ensuing year. All white voters are invited to participate.

This is not a cheap John printing office and we can't make prices to suit people who want that kind of work. We meet competition in our line, but our line is first class.

If your subscription is due send it to us, please. We must be paid these small amounts, which are too small to go after, but which in the aggregate mean much to us.

We have secured J. F. McLane as our agent at Shelby, and he is authorized to receive subscriptions. Our patrons there may settle with him, and we hope they will help him to increase the list.

It appears that the Southern Railway is interested in the cotton mill proposed to be built at Montevallo. Our neighbor is to be congratulated on this help. We expect to see their factory go up.

A reduction in the price of admission to the entertainment to be given by Mrs. Collins will be noted. Adults will be charged 35 cents and children 20. A splendid evening may be anticipated.

We learn that Shelby experienced quite a severe wind storm yesterday afternoon. A barn belonging to W. E. Merrell was blown down, the gin and mill of Terrell Bice was destroyed and a negro brakeman on an incoming freight was blown off the car and instantly killed.

Peyton Pitts, of Childersburg, was in the city this week. Mr. Pitts has been depot agent at Childersburg for several years, but has recently been appointed agent at Andalusia, a much better position and a large increase of salary.

If you buy clothes that are thrown together you get them cheap: when you have them made by a skilled workman you get a valuable article that is attractive and decent. Just so with your printed stationery. When it is done by an experienced printer who has nice type and good taste you present a decent appearance to the business world. That is the kind you get at this office at prices in proportion to the quality.

Dr. Cady's Condition Powders, are just what a horse needs when in bad condition. Tonic, blood purifier and vermifuge. They are not food but medicine and the best in use to put a horse in prime condition. Price 25 cents per package.

They Should Know it.

Many women suffer untold agony and misery because the nature of their disease is not correctly understood. They have been led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for the many ills that beset womankind.

Neuralgia, nervousness, headache, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, rheumatism, a dragging pain or dull ache in the back, weakness or bearing-down sensation, profuse or scanty supply of urine with strong odor, frequent desire to pass it with scalding or burning sensation, sediment in it after standing in bottle or common glass for 24 hours are signs of kidney and bladder trouble.

The above symptoms are often attributed by the patient herself or by her physician to female weakness or womb trouble. Hence, so many fail to obtain relief, because they are treating, not the disease itself, but a reflection of the primary cause, which is kidney trouble.

In fact, women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same remedy.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is the great discovery of the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is easy to get at any drug store for 50 cents or $1.

To prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and book telling all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Kindly mention The Chronicle, and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

OUR GREAT FARMING INDUSTRY.

$16,000,000,000 Capital Invested and 8,466,365 Workers Engaged.

Professor John F. Crowell of New York testified recently before the industrial commission, Washington, on the general subject of agriculture and the distribution of agricultural products. In a review of agricultural conditions in the United States he cited the Dutch farmer of southern Pennsylvania as a striking example of the successful small operator. He held that the Scandinavian immigrant was more successful than his American confrere because of instinctive frugality and farm economy bred in his bones, and said that training schools intended to develop untrained and unskilled youth into farmers on a small scale were of an unappreciated value to the state. Of wages and living conditions among various industries, Professor Crowell said:

"We want to know why it is that the returns of the various industries are so unequal. I have taken a few figures from the census of 1890. The amount of capital invested in agriculture was $16,000,000,000, and 8,466,365 workers were engaged. The value of the combined properties was $2,460,000,000, and the product per capita was $290. In manufactures the product per capita was $893. In mining it was $740. These figures in the eyes of the farmer's boy are decisive argument in favor of abandoning the farm for the factory. The farmer has to adjust himself to prevailing prices. A proper distributing system is his urgent need today. This can be effective only through the European markets. The productiveness of the farm is limited. But the manufacturer can govern his supply as market quotations may indicate. These difficulties are increased by too large a burden of taxation."

A DEADLY SNAKE DUEL.

METHODS OF RATTLER AND KING SNAKE IN A COMBAT.

Dramatic Story by a Naturalist Describing a Fight to the Death Which He Witnessed in the Florida Everglades How a King Snake Conquered a Rattler.

If the rattlesnake is justly called the king of America's woods and rocks, yet his crown is not held without danger, since he is hunted diligently and successfully. His fangs are, indeed, deadly and he wears a fine suit of armor, but the deer and the wild hog never fail to attack him, and he has an enemy of his own kind still more dangerous to him.

Snakes may be divided into three classes. Those which are venomous, the constrictors and those which are neither. Unless the second of these are wonderful for their size, they secure little of our attention, and yet they are generally beautiful in colors, most graceful in action, and often among our best friends.

In Florida, writes a naturalist, in the Youth's Companion, we have two constrictors especially noticeable—the black racer, which grows to the length of twelve feet and makes a business of warring on rats and other small deer the farmer hates; and the king snake, whose mission seems to be the extermination of the rattler.

One day I was returning from a day's hunt, at peace with the world and myself, when I heard a squirrel scolding as if he were a ward politician the night before election. The noise he made was so loud and insistent that I turned out of my way to see what could be the matter.

I found the little fellow on the trunk of a pine about ten feet from the ground, jumping about as if in convulsions. He would flourish his tail wildly, scold in anger, threaten an assault, run back a little way up the trunk, and then return and scold again.

I looked carefully and saw that his anger was directed at a rattlesnake that lay coiled at the foot of the tree. The snake was compressed into a ball, from the middle of which its rattle sounded continuously; its blazing little eyes were fixed unchangingly upon those of the squirrel.

The buzz, buzz, droned on the summer aid with a sleepy effect but the squirrel scolded in an ever ascending key. But for the hint of the squirrel's eyes I could not have located the rattler. His color and his variegated markings offered but little contrast to his surroundings. His monotone of noise was indefinite, and to sight as well as in sound, he seemed only a blur on the background of dark sand on which he lay.

Was the squirrel only curious to satisfy himself as to the character of that strange object, or was he hypnotized? I have often amused myself by exciting the violent curiosity of the little animal, but never did a waving or jumping object awaken such intense and painful emotion as the rattler always demands.

I knew what must follow soon; that the squirrel's cries would grow weak, that he would grow dizzy, and finally tumble from the tree, hang a moment by one claw, and then drop into the jaws of the living death that lay in wait. I had raised my rifle to save the little fellow, when the tragedy was interrupted from another quarter.

Swift as light, a form raced on the stage. It was clothed in a gleaming coat of beautiful white and black spots; it shifted and shone like a necklace of precious stones, and I knew the king snake claimed a victim.

The newcomer was smaller than the rattler, its ground color was a greenish gray, and the spots scintillated in the sunlight which sifted down upon the scene from the tangled branches overhead.

At the first rustle of its approach the rattler lost all interest in the squirrel, which ran back into the tree.

The king snake held his head high and raced round the rattler in a wide circle while the rattler tried to slink away. The king darted forward as if to attack, and the rattler threw himself into a coil. The king was again away and racing around, with a swiftness the rattler seemed unable to follow with his eye. The rattler was cowed already; his crest was lowered, his buzz, buzz was jerky and uneven, and although he presented a very different appearance from the self-confident arbiter of the woods which he had seemed when I first saw him, I could think of nothing but some human bully surprised in the act of torturing his helpless victim, and suddenly compelled to face an adversary worthy of his strength. The king snake seemed to enjoy the situation as a cat does her cruel dallying with a mouse.

Round and round went the king snake, and the rattler followed the movement till its neck was twisted. Whenever it attempted to turn the king would spring forward, and it was evident that the first failure of the rattler in swiftness would be the signal for muscle to clinch with venom. The king would race from left to right and then reverse, and if the rattler failed to follow that would be the end of him. This happened, and I saw the king in the air, but could not catch the strike, so instantaneous was it.

There was a confusion of flying pine needles in a cloud of white dust, and I saw that two inches of the king's coil was about the throat of the rattler. Over and over they went, the king's head above that of his enemy, and a curve of his body acting as a buffer to keep up the motion which enabled him to take another turn and still another.

And so the struggle continued, till the rattler could not writhe freely, and he was held as a vine wraps a tree.

When he lay still the king snake began to uncoil himself slowly, and at every motion of his enemy the constrictor's folds contracted and crushed with killing effect. Even when there was only a quiver of the tail, the king still gripped the throat. It was plain he had a wholesome respect for the fangs, that were still terrible.

As a last precaution the king applied his nostrils delicately to those of the rattler, and repeated that several times, as if to detect the faintest breath. Satisfied at last, it released its enemy, but still watched, ready to resume its hold at the slightest sign of life.

There I left him, keeping grim guard over the body of his vanquished foe. As I turned away, the voice of the released squirrel in the tree broke out again, saucy and defiant as it always is, but no longer filled with agony and terror, as at first.

IN THE HEART OF BRAZIL.

The U. S. S. Wilmington Cruises Up the Amazon River.

The cruise of the "Wilmington" 2,300 miles along the Amazon is the subject of a very readable article in Ainslee's:

"The dreary solitude and monotony of the interminable stretch of low banks and the knowledge that back of these shores lay hundreds of miles of unexplored, almost impenetrable forest swampy, stagnant, fever-breeding and pestilent, gave the journey up the great river a weird, mysterious tone.

"Passing craft were few and far between. Now and then rafts, or 'bolsas,' as they are locally termed, would be discerned near the shore. These 'bolsas' are peculiar to the Amazon, and are lashed together with vines, and upon this platform is erected a small bamboo house, with thatched roof. Several families equipped with provisions will embark upon one of these queer craft, and drift with the current until a desirable place for settling is reached.

"As the 'Wilmington' progressed it was noticed that the character of the vegetation changed somewhat. The forests grew more dense, and the luxuriant hues of the tropics were pronounced. During the day the heat was oppressive. There was a moist, humid touch to the atmosphere, and an ever-present odor of decaying plants assailed the nostrils. Late in the afternoon, however, cooling rains invariably set in, rendering the night comparatively pleasant.

"About five hundred miles from Para, at the junction of the Tapajos River with the Amazon, a town was reached which proved extremely interesting to the gunboat's crew. Its name, Santarem, gave no evidence of the fact that it was originally colonized by Americans. That was in 1866, and the passing of thirty-three years has removed all traces of the Yankee settlers. It did not require this result of an attempt at Anglo-Saxon colonization to prove to the 'Wilmington's' people that the tropics form no favorable home for their race. Despite the gorgeous panoramas of flaunting colors in forest and sky, the evidences of nature's most lavish hand in flowers and fruits and mineral wealth, and a climate eloquent of perpetual rest and dolce far niente, not a solitary officer or 'jackie' of the gunboat would have even harbored an inclination to exchange his home land for this.

"At Santarem were seen several typical Amazon River steamers. They were of various sizes, and looked not unlike the craft familiar to the Mississippi. The more pretentious were so constructed as to furnish two decks open at the sides, the upper devoted to first-class passenger and the lower restricted to those travelling second class. As cattle, mules and freight are also carried on the latter deck, it can easily be understood that this location is not entirely desirable. There are no standing beds on board, hammocks being invariably used. These steamers ply to all parts of the great network of rivers forming the Amazon system, and are utilized in transporting rubber."

TWO MORE ISLANDS.

The Mona and Monito Islands in the Mona Passage Belong to the United States.

Two new islands are to be added to the possessions of the United States in the West Indies. They are the Mona Island and Monito Island in the Mona Passage, between San Domingo and Puerto Rico. The former is an island of some size but Monito is only a coral reef. It was not definitely known until a few days ago that the islands belonged to the United States and then not until after considerable research. The Post Office Department has been having a map made of the American possessions in the West Indies, and was in doubt whether or not to include these islands on the map. An official communication was sent to the State Department inquiring if the treaty between United States and Spain provided for their acquisition by the United States. The treaty was examined and showed that Spain ceded to the United States, Puerto Rico and all other Spanish islands in the West Indies except Cuba. No special mention was made of Mona Island, and there was no information regarding the island to show to whom it belonged. It is nearly six miles long and three and half miles wide. It rises about one hundred and seventy-five feet high and is situated just thirty miles west of Mayaguez in Puerto Rico. It is about forty miles from the coast of San Domingo and lies almost midway of the Mona passage between the two islands. The State Department had no information showing whether or not Mona belonged to Spain, and this was not determined until a search was made of several charts in the Navy Department. One chart was found indicating in colors the different colonial possessions of the world, and this showed that Mona was regarded as a Spanish possession and accordingly becomes American property under the Paris treaty. It is thought probable by naval officials that the island may prove of service to the United States at some time in the future, and it is not unlikely that orders will be issued to have it surveyed and charted as an American possession. It is not inhabited.

Where the Shots Strike.

Of every 110 shots which strike soldiers 43 will lodge in the legs, 33 shots will lodge in the arms, 22 strike between neck and waist, 1 in the neck, and 11 shots in some part of the soldier's head.

A Nursery Napoleon.

"You should be more careful of your toys, Johnny," said a mother to her small son. "Look at Willie Brown; he seldom breaks any of his."

"Yes," replied the wise youngster, "and that's why he doesn't get half as many new ones as I do."

CASE OF SOMNAMBULISM.

Victim Wondered He Got His Feet Soiled.

"All hotels have more or less experience with somnambulists," said the clerk of one of the New Orleans houses, "but we had a case here recently that is certainly entitled to first prize for originality. Just a week ago today a gentleman registered with us from—well, I guess it would hardly be fair to give his address—it was a town in an adjoining state, and I assigned him myself to a room on the second floor. At about 1 o'clock the first night he was here he walked downstairs and disappeared through the front door. In an hour or thereabouts he came back, and as he was passing through the lobby some guests who happened to be standing there talking noticed that he was barefooted. Of course they were greatly startled, but he paid no attention to them and walked sraight on upstairs. Naturally they concluded that he was either drunk or crazy, and when they told the clerk on duty about it he thought they were joking. Nevertheless, he mentioned the matter to me, and I told him to keep an eye open for the gentleman the next night. I saw him several times during the day, and he appeared to be all right, but at about the same hour as before he came downstairs again, and, sure enough, he was in his bare feet. Otherwise he was fully dressed; he had his hat on his head and he wore the expression of a man in a brown study. As on the first occasion, he spoke to nobody, and one of the employes of the house slipped out behind him. He went straight up the street, walking very slowly, and looking neither to the right nor the left. After going eight or nine blocks, he stopped, and then strolled back. When he entered the hotel he passed under a strong light, and it was plain from the appearance of his eyes that he was sound asleep. He went upstairs, entered his room, which he had left open, and that was the last seen of him for the night. Next morning I took him aside and told him what had occurred. He was perfectly dumbfounded, yet he said that he had arisen both mornings with a vague recollection of having taken a midnight walk, which he supposed was merely a dream. He had also been puzzled to note that his feet were soiled and bruised. He stayed with us one more night, but did not repeat the performance. The man is a well-to-do merchant, and assured me that he had not walked in his sleep before—at least, not to his knowledge—since he was a child."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Savage Hair-Dressing.

Hair-dressing among savages is an art absolutely unequaled among civilized people, and the edifices erected on the heads of Africans and Fiji islanders are works of time and, like Rome, are not built in a day nor taken down in a night. From the island of Engano, near Sumatra, comes a curious head ornament. It is a bell-shaped cap of black wool, with a grotesque little figure of a man seated on top, with eyes of mother-of-pearl, the black inlaid with spots of the same substance.

A somewhat novel form of rail joint has recently been introduced on a Western railroad. It is a base-support joint located between ties, and comprises in addition to angle bars on either side of the rails fastened together by four bolts, a short piece of rail inverted and placed under the joint. This piece of rail is fastened to flanges of the angle bars by U-bolts. Three of these bolts are used in some cases and two in others, the presence of the middle bolt having not yet been proved absolutely necessary.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Sore Hands

Red, Rough Hands, Itching, Burning Palms, and Painful Finger Ends.

One Night Treatment

Soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of CUTICURA SOAP. Dry, and anoint freely with CUTICURA, the great skin cure and purest of emollients. Wear, during the night, old, loose kid gloves, with the finger ends cut off and air holes cut in the palms. For red, rough, chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, with shapeless nails and painful finger ends, this treatment is simply wonderful, and points to a speedy cure of the most distressing cases when physicians and all else fail.

Sore Hands 8 Years Cured.

Pain So Intense Would Nearly Twist Fingers From Sockets. Hands Puffed Up Like a Toad. Water Ran Through Bandages to Floor. Had to Walk the Floor Until Would Fall Asleep. Fingers Would Peel Like an Onion. Doctors Could Not Cure.

Eight years ago I got sore hands, commencing with a burning sensation on my fingers and on top of the hand. When I rubbed them, you could see little white pimples. I felt like twisting my fingers out of their sockets. I had high fever, and cold chills ran over me, and so I kept it going until I was tired out. Nights, I had to walk the floor until I fell asleep. My hands peeled like an onion, the finger nails got loose, and the water ran out, and wherever there was a little pimple there the burning fire was—that happened at least ten times. I am running a blacksmith shop, horse-shoeing, and I would not shut up the shop for anybody, but it was hard. My hands puffed up worse than a toad. When I drove horse nails, the water from my hands ran through the bandage, on to the floor. My customers refused to look at my hand. I had a friend take me to the doctor; he gave a solution of something to bathe my hands. I went to another doctor, I think, for a year. I found your advertisement in a Utica newspaper, and I got the CUTICURA remedies. As soon as I used them I began to gain, and after using a small quantity of them I was entirely cured. I would not take fifty dollars for a cake of CUTICURA SOAP if I could not get any more. I would not suffer any more as I did, for the whole country.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap

Exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

VOL. XV. COLUMBIANA, SHELBY COUNTY, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, MARCH 8, 1900. NO. 12.

DEMOCRATS CAUGHT NAPPING

REPUBLICANS IN THE HOUSE PLAY A TRICK UPON UNSUSPECTING OPPONENTS.

PASSED AN IMPORTANT BILL

It Confers Power Upon President To Dispose of Porto Rican Revenues.

President McKinley sent the following special message to congress Friday recommending that all the revenue collected on importations from the island of Porto Rico since the evacuation of the island by Spain, amounting to more than $2,000,000 should be placed at the disposal of the president for the relief of the island.

"To the Senate and House of Representatives: Since the evacuation of Porto Rico by the Spanish forces on the 18th of October, 1898, the United States has collected on products coming from that island to the ports of the United States the duties fixed by the Dingley act and amounting to $2,095,455.88, and will continue to collect under said law until congress shall otherwise direct. Although I had the power, and having in mind the best interests of the people of the island, used it, to modify duties on goods and products entering into Porto Rico, I did not have the power to remit or modify duties on Porto Rican products coming into the ports of the United States.

"In view of the pressing necessity for immediate revenue in Porto Rico for conducting the government there, and for the extension of public education, and in view also of the provisional legislation just inaugurated by the house of representatives and for the purpose of making the principle embodied in that legislation applicable to the immediate past as well as to the immediate future, I recommend that the above sum, so collected, and the sums hereafter collected under existing law, shall, without waiting for the enactment of the general legislation now pending, be appropriated for the use and benefit of the island.

"WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

"Executive Mansion, March 2, 1900."

TAKEN UP AT ONCE.

The message was greeted with Republican applause in the house and Mr. Cannon asked unanimous consent for the immediate passage of a bill to carry out the recommendation. There was no objection and it was agreed there should be twenty minutes debate on a side.

"I hope the recommendation will meet with favor on that side of the house," said Mr. Richardson, the minority leader.

"I'll see if it meets with favor on this side of the house," retorted Mr. Cannon sharply. "I'll now ask for unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of a bill to carry the recommendation of that message into force."

The suddenness of the request brought consternation to the Democratic side. There was no time for consultation. Mr. Richardson stood hesitating a moment.

"Better do it at once," said Mr. Cannon "before you change your mind."

This shaft raised a laugh.

Mr. Richardson said he would not object but wanted to know how much time would be allowed for debate.

Mr. Cannon replied that he hoped there would be no debate. The bill contained an exceedingly plain proposition and needed no explanation. He finally suggested twenty minutes on a side. To this Mr. Richardson assented, observing:

"I do not suppose gentlemen on the other side can be of one mind longer than forty minutes. (Laughter.) We agree if it will help you out of the hole."

The bill was then offered, as follows:

"Be it enacted, etc., that the sum of $2,095,455, being the amount of customs revenue received on importations by the United States from Porto Rico since the evacuation of Porto Rico by the Spanish forces on October 18, 1898, to January 1, 1900, or that shall hereafter be collected under existing law, shall be placed at the disposal of the president to be used for the government and benefit of Porto Rico until otherwise provided by law, and the revenue herein referred to, already collected and to be collected under existing laws, are hereby appropriated for the purposes herein specified out of moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated."

EXPLAINED BY MR. CANNON.

Mr. Cannon said there was no reason to make an extended argument in support of the bill. The brief message of the president, he said, covered all the points necessary to justify the passage of the bill. It appropriated all the money in the treasury collected up to January 1, and such as shall be hereafter collected on exports from Porto Rico for the benefit of the people of the island.

Mr. Cannon explained that the sugar and tobacco piled up in Porto Rico controlled by the sugar and tobacco trusts which was awaiting shipment to this country would be shipped to the United States if this bill passed and that every dollar of duty paid by these trusts would be devoted to the storm swept and starving inhabitants of the island. (Republican applause.)

"You have been shedding crocodile tears," he concluded. "Now come up and vote for this bill, every man of you. (Renewed applause.)

Mr. Bailey, of Texas, replied to Mr. Cannon and evoked a round of Democratic applause by his first sentence. If he had known when the unanimous consent was submitted that the bill placed at the absolute disposal of the president $2,000,000 now in the treasury and an indefinite sum hereafter to be collected, he said, he would himself have taken the responsibility of objecting. He would never consent, he said, to turn over to the discretion of one man money in the treasury.

Mr. Cannon moved the previous question on the Porto Rico bill and this prevailed on a standing vote of 143 to 119. A yea and nay vote followed.

Mr. Bailey's motion to commit the bill was lost by 133 to 149. The vote was then taken by yeas and nays on the passage of the bill and resulted 168 to 167. The bill now goes to the senate.

TO ASSIST BAKER FAMILY.

Massachusetts Congressman Introduces Bill In the House.

A Washington dispatch says: The lynching of the negro postmaster at Lake City, S. C., in 1898, was made the subject of a special joint resolution introduced in the house Friday by Representative Roberts, Republican, of Massachusetts. It provides as follows:

"Whereas, On or about the 21st of February, 1898, 100 or more armed men fired upon and killed the postmaster at Lake City, S. C., and one of his family and wounded several others and then burned all their property; and,

"Whereas, That said family is in a suffering and destitute condition without even the necessaries of life; therefore,

"Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, That the sum of eight dollars per month is hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, to be immediately available for the relief of the said family, to be distributed under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the postmaster general.

Grant of Land Requested.

Senator Morgan has introduced a bill in the senate to grant land to the state of Alabama for the purpose of education of colored students at Montgomery and Troy. The bill provides for the granting of 25,000 acres for the use of the State Normal school at Montgomery and the same for the State Normal college at Troy.

HOW DALY SPENT MONEY.

Bought Out Newspapers To Push the Prosecution of Senator Clark.

When the senate committee on elections resumed its sitting at Washington Friday, Mr Campbell, Daly's attorney, still on the witness stand, made a general statement of his expenditures in connection with the prosecution of the case against Senator Clark, of Montana. The statement showed the following footings:

Establishing and purchasing newspapers, $19,550; expenses in the present investigation and in the Wellcome disbarment proceedings, $21,970.

Mr. Campbell said that the $19,550 had been expended on three papers.

PRESIDENT IN NEW YORK.

Attends Annual Banquet of the Ohio Society In Gotham.

President McKinley and party left Washington Friday for New York, where the president attended the annual dinner of the Ohio society Saturday. The party, who traveled in a private car, attached to a regular train on the Pennsylvania road, consisted of President and Mrs. McKinley, Miss Mary Barber, General Corbin, Mr. Cortelyou, one of the president's secretaries.

GATE CITY A TOTAL LOSS.

Savannah Line Steamer Breaks To Pieces and Goes Down.

The Savannah line steamer Gate City, which ran ashore opposite Moriches, L. I., on the night of February 8, broke in two early Friday morning. All hope of saving the vessel had been given up several days ago and the wreckers have been confining their efforts to the removal of her cargo.

The wreckers, who were on board when the vessel broke up, were safely landed with the aid of the life-saving crew. Over two-thirds of the cargo, a greater part of which is said to be undamaged, had been saved.

TEXANS CELEBRATE.

Independence Day of Lone Star State Appropriately Observed.

Friday was the anniversary of Texas' independence, and it was suitably observed by the State university and other schools with appropriate exercises. This anniversary was the sixty-fourth one, and in commemoration thereof the Daughters of the Republic presented the State university with a handsome flag. Appropriate exercises were held in all the cities of the state.

SEIGE DISASTROUS.

Horrors of Ladysmith Investment As Told By Brother of Colonel Cecil Rhodes.

Colonel Rhodes, the brother of Cecil Rhodes, describing in The London Times the entry into Ladysmith of Lord Dundonald and 300 men of the Imperial Lighthorse and Natal Carbineers February 28, says:

"It is impossible to depict the enthusiasm of the beleaguered garrison; cheer rang from post to post, and staff officers, civilians and soldiers flocked to greet them. The contrast between the robust troops of a dozen battles and the pale, emaciated defenders of Ladysmith was great.

"General White and his staff met the troops in the center of the town. He was cheered with heartfelt enthusiasm. He addressed the civilians and thanked them and the garrison for their magnificent support, which we alone can realize.

"We could possibly have hung on for six weeks longer, but the privations would have been great and sickness and the paucity of our ammunition would have limited the number of assaults we would have been able to resist.

"We started the siege with 12,000 troops, 2,000 civilians and 4,000 natives. Between casualties and sickness 8,000 soldiers passed through the hospital. It is impossible to over emphasize the privations of the sick. Since the middle of January a man once down was practically lost. The, reduced rations of the soldiers just sufficed for their subsistence. Daily thirty old horses and mules were slaughtered and converted into soup and sausages. From January 15 to now there have been over 200 deaths from disease alone. The last fortnight saw the majority of the field horses unhorsed and the guns permanently posted in our defenses. The cavalry and drivers were converted into infantry and sent to the trenches. A line of defenses had been constructed with the view of a possible final contingency, if the outer works should be carried.

"Since the investment the total casualties were:

"Killed or died or wounded, 24 officers and 235 men; died of disease, 6 officers and 340 men; wounded, 70 officers and 520 men, exclusive of white civilians and natives."

WANTS MEDIATION.

Sulzer Introduces Another Resolution of Sympathy For Boers.

Representative, Sulzer, of New York, has introduced the following resolution in the house:

Resolved, That the republic of the United States sympathizes with the brave Boers in their struggle for freedom and independence and hereby declares that the people of the South African republic and the Orange Free State are, and of right ought to be, free and independent, and the congress of the United States hereby protests and remonstrates against the barbarous war now being waged by Great Britain against the patriots of South Africa; and the president is hereby authorized to take such steps as may be expedient in his judgment to secure and bring about an honorable peace between the contending parties.

BOER LINES RE-FORMED.

Roberts Again Faces Burghers In Vicinity of Paardeberg.

A London special says: Lord Roberts, at Osfontein, six or eight miles east of Pardeberg, faces the re-formed Boer army, from five to six thousand strong. This may be merely a corps of observation, ready to retire on prepared positions.

Lord Roberts has surprised observers by the excellence of his transport during the first advance and he is likely to do so again, although military men think he must wait for some days before going much farther. The Boers, presumably, will use this delay for all it is worth, pulling their resources together.

Association Urges Congress To Take Immediate Action.

At Saturday's session of the National Editorial Association in New Orleans the resolutions against trusts were taken up. The debate on the question continued for some time and with much heat. The resolutions against trusts were adopted, 244 to 64, with an amendment urging congress to take immediate action against the paper trust.

MOYZE BOUND OVER.

Bogus "Captain Clark" Is Committed To the Federal Court.

Julius Moyse, who married Miss Bertha Warken, at New Orleans, under the name of "Captain" Clark, was tried before Commissioner Craig, of the United States court, on the charge of impersonating a government officer. He was committed to the higher court under a bond of $1,000. Moyse says his father will sign his bond.

Number of Prisoners 4,660.

The Boer prisoners surrendered at Paardeberg total up 4,660 men. About 3,000 of them were sent to Cape Town.

SO SAYS A TENNESSEEAN

General Wilson, However, Has An Optimistic View, and Says No Trouble Is Expected.

A Nashville dispatch says: Colonel Frank M. Gardenshire, a prominent citizen of Chattanooga, well known over the state, has just returned from a trip to Havana. Gardenshire, in an interview, predicts an uprising on the day of the Havana municipal election this month. He says:

"In my opinion there will be serious trouble in Havana on the day of election. I have several personal friends in Havana, and this seems to be the impression among them.

"According to a late regulation, promulgated by General Wood and other authorities, 60 per cent of the voters will be disfranchised. Under the recent order the qualifications of a voter were that he must be able to read and write and own $250 worth of property. This rule was advocated by the Spaniards and the more intelligent classes in Havana. The regulation almost shuts out the average run of natives, and many of them declare that if they are not permitted to vote in the election there will be some throat cutting on election day.

"The people from the outside country are now moving into Havana, and all want offices. Some of them are fighting for places on the police force, while there are just twelve candidates in the race for mayor.

"The natives seem to hate our soldiers worse than the Spaniards, but the impression prevails among the officials at Havana that the Cubans would in engage in rows among themselves the minute the troops are withdrawn. In fact, so far as I could see, the gardening and farm work is being done by Chinamen."

SAYS CUBANS ARE SATISFIED.

Generel James H. Wilson, military governor of the department of Matanzas-Santa Clara, in the course of an interview regarding Cuban affairs, said to the correspondent of the Associated Press, now in Matanzas:

"Trouble is absolutely out of the question. The future depends largely upon agricultural prosperity, and where work is plentiful, wages are good and a country is prosperous, no sensible man wishes to alter conditions. If sugar goes to the United States free or nearly so, there will be such an influx of capital and of immigration as would render Cuba ere long one of the richest and most prosperous countries in the world.

"The cattle industry yields enormous profits, particularly as respects working cattle, which can never be replaced by mules, because the peculiar conditions are better adapted to cattle. Coffee, timber and fruit also offer great inducements to capitalists, and tobacco planting yields almost immediate returns.

"I don't consider that the immediate future of Cuba depends chiefly upon schools, roadmaking, improved sanitation or judiciary reform, although, of course, these things are of very great importance. The best thing the United States can do for Cuba and the Cubans is to give every opportunity for improving the value of the land by putting it to the best uses. In this way capital could do an immense amount of good here, as well as get large returns. I suggest supplying cattle for working purposes on a time basis, accepting regular rates of interest, which should be about 1 per cent per month. Cattle can be landed here at a cost of $70 a yoke, which, once here, would bring more than $150.

"Large numbers of working cattle are required by reliable and hard-woking men who are anxious to obtain them. Were I a man of twenty-five, with energy and some capital, I should certainly look upon Cuba as one of the best places to accumulate wealth."

PRESENT TO LOUBET.

First Lafayette Dollar Is Given To French President.

Robert J. Thompson, secretary of the Lafayette monument commission, as special commissioner of the United States, representing President McKinley and in his name, presented to President Loubet Saturday morning the first of the Lafayette dollars, which was enclosed in a casket costing $1,000. The presentation took place at the Elysee palace in Paris.

PETTIGREW AFTER CORBIN.

Asks For Courtmartial Proceedings of 1864.

When the senate convened Saturday Mr. Pettigrew introduced and the senate passed a resolution instructing the secretary of war to send to the senate the proceedings in the courtmartial documents of 1864 against the then Lieutenant Colonel Corbin, now adjutant general of the army.

Coaling Station Bought.

The United States government has purchased a site in Portsmouth, six miles from Newport, R. I., as a coaling station. The site consists of 100 acres with a shore frontage of nearly a mile.

GUN SHIPMENT STOPPED.

Kentucky Republican Officials Revoke Order for Sending Arms to London.

The orders for the shipment of guns and ammunition from the state arsenal at Frankfort to London, Ky., by the republican state authorities was revoked Monday afternoon and a car loaded with munitions of war consigned to London was unloaded and its contents returned to the arsenal in Frankfort. The state officials give no reason for the change of program. The soldiers worked all forenoon loading the car. There is a report that the war department at Washington interfered and requested the guns and ammunition already taken to London to be returned to Frankfort. The removal of the arsenal equipments was the subject for an investigating resolution in the senate by Senator Triplett, an anti-Goebel democrat.

There was unusual activity Monday among the detectives and attorneys who are working on the Goebel assassination case. Something of a sensational nature may develop in the examining trial of Harland Whittaker.

NEUVA CACERAS OCCUPIED.

Lieutenant Gallher Killed During a Small Engagement.

General Bates' expedition to Southern Luzon, consisting of the Fortieth and Forty-fifth regiments, a total of 2,300 men, has occupied Neuva Caceras, province of South Camarinez; Daet, province of North Camarinez, and the neighboring smaller towns. The enemy resisted at one point, and two Americans were killed, including Lieutenant Gallher of the Fortieth regiment. On February 20 the expedition arrived at San Miguel Bay, landed, and in three columns immediately pushed inland, converging upon Neuva Caceras and attempted to control the enemy's route to retreat. At Libmanan, north of Neuva Caceras, the enemy was concealed in the rice fields and resisted a battalion of the Fortieth regiment, which engaged them at close quarters with bayonets. After forty minutes' fighting the enemy fled and Libmanan was occupied.

The Americans buried 64 of the enemy, whose total loss in killed and wounded is estimated at 140.

WHEELER ARRIVES HOME.

Visited Guam on His Return—Plague at Honolulu.

The United States transport Warren arrived at San Francisco Monday from Manila via Hong Kong, Guam and Honolula On board the Warren are General Wheeler and his daughter; Lieutenant Commander Briggs, U. S. N.; Captain Johnson, U. S. V., and several passengers.

The Warren made a stop of ten days at Guam to permit General Wheeler to take an investigation of the government established there by Lieutenant Leary. The Warren brings the news from Honolulu that of the three suspected cases of plague reported on February 20, but one proved to be genuine plague, and when the Warren left Honolulu the authorities were of the opinion that the plague had died out.

NO HEALTH FUND.

Mississippi Legislature Postpones Action. Anti-Mob Bill Passed.

The lower house of the Mississippi legislature created considerable surprise Monday by indefinitely postponing action on the bill making an appropriation to defray the expenses of the state board of health during the ensuing two years. The bill originally passed the senate, carrying $20,000 per year, but was cut down by the house finance committee to $2,500. This leaves the board without any funds whatever to be used in case of a yellow fever epidemic.

The senate passed the Adams anti-mob bill. The bill merely provides that a person accused of rape shall be given an immediate trial, and that the sheriff or other officer who allows a prisoner to be taken from his custody and lynched shall be arraigned before a circuit court.

Secretary Root Goes to Cuba.

Secretary Root and party sailed from Tampa for Havana Monday on the transport Sedgwick. Secretary Root inspected the fortifications at Egmont Key and was much pleased with the work.

Dead in a Sleeper.

When the New Orleans sleeper arrived in Chattanooga Monday morning a dead man was found in one of the sleeping berths. He was R. N. Williams, a planter of New Orleans, La., who was en route to Washington to urge an appropriation for the levies in Louisiana. Death was due to heart disease.

EDITOR KOHLSAAT GIVES WARNING

President's Friend Deplores Action On Porto Rican Bill.

WAS A SERIOUS MISTAKE

Urges Party To Undo Wrong Before It Is Too Late.

The Chicago Times-Herald, whose proprietor is as close to President McKinley as any man in the country, Senator Hanna not excepted, prints an editorial headed, "Under the Great Wrong to Porto Rico," warning the president and the Republican party that defeat awaits them in November if a change is not made in the policy towards Porto Rico. After saying that the bill only passed the lower house of congress because the president personally urged several representatives to vote for it, the editorial proceeds:

Thus was the grievous blunder committed. How grievous and fraught with what dire possibilities, not only to the Republican party but to the country neither congress nor the president could have foreseen. But they must realize now that the tariff section in the Porto Rico bill has aroused a storm throughout the country that will not down.

"If congress and the president persist in their present course nothing can save the Republican party from defeat next November.

"It will surely cost them the house of representatives, and it may cost them the presidency. Worse than any of these possibilities, it may involve the election of Bryan, with all that that implies.

"But one course is open to the Republican party. Let it face the situation with the only spirit that can compel respect in the presence of a stupendous and humiliating wrong.

"Let it acknowledge the mistake and make haste to regain popular confidence by undoing the contemplated wrong to Porto Rico.

"There is no shame in retreating from the verge of a precipie before taking the last irretrievable step. The only salvation for the Republican party is through the gate that gives free trade to Porto Rico. The country looks to President McKinley to rise to the full stature of a statesman who dares to acknowledge a mistake and undo a wrong."

SHARP SUNDAY FIGHT.

Colonials Engage Boers and Rout Them From Strong Position.

Advices from Dordrecht, Cape Colony, under date of Sunday, March 4, stated that General Brabant's colonial division, after a night's march, attacked the Boers in a strong position at La Buschagne's Nek, on the road from Dordrecht to Jamestown.

The engagement proceeded with great vigor and the Boers gradually retired before the British shell fire from three positions. A heavy rifle fire was exchanged where the British were engaging Boers on the right flank.

By evening General Brabant's advance had been most satisfactory. After marching and bivouacing over night the force reached the strong entrenched positions which they occupied and now hold, the Boers being on the opposite hill.

The British remained in the captured positions, although the Boers brought two guns into action and made determined efforts to retake them. The British losses are six killed and eighteen wounded.

JUDGE RESERVES DECISION.

Kentucky Contest Matter Is Now In Hands of the Court.

Argument in the suits to determine the rights of the rival claimants for the office of governor was concluded at Louisville Saturday before Judge Field, who took the case under advisement. A decision is not expected for several days. When it is announced an appeal will be taken to the state court of appeals. This, the Democrats claim, is the court of last resort. The Republicans, however, will try to get the case before the United States supreme court if the decision is against them.

SHELDON VENTURE SUCCESSFUL.

People Anxious To See How Christ Would Run a Newspaper.

A Topeka, Kans., dispatch says: At the close of business in The Capitol counting room Saturday night the subscriptions for the Sheldon editions, beginning with the issue of March 13th, passed the 100,000 mark with a bushel basketful of letters unopened. Sunday an express wagon hauled to The Capitol office a load of letters which will require the services of a dozen extra clerks to open and put on the mailing list.

CRUMPACKER MADE HIT.

Indiana Republicans Talk of Making Him Governor.

Among certain Republican leaders in various parts of Indiana a movement has started in favor of nominating Congressman Crumpacker, of the tenth district, for governor. He was the only Republican congressman of the state who voted against the Porto Rican tariff bill and it is due to this fact that the movement has started in his favor for the Republican nomination.

THE CHRONICLE

F. W. GIST, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Entered in the post-office at Columbiana Ala., as second class matter.

CALL FOR COUNTY CONVENTION.

By direction of the Democratic executive committee of Shelby County a convention of the Democratic party of said county is hereby called to meet at the courthouse in Columbiana at 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, the 21st day of April, 1900, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Representative and selecting delegates to the State and Senatorial conventions.

For the purpose of selecting delegates to said county convention beat meetings or primaries as each beat may determine will be held in each beat on Saturday, the 14th day of April, at such hour as the beat committeemen may fix for their respective beats.

The following invitation, in the language of the resolution by the Democratic State executive committee, is hereby extended:

"Be it resolved by the Democratic State executive committee of Alabama that we hereby cordially invite all conservative white voters, irrespective of past political associations or differences who can unite with us in the effort for pure and economical government, and who will support the nominees and principles of the Democratic party, to participate in the primaries of the party throughout the State.

"Resolved, further, That all persons participating in the primaries, conventions or mass meetings of the party hereafter to be held thereby pledge themselves to support the nominees of such primaries, conventions or mass meetings, whether municipal, county, state or Federal."

The number of delegates to which each beat will be entitled will be as follows, based on the vote for Governor at the last State election:

1—Columbiana	9
1—Shelby	3
2—Spring Creek	2
3—Calera	5
4—Montevallo	9
5—Tylers	1
6—Helena	3
7—Elliottsville	4
8—Yellowleaf	1
9—Wilsonville	6
10—Harpersville	7
11—Spearman's	2
12—Highland	1
13—Bold Springs	1

15—Sterrett	2
16—Vincent	5
17—Pelham	2
18—Dunnavant	1
Total	65

W. B. BROWNE, Chairman.

ABOUT 300 more rolling mill men will be employed in the Birmingham district during the next three weeks. Labor agents are drumming for help in the increasing industries.

WE note that everywhere the Johnston candidates are announcing subject to instruction, whereas the Morgan men announce in the open for the Senator. The whole Johnston crowd are afraid of their position, while the Senator's friends are willing to stand or fall with him.

THE Governor is out in another letter, in which he says, "I lived many years in the black belt and took part with our people in their heroic struggle for white supremacy." A new role, that of a black belt ballot-box stuffer. He is versatile, all things to all men, as it were.

THE Court Journal still insists that the lack of appointees to hang upon his coat tails is a serious fault with Senator Morgan. The Journal nor its boss can rise far enough above personal politics to recognize greatness or to appreciate the love of the people for a truly great man.

THE Typographical Union of Birmingham has discovered that an organ of the Governor is being printed out of the State and in a rat shop. If the organized labor of Birmingham takes the matter up the Governor's campaign in Birmingham will be another State Fair failure.

THE Court Journal quotes the Advocate to show the state of the Democratic party in this county. We are glad to say that the Democracy of this county is able to run its own affairs without the assistance of the Governor, the Journal or the Advocate. In fact we expect a continuation of the opposition of all three, of which the Advocate is most respected.

WHEN the Court Journal intimates that the weekly press of Alabama are blindly following the Advertiser in their advocacy of Senator Morgan it perpetrates a libel. The editor of this paper has been in the newspaper business in Alabama for more than fifteen years, and has all that time been for Morgan. He will continue to be for him so long as we both shall live, the Advertiser or the Journal to the contrary notwithstanding. The dirty little flings of the Journal and its boss at the weekly press is properly appreciated, and will be remembered.

THE Court Journal begins an editorial with these words: "The Shelby CHRONICLE belongs to the Morris Hotel Democracy." We deny it. THE CHRONICLE belongs to its editor, although it is one of the class that the Governor scornfully referred to as mortgaged. The Journal is mistaken in the paper and the man. This paper only expresses the opinions of its editor, and they are not copied nor paid for. As to the Morris Hotel Democracy, however, we would rather belong to it than to belong to that crowd over at the Florence, which is presided over by the president of several corporations, and numbers among its members an unpunished murderer and a recent hanger-on to Aldrich's coat tail. When we do sell ourselves it will be to a respectable crowd, like the Morris Hotel crowd, if you please.

THE Court Journal has at last offered an explanation of the Governor's objection to a primary in Jefferson County. All we can make of the explanation is that the Governor is afraid that a primary would be controlled by the "corrupt, dishonest, mendacious, vengeful and unscrupulous." If the Governor thinks that a majority of the voters of Jefferson County are of that character his objections are good ones.

THE Advocate puts it "Aldrich and honesty." From the facts at hand we should put it, Aldrich and a gold standard; Aldrich and increased power of national banks; Aldrich and protection; Aldrich and trusts; Aldrich and a colonial imperialism; Aldrich and tax dodging by corporations; Aldrich and negro domination of Shelby County politics. We prefer Robbins and free silver; Robbins and commercial expansion; Robbins and money from the government; Robbins and white supremacy.

UP to last night no vote had been reached on the Aldrich-Robbins contest case, though an agreement had been reached to vote on it Tuesday. The indications are that the vote will be very close, and Mr. Robbins may keep his seat, although the House is Republican. It is said that four Republicans will vote for Robbins and six will not vote. The evidence is so clearly for Mr. Robbins that even a partisan majority hesitates to reverse the will of the people.

Harpersville.

A good many spring oats have been killed.

The first quarterly meeting of this circuit was held at Easonville Saturday and Sunday last.

A Sunday school has been organized at Butler's saw mill.

Dr. Nelson and Miss Della Thompson attended the quarterly conference at Easonville.

Mr. Alcuin Wood and Miss Brown were married here last week.

Bob Bevil, of Texas, is visiting in this community.

Rev. Mr. Bently preached interesting sermons at the Baptist church on Saturday and Sunday last.

Parson Joe Simmons went out to talk scripture to the good people at Mt. Tabor last Sunday.

S. K. Cross has gone over to Birmingham to assist Judge Bruce in the U. S. Court.

Frank Bates and mother, of Creswell, attended preaching here Sunday.

Mrs. Strock, of Soap Hill, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Gorman.

"Betsy Hamilton," the famous Georgia writer, is to lecture at Vincent tonight (Tuesday) for the benefit of the Presbyterian church.

JAKE.

Shelby.

Both furnaces are running this week.

The man killed here last week while a freight train was at work in the yard was a young white man, a Mr. Sellman, whose home was in Albertville, where his remains were carried for interment. He was engaged in coupling cars at the time, and by some mischance the train ran over him, probably killing him instantly.

The cyclone which struck Shelby last week did more damage than has been reported. The parsonage of the colored Congregational church, now building, was moved from its foundation and the barn of W. E. Merrell and the gin of Terrell Bice were left a mass of broken lumber. The residence of Mr. Bice was so badly wrenched that no door could be fastened till new adjustments were made.

Mr. Bates is very sick.

William McNeal, aged 47, a former resident of Shelby, died in Bessemer of pneumonia, and was buried here on the 3rd instant, Rev. A. T. Clarke officiating at the funeral.

Mrs. Dr. Parker is visiting relatives in New Orleans.

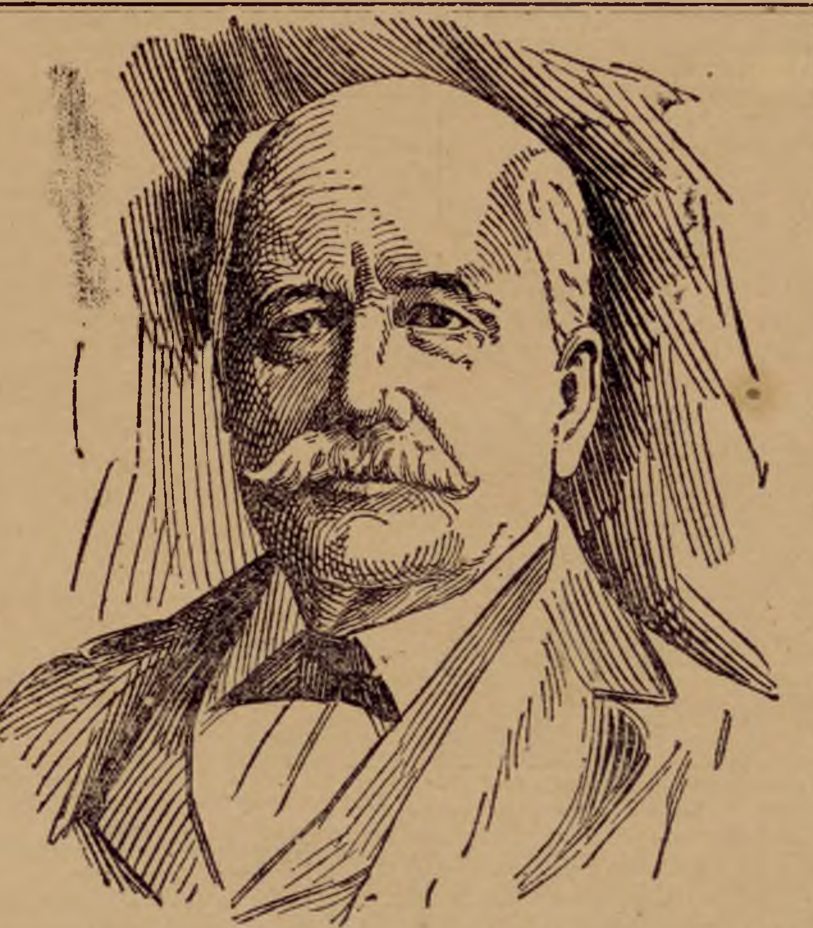
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.



Hon. Thos. Williams, of Elmore county, Alabama, ex-member of congress, statesman, orator, writer and one of the best informed men on the theoretical and practical application of commercial fertilizers. He is one of the largest cotton planters in the state, and produces his great crops upon poor sandy uplands by the skillful use of commercial fertilizers. He uses the ALABAMA FERTILIZER exclusively—after having tried nearly all other leading brands of complete fertilizers. His words, like rifle balls, are few, and go straight to the mark:

WETUMPKA, ALA., September 9, 1899.

DEAR SIRS:—Speaking from experimental tests, in results I am assured the ALABAMA FERTILIZER put up by you, is not excelled by any on our market, and I commend it to the public as a genuine fertilizer productive of good results.

The bags treated by the VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVER used by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., successfully resisted the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in the fertilizers, also preventing all loss from wasting.

Yours truly,

THOS. WILLIAMS.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT ANALYSIS.

Bulletin No. 12, issued by the Alabama Department of Agriculture, shows the actual commercial value of the ALABAMA FERTILIZERS to be 19.83 per cent more valuable than all the complete fertilizers or guanos offered for sale in the State of Alabama for the season covered by said bulletin.

Bulletin No. 15, just issued by the Department of Agriculture, shows the actual analysis, from samples sent to the Department by dealers and consumers throughout the State, that the ALABAMA FERTILIZER is actually $3.54 per ton or 24 per cent better than the guaranteed analysis by the ALABAMA FERTILIZER CO., and this answers the question so often asked, "why the ALABAMA FERTILIZER produces so much better crops than other fertilizers of equal guaranteed analysis?" The ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be shipped in the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVED BAGS. There is no other preserved bag on the market of any value.

The Commissioner of Agriculture recommends and endorses it in the following words:

"I therefore unhesitatingly say that I believe the bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVING PROCESS will resist the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in fertilizers; that the meshes of the bags are so filled by the process as to prevent all wastage, and that if generally used by manufacturers, would be of inestimable value to carriers, dealers and consumers.

(Signed) "I. F. CULVER,
"Commissioner of Agriculture."

These MUMMIA PRESERVED BAGS are almost indestructible by the weather or Fertilizers. Can be hauled in the rain without material damage to bag or contents. Fertilizers put up in these bags can be hauled out to the farm at any time and kept ready for use.

The ALABAMA FERTILIZER is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all round fertilizer for cotton and corn.

ALABAMA FERTILIZER RECORD.

It has produced nearly four bales of cotton on one acre of poor sandy upland.

One hundred and thirty-two bushels of corn on one acre of poor sandy upland.

Two thousand and forty one bushels of corn on twenty acres of poor upland.

Land and corn accurately surveyed and measured by competent disinterested and honorable men

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 48 premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

ESTABLISHED 1880 ALABAMA TRADE MARK

This trade mark is registered. It is our property. It is not likely to be counterfeited, as that would subject the perpetrator to the danger of heavy fine and imprisonment (see U. S. laws respecting copyrights). It is on every genuine sack of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

As required by state law the word "ALABAMA" in large letters is found on every bag of fertilizer offered for sale in this state. Some unscrupulous persons have employed this means to deceive you.

See that the above trade mark is on the bag, and take none offered you as the ALABAMA FERTILIZER without it.

Advice to Consumptives

There are three great remedies that every person with weak lungs, or with consumption itself, should understand. These remedies will cure about every case in its first stages; and many of those more advanced. It is only the most advanced that are hopeless. Even these are wonderfully relieved and life itself greatly prolonged.

What are these remedies? Fresh air, proper food and

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

Questions Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for billiousness or indigestion. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration or heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Hall Drug Co.

CITIZENS' TICKET

Nominated for City Officials by Nonpartisan Meeting.

A meeting of the citizens of Columbiana was held on Monday night at the probate office, pursuant to a call issued last week.

Judge Longshore was made chairman and F. W. Gist secretary.

On motion of J. T. Leeper a committee of six was appointed to present names for nomination as candidates.

The committee reported as follows:
For mayor, D. R. McMillan.
For aldermen, A. P. Longshore, J. P. Pearson, E. D. Hall, J. H. Robertson, C. W. O'Hara.

The report was unanimously adopted, and these gentlemen were declared the nominees of the meeting for the positions named.

The meeting was well attended and the nominations are satisfactory. In the selection of these gentlemen the committee gave special attention to the material and educational interests of the town. The ticket will be elected without opposition.

Twice Proven.

From the Vindicator, Rutherfordton, N. C.

The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with the most remarkable results in each case. First, with rheumatism in the shoulder, from which he suffered excruciating pain for ten days, which was relieved with two applications of Pain Balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a very short time. Second, in rheumatism in thigh joint, almost prostrating him with severe pain, which was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment on retiring at night and getting up free from pain. For sale by Williams Bros.

We reprint from the London Telegraph the following excerpt: "Mrs. Collins charmed her hearers last night and held them spellbound. She has developed more and more in her art since last season; we thought her then nearly unrivaled. The Italian Girl was thought the most interesting among her collection. It is a story freighted with human woe, and runs the gamut in the expression of every shade of feeling. It was given with a simplicity and wealth of pathos which thrilled every heart and left scarcely a dry eye among the audience. She has a sweet voice, yet strong. In a few flashes of dramatic intensity it rang out with startling power." Mrs. Collins is to appear in Boston before this season is over. Outside of her art the society of that city will be doubly interested through a family connection with many of her most prominent citizens—the descendants of that "greatest of them all" of Mayflower fame, Gov. William Bradford. Mrs. Collins comes of an old family of Norman extraction who followed to England the fortunes of William the Conqueror, and of the blood of which is Lord Salisbury, the prime minister of England. This bright artist is to appear before a Columbiana audience on Tuesday, March 20.

A Good Cough Medicine for Children.

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says F. P. Moran, a well-known and popular baker, of Petersburg, Va. "We have given it to our children when troubled with bad coughs, also with whooping cough, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children as it contained no opium or other harmful drug." Sold by Williams Bros.

Hon. J. B. Graham, member of the Morgan campaign committee for this district, was in the city on Thursday last, and at night made a speech at the courthouse in the Senator's interest. The crowd was small on the short notice given, but the speech was well received. Mr. Graham devoted himself principally to the dissection of the Governor's business administration, and he made it look rather unbusinesslike. Mr. Graham is a forcible and logical speaker.

An Honest Medicine for La Grippe.

George W. Waitt, of South Gardiner, Me., says: "I have had the worst cough, cold, chills and grip and have taken lots of trash of no account but profit to the vendor. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the only thing that has done any good whatever. I have used one bottle of it and the chills, cold and grip have all left me. I congratulate the manufacturers of an honest medicine." For sale by Williams Bros.

If you want your job printing done in the latest style and in a neat manner bring it to this office, where we have a variety of type to select from and a printer who knows how to print correctly, tastily and substantially. Mrs. C. E. VanDeusen, of Kilbourn, Wis., was afflicted with stomach trouble and constipation for a long time. She says, "I have tried many preparations but none have done me the good that Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have." These Tablets are for sale at Williams Bros.' drug store. Price 25 cents. Samples free.

A stockholders meeting was held on Saturday last to discuss the adoption of by-laws for the management of the cotton factory. A majority of the stock was present and a set of excellent by-laws were adopted. In the afternoon a directors' meeting was held. The location of a site for the factory is now under consideration.

Miss Natalie Walthall, daughter of Capt. J. L. Walthall, was married at the home of her father in this county yesterday to Mr. W. J. Ashton, of Cordova. Miss Walthall is one of the county's brightest daughters, and Mr. Ashton is a prominent young business man, connected with the Cordova cotton mills.

If you buy clothes that are thrown together you get them cheap; when you have them made by a skilled workman you get a valuable article that is attractive and decent. Just so with your printed stationery. When it is done by an experienced printer who has nice type and good taste you present a decent appearance to the business world. That is the kind you get at this office at prices in proportion to the quality.

It is not so much what the newspapers say, as what neighbor says to neighbor, or friend to friend, that has brought Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy into such general use. It is as natural for people to express their gratitude after using this remedy as it is for water to flow down hill. It is the one remedy that can always be depended upon, whether a baby be sick with cholera infantum or a man with cholera morbus. It is pleasant, safe and reliable. Have you a bottle of it in your home? For sale by Williams Bros.

They Should Know it.

Many women suffer untold agony and misery because the nature of their disease is not correctly understood. They have been led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for the many ills that beset womankind.

Neuralgia, nervousness, headache, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, rheumatism, a dragging pain or dull ache in the back, weakness or bearing-down sensation, profuse or scanty supply of urine with strong odor, frequent desire to pass it with scalding or burning sensation, sediment in it after standing in bottle or common glass for 24 hours are signs of kidney and bladder trouble.

The above symptoms are often attributed by the patient herself or by her physician to female weakness or womb trouble. Hence, so many fail to obtain relief, because they are treating, not the disease itself, but a reflection of the primary cause, which is kidney trouble.

In fact, women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same remedy.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is the great discovery of the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is easy to get at any drug store for 50 cents or $1.

To prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and book telling all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Kindly mention The Chronicle, and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

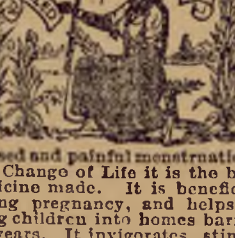
has demonstrated ten thousand times that it is almost infallible

FOR WOMAN'S PECULIAR WEAKNESSES,

irregularities and derangements. It has become the leading remedy for this class of troubles. It exerts a wonderfully healing, strengthening and soothing influence upon the menstrual organs. It cures "whites" and falling of the womb. It stops flooding and relieves suppressed and painful menstruation.



TAKE AND BE HEALED
THE GREAT SPIRIT PLANTED IT.

For Change of Life it is the best medicine made. It is beneficial during pregnancy, and helps to bring children into homes barren for years. It invigorates, stimulates, strengthens the whole system. This great remedy is offered to all afflicted women. Why will any woman suffer another minute with certain relief within reach? Wine of Cardui only costs $1.00 per bottle at your drug store.

For advice, in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

"My little boy had a large scrofula sore on his neck. I purchased a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and it cured. I take Hood's as my spring tonic." MRS. MINNIE SPEAR, Parishville, N. Y.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

The conversion of the flintiest, roughest limestone into soft, white wool is one of the wonders of the century which will shortly appear in a practical way to the manufacturer.

The latest calculation of the velocity and direction of the sun's motion in space is by Professor Simon Newcomb. He estimates that the solar system is being carried in a northerly direction at the rate of 16 1-2 kilometres—a little over 10 miles—per second. The point toward which we are moving is within a very few degrees of the extraordinarily bright star Vega in the constellation of Lyra.

One hospital in New York City has adopted a camera to record minutely the action of patients in epileptic fits and similar afflictions, and many moving pictures have been taken showing the movements in walking of persons afflicted with locomotor ataxia. They are produced slowly on the screen, so that physicians are enabled to study the symptoms carefully. Moving pictures have been taken in Vienna showing operations being performed by great surgeons.

Sir John Murray recently summed up the latest discoveries concerning the ocean. The deep sea, he says, is a region of darkness, as well as of low temperature, because the rays of the sun are wholly absorbed by the superficial layers of water. Plant life is absent, but animal life is abundant in those night-haunted depths. The majority of the deep-sea animals live by eating mud, and by catching the minute particles of organic matter which descend from above. Many of the mud-eating animals are of gigantic size compared with their allies in shallower waters, but they are the prey of rapacious enemies armed with peculiar prehensile organs. Some deep-sea fishes are blind, while others have very large eyes.

LOST TRIBE OF INDIANS.

STORY OF THE PEACEABLE WENATCHEES.

Their Conduct Disproves the Saying That "The Only Good Indian Is a Dead One" —Have Never Cost the Government a Dollar—A Strange History.

Vast in area as is the United States, it would hardly be thought possible that a tribe of Indians could be completely lost sight of within its borders, yet remarkable as it may seem, this is precisely what has occurred away off in the State of Washington, on the slope of the Cascade Mountains, in a region rich and fertile, the equal almost of California for the production of fruit and unexcelled for agricultural purposes, and with a climate which is described as simply perfect.

It has been the misfortune of this tribe, which is known by the name of the Wenatchees, and from which the Wenatchee River takes it name, to have been associated with the Yakima Indians, whose reservation is located in Yakima County, Washington, and contains about 1,400 square miles, with a population of 1,800 souls, according to the last census. These Wenatchee Indians are an entirely distinct tribe from the Yakimas, and from time immemorial have occupied the country where they are at present living as homeless wanderers, and although the office of Indian affairs expends many millions annually and has its ramifications throughout the length and breadth of the land, strange to say, its archives and the reports of the various commissioners of Indian affairs will be searched in vain for any record of the existence of this lost Wenatchee tribe. In fact, to all intents and purposes, as far as the Indian office is concerned, they are non-existent.

In this connection, a cursory resume of the manner in which this peaceable and friendly tribe of Indians, who throughout their relations with the United States Government have by their behavior given the lie to the oft-quoted saying that "the only good Indian is a dead one," never having engaged in hostilities against the Government, or cost it the expenditure of a single dollar, has been victimized through the unscrupulous machinations of a greedy corporation and a too complaisant agent, is of interest, showing, as it does, the infamous imposition of the intelligent white man upon the ignorant redskin.

In 1854 Col. Wright was sent by the War Department to Washington Territory, now the State of Washington, and there made and concluded a treaty with a large number of separate Indian tribes or bands, which were named in the treaty as Consolidated Yakima Indians. In that treaty one Indian signed as a Wenatchee, and a provision was made in the same to the effect that a tract of land at the fork of the Pelouse and Wenatcheepan rivers should be set aside. It was spoken of as the Wenatchee fishery. At that time the Wenatchee band of Indians were living at the fork of the Pelouse River, which was afterward known as the Wenatchee River, the range of mountains just west taking the name of Wenatchee, and a lake fifteen miles up in the mountain was also named after this band of Indians. In 1894 an agent of the Yakima Indians called the attention of the Indian office to the fact that under this provision of the treaty the President had been authorized to set aside this reservation, and asked if the same had been done. Upon being informed that it had not, he was granted authority to locate the reservation and report the fact to the Indian office. He went not to the point where the Indians were, but to the banks of the Wenatchee Lake, fifteen or twenty miles above the location of the Indians, and there located a reservation, which comported in size with the terms of the treaty, and made a report to the effect that there was no fishery there, that there were no Indians there, and that this reservation ought to be sold. The Department acting upon that report, recommended the sale of the lands so located, for the sum of $20,000, and they were sold for this amount, the proceeds being used for the purpose of the construction of an irrigation ditch upon the Yakima reservation, which is situated about one hundred miles from the point where the Wenatchee Indians have always lived, over the range of mountains, and with no communication whatever.

In 1899 the Wenatchee Indians, who have lived in their present location as long as they can remember, found that by the construction of a branch of the Northern Pacific Railway the odd sections of the land, which they had supposed were in their reservation, belonged to the railroad, and that by the making of homestead entries the even sections belonged to the homesteaders. They then sent their chief to Washington to ascertain where their reservation was, and for the first time learned that it had been located by the agent in 1894, and, presumably with their consent, had been sold, the funds being applied to the benefit of the Yakima tribe, the agreement of sale having been made entirely by the Yakima Indians, without the participation of the Wenatchee Indians in any manner whatever.

An examination of the departmental records shows beyond question that this tribe of Indians has not been included in any census which has been taken of the Indians by the Indian Bureau. They have lived alone, and away from the departmental officials, all these years. They never had an agent, a sub-agent, nor an officer of the Government who either had them in charge or claimed to have them in charge. They have been a peaceable people.

Early in the history of this people the Catholic Church established a mission near what is now Wenatchee, and the limited education of these Indians has been wholly within that mission. There has never been a dollar spent by the Government on their education, or in feeding or clothing them. They do not speak the Yakima language, and cannot understand the Yakimas in ordinary conversation. Neither do they speak Chinook, which is a common language among the Northwestern tribes. They can understand the sign language, which is common to all Indian people.

An investigation further shows that their reservation is wholly gone; that the lands which were pointed out to them in 1854 have been appropriated by homestead settlers, and by the railroad, and these people are making a living now by working for the present owners of the soil. They are industrious, frugal and temperate, and have built a mission house and other buildings upon the supposed reservation, which at this late date they learn to their utter dismay belongs to the railroad and white settlers.

They were the first people to discover the fact that this valley was naturally a fruit country, and under the tutelage of the Jesuits, who have charge of the mission, they planted fruit trees and vineyards prior to the time any counter claims were made to their lands. Being a peaceable people they have not resisted the encroachments of the whites. The first census ever made of this tribe has been made by them within the last six months; it shows 172 people. They are utterly homeless, and are asking the Government for a location at some point where they can till the soil and have homes of their own.

LOYAL PUERTO RICANS.

General Stone Tells Why the Natives Will Be the Island's Best Defenders.

General Royal V. Stone, who spent some time in Puerto Rico during Gen. Miles's invasion of the island, and later was a member of the Puerto Rican Commission, is enthusiastic regarding the inhabitants of the island and believes that they are capable of doing much for themselves if they have the opportunity. The General is particularly fond of relating some of his experiences there. He said recently:

"When General Miles found the mountain passes on the great military roads defended by strong works and positions he sent me with a small escort to find a 'way round.' I found a way, but it led through a country held by Spanish forces. It was an opera bouffe campaign at first, beginning with the capture of a large town supposed to be defended by Spanish volunteers, my own forces consisting of a signal man, three soldiers and six war correspondents heavily armed, all travelling in carriages, and the carriages buried in flowers. Further on it became more serious, and the correspondents had to go back with their dispatches, but a company of Wisconsin infantry came to take their places and we pushed on in single file over difficult mountain trails. In two days' operations we captured 400 Spanish rifles and plenty of ammunition, armed a battalion of natives with them and another with machetes, and when we reached Utuado we were prepared to continue quite across the island, cut the Spanish forces in two and attack the strong post of Arecibo on the north coast.

"The native forces were eager for this attack, 2,000 machetemen volunteered for it, and we were to start at midnight. At this moment orders from headquarters stopped the movement; but a detachment of seventy-five mounted native riflemen led by a corporal of our cavalry were already out of reach on their way to Lares, where they were to alarm the garrison and then join us at Arecibo. They did their work well, and next morning marched straight into Arecibo by the unguarded Lares road. Finding we were not there, they marched quickly out on the Utuado road before the Spaniards could form to attack them. On that road they found a strong outpost and, taking it by surprise and in the rear, scattered it into the canefields, after a skirmish.

"On arriving at Utuado the corporal reported his exploit, but without any pride in it, for his command had failed in obedience. I asked how they behaved in the presence of the Spaniards. 'Shamefully, sir, shamefully,' he said 'No discipline at all; they disobeyed my orders, rushed straight at the enemy and cut off my fire.'

"If the Puerto Ricans had been against us and been armed we would have needed as many troops to conquer the island as England does to conquer the Transvaal, and in the future when we shall have a foreign war, and the enemy strikes at this, our most exposed outpost and our richest possession, if we have done justice to its people we may depend almost entirely upon them for the defence of the island."

How False Antiques Are Made.

The making of false antiques has become a regular business. Many people who like to have picturesque old furniture and curios around them cannot afford to pay the high-rate of prices charged for originals, and they are content to take imitations, which can be had at comparatively little expense.

One dealer, who, owing to the difference in price, sells a dozen reproductions to one antique now, says that the business is perfectly legitimate; if the reproduction is made like the original, and sold as such, no harm is done, and the purchaser gets what he wants at a low price. Reproductions of rare pieces of antique furniture can be honestly made and sold just as copies of favorite oil paintings are reproduced and sold.

It is a common practice to make the base or core for the work of some light wood, such as pine, over which is laid a veneer of oak, birch or mahogany or other hard wood. This gives an article which, while being to all intents and purposes a piece of hardwood furniture, weighs much less than the original, and will not warp or twist. Still another style is made from the waste products of the sawmill. The stuff is reduced to a pulp and pressed into sheets under such an enormous pressure that warping is effectually prevented.

Counterfeit Coffee.

A new form of imposition in connection with coffee is just reported; an astute grocer has been coating the coffee beans with sugar, and thus increasing the weight to just double. Others prepare maise so skillfully that it takes an expert to distinguish it from the real article.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

It has been wisely decided not to attempt to run the Paris exposition without the aid of Mrs. Potter Palmer.

In England, "taking the Queen's shilling," or enlisting, has been heretofore regarded as almost next to going to the poorhouse.

When a murderer on the gallows declares that hanging does not check homicide, as did James K. Brown in Jersey City, it must at least be accepted as disinterested expert testimony.

An old man wants to marry a young girl. Relatives appeal to the courts to stop it. Now if every man had to satisfy his family before he perpetrated matrimony, how many marriages would there be in the year?

In 1895 there were 1,030 savings banks in the United States, and the deposits in them amounted to $1,840,000,000. In 1899 there were 9412 savings banks in the United States and their deposits were $2,401,000,000.

Writing on the decline of the French language, M. Jean Finot points out that at the end of the last century French was the language spoken by the greatest number of civilized people, whereas now it stands fourth. English is spoken by 116,000,000, Russian by 85,000,000, German by 80,000,000, and French by 58,000,000.

While the United States is quarantining against the bubonic plague it may be well enough for the Orient to be erecting some barriers against appendicitis. The latter seems to be about as deadly in this country as the former is in the Orient.

It is asserted that no two countries in the world make and eat the same kind of bread. In England and America there is the greatest similarity in this respect, but the Englishman never eats bread hot from the oven, nor does he use biscuits made with shortening.

The United States is a marvelous country; no part of it is so full of marvel as that vast section in the West which only a few years ago was a wilderness, but is now sprinkled with towered cities and musical with the busy hum of men.

The holding up of Prince Henry of Prussia by Siamese bandits, who robbed him of $1,000 and a bicycle, sets a bright light of adventure in the bow window of his experience. It will sparkle in his history beyond all his naval exploits, and as a decorating memory is worth the money and the vehicle.

Gout has been produced in hens by an exclusive diet of lean horse meat and water. Man always feels a step nearer Mark Twain's time, when health will be catching instead of sickness, when he manages to give one of the lower animals a disease of his. The scientist that induced gout in hens afterward alleviated it by a diet of crushed egg shells; but if he aspires to cure human gout in the same manner he has undertaken a task beyond his powers. Abstinence even from a few of the more delightful and gout-producing foods is as much as most practitioners effect in their patients.

Mayor Hart, of Boston, has discovered that the employes of the Municipal Water Department used $17,000 worth of streetcar tickets during 1899, and has determined to put a stop to such reckless extravagance. The higher employes of the Department have not only used the tickets when riding to and from their residences, but have presented them in payment of the fares of friends, and have freely distributed them for political purposes.

The girls' schools of England have the finest women's fire brigades in the world. Westfield college, at Hampstead, was the first English college for women to make fire practice a prominent feature of school training. Professional firemen were hired to inspect and train the brigades, and the girls learned all the tricks of the profession, from tying firemen's chair knots in ropes, and lowering themselves from top windows, to carrying insensible persons out of burning buildings.

Georges Harmois, the owner of the new dogs' cemetery in Paris, thinks that the enterprise will show a handsome profit from the start. Every year, he figures, twenty thousand dogs die in Paris. At least one-sixth of this number will be buried in the new cemetery, the charge in each case being $6, so that the total receipts from this source will amount to over $20,000. In addition, several thousand dollars can be counted on from the sale of monuments, while other amounts will come in from people who wish their dogs' graves kept green.

Man's hatred of being "bossed" by one like unto himself crops out curiously in the printing department at Sing Sing. For the last year or so Sing Sing has published the Star of Hope, a very creditable paper, produced entirely by the convicts, and containing some of the noblest sentiments that appear in the current press. Its success, typographically, has been due largely to the man in charge of the printing department, a convict "in" for grand larceny. But that state of affairs has been changed. A printer from outside has been put in charge of the work; not because the present incumbent was incapable of fulfilling his duties, nor because the outsider was better equipped, but because the convicts objected to being ordered around by one of their own number.

One out of every forty of the population in New York City is dependent upon charity according to a writer in Leslie's Weekly. The number of the metropolitan poor is almost equal to the last return of the entire population of the city of Indianapolis, Ind., or to that of the city of Providence, R. I. It is larger by forty per cent. than the war army of the Boer republics. It is nearly as large as the combined inhabitants of the Territory of Oklahoma and the State of Nevada. It is nearly twice as great as the number of people in the State of Wyoming when the last census was taken.

American coal is flowing into the Mediterranean in a swelling stream, cutting a channel for itself which will probably not run dry when the present conditions interrupting its ordinary supply are over. England has hitherto sent it, but now has use for all her product elsewhere. It is not necessary to assume that the present large demand for American coal means that naval preparations adverse to England are being made in the Mediterranean, though that is the view of some Continental military observers. Its most direct interest to Americans is that it opens a practically new market for an important commodity hitherto jealously shut out, and that there is a good chance of the market staying open hereafter.

Belgium desires to encourage matrimony, and at the same time thrift. That country proposes to give every man who is twenty-one years old and pays $1 a year in taxes one vote; if twenty-five years old and married, two votes; and if he owns real estate or government bonds or savings bank deposits producing an income of $20 a year, he will have three votes. If it is desirable to increase the population it would be well enough to offer an additional vote for each child.

The armless artist Felu has just died at an advanced age abroad. He could do a number of things without arms that many men with arms are unable to accomplish. He always shaved himself, for one thing, and, presumably, without cutting himself; he wrote a successful play, and he painted a large number of pictures. Sometimes when we see the things that people have accomplished under great difficulties we almost regret our own advantages, although the first thing we should do were we to lose them would be to try to replace them in some way. The obvious moral of Felu, of course, is that we, lacking his disabilities, should accomplish much more than he; but this is a moral that only the young will meekly accept, and they only because they have to do so. The rest of us merely wonder, and find a few minutes' interest in the contemplation of the phenomenon.

Tests made in Detroit give promise that singing, with some degree of accuracy, may be taught to deaf children. The experiments were made under the direction of the supervisor of music in the public schools. The children were gathered around a piano resting their hands, and in some cases their arms, upon the instrument. After the instrument had been played for a time the children began to count in correct time with the music, catching the accentuation of beats through the vibration of the wood. Occasionally a child would seem to progress beyond the mere response to time and count aloud with some approximation to the tune. When this fact was observed by the teacher, the pupils were told to repeat the words "baby, baby," over and over and at the same time a lullaby was played on the piano. In a short time it was noticed that nearly all the children with whom the experiment was tried indicated the air with more or less distinctness. Still another experiment was tried by singing the scale into the ear of a boy and playing it on the piano. After a few trials, the pupil was able to sound the notes as well as could many children with unimpaired hearing.

Governor Brady of Alaska proposes the use of electricity as a substitute for the cumbersome fire heated iron used in the branding of seals. He claims that if every female seal was electrically branded with the letters "U. S.," four inches in length and half an inch in width, the pelagic sealers' business would soon become so unprofitable that the seal question would be settled, for, argues the projector of the plan, eighty per cent. of the seals illegally killed are females, and the brand would ruin the skin for the use of the prospective furrier. The Interior Department is urged to send a force of men, fully equipped for the work to Alaska and let them take the project in hand. The stockmen of the plains have found electricity to be infinitely more expeditious than the old method, and it would be doubly so with the thin-coated seal. "The branded seals suffer as little from the operation as do quadrupeds," says Governor Brady, "and the introduction of this system will speed the branding, which appears to be the only method by which we can prevent extinction of the species."

The Kentucky Mountaineers.

There are no more strikingly interesting people in America than these isolated mountaineers who make their homes generation after generation among the fastnesses of the eastern section of the "dark and bloody ground." The waves of civilization which swept westward along the St. Lawrence, the Erie Canal, and a dozen other routes seem to have found at this point in the Appalachians an insurmountable barrier and rolled back, leaving the descendants of the pioneers of a century and a half ago with many of the same habits and customs and traditions dear to the hearts of their forefathers.

A man who knows the whole country as a child does his first picture book told me that if any person took the trouble to go through a copy of Shakespeare and pick out all the absolete words he would find nearly all of them in common use among these mountain folk. In their phraseology we find "holp" for "help," "hit" for "it," and other words which, far from being corruptions, are the pure old Anglo-Saxon. Even their ballads are mementoes of ages gone by, and I know of one man who, after riding two hundred miles through the mountains for the purpose, finally picked up, from hearing the women sing them, the full thirteen verses of an old Scotch ballad which proved to be identical with those recorded in a diary bearing the date 1665.—The International Magazine.

Apropos of the use of the Marconi system of wireless telegraphy in the war in South Africa, it is interesting to note that it has been proved that cannonading does not interfere with the transmission of messages. The apparatus has been worked successfully and messages sent while the largest guns in the British navy were being fired.

A Wonderful Germ-Killer.

Skin diseases, such as tetter, eczema, ringworm, salt-rheum, or anything of the kind, are cured by Tetterine. It kills the germs, and the skin becomes healthy. Its efficacy is well established. The terrible explosion that occurred some months ago in a chlorate of potash factory at St. Helens, England, has been a subject of careful investigation. No previous explosion of chlorate of potash could be found on record, but experiment proves that the salt is liable to explode when the temperature is raised very rapidly, and sudden heat is the only probable cause suggested for the St. Helens disaster.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. VOL. XV. COLUMBIANA, SHELBY COUNTY, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, MARCH 15, 1900. NO. 13.

ACCUSED OF GOEBEL MURDER

PROMINENT KENTUCKIANS ALLEGED TO BE IMPLICATED IN THE ASSASSINATION.

A DOZEN WARRANTS ISSUED

One Is For Secretary of State---A Clerk In Auditor's Office Is Incarcerated.

W. H. Coulton, of Jackson county, a clerk in the office of State Auditor Sweeney, was arrested and placed in jail at Frankfort, Ky., Friday night, charged with complicity in the murder of the late Governor Goebel. The arrest was made by Chief of Police Williams at 9 o'clock.

Warrants charging the same offense were also issued for the arrest of Secretary of State Caleb Powers and Captain John W. Davis, policeman of the state capitol square. Warrants against ex-Secretary of State Charles Finley and John T. Powers, brother of Secretary of State Powers, charging them with being accessories to the Goebel assassination, were sworn out and sent to Whitley county for service.

Several witnesses who testified at the trial of Harlan Whittaker Tuesday swore that the shots at the time of the Goebel assassination were fired from the direction of Powers' office and he and all of the parties for whom the warrants were issued have been under the strictest surveillance ever since the assassination. Captain Davis was an appointee of Governor Bradley and was continued under Governor Taylor. He also kept a boarding house.

Ex-Secretary of State Finley was one of the promoters of the mass meeting of the mountain men in front of the state capitol January 25th. He served as secretary of state during the four years when W. O. Bradley was governor. He was not in the city the day of the assassination, but left the day before. Coulton, the only one arrested Friday night was placed in a cell and not allowed to talk to anyone.

The warrant on which Coulton was arrested, and for the arrest of the two Powers, Finley and Davis, were based on an affidavit made by Thomas B. Cromwell of Lexington, Ky., before County Judge Moore. Cromwell has been assisting the detectives in working the case and it is said that acting under directions from Colonel T. C. Campbell and Commonswealth's Attorney Franklin, he spent several days in Hardin, Bell, Whitley and Knox counties, where it is alleged the evidence against the parties was secured.

Public admission to the statehouse grounds Friday night was denied to all, by order of the military authorities.

FOR ARMISTICE KRUGER ASKS

Appeal, However, Is Turned Down By Britons.

HIS SINCERITY DOUBTED

London Officials Incline to the Belief That It Is Only a Move to Gain Time.

A London special says: Late Friday afternoon it was learned that the peace rumors were founded on the fact that President Kruger has appealed to Lord Salisbury for a cessation of hostilities, offering at length by cable the terms which he is willing to accept.

These, however, are not taken seriously, as they include practically nothing more than what the Transvaal government offered prior to the issuing of the British ultimatum.

Official circles regard the propositions as merely a ruse of the Boers to gain time and do net consider that President Kruger is yet ready to consider the sweeping demands which Great Britain will make as reimbursement for the loss of life and great expenditure.

It was understood that President Kruger's advances had met with an emphatic rejection at the hands of Lord Salisbury, who is believed to have said that no such attempt to retain the independence of the Transvaal can be considered for a moment by the British government.

The dispatches from Lord Robert's headquarters, including those of the commander-in chief himself, indicate a lack of a guiding spirit among the Boers and individual demoralization, portending disintegration unless it is speedily stemmed. The flight of the Boers from Poplar Grove, according to all accounts, was wholly inglorious.

A Times dispatch from Poplar Grove goes so far as to assert that the rout of the Boers was so complete that the submission of the Free State is being timed by the burghers from their unwilling president, and it is expected that its submission will be made within a week. The correspondent adds:

"Probably the Boers' wisest course was flight, but it was most undignified, and is certain to produce consternation at Bloemfontein. There is a growing outcry against any further identification of the Free State with the Transvaal interests."

Dispatches from the Boer camp at Glencoe, via Lorenzo Marques, depict President Kruger as donning a bandolier, seizing a rifle and inviting volunteers to accompany him, as he wished to have a shot at the enemy himself.

President Kruger is also quoted as having declared in his address to the troops that he "did not know whether arbitration or intervention would end the struggle, but that it would end quickly, within the next month, he strongly believed."

Meanwhile the British are not staying their advance. Lord Roberts has moved ten miles nearer Bloemfontein, evidently with the view of seizing and utilizing the railroad, possibly to reach the Free State capital in three or four days, whence he may begin repairing the railroad southward, meeting the British advance from Cape Colony, which may be expected to be hastened as soon as General White takes control. The British occupied Jamestown unopposed Thursday, March 8th, and the Boers are reported to be retreating beyond Allwalnorth, so that Cape Colony is practically clear of armed Boers.

Re-enforcements from Natal are going to Lord Roberts. General Warren's divisions and some artillery have already been ordered to join the commander in chief so that the latter is preparing for all eventualities, including possible desperate opposition to his crossing the Vaal river, and the the necessity of the siege of Pretoria, where thousands of natives are reported to be employed in the construction of defensive works, concerning which such secrecy is maintained that no on one is allowed to walk or drive on the outskirts of the town.

MINES ARE PRIMED.

Johannesburg Will Be Blown Up If Occasion Should Require.

A correspondent to the London Daily Mail at Lourenzo Marques, thelegraphing Thursday, says:

"I am reliably informed that high officials openly avow that the British flag shall never fly at Johannesburg. The place will be razed to the ground and the mines put in readiness to be electrically exploded from the forts as occasion requires.

"Most of the gold mines, except those which the government controls, are in a shocking state. They are flooded and the machiney is rusting and being wilfully smashed."

BIG STRIKE RESULTS.

Transit Company at St. Louis Refuses All Demands of Employes.

Shortly after noon Saturday the management of the St. Louis Transit company gave its answer to the demands of its employes presented some days ago by the executive committee of the local branch of the International Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes. Practically every demand was refused.

ACCOUNTANT DISAPPEARS.

Was Engaged On Books of Ex-Auditor Hunter at Atlanta.

At Atlanta, Thursday, about noon, H. V. Albaugh, one of the accountants who had been engaged in examining the books of T. J. Hunter, the late auditor of the Atlanta and West Point railroad, suddenly disappeared, and relatives and friends were unable to find any trace of him.

The disappearance is a most profound mystery to those who have made efforts to locate him, and the fact that he was working on the books of a man who had himself suddenly left the city, to be found in a far-away-land, made the affair remarkable and peculiar.

Added so the mystery there is a feature which gives the disappearance of Albaugh a pathetic coloring, for he has left a wife and four little children without means of support.

FUSE FACTORY DEMOLISHED.

Four People Killed and a Number Injured In Explosion.

The Smith fuse manufactory at Pompton, N. J., blew up Friday and four bersons were killed and a number more or less injured:

They were all at work in the factory with about thirty other men and girls. The victims were badly mangled.

Many Pension Bills Passed.

The first day pension session of the house provided for under the new rule adopted Thursday proved a great success. There was comparatively little friction and ninety-seven bills were favorably acted upon in committee of the whole and subsequently passed.

NO PENSION FOR EX-QUEEN.

Amendment to Appropriation Bill Was Laid on Table.

The senate Saturday passed the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill with a few minor amendments. A lively debate was precipitated by an amendment proposed by Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts, proposing to give the former Queen Liliuokalani, of Hawaii. $20,000 and an annuity of $10,000. The amendment was laid on the table and the bill passed.

NO JURISDICTION

Judge Fields Renders Decision of His Court In Gubernatorial Contest Cases.

Judge Fields in the circuit court at Louisville, Ky., Saturday morning handed down an opinion that he has no jurisdiction in the cases brought to determine the governorship controversy. He holds that the constitution vests in the legislature the power to decide contests for this office and that of lieutenant governor.

The Republicans will appeal the case to the state court of appeals, and if the decision there is against them, will try to get a hearing before the United States supreme court.

Judge Fields reviews the history of the case and the pleadings of both sides, but devotes most of his opinion to quoting courts of last resort involving the competency of the legislature to decide similar disputes.

He quotes the report of the contest boards finding in favor of the Democratic contestants for governor and lieutenant governor, and says that while the legislature dispersed by militia before these reports were acted upon and was barred from its usual sitting place, the records of the legislature show that the reports declaring Beckham governor were adopted by a quorum of each house of the legislature

This showing of the records he holds to be sufficient. The line of authority to the effect that the courts cannot inquire into the motives which induced the action of the legislature he declares is unbroken and must be taken as the law.

RESIGNATION SHOWS UP.

Document Long Withheld Is Made Public By President McKinley.

A Washington special says: It appears that General Wheeler did tender his resignation last fall. It was dated November 28th, at a place called Paniqui, on the island of Luzon, and was not cabled, but came by the slow process of the mails. Moreover, it did not go directly to the war department, but went to the white house, where it has been reposing since its arrival in Washington. The war department officials have just learned of it.

The general's resignation was not accepted promptly by the president out of consideration for the officer. Instead he was ordered to report to the war department at Washington. His resignation will be accepted and the effect of this action will be to allow the officer his mileage and expenses to Washington. The resignation reads as follows:

"Paniqui, Island of Luzon, the Philippines, Nov. 28, 1899.—To the President, Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C., Sir: The insurgent government is virtually destroyed. Aguinaldo is a fugitive in the northern provinces; his cabinet and congress are scattered. The president of the Pilipino congress is here, and from what he says I think it will be impossible for their congress to ever reconvene. The various commands of the insurgent generals are reduced to mere skeletons and fly before us so fast that it is almost impossible to get within gun range. I therefore respectfully tender my resignation as an officer in the volunter forces of the United States. Very respectfully,

"Joseph Wheeler,

"Brigadier General U. S. V."

When General Wheeler presents himself at the bar of the house no effort will be made to prevent his taking the oath of office as a member of congress. This does not mean, however, that his right to hold his seat will not be contested. On the contrary, Mr. Bailey, of Texas—who holds that his retention of his commission in the army after congress convened acts as a disbarment to his holding a seat in congress—will make exactly the same fight that was made in the last congress and which resulted in a report of the judiciary committee adverse to General Wheeler.

SENATE AMENDS TREATY.

Document Relating to the Nicaragua Canal Fortification Is Changed.

The Hay-Pauncefote treaty was amended in the senate Friday. The work was accomplished by Chairman Davis, of the senate committee on foreign relations, with the assistance of the members of that committee. After an hour's discussion of the Davis amendment, most of which time was taken up by Senator Morgan in giving his reasons for believing that the amendment was not necessary, the committee by formal vote adopted the amendment, and then voted to report the treaty as amended. The amendment is short. The provisions of the treaty stand as made with the addition indicated in the following:

"It is agreed, however, that none of the immediately foregoing conditions and stipulations in sections numbered 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 of this article shall apply to measures which the United States may find it necessary to take for securing, by its own force, the defense of the United States and the maintenance of public order."

COMING SOUTH.

Bridge Works In New York To Be Transferred to Alabama.

The Groton Bridge Works Company, of Groton, N. Y., will transfer its base of operations to New Decatur, Ala., at an early date. The property and site of the old United States rolling stock works have been acquired and work on an immense plant will begin immediately. The outlay is estimated at more than $1,000,000. Frank L. Conger is president and general manager of the concern.

CRISIS REACHED IN KENTUCKY

BECKHAM AND TAYLOR ARE BOTH BACKED BY ARMED FORCES.

POWERS AND DAVIS LEVANT

They Are Intercepted at Frankfort and Quickly Placed In Jail.

Almost without warning the storm center of excitement in the Kentucky gubernatorial struggle shifted to Lexington Saturday night.

Secretary of State Caleb Powers and Captain Davis, for whom warrants were issued charging complicity in the murder of Governor Goebel, after spending the day in the statehouse at Frankfort, to which the civil officers bearing the warrants were refused admittance by the soldiers on duty, left town in disguise. Powers and Davis were slipped aboard a Chesapeak and Ohio train at 8 o'clock Saturday night and speeded toward Lexington. A squad of soldiers, coming from the governor's mansion at double quick, caught the train just before it pulled out.

The plan of escape was so neatly laid and executed that it took the police and big force of deputy sheriffs appointed to guard the entrance to the capitol grounds and prevent their escape, off their feet when they realized what had occurred. It was several minutes before the truth of the escape of the men was definitely known.

Chief of Police Williams immediately sent telegrams to Lexington, Midway and all stations along the road, notifying officers of the escape and ordering them to be on the lookout.

On the arrival of the train in Lexidgton at 8:40 Secretary of State Powers and Capitol Policeman Davis and Lieutenant Peak were arrested by the Lexington police and the sheriff and deputies. There was a large force of officers awaiting thefugitives. Powers and Davis still wore the uniforms of soldiers and Davis had on false whiskers.

There was a wild scene when the officers broke into the car and revolvers were drawn by all, but the small squad of soldiers were greatly outnumbered by the police force of Lexington and the large force of deputies with the sheriff, and the arrest was effected without difficulty.

A local attorney recognized Powers and also pointed out Davis. They were seized and hurried to the jail. As the procession swept toward the jail some people started the report that there was to be a lynching, and soon the streets were packed with people, an enormous crowd gathering about the jail. Davis, Powers and Peake were hurried to the upper cells, but Peake was later released on bond on a common warrant charge of resisting arrest.

Davis had $125 in money on his person and a revolver.

There was found on Powers $1,300. In the inside pocket of each man was found a pardon from Governor W. S. Taylor, duly signed and sealed. Powers made the statement to an Associated Press representative that he was not fleeing from arrest. He was simply getting away from Frankfort to avoid lying in jail as Whitaker had been forced to do; that he had nothing to fear from arrest, as he was not guilty of the charge.

Sheriff Bosworth applied at once to the armory for a special detail of soldiers under Captain Longmire and they responded, arriving at the jail a few moments later, prepared to resist the rumored prospective attack. The sheriff then designated a posse to supplement a squad of soldiers provided trouble might come and declared that any attempt to take either of the prisoners from the jail would be resisted to a finish.

The Sabbath day brought a hopeful and encouraging calm to the storm. Judge George Denny, a prominent Republican attorney, called on the prisoners during the day and was closeted with them several hours. He will represent them in whatever legal steps are taken.

SITUATION IS THREATENING

Rumor That Beckham's Arrest Would Be Attempted Created Consternation.

Sunday morning the Democrats and the Republicans in Kentucky were for the first time since the present political complications assumed acute form, divided into two armed and organized factions.

Surrounding the capitol and the state executive building and camped in the grounds around Governor Taylor's home were nearly 200 state militia, well provided with ammunition, while in the corridors of the hotel in which the Democratic state executive officers are located, and in the streets adjacent to that building were sixty special officers and the men and boys of a militia company that was organized in Frankfort during the day, as the nucleus of Governor Beckham's state guard, besides scores or more of heavily armed citizens, partisans of the Democratic element.

Within an hour after the democratic leaders heard a rumor that an attempt was to be made by the state militia to take Gov. Beckam into custody a petition had been circulated and signed by the requisite number of men necessary to form a militia company.

The men guarded the Capitol hotel all night against any possible attempt to arrest Governor Beckham.

The Democratic partisans say that should the militia attempt to interfere with the session of the legislature, persistent rumors of which had been in circulation all day, it would be next to impossible to avert bloodshed.

The republican officials, however, deny that such action has been ever contemplated, and that the legislature would not be molested in any way.

The formation of the state guard in Frankfort to support Governor Beckham was undertaken by City Clerk Ben Marshall, who circulated a paper and enlisted the requisite number of men who are to compose the new company. The guns for this company have been provided by citizens, most of them being either needle guns or winchesters.

Sunday afternoon a report gained currency that Governor Taylor had given his soldiers orders to arrest Governor Beckham and other officers of the Democratic state government.

On account of this report the men enlisted by Captain Marshall were assembled at the city hall, armed and sworn in as special police for the purpose of protecting the Democrrtic officers who are still quartered at the Capitol hotel. A large number of citizens also volunteered and were assigned to various posts in the vicinity of the hotel to offer a resistance in case the talked-of arrests were attempted.

Governor Beckham Sunday afternoon appointed Colonel David R. Murry, of Clover Point, assistant adjutant general, with the rank of colonel, and he was sworn in.

The official announcement was made that this appointment is only temporary. This was regarded as significant, it being understood that Colonel Murray accepted the appointment on account of the gravity of the present situation, and with the understanding that he could resign when the conditions in the state become more quiet.

According to a statement made by Governor Taylor to a representative of the Louisville Commercial, he has granted a pardon to each of the persons for whom warrants have been issued charging them with being accessories to the assassination of Governor Goebel, including Secretary of State Caleb Powers and ex-Secretcry of State Charles Finley. In his statement Governor Taylor recites the conditions under which he claims to have been elected, and charges the Democratic contestants for state offices with conspiracy to secure control of the government.

BIG SNUFF TRUST.

All the Eastern Companies Will Effect a Consolidation.

The New York Journal of Commerce says:

The recent negotiations of the American and Continental Tobacco companies to arrange for a consolidation of the leading snuff interests of the country are said to have been practically completed and a new $25,000,000 company will, it is stated, be organized to take over all the snuff business of both the Continental Tobacco and American Tobacco companies as well as the Atlantic Snuff company and Helme Snuff company.

SHELDON IS READY.

Preacher-Editor Receives Great Encouragement In His Undertaking.

The first issue of the Sheldon edition of the Topeka (Kansas) Capital will appear Tuesday morning. The subscription list for the edition at 6 p. m. Friday was 201,437. For a week the subscriptions have aggregated $25,000 a day.

Editions of the Capital during Sheldon week will be printed in London, New York, Chicago and Kansas City.

BRITISH LOSS TO DATE.

Bulletin Posted In London Show Casualties to Be 15,677.

The war office in London posts a bulletin announcing the casualties of the South African war up to Monday morning as follows: Killed, 2,418; wounded, 8,747; died of disease, 1,029; missing, 3,483; total, 15,677.

Boston Has Big Blaze.

Fire early Sunday morning in the building of the Massachusetts Macorini Company, on North street, Boston, caused a loss estimated from $75,000 to $150,000. One man was killed and four seriously injured.

RESCUE WORK PROCEEDS.

Twenty-Eight Dead Taken From Red Ash Mine Up to Friday.

The total number of those taken out of the Red Ash mine up to Friday night was thirty-one. Of these William Robinson, Elisha Bruce and a boy named Tom, all colored, are living and may recover. The total number of dead taken out is twenty-eight, and the number thought to be in the mine is twenty. This makes forty-eight killed and three injured.

DOCUMENT IS MISSING.

Evidence of Wheeler's Resignation Not In the War Department.

The statement attributed to General Wheeler in a recent interview in San Francisco that he tendered his resignation as an officer of the volunteer army last November has caused some surprise among the officials of the war department. It is said there that if General Wheeler has tendered his resignation the document has not yet reached the adjutant general's office.

According to the records of the war department, General Wheeler is still an officer of the volunteer army, and is in receipt of the pay and allowances of a brigadier general. In case he desires to quit the military service to resume his legislative duties, the matter will be considered by the president after a personal conference with him. It is said at the war department that General Wheeler was ordered home from the Philippines at his own request, as reported to the department by General Otis.

YOUNG WOMAN ASSASSINATED.

Unsuspecting Victim's Head Blown Off While Sitting By the Fireside.

Details of a shocking murder in Paulding county, Ga., is printed the Cartersville News.

The victim was a young woman, Miss Nell McDowell. She had been reared by Son Jones, an old man and his wife. The wife, it is stated, charged her husband with giving too much attention to the girl and left him.

A neighbor of the old man says that threats have been made to report the two to the grand jury. Sunday night, as the girl was sitting by the fire, some one stuck a shotgun through the window and blew her head off. Willie Jones, a son of the old man, has been arrested charged with the crime.

MORE HELP NEEDED.

Two Generals In Philippines Are Asking For Re-Enforcements.

A Manila special says: Generals Young and Hood are asking for re-enforcements, and a battalion of the Forty-eighth regiment has been sent to Aparri. Other troops will follow. The rebels, recently, persistently attacked Aparri for several hours, but were finally driven away. Details of the affair are lacking.

The rebels are holding reunions in the province of North Ilocos, and the Red Katipunan cross, symbolic of resistance, is again appearing among the natives. It is believed that the insurgent generals, Tinio and Flores, have been driven by General Young into General Hood's territory south of Aparri.

The fact that General Young is unable, owing to lack of troops, to maintain garrisons in all the towns occupied has had a bad effect on the natives.

KRUGER'S ACT EXPLAINED.

He Asked For Peoce In Order to Stop Further Useless Slaughter.

"President Kruger made his offer to cease hostilities in order that Great Britain may be responsible for the slaughter which is inevitably coming to her troops," says George Van Siclean, of counsel for the Boers in this country. "The Boers have given the English a chance to retire gracefully after recent successes and Mr. Chamberlain, in letting go the opportunity, makes himself responsible for the terrific carnage of the English soldiery which must inevitably ensue. The offer to cease hostilities was made in good faith, of course, but I have definite information that it had this double purpose."

SUFFERING IN PORTO RICO.

General Davis Reports Deplorable State of Affairs on Island.

A Washington dispatch says: Generel Davis reports an appalling situation in Porto Rico. Workmen from the rural districts are flocking into towns with their families because of want of means of subsistence. Thousands of natives are bordering on starvation.

"Our Generals will give only one order—namely, 'Advance!' " said the mighty Buller in his grandiloquent address to the British troops before crossing the Tugela. And the troops, whom Buller rightly called "splendid," rushed a tall hill called Spion Kop in fine style; but certain other Generals whom Buller had not thought of (because they were mere Boers, perhaps) ordered the British to "Retreat!" and enforced the demand by a most persuasive gunpowder argument. There is no particular moral to this incident, but it takes two sides to make a fight, and victories cannot be won by a mere ipse dixit of the commander on one side.

Phellosene is the name given by a French inventor to a substance he describes as artificial cork and which may be used for all purposes for which cork has hitherto been found needful. It is an analogue of celluloid, say an English authority, and consists of cork bark ground to an impalpable powder and agglutinated by a solution of nitro-cellulose in acetone. This material is made into a doughy mass, compressed into moulds and dried. It contains about ten to twelve per cent. of nitro-cellulose and is said to be a trifle, if anything, more combustible than cork under the ordinary conditions.

BOERS RESIST AN ADVANCE

Roberts Met Opposition Near Bloemfontein.

A BIG BATTLE IS FOUGHT

After Holding Their Ground All Day the Wily Boers Retreated Under Cover of Darkness.

Advices from Driefontein, Orange Free State, under date of March 11, state that Broadwood's cavalry brigade, advancing on Bloemfontein, unexpectedly found the Boers in a strong position in the Driefontein kopjes on Saturday. General Kelly-Kenny's division arriving, severe fighting ensued. The Boers resisted stubbornly, but were driven from their center position, leaving a number of dead and forty prisoners.

During the fighting, in which five regiments took part, with artillery, the Boers, though forced from their center position, clung tenaciously to the other kopjes, shelling the British fiercely with three guns and two Vickers-Maxims.

The British cavalry began to turn the Boer position, but night fell before the movement was completed. The Boers retired during the night.

All of the day was occupied in fighting. The Boers maintained a stubborn rear guard action along a running front of twelve miles on a very difficult ground. The British were advancing in three columns. General Tucker, to the southward, occupied Petrusberg unopposed; General Kelly-Kenny after following the river bank moved in the direction of Abraham's kraal.

At Driefontein, about eight miles south of Abraham's kraal, the Boers were found posted in considerable strength on the ridges connecting several kopjes where they had mounted guns.

The action began at 8 in the morning with an artillery duel. General French's cavalry and Major Porter's brigade supported our guns. The Boer artillery was accurately handled and the British cavalry found the task harder than they had expected. General Broadwood, with dogged perseverance, moved altogether six miles southward trying to find a means to get around, but the Boers followed behind ground and even attempted to outflank him.

Meanwhile, the Sixth division of infantry, advancing on the Boer left slowly, forced the enemy to retire. Had the infantry been able to move faster, the Boers would have been enveloped.

The last shot was fired at 7:30 p. m. Sunduy morning not a Boer was to be seen. The prisoners belonged to President Kruger's own commando.

The storming of Alexander kopje by the Welsh was a particularly fine piece of work. The mobility of the Boers in moving their guns was very remarkable. The New South Wales mounted infantry made a gallant but unsuccessful attempt to capture a gun.

A large number of Australians were engaged in Saturday's fight. The First Australian Horse Bridgade, with the Scots Greys, advanced within 800 yards of the Boers under heavy fire.

The New South Wales mounted infantry joined in the pursuit of the Boers northward.

REMOVED TO LOUISVILLE JAIL.

Coulton and Whittaker Taken From Frankfort Under Guard.

Harlan Whittaker and W. H. Coulton, who were confined in jail at Frankfort, charged with complicity in the assassination of Goebel, were removed from the jail at an early hour Sunday morning and taken in a hack to Shelbyville, where they were placed on a train and sent to Louisville under a heavy guard. It is understood they will be kept in the Louisville jail till the April term of the circuit court, when they will be returned to Frankfort for trial.

WAR LOAN OVERSUBSCRIBED.

People Anxious to Pour Their Money Into Brittania's Coffers.

The rush of applicants for the war loan commenced at the Bank of England and the various other banks where prospectuses were obtainable, immediately after they were opened Saturday and a steady stream of people continued throughout the day.

All sorts and conditions of persons were present, silk hatted financiers, fine ladies, farmers, clerks, governesses and thrifty representatives of all classes. They appeared anxious to stuff their money into Brittania's pockets, and it is estimated that the loan was oversubscribed.

NEGRO SHOT BY NEGROES.

Would-Be Ravisher Meets Death at Hands of His Own Race.

A dispatch from Hernando, Miss., says: Thomas Clayton, a negro, was shot to death Friday night by members of his own race because of a criminal assault on a ten-year-old girl. He was called to his cabin door and bullets from a dozen winchesters were fired into his body. The negroes refuse to bury the corpse.

CALL FOR COUNTY CONVENTION.

By direction of the Democratic executive committee of Shelby County a convention of the Democratic party of said county is hereby called to meet at the courthouse in Columbiana at 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, the 21st day of April, 1900, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Representative and selecting delegates to the State and Senatorial conventions.

For the purpose of selecting delegates to said county convention beat meetings or primaries as each beat may determine will be held in each beat on Saturday, the 14th day of April, at such hour as the beat committeemen may fix for their respective beats.

The following invitation, in the language of the resolution by the Democratic State executive committee, is hereby extended:

"Be it resolved by the Democratic State executive committee of Alabama that we hereby cordially invite all conservative white voters, irrespective of past political associations or differences who can unite with us in the effort for pure and economical government, and who will support the nominees and principles of the Democratic party, to participate in the primaries of the party throughout the State.

"Resolved, further, That all persons participating in the primaries, conventions or mass meetings of the party hereafter to be held thereby pledge themselves to support the nominees of such primaries, conventions or mass meetings, whether municipal, county, state or Federal."

The number of delegates to which each beat will be entitled will be as follows, based on the vote for Governor at the last State election:

BUSINESS ANNOUNCEMENT.

The attention of our readers and correspondents is invited to the new business rules announced in this issue. We are compelled to adopt these rules in justice to ourselves. They may seem strict, but they are in line with the policy of all successful papers. If the publication of such matter as we designate is of benefit to the parties they should be as willing to pay for it as for a horse to drive. Our space is our stock in trade, and when used for any other purpose than the dissemination of news or general information of interest to all our readers it must be paid for. We have learned in our experience of some years that the more free advertisements a paper publishes the less patronage it receives from the beneficiaries.

Politically speaking, of course we expect to continue the support of Democratic principles, and we cannot be hired to support any other; but if men are to receive any personal advantage from the use of our columns, whether before or after nomination, they will have to pay for it. We are forced to draw the line between principles and candidates.

These rules will be strictly and impartially adhered, to from this date.

IN this issue we print a likeness of Hon. Jno. W. Tomlinson, one of the candidates for governor, together with a short review of his platform. THE CHRONICLE does not espouse the cause of any candidate for a Democratic nomination as against any other worthy candidate, but we do not hesitate to say that if Mr. Tomlinson should be nominated he would be entirely satisfactory to us. We cannot say as much for all the candidates. Mr. Tomlinson is well known by reputation. His record is clear, his loyalty to the party is unquestioned, he is a gentleman of high character. His position on public issues is sound, and he is in line with the ablest and truest of the party's most honored men.

FOURTH DISTRICT POLITICS.

By a very close vote last week Mr. Robbins was unseated and Mr. Aldrich given his place in Congress from this district. The vote was a partisan one, though the evidence of Mr. Robbins's election was so clear that several Republicans so far eased their consciences as not to vote. It appears that the absence of some Democrats, notably that of Stallings and Wheeler, from this State, materially affected the result. Had these, with some others, been present the seat could have been held for its rightful owner.

Mr. Aldrich was the nominee of the Republican party of this district, a party composed almost wholly of negroes, ignorant and purchasable. He will work and vote in Congress in thorough accord with the Republican party and all that it stands for.

He carried in the election of 1898 the counties of Shelby, Chilton, Cleburne and Talladega, and went to Dallas with a majority of more than 800. This was made possible by two circumstances. His candidacy was endorsed by the Populist party of the district, and he received the vote of that party which was polled, though it was not the full strength of that party. He received their endorsement and support, not because he professed any of their principles, but because he could and did throw the negro votes which he controlled to their tickets in the county elections a few months before, and he will do so again. In the second place there was not a full vote of the Democratic party in these so-called white counties. In short the Democrats failed to do their duty at the polls as well as in the House.

Only the vote of Dallas was questioned in the contest. There the evidence was conclusive that a fair election was held, and any court of justice and law would have given the affirmative charge for the contestee on the pleadings and proof. But by a new process of reasoning the House went behind the returns, threw out Democratic votes that were cast, counted Republican votes that were not cast, and betwixt the two Mr. Robbins was unseated.

As a result this district is to be represented by a man whose political principles are not in accord with those of its people, not even of those who voted for him. We shall also have as a result, especially in this county, a continuation of the political fusion of one of the white parties with the negro party to defeat the will of a majority of the property owners in their local affairs.

So long as any number of our Populist friends vote contrary to their convictions and Democrats fail in their duty at the polls in the upper counties this district will be thus represented by men whose political sympathies are antagonistic to the common good. Whether they vote not, and regardless of how they vote, the Dallas County negroes will always be counted for the Republican candidate until the white voters learn to vote their convictions and to be loyal to their own interests.

WE have no war to make upon Mr. Stallings personally, but in view of his failure, not to say refusal, to be at his post in the House when he was badly needed we venture the prediction that if he gets any votes for governor in this district it will be from those who themselves failed in their duty to the Democratic candidate for Congress.

An Honest Medicine for La Grippe.

George W. Waitt, of South Gardiner, Me., says: "I have had the worst cough, cold, chills and grip and have taken lots of trash of no account but profit to the vendor. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the only thing that has done any good whatever. I have used one bottle of it and the chills, cold and grip have all left me. I congratulate the manufacturers of an honest medicine." For sale by Williams Bros.

Nonresident Notice.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, SHELBY COUNTY.
In Chancery, Sixth District, Northeastern Chancery Division.
Sam McElroy, complainant, v. Mary M. McElroy, defendant.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit of Sam McElroy that the defendant, Mary M. McElry's residence is unknown to affiant, and further, that in the belief of said affiant, the defendant is over the age of twenty-one years.

It is therefore ordered, by the Register, that publication be made in THE CHRONICLE, a newspaper published in the city of Columbiana, Ala., once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring her, the said Mary M. McElroy, to plead, answer or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 9th day of April, A. D., 1900, or, in thirty days thereafter a decree pro confesso may be taken against her.

Done at office in Columbiana, Ala., this 13th day of March, A. D. 1900.

Hon. Jno. W. Tomlinson, Candidate for Governor of Alabama.

Mr. Tomlinson is especially waging an aggressive warfare in his canvass against the school-book trust, which has increased, by an unlawful combine, the price of school books beyond the reach of many poor but earnest seekers after an education.

He is a man with a clean record as a citizen, as a lawyer and as a party worker. His campaign is on high grounds, and he is asking the nomination solely on his merits as a man and as a Democrat.

He has won in his home county, Jefferson, a fight for a direct vote on the governorship, and is resting his chances with the people.

Advice to Consumptives

There are three great remedies that every person with weak lungs, or with consumption itself, should understand. These remedies will cure about every case in its first stages; and many of those more advanced. It is only the most advanced that are hopeless. Even these are wonderfully relieved and life itself greatly prolonged.

What are these remedies? Fresh air, proper food and

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Be afraid of draughts but not of fresh air. Eat nutritious food and drink plenty of milk. Do not forget that Scott's Emulsion is the oldest, the most thoroughly tested and the highest endorsed of all remedies for weak throats, weak lungs and consumption in all its stages.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

From the Vindicator, Rutherfordton, N. C.

The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with the most remarkable results in each case. First, with rheumatism in the shoulder, from which he suffered excruciating pain for ten days, which was relieved with two applications of Pain Balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a very short time. Second, in rheumatism in thigh joint, almost prostrating him with severe pain, which was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment on retiring at night and getting up free from pain. Does It Pay to Buy Cheap?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the more severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the only remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in severe throat and lung troubles, "Boschees German Syrup." It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy exporation, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try one bottle. Recommended many years by all druggists in the world. Hall Drug Co.

This is not a cheap John printing office and we can't make prices to suit people who want that kind of work. We meet competition in our line, but our line is first class.

A Good Cough Medicine for Children.

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says F. P. Moran, a well-known and popular baker, of Petersburg, Va. "We have given it to our children when troubled with bad coughs, also with whooping cough, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children as it contained no opium or other harmful drug." Sold by Williams Bros.

Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey advances a new theory in the treatment of all cough, lung and bronchial troubles. It cures and cures quickly. Absolutely harmless and pleasant to take. It cuts loose the mucus without exertion or straining, and stops the cough at once by healing the inflamed parts. It gives vigor and vitality to the respiratory organs. It enables the blood to receive the proper supply of oxygen. It builds up the system, rendering it less susceptible to cold. Good druggists sell it.

AN ANOMALY.

The Court and Solicitor One Week Ahead of Time.

We have frequently seen judges and solicitors get to court late, but not often do you hear of a case where they get there a week ahead of time. This thing occurred here Monday when Judge Pelham and Solicitor Coleman came in to hold the spring term of the circuit court this week. Seeing no signs of court time about the streets as they rode over from the depot they looked about from side to side in anxious inquiry, when they were finally informed by a representative of The Chronicle that court did not meet until next Monday. The Judge looked at Tom and Tom looked at the Judge in blank amazement, and then a feeble smile crept over the Judge's face, while Tom looked so tired. Each began to lay it on the other, but neither would admit his reponsibility.

The Judge said Tom had it down for this week in his little book, and that having as much faith in the book as in the Code he had hurried home from New York to meet the appointment. He further explained that Tom's veracity was so well known in Anniston that his political club frequently threatened to turn him out, and on that account his date was accepted without question.

Tom attempted to explain his presence here at this time by electioneering for his friend John M. Caldwell for Congress, but the Judge would not back him up in that excuse because he could not risk his reputation as a sane man by electioneering in Columbiana for Johnston.

Both finally owned up to their mistake and laid it all to not reading The Chronicle, for which they subscribed and which they promised themselves to consult in future instead of Tom's little book. They returned home via Birmingham, promising to be on hand next Monday, when they hope to put the laugh on the other fellows.

If you ever try Sutherland's Eagle Eye Salve for failing eyesight, granulated lids or sore eyes of any kind, you will be a keen-sighted advertiser among your friends for it.

Chancellor Kelley arrived today and his court is in session.

To cure a cold in one night take Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. It clears the throat, soothes the bronchials and exhilarates the lungs. All druggists sell it. No cure no pay.

Don't ask us for prices on second-class work, because we don't do that kind. Our prices for first-class work as low as any, but on other classes we don't even make bids.

We regret to hear of the death of Ab G. Pitner, which occurred yesterday in Rome, Ga. Ab was for many years a passenger train conductor on the Southern railroad, and was most widely known and sincerely liked. Courteous, friendly, jovial, he was a very prince of conductors, and his death will be regretted by many of us who have ridden on his train and been made to feel at home in smoker or parlor car.

Not in a long time has spring been so backward as this season. There has been but little plowing done. The wiser ones say that this means a good fruit year, but the farmers are becoming somewhat blue over the situation. Corn is selling for 65 cents cash, and much higher on time, and it seems that most all of our farmers are buying. With the oat crop probably short they will be forced to buy all their feed stuff to make a crop, and this will be hard on them if cotton is a low price next fall. Now would it not be a good idea to cut that big cotton crop off one-third and raise more corn?

Hon. Thos. Williams, of Elmore county, Alabama, ex-member of congress, statesman, orator, writer and one of the best informed men on the theoretical and practical application of commercial fertilizers. He is one of the largest cotton planters in the state, and produces his great crops upon poor sandy uplands by the skillful use of commercial fertilizers. He uses the Alabama Fertilizer exclusively—after having tried nearly all other leading brands of complete fertilizers. His words, like rifle balls, are few, and go straight to the mark:

Wetumpka, Ala., September 9, 1899.

Dear Sirs:—Speaking from experimental tests in results I am assured the Alabama Fertilizer put up by you, is not excelled by any on our market, and I commend it to the public as a genuine fertilizer productive of good results.

The bags treated by the Vegetable Fibre Preserver used by the Alabama Fertilizer Co., successfully resisted the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in the fertilizers, also preventing all loss from wasting.

Yours truly,

THOS. WILLIAMS.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT ANALYSIS.

Bulletin No. 12, issued by the Alabama Department of Agriculture, shows the actual commercial value of the Alabama Fertilizers to be 19.33 per cent more valuable than all the complete fertilizers or guanos offered for sale in the State of Alabama for the season covered by said bulletin.

Bulletin No. 18, just issued by the Department of Agriculture, shows the actual analysis, from samples sent to the Department by dealers and consumers throughout the State, that the Alabama Fertilizer is actually $3.54 per ton or 24 per cent better than the guaranteed analysis by the Alabama Fertilizer Co., and this answers the question so often asked, "why the Alabama Fertilizer produces so much better crops than other fertilizers of equal guaranteed analysis?" The Alabama Fertilizer will be shipped in the Mummia Vegetable Fibre Preserved Bags. There is no other preserved bag on the market of any value.

The Commissioner of Agriculture recommends and endorses it in the following words:

"I therefore unhesitatingly say that I believe the bags treated by the Mummia Vegetable Fibre Preserving Process will resist the action of the weather and the chemicals contained in fertilizers; that the meshes of the bags are so filled by the process as to prevent all wastage, and that if generally used by manufacturers, would be of inestimable value to carriers, dealers and consumers.

(Signed) "I. F. CULVER,
"Commissioner of Agriculture."

These Mummia Preserved Bags are almost indestructible by the weather or Fertilizers. Can be hauled in the rain without material damage to bag or contents. Fertilizers put up in these bags can be hauled out to the farm at any time and kept ready for use.

The Alabama Fertilizer is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all round fertilizer for cotton and corn.

ALABAMA FERTILIZER RECORD.

It has produced nearly four bales of cotton on one acre of poor sandy upland.

One hundred and thirty-two bushels of corn on one acre of poor sandy upland.

Two thousand and forty one bushels of corn on twenty acres of poor upland.

Land and corn accurately surveyed and measured by competent disinterested and honorable men

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 48 premiums given during a series of years through the Commercial and Industrial Association for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the Alabama Fertilizer.

This trade mark is registered. It is our property. It is not likely to be counterfeited, as that would subject the perpetrator to the danger of heavy fine and imprisonment (see U. S. laws respecting copyrights). It is on every genuine sack of Alabama Fertilizer.

As required by state law the word "Alabama" in large letters is found on every bag of fertilizer offered for sale in this state. Some unscrupulous persons have employed this means to deceive you.

See that the above trade mark is on the bag, and take none offered you as the Alabama Fertilizer without it.

Value of Pictures.

Pictures do more toward furnishing a house and determining the status of its inmates than anything else. If you have a suspicion that you are not wise in choosing and hanging pictures, get advice from someone whose taste need not be questioned, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. Cheap pictures are not necessarily poor, but a poor picture is usually cheap. To be able to discern the difference is a quality with which every one is not blessed. A good plan is to purchase copies of famous pictures, etchings and engravings. These are almost sure to be good. In framing pictures remember that gold frames are for oil paintings and dark pictures, white frames for water colors, and black enamel or Flemish oak and modern oak for etchings and photographs.

THE NATIVES OF GUAM.

BY ENSIGN C. L. POOR, U. S. N.

WHEN, under the most amusingly opera-bouffe conditions ever experienced in modern warfare, the United States steamship Charleston, on June 20, 1898, captured the beautiful but isolated and sleepy old Spanish island colony of Guam in the western Pacific, the place was governed by a lieutenant-colonel of the Spanish army, Don Juan Marina, supported by a staff of four army and one naval officers, and a garrison of fifty-four as rural guards in the outlying villages, thus relieving the marines of this isolated and monotonous duty. The natives of Guam are in pleasing contrast to the Filipinos. Though originally, in great part, from the same stock, they have inherited all of the virtues and few of the vices of these people. There is in the blood of these people a considerable proportion of Spanish, South American, and American stock, the last being due to the whaling-vessels

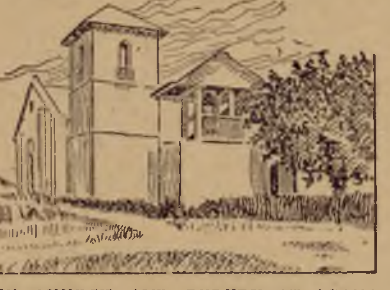
A FAMILY GROUP AT AGANA, GUAM.

Spanish soldiers, with a native militia of fifty-four men, these latter being armed with old Remington rifles, and organized as artillery crews for four old brass field-guns.

Upon the departure of the Charleston the Spanish officers and soldiers were removed, and the island was left nominally in charge of its leading citizens and the native soldiery.

During all this time the native troops have maintained their organization and discipline, keeping their clothes and equipments clean and in order, posting their sentries, and carrying out their routine—all in a most praiseworthy manner. They are a soldierly, intelligent body of men, and will undoubtedly be a valuable auxiliary to the new marine garrison that has arrived on the United States steamship Yosemite. Their best sphere of usefulness would be as a police force and as rural guards in the outlying villages, thus relieving the marines of this isolated and monotonous duty. The natives of Guam are in pleasing contrast to the Filipinos. Though originally, in great part, from the same stock, they have inherited all of the virtues and few of the vices of these people. There is in the blood of these people a considerable proportion of Spanish, South American, and American stock, the last being due to the whaling-vessels that used to frequent the island in large numbers to obtain fresh water and to recuperate their crews. It is not at all unusual to hear English spoken, even in the interior of the island, and, in fact, it is quite as common as Spanish. In personal appearance the natives resemble the Filipinos, though of a greater stature and more robust, while the hair is not so bristling and porcupine-like, and brown or even blond hair is occasional evidence of the mixture of races. The intelligence, as indicated by their faces, is much more marked than in the natives of the Philippines. The women, when young, have well-rounded figures and an excellent carriage, which redeems to a great extent their shortness of stature and consequent tendency to dumpiness. In my long walks about Agana I have noticed many that were very comely and some that were decidedly pretty. As they age they do not become unduly fat, or later on repulsively hag-



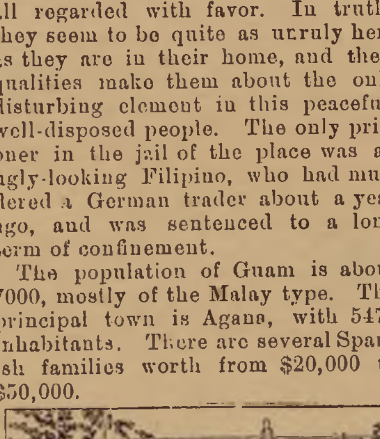
THE CHURCH AND BELFRY AT AGANA.

Upon occasions of the greatest importance an elaborate jacket of the beautiful and expensive juna cloth, with flowing sleeves and wide collar, is worn over the chemise. With this is worn a skirt of vari-colored calico or cotton stuff, generally of some bright hue. The feet are usually bare, small heelless slippers of colored leather being occasionally seen. The hair is drawn back from the forehead in a knot, and hats are never worn. In church a white cloth is worn as a veil over the head.

The men dress simply and comfortably, generally in suits of white drilling, such as are common all through the East. The Filipino custom of wearing a white shirt with long and flowing tails is in favor among the poorer natives.

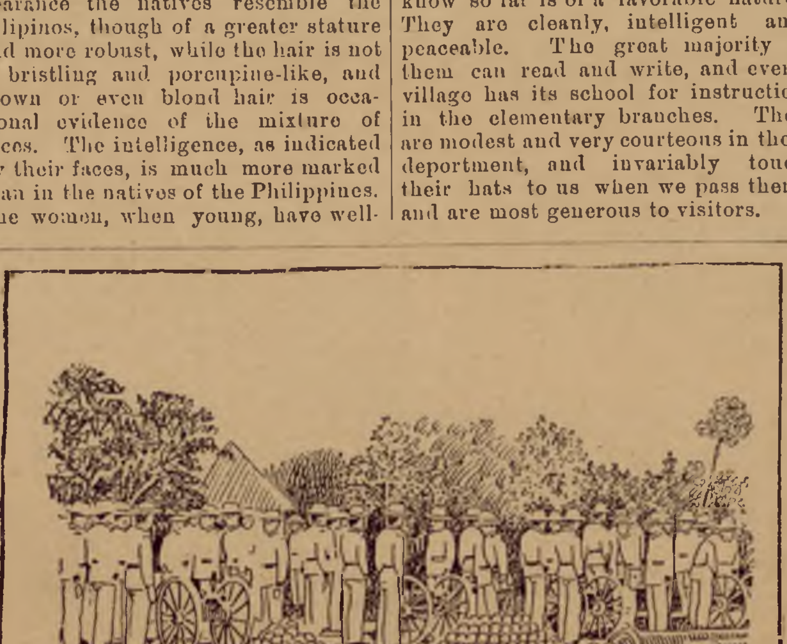
One of the first things evident to us is the decided antipathy of the natives for the Filipinos. There are few of them upon the island, and these are not at all regarded with favor. In truth, they seem to be quite as unruly here as they are in their home, and their qualities make them about the only disturbing element in this peaceful, well-disposed people. The only prisoner in the jail of the place was an ugly-looking Filipino, who had murdered a German trader about a year ago, and was sentenced to a long term of confinement.

The population of Guam is about 7000, mostly of the Malay type. The principal town is Agana, with 5475 inhabitants. There are several Spanish families worth from $20,000 to $50,000.



GOVERNOR'S HOUSE, AGANA.

As to the mental and moral characteristics of our new citizens, all that we know so far is of a favorable nature. They are cleanly, intelligent and peaceable. The great majority of them can read and write, and every village has its school for instruction in the elementary branches. They are modest and very courteous in their deportment, and invariably touch their hats to us when we pass them, and are most generous to visitors.



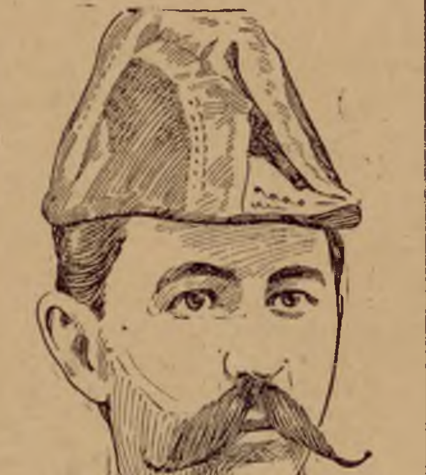
THE NATIVE TROOPS OF GUAM.

The worst trait, however, of the citizen of Guam is indolence. Nature is so provident, and so warm and smiling here, that little effort is required to support life and provide sustenance for the family. To pay a native by the day or in advance is a fatal error indeed, for he will work until he has accumulated a few dollars, then buy his wife a new skirt, lay in a supply of canned goods at the store, some tobacco and tuba (cocoanut rum), and then retire to a life of affluent ease for as many months as the money and supplies hold out.

Intoxication is very rare. Men and women alike smoke cigars and pipes, and nearly every one has the unsightly habit of chewing the betel-nut. The native cigar is an object of wonder to the new-comer. It is made from the whole leaf of the native tobacco, which is of most excellent flavor, but very strong and green, rolled into a cylinder about eight inches long, and wound about with threads of fibre to keep it from unwrapping.

With the example of American energy and industry; with advanced education, and with the influences of progress; with a strong and just government and purified religious example and instruction—there opens before the inhabitant of Guam a most promising future; and before us, whose duty it is to plant here a model colony, there lies a most interesting experience and labor, of the ultimate success of which there can be no possible doubt.

Captain Richard P. Leary, of the United States Navy, the naval Governor of the island, is a Baltimorean and a brother of Captain Peter Leary, Jr., of the Fourth United States Artillery, now at Fort McHenry. Captain Leary has had a long and honorable service in the navy. Several years ago the Legislature of Maryland presented him with a gold medal for his courageous service to the Government during the Samoan dispute. At that time he was in command of the American man-of-war Adams. Capt. Leary convoyed the New Orleans, purchased from Brazil, to this country. This ship was used during the war with Spain as a patrol for the New England coast. Although he did not do much damage to the Spaniards, Captain Leary's vessel had the distinction of being the last American boat to be fired upon.



CAPTAIN RICHARD P. LEARY, NAVAL GOVERNOR OF GUAM.

Newsboys in New York City.

There are now a number of New York newsboys who, instead of walking from point to point, station themselves at some spot, and instead of walking about, hold that spot. A good illustration of this is seen in the City Hall park in the selling of afternoon papers to people going home to Brooklyn over the bridge, or uptown in Manhattan or the Bronx by way of the elevated railroad from the City Hall station. Many of these boys have regular customers who buy from them regularly.

Perhaps the latest development of specialization in selling newspapers in the street is at the doors of big wholesale houses down town. This is not new, but is done more than before. The boy takes his station outside the door, and if he succeeds he comes to have regular customers, who buy as they leave on their way home. The boy knows their paper and whips it out as they come along, and he may do better concentrating his attention on this stream, so to speak, than he would fishing for a chance fish to be taken between corners pre-empted by venders making it their business to stand day after day on the same spot.

Information Wanted.

A small boy living in Mt. Salem, Mich., was asking his father questions the other night.

"Pa," he said, "what is dehorning?"

Father—"Why, it's cutting the horns off cattle."

Boy (after reflecting)—"Pa, what is detailing?"

Father (growing irritated)—"What in the world are you asking so many questions for?"

Boy—"Well, I saw in the paper the other day, where General Buller detailed a whole squad of his men."—Detroit Free Press.

Americans Live Well.

An American spends on an average $50 a year on food, a Frenchman $48, a German $45, a Spaniard $33, an Italian $24, and a Russian $40. The American eats 109 pounds of meat a year, the Frenchman eighty-seven pounds, the German sixty-four pounds, the Italian twenty-eight pounds and the Russian fifty-one pounds. Of bread the American consumes 380 pounds, the Frenchman 540 pounds, the German 560 pounds, the Spaniard 480 pounds, the Italian 400 pounds and the Russian 655 pounds.

Playing With the Boys.

A small schoolboy who had been sent home by his teacher because his sisters had the measles was noticed by that teacher at the next recess playing with the other children on the school ground.

"Johnny, didn't I tell you not to come to school while your sisters had the measles?"

"Yes; but I am not going to school I only came to play with the boys before it begins."—Commercial Tribune.

The Worst of All.

Willie—"Just see my new hobby-automobile."

Jack—"That's nothing! Look at this bladeless knife and triggerless rifle."

Alice—"But you should see my pointless story-book. What have you got, papa?"

Papa—"A penniless purse."—Life.

SENTENCED

A Dog to Jail for Sixty Days to Stay with His Master.

New York World: It is of record in Recorder Stanton's Court in Hoboken that Kaiser, a mongrel yellow dog, was formally taken before him and sentenced to sixty days in the county jail, and a commitment was regularly made out. This was done that the dog might not be separated from his master, Edward Livermore. Time was, perhaps, when Livermore was good to look upon, but Kaiser was never anything but an ugly cur. The man is 52 and looks years older. Dog and man have starved together. Their bones are almost sticking through their skin. Both bear the imprint of suffering from starvation and cold. The man was clad in rags. Only when Livermore realized that he was so weak from lack of food that he must die of starvation or cold did he apply to Poormaster Brock the other day for admission to the almshouse. "You will have to leave the dog behind," said the poormaster as he wrote out the commitment. "We can't part," said the old man, and his voice trembled, as if the suggestion that he would give up his dog hurt him. He turned to the dog. "If we can't live together we'll die together, won't we, Kaiser?" The poor, gaunt dog wigwagged his stumpy tail in acquiescence. "You don't understand," said the old man, gently. "You see, I was prosperous once and owned my own canal boat. It sank one night about six years ago, and I should have gone down with it had it not been for Kaiser. He jumped into my bunk and awakened me while the water was pouring into the cabin. We've been pals ever since, share and share alike, and we can't part now." Then Poormaster Brock's manner changed. He took Livermore and Kaiser before Recorder Stanton, and when the latter heard the story he sentenced man and dog to the jail for two months, and they walked off together, happier than they have been for months.

Ostrich Spoiled His Speech.

Anybody who heard Senator Allen of Nebraska, deliver his famous fifteen-hour speech against the bill for the repeal of the Sherman silver bill would hardly believe that anything coud stump him. Yet there is an experience in the senator's life which shows that, after all, he is like unto other mortals, says the Washington Post. "I was campaigning in my state once," said the senator, "when I had occasion to speak at a fair grounds. The grand stand was full, and the occasion seemed to be full of promise for an orator overflowing as I was with political gospel. Just as I had commenced a man brought out an ostrich hitched to a sulky. I don't know whether you ever saw the trotting ostrich in the east, but out west he was a great attraction. Well, as soon as that bird began to run around the track I wasn't in it. The ostrich monopolized the attention of every man, woman and child. When the bird stopped the people listened to me, but when he threw out his long legs again there was a roar of laughter and applause which drowned every word I uttered. Finally, I gave it up. I let the trotting ostrich have everything his own way."

I Could Hardly Breathe

"I had a terrible cold and could hardly breathe. I then tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and it gave me immediate relief. I don't believe there is a cough remedy in the world anywhere near as good."—W. C. Layton, Sidell, Ill., May 29, 1899.

Cures Night Colds

How will your cough be tonight? Worse, probably. For it's first a cold, then a cough, then bronchitis or pneumonia, and at last consumption. Coughs always tend downward. It's first the throat and then the lungs. They don't naturally tend to get well. You have to help Nature a little.

You can stop this downward tendency any time by taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Then take it tonight. You will cough less and sleep better, and by tomorrow at this time you will be greatly improved.

You can get a small bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, now, for 25 cents. For hard coughs, bronchitis, asthma, and the croup, the 50 cent size is better. For chronic cases, as consumption, and to keep on hand, the $1.00 size is most economical.

Captain C. W. Cooper—

Dear Sir: Those who oppose my reelection to the senate are endeavoring to impress the people with the idea that my services in that body during the past twenty-three years have been of no value to the state, or the people of the south, or to the country at large.

This method of detraction has caused anxious friends, some of whom were not born when I entered the senate and are now voters, to ask me for some statements as to what I have been doing as their representative.

I leave it to the people to place their own estimate upon the efficiency and value of my services. I will state, as well as I can, an outline of what they have been. I know that they have been faithful, active, industrious and unceasing.

Without attempting to comment on the support, or the opposition I have given to all of the great number of legislative measures that have come before the senate during these twelve congrsses, in the twenty-seven sessions they have held, or the many questions of privilege and parliamentary law, and the many treaties that have been considered, and the great number of appointments that have been confirmed or rejected, I will state some of those measures that bear most directly on Alabama and the south, and those that affect the general welfare of the whole country.

Alabama and the south were struggling for their rights in the Union, and were taking the first steps in the restoration of their social, political and industrial reorganization when I entered the senate.

We were under the ban of suspicion and many of our colleagues, in both houses, were free in the indulgence of bitter reproaches towards us as "rebels" and "traitors." My colleague, George E. Spencer, who had been sent to the senate by a revolutionary body—the "court house legislature"—met me at the threshold of the senate, backed by the report of a committee whose sittings I had no notice of, and moved to reject my credentials as a senator on the ground that the legislature by which I was chosen had been elected by a fraudulent and violent suppression of the negro vote in many counties of Alabama. "The negro in politics," from that day to this, has been the chief trouble and danger to the people and states of the south.

I was seated against that report and a speech of Mr. Spencer by a vote, without a division, that seemed to include every senator except Mr. Spencer and one other. I was deeply gratified at this manifestation of welcome and I responded to it by taking an active part in the current business of the senate. I sought to convince the senate that I desired to work for the present and the future, instead of worrying over the resentments of the past; but I never, for a moment, lowered the proud crest of the south, nor did I ever concede that we were in error in our contest with the north. In this spirit I took an active part in the work of the senate and in supporting the rights and honor of the United States at home and abroad as earnestly as if I had never borne arms against its flag.

In the session of 1893 the lawfulness of the legislature that elected me to my present term in the senate was assailed in resolutions reported favorably to the senate, on the ground that fraud was used in suppressing the negro vote in fifteen central counties of Alabama. It was alleged that Alabama did not possess a government republican in form. Thus, again, the negro was made the basis of a movement to disfranchise the state in the senate. The vote on that resolution was 6 to 41 against it. I refer to this to show that my career in the senate has not been a sinecure.

Turning to the measures in which I took an active part, I will state those that were important to Alabama and the south, and some that were of national importance.

My first vote in the senate, and the one that was my hardest trial, was for the confirmation of Fred Douglas as marshal of the District of Columbia. Senators Harris of Tennessee, Garland of Arkansas, Jones of Florida and Ben Hill of Georgia united with me in supporting Douglas, because we were convinced that it depended upon that vote whether Mr. Hayes would remove the troops from keeping guard over the legislatures of South Carolina and Louisiana, then in session. The result was immediate, and the troops were removed.

THE BAY OF MOBILE.

In the senate I gave my first attention to the bay of Mobile, and prepared an act to appropriate $10,000 for a preliminary survey as a basis for improving the channel. This beginning was followed up by me in the senate in every succeeding congress with constant care, and as a result that channel is now open to warships and deep-sea steamers up to the wharves at Mobile.

COTTON CATERPILLAR.

Beginning in 1878, I obtained appropriations amounting to $50,000 in all, to exterminate the cotton caterpillar, which was then a very destructive pest, and has been brought under complete control.

NEGRO SUFFRAGE.

In January, 1879, Mr. Edmunds, of Vermont, offered resolutions in the senate to declare the effect of 13th, 14th and 15th amendments of the constitution, in which were couched the doctrines that afterward were developed in the force bill, and resulting in resolutions offered by Senator Pritchard, of North Carolina. All these movements were designed to fasten negro suffrage on the states beyond the power of modification. I met Mr. Edmunds in debate on his resolutions, which continued for three days, in 1879. The force bill was only another phase of the Edmunds resolutions. That bill came to the senate from the house and had a desperate opposition on the part of the democrats, who were in the minority in the senate. In that debate I held the floor during fifteen legislative days, some of them continuing late in the night, and one on Christmas day, until Mr. Wolcott, of Colorado, asked me to yield the floor in order that he could move to take up another bill. I yielded the floor, the other bill was taken up by a vote of the senate, and that movement defeated the force bill. Since that time no such movement has been attempted in the senate until the present session of congress, when Mr. Pritchard, of North Carolina, offered resolutions in the same direction. I opposed this movement in a speech in the senate, which has been extensively circulated.

On many occasions I have discussed the subject of negro suffrage when it was pertinent to the question before the senate. I have always contended that ours is a white man's government; and that no white citizen of the United States should be disfranchised because he is poor or illiterate. Such men need their votes to enable them to obtain the help of those who have been more fortunate in the protection of their rights and liberties.

I have never censured those persons, if there are such, who resorted to illegal methods to prevent the corruption of the ballot box by the negro vote, controlled by their political masters, but have defended them in the courts without fee or reward. I have deplored the existence o. the necessity for such methods of enforcing the law of self-defense. I still deplore it, and have all the time hoped for and worked for a less demoralizing plan of getting rid of negro suffrage.

I am opposed to having negroes in the army as soldiers, whether regulars or volunteers. It degrades the highest and most honorable service the white man can render his country. I was opposed to organizing the Third Alabama (negro) regiment and, when earnestly solicited by our governor to have it retained in the service after other regiments had been mustered out, I refused.

I feel convinced that public sentiment in the north has so far changed that the country does not now intend to permit the southern states to be vexed with force bills, or any harsh legislation, to suppress their efforts to modify and control the power of men who use the negro vote to dominate elections in the south.

In dealing with the populations recently acquired from Spain, the white people of the north realize the necessity of strong restraints upon the voting power of inferior races.

CHINESE EXCLUSION.

In February, 1879, I advocated Chinese exclusion, and have since voted often in the same line, and have frequently spoken against Chinese immigration, in the senate. Yet, I offered and supported a bill to compensate Chinese for injuries inflicted by a mob in Wyoming, and also to refund to China an indemnity she had paid us which turned out to have been excessive. This bill was passed.

RAILROAD LAND GRANTS.

In 1879 I offered a general bill to forfeit the unearned land grants of all the railroads in the United States. This movement led to the bringing in of separate bills to forfeit the land grants of a number of the railroads, and each being considered separately, a number of them became laws, under which a vast domain, comprising near 100,000,000 acres of land, was placed within the reach of the homestead and timber culture laws.

Being then a member of the committee on public lands, I was earnestly engaged in the discussion of these various bills, most of them presenting questions of much difficulty in law, and some of them were strongly contested on the facts. It would not be instructive to go into these various contested bills to review their provisions, or to show the great labor that attended their passage. I need only to say that it was very great and I had my full share of it. These cases extended over a period of more than ten years of my service in the senate. Some of them extended to Alabama, to the great advantage of homestead settlers. In these cases I incurred the resentment of certain great railroad kings that will follow me to my grave. I did them no injustice and endeavored to amend the bills so that the courts should decide the question of forfeiture of the lands, but the senate overruled my efforts, and the railroad companies did not appeal to the courts, because doubtless they knew that congress had justly decided that the lands had been forfeited.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGES.

I always supported the bills of Mr. Morrill to assist the agricultural and mechanical colleges by giving them a due allowance of the proceeds of the sales of the public lands.

The debates on these various measures were closely contested, and I freely took part in them.

SCOOLS FOR WOMEN.

In 1882 I offered an amendment, which passed the senate, to open these colleges to women, and to add instruction in such branches of domestic employment as was suited to their sex. The house failed to concur. I did not lose sight of this purpose until I found the opportunity, fifteen years later, to accomplish it, as I hoped and believed in the bill to grant 25,000 acres of land to endow the white girls' school at Montevallo, Ala.

COAL AND IRON LAND.

When I entered the senate coal and iron lands were prohibited by law from being sold, except at the price of $20 per acre, when within ten miles of a railroad, and $15 per acre when they were more than ten miles from a railroad.

In February, 1881, I offered a bill, which passed the senate, to repeal this law and put these lands on a footing with agricultural lands, so that they would be open to homestead entry. This bill failed in the house. It was alleged, and I believed it, that a syndicate of speculators had been formed to prevent any disposition of these lands until they could capture them.

Since that time I have offered other bills to the same effect. These lands were covered by a report made to the general land office by Winter, an alleged geologist, which included a vast area of country. That report was adopted by the general land office, and it forbid the entry of any lands within that great circuit unless they were proven to be non-mineral lands. Under this order agents were set to work to examine the entries that had been made under non-mineral affidavits and many such entries, made in good faith, were set aside on the report of these agents. These laws were enacted before I came to the senate.

THE UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA.

Finding that these coal lands were being excluded from all other methods of disposal, until some syndicate could capture them, I brought in a bill to give 46,800 acres to the state of Alabama for the benefit of the university. It passed the senate in June, 1882.

The contest over this bill was severe, chiefly because the enemy was out of sight, but it appealed to the conscience of congress and became a law in spite of their secret opposition. I do not yet know who were concerned in this opposition but I know that they were difficult to defeat.

SCHOOL OF MINES.

Encouraged by the success of the university bill, I next introduced a bill to create a school of mines at or near Birmingham for the education of the children of miners, and endow it with public lands in the mineral district.

Either the alertness of the syndicate or the rise in the value of the lands and the indifference of the people to the subject prevented success in this effort, which I repeated at a subsequent session of congress.

LANDS FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

My next effort was to give all the remaining public lands to the state for the purposes of education. That bill passed the senate, and was defeated in the house.

SEPARATE SCOOLS.

Then I passed separate bills through the senate giving 25,000 acres of land to the Montevallo school and 25,000 acres to the school at Tuskegee. These bills were consolidated afterward and passed both houses.

I also passed a bill through the senate giving 25,000 acres of land to the State Normal School at Florence. This bill failed of consideration in the house. At the present session my colleague passed a bill in the senate, for which I voted, giving 25,000 acres each to the Normal Schools at Florence and Huntsville, and I offered a bill, which the committe on public lands is considering, to give 25,000 acres each to the Normal Schools at Troy and Montgomery.

NAVIGABLE RIVERS.

I have earnestly advocated, and with success, in the senate, the improvement of the navigation of the Tennessee river at Mussel Shoals and Colbert Shoals, and at other places; the slack water navigation of the Warrior river; the Van Hoose canal at Birmingham; the navigation of the Tombigbee and Alabama rivers; the Chattahoochee Escambia and Tallapoosa rivers, and I have pressed with vigor the heavy task of opening the Coosa river to steamboat navigation. I have urged this very important work in the senate and in conventions of the people, and am now asking the government to give $6,000,000 to this work, in anticipation of the opening of the canal through the Isthmus of Darien. I believe that there is no more important work remaining to be done in Alabama

SUMS APPROPRIATED.

Since I have been in the senate more than $11,000,000 have been appropriated to rivers and harbors in Alabama, and continuing improvements for nearly $6,000,000 are provided for in the laws. In all these measures I have actively assisted.

AGRICULTURE.

I have never missed an opportunity to promote the interests of the agricultural and industrial people by any vote or speech I could contribute to them, or by dignifying these pursuits. I earnestly advocated the raising the head of the department of agriculture to a secretaryship in the cabinet. My labor for water transportation within the state and through an inter-oceanic canal has been chiefly stimulated by the desire to find wider and better markets for their productions.

PESTS OF AGRICULTURE, &c.

Crop and orchard pests, diseases of cattle, horses and hogs, and the publication of books on these subjects, the free distribution of seeds, plants, and useful trees and flowers, and fruit-bearing vines and plants have received my constant care on appropriation bills.

TARIFF.

Low duties on the common necessaries of life, used chiefly by laborers miners, lumbermen, workingmen and farmers, have always had my support in the senate, and a free list that would include medicines, coarse clothing used by working people, cotton ties and bagging, sugar and salt, have always been advocated by me in the senate.

LABOR.

I opposed the stimulation of coal and iron production by high tariff bounties, because they did not need it in Alabama to enable them to compete with foreign countries, and because it would take the negro labor from the farms, and, by throwing it into competition with the miners, would reduce their wages, dependent largely on their skill, and would drive respectable miners and their families out of the state because of the depraved associations they would be subjected to.

The farmers and the lumbermen have about the only profitable pursuits in which negroes can be extensively employed without detriment to the families of the laboring classes.

The debates on these topics in the senate have occupied a large part of the 8,395 days I have been in that body, and I have been an active participant in these labors. It is not necessary to recite my efforts in detail, inasmuch as I have not heard that I have omitted any duty to this class of my constituents, or that I have made any serious mistakes.

In my efforts to furnish them with free coinage of legal tender silver money I feel that I have contributed something of value to them in assisting, through many years, in many hard struggles and with great labor and vexation of spirit, in forcing the coinage of 801,000,000 of silver legal tender dollars that are now the real support of agriculture and of all productive industry, and of the government. Without those coins ruin would envelope the country.

THE NATIONAL BANKS.

I regret that my oft-repeated efforts have failed to open the national banks, that rest upon the credit of the land owners, so that they can borrow the money they thus sustain, upon the security of their real esetate.

CONSULAR REPORTS AND THE COTTON TRADE.

In 1881 I offered a resolution that passed the senate to collect samples of all cotton goods manufactured in the United States and sold in all the markets of the world. Those samples, with statistics of the trade, were collected by our consuls and sent by the government to the Cotton Exposition at Atlanta, Ga. This was the origin of the valuable series of consular reports published up to the present time, and European nations have followed in a similar plan, so that the statistics of trade in every country, in all kinds of productions, is now in easy reach of all our merchants and manufacturers.

These publications stimulated the intercourse of nations and led up to the great Pan-American Congress, held in Washington in 1889. This congress has greatly increased our cotton goods trade with Mexico and South America, while that trade and the sale of raw cotton goods in China, Japan, Australia, and all the Orient, is increasing to vast proportions as a result of our control of the trade in the Pacific ocean, which is assured by the annexation of Hawaii and the Philippine Archpelago.

In the Wilson tariff bill I introduced an amendment to suppress trusts and combinations in the importation of goods from foreign markets. It was adopted and became a part of that act. It was again enacted in the Dingley bill, and is now the law. That law has been effectual in suppressing such trusts. If it was also applied to interstate commerce it would suppress and prevent all trusts. The corporations of the country are the chief agencies for the promotion of the trusts and combinations that control trade, finance, and labor. I have earnestly worked to prevent such combinations and have steadfastly voted that way in the Senate. Great corporations chartered in New Jersey and Delaware, under their dangerous system, own and control a great many minor corporations in other States. They are now controling vast properties in Alabama, under assumed corporate rights and powers that the Legislature of Alabama has refused to give them, thereby largely escaping taxation in our State. I have a bill now pending in the Senate to prevent such trusts and combinations, which I hope will receive the favorable action of Congress.

TRANSPORTATION.

Cheap transportation for the people, by land and water, has all the time been an object of greatest solicitude with me in my work in the Senate. This purpose led me in my efforts to control the Union and Central Pacific Railroads and other land-grant railroads. To this subject I devoted a great deal of time and labor during a period of more than fifteen years, in connection with the continuous effort to compel the subsidised railroads to pay their debts to the United States. A detailed statement of the bills, reports, and debates on these subjects would cover an inadmissible space in this letter, and I can only state the general result, which is that, after the greatest effort, these debts, amounting to $113,000,000, have been collected by the government. In connection with this policy of providing cheap transportation by water, and wider, nearer, and better markets for the productions of the South, it was manifset that our people could not afford to pay railroad freights on their staple productions of corn, cattle, cotton, lumber, iron, and coal to reach the great markets on the American coast of the Pacific ocean, and in the Orient. Yet, the markets across the Atlantic had been tested for two centuries and had forced the South to rely on a single production—cotton—for our commerical interchange with the Eastern Hemisphere, and gave to them the advantage of putting their own price on that crop. This commercial view of our situation caused me to adopt with eagerness and to advocate with real the powerful appeals of Lieut. Maury—afterward our Confederate Commodore—to our people, in behalf of the Nicaraguan Canal.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

Before I reached the Senate President Grant had called attention to this subject in a message to Congress. Mr. Hayes followed up the subject in an impressive way in a message to Congress. Mr. Blaine, as Secretary of State under President Garfield, earnestly discussed the subject in the effort to gain the assent of Great Britain to modifications of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. Mr. Frelinghuysen, Secretary of State under President Arthur, followed up the discussion, and insisted that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was voidable on just grounds, at our option. No diplomatic conclusion was proceeded to conclude a treaty with Zavala, President of Nicaragua, for the right of the United States, as a government, to build and control the canal, for which we were to pay $4,000,000, and give to Nicaragua a large share of the income of the canal. This treaty was in conflict with the Clayton-Bulwer treaty; in giving to the United States, as a government, a right of exclusive control of the canal, which that treaty denied both to Great Britain and the United States. The Clayton-Bulwer treaty gave to the citizens of the two great powers the right to accept concessions from Nicaragua, and Costa Rich to build a canal, but denied that privilege to the respective governments.

Mr. Frelinghuysen concluded his treaty with President Zavala in the closing months of Mr. Arthur's administration, and sent it to the Senate with a view to its ratification. It was considered in the Senate, after Mr. Cleveland's election, and was opposed by Mr. Bayard, who was to become Secretary of State in his Cabinet, as was well known. He virtually assumed an official responsibility in his opposition to the treaty, and insisted that it violated the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and that it would cause a war with Great Britain; that it created an entangling alliance with Nicaragua, and that it was against the true policy of the United States, which was to aid our citizens to build the canal by giving them proper protection for their rights obtained or to be obtained, under concessions from Nicaragua.

The treaty failed by one vote of receiving the requisite majority of two-thirds in the Senate. A motion for reconsideration was adopted, and the treaty was pending in the Senate when Mr. Cleveland took his oath of office. It would have been ratified on a second vote, but the Senate had no rule under which it could be forced to a vote. Mr. Cleveland's first diplomatic act was to withdraw the Frelinhuysen-Zavala treaty from the Senate, and the canal was lost.

In his message he took the same ground Mr. Bayard had taken in opposing the treaty in the Senate, thereby maintaining the full force and effect of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

In the debate on the Frelinghuysen treaty I first had the opportunity to advocate the building of the canal, and I did not hesitate, although it placed me in antagnoism with a Democratic President, an act for which I never sought or received the forgiveness of the administration, or the transcontinental railroads.

A company of men of very high character, many of whom were leading Democrats, and headed by a Democrat who, for many years, lived in the South, encouraged by the active assistance of Mr. Whitney, Secretary of the Navy, adopted Mr. Bayard's policy of a canal to be owned and controlled by our citizens, and obtained a concession of great value and of most liberal terms from Nicaragua, for which they paid $150,000.

But it contained a provision that the concession should not be sold to any government. This made it impossible for the United States to own the concession.

Congress then chartered the Maritime Canal Company, of Nicaragua, to take over this concession by purchase from the persons to whom it was made and to work it out in building the canal. The act of Congress was expressly based upon this concession, affirmed its validity, gave the company ample powed to execute it by borrowing money and otherwise, admitted Nicaragua and Costa Rica as stockholders and directors in the company, established its home in New York, and retained over the company full legislature and administrative control. After a long and anxious debate, in which I took an active part, and was opposed by some of the leading Democrats in the Senate, this bill was passed and was approved by President Cleveland.

Having the government at its back and with details of engineers from the Navy, who made surveys for the company, this corporation went on with its work and expended more than $4,500,000 in locating the canal line and in work on the necessary plant, and in material, boats, railroads and machinery, and in clearing and dredging the canal and restoring the harbor at Greytown.

Congress, insisting on its right to amend the charter of the company and to control its administration, called its officers before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and proposed to aid it by indorsing its bonds for $100,000,000, to raise the money to build the canal, on condition of receiving its paid up certificates of stock to the amount of more than $80,000,000, and of appointing a large majority of the directors of the company.

Three bills for these purposes were reported to succeeding Congresses, and were agreed to by the canal company. The ground taken in both Houses for this movement was, that no company of private persons could control properly and safely, a canal in which the whole world was interested, and that the United States could furnish the money at cheaper rates than any company could obtain, and could keep down the cost of the canal so that its tolls would not be oppressive on the commerce of our people and of the world.

I reported the third one of these bills, and, after a debate of a very exciting character, that occupied nearly six weeks, the bill passed the Senate by a majority of eleven votes, on the 25th day of January, 1895. Three hundred members of the House asked the Committee on Rules to fix a day for the hearing of the bill and it was refused, and the bill was lost. This was at the close of Mr. Cleveland's second term.

Mr. Harrison was earnestly in favor of the canal, but all efforts to pass it in the Senate were so obstructed during his term by opposing interests that it was impossible to bring the bill to a vote in either House.

In the Fifty-fifth Congress I reported the fourth bill to construct the canal, on the same basis of the concession to the Maritime Canal Company, and it passed the Senate, after long and excited discussion, by a vote of 48 to 6. This bill was lost in the House by the refusal of the Speaker to permit its consideration.

The fifth bill, that disregards all concessions and provides for the ownership and control of this canal by the United States, has been reported in the House, and by me in the Senate, in the same terms, substantially, and they await consideration.

Three commissioners have been sent out to re-examine and re-survey the route through Costa Rica and Nicaragua. Two of them have made exhaustive reports, that are printed. The third commission is now in the field and is charged with the examination of the route at Panama. They agreed as to all points in favor of the practicability of the canal.

The Hay-Pauncefote treaty, negotiated to remove the objections and possible difficulties that may arise under the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, is pending in the Senate.

This outline of the legislative history of the canal shows that the labor and responsibility of the conduct of these measures, which I have chiefly borne, has been very great. To present it in detail is not necessary or possible in this letter. All must see that it has been a very severe task.

The difficulties have been enormously increased by the combined opposition of six great transcontinental railroads in Canada, the United States and at Panama, and by other monopolistic lines of ships, which are combined with the railroads to control the entire transportation between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Their determination is that the people should not have a waterway between these oceans. My hope and resolution is that, so far as I can help them, they shall have and control that which Providence has so evidently given them.

The settlement of our Pacific coast possessions, including the fisheries, forests, and the gold mines of Alaska, and the acquisition of the Phillipines, have greatly assisted in arousing the people to the necessity of the work I have been so long and so faithfully endeavoring to accomplish. The wonderful cruise of the Oregon has opened the eyes of the people to the military necessity of the canal, and they have all rallied to my support.

THE MONEY TO BUILD THE CANAL.

I have been enabled, with the help of a single colleague in the Senate (Mr. Harris, of Kansas), and the good offices of the President, to force the railroads, that are the greatest enemies of the canal, to pay their debts of $113,000,000 to the government, thereby providing a fund sufficient to build the canal without taxing the people. I do not expect their forgiveness for this work, neither do I seek it.

CUBA.

Cuba was in sore distress beneath the heel of an ancient and tyrannical depotism. During a century she had been turning upon her oppressor, only to be driven into more abject servitude. She is very near to our frontier and her anguish excited our people to give her sympathy, and even to violate our laws to give assistance. In doing this they were captured, imprisoned, and, in every way, outraged by Spain, and were shut up in our prisons. Our peace was destroyed by the presence of brutal outrages committed upon old men and women and children at our door, by Spanish power.

The Cubans who had still the spirit to resist these wrongs were engaged in open and just warfare under organized civil government, and with regularly organized armies. The rights of civilized warfare were denied to them by Spain, and prisoners captured in battle by the Spanirds were shot down without trial or mercy. Our people of all classes, sects, and parties, loaded the tables of the Senate and House with petitions and remonstrances against these horrible wrongs.

As a member of the Committee on Foreign Relations, I was instructed, first, to report a friendly appeal to Spain that she would observe the laws of nations by conducting civilized warfare against the Cubans. As I expected and stated, this overture only excited the derision of Spain.

Then I was further instructed to report concurrent resolutions declaring that a state of public war existed in Cuba and that the United States would observe strict neutrality between both belligerents. After long and anxious debate these resolutions passed both Houses, but the President treated them with contempt.

When I reported these resolutions to the Senate I stated that, although they contained an honorable pledge of neutrality, which meant peace. Spain would go to war with us unless we would keep our ports and markets open to her, so that she could supply her forces with food, clothing and munitions of war from our country, while starving the Cubans, almost in our sight. Then I offered a joint resolution of the same import, so as to make it necessary that the President should take ground for or against Spain. This resolution passed the Senate and was suppressed in the House by the Speaker of that body.

Up to that period I never declared for war with Spain. Yet I was convinced that if Cuba was allowed the rights of a belligerent she would gain her independence.

Then the Maine was destroyed in the harbor of Havana. Our naval commission found that it was done by a torpedo anchored in the bay. It could only have been put there and exploded by the aid of men on the shore, and that fact fixed the legal guilt on Spain. Then, for the first time, I was for a declaration of war against Spain. Sufficient cause for war had long existed, but I was for neutrality and peace until the attack was thus made upon our warship. Then I was for war.

In the debates attending the progress of these events I was in charge of the resolutions reported by me, through the order of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and had to defend them. This required long and anxious debate, which I was compelled to share in.

Again I must forbear to follow the long and anxious debates on these grave questions, and the many collateral questions, inquiries, and reports, the labor of which devolved on me in a very large degree. The limits of this letter forbid that I should make the effort to go into further detail.

The war ended most happily for the success of our arms, on land and sea, and most honorably for the good name of our people and government, and in the final proof of the noble elevation and purity of the purpose and spirit which animated our country.

In the treaty of peace, new duties, responsibilities, and opportunities have come to us that we cannot ignore or refuse to perform, under a proper sense of obedienece to the demands of such a condition, which we had not sought, performing those duties. I have but one guide, in such exigencies, and that is to move freely and vigorously in the discharge of every duty to the country, according to the powers delegated to Congress in the Constitution. Under this guidance, I am content to give these newcomers just what we enjoy—a government, republican in form—in which they shall participate, as far as they are capable of doing, as a part of the government power. This includes a guarantee to them of all their personal liberties, as declared in the Constitution, and the free exercise of religious liberty. I have, as yet, said but little in the Senate about this. I prefer to vote on questions as they arise, rather than prophesy future events and attempt, in advance, to legislate for their control.

HAWAIIAN ANNEXATION.

The Hawaiian Islands are a delightful country, well suited to our people who want small farms, of great productive value, in a fine climate. The native people are an excellent Christian community, with good sense, respectability, general education, good morals, and fairly industrious. Their government is that of a republic, and is as good as that of any of our States, and the fruits of it are apparent in the prosperity of the people and in their contentment and public spirit. In all that belongs to a high civilization they are as far advanced as we are. Pearl Harbor is the finest body of water for the uses of ships of commerce and war that exists in the Pacific ocean, its value to our commerce and the defense of our coasts can scarcely be overestimated. For seventy-five years these people have sought annexation to the United States. President Pierce and his great Secretary, Mr. Marcy, made a treaty built on the Pacific or on the Gulf of tion of Hawaii and from that day until Mr. Cleveland was President it was always a Democratic measure. I favored its annexation at all times, and I now do not know of any American who would abandon those islands, or sell them at any price.

On my motion, in 1882, a committee on warships and ordnance was raised in the Senate to investigate and report upon our facilities in ores, fuel, machinery, and workmen to build warships and modern guns of high power. I was on that committee and spent two vacations of Congress in laborious travel and investigation of these subjects. Each committeeman had the power of travel in any part of the country and examine persons on oath.

I visted California and many other States, and while Mr. Irving Scott, superintendent of the Union Iron Works, was under examination at San Francisco, I asked him the question, why he did not make bids for the warships that we were then beginning to build at the shipyards on the Atlantic. His answer was that he would gladly do so, but the cost of railroad transportation was so great on material he was compelled to have, that he could not compete with Eastern shipyards.

When I reported this to the Senate a premium was voted, on my motion, on the bids for warships, that should be built o nthe Pacific or on the Gulf of Mexico. Mr. Scott's bids were accepted, and the Charleston, then the finest ship in the navy, was built and launched at his splendid shipyard on the bay of San Francisco. This was the genesis of the Pacific fleet, now a powerful squadron, consisting of warships, gunboats, torpedo-boats, and destroyers, and it includes the celebrated Olympia and the Oregon. I am proud of their success.

SHIPS TO BE BUILT IN MOBILE BAY.

I have worked industriously for the shipping interest in the South and for the supply of coal and metal for the navy. At my request a survey was made of Mobile River and the bay for the purpose of locating a shipyard on the east coast of Mobile Bay, or at Mount Vernon, or some other point above Mobile. I visited those places in company with a commission of naval officers to secure a shipyard in those waters. The right place has not been found, but it will be when we get the government to use the steel produced at Birmingham in making armor plate and great guns for the navy.

For several years past I have been working for this, and am still at work, with the confident hope of an early success. The great gun factory at Washington is one of the works of the Committee on Warships and Ordnance of which I was a member and the naval guns made there fought and won the grand naval battles of the war with Spain.

THE INDIANS AND THE WORK DURING THE VACATION OF CONGRESS.

Being on the Committee of Indian Affairs, it was my duty to know something of the people intrusted to our care. In 1877 many tribes were in hostility to the United States. In 1900 these raids are no longer thought of, and the Indians, greatly increased in numbers, are many of them the peaceful and prosperous owners of comfortable homesteads. We are likely to have

THE * CHRONICLE

C. C. DuBOSE, EDITOR.

Entered in the post-office at Columbiana Ala., as second class matter.

BUSINESS ANNOUNCEMENT.

With this issue my active connection with THE CHRONICLE will cease. The paper has been transferred to Mr. C. C. DuBose, who will conduct it for the future. The change on my part is made solely from a business standpoint, and not from personal preference. Had it been more profitable, or sufficiently so for my requirements I should not have given it up.

Under my management the paper has been run very largely as a party organ, and the party has not responded—I will not say appreciated. It may have been my own fault that the merits of the paper have not commanded better patronage; if so, I hope the same fault will not now obtain. I have no apology to make for my mistakes; I ask none for the failure of the people to give me their support. Those who have shown their appreciation of my efforts have my thanks and will have my kind remembrance; those who have withheld their support are left to their own conception of right.

To the three hundred democratic readers of THE CHRONICLE I commend Mr. DuBose for a continuation of support; to the nine hundred who do not take the paper I suggest that if a paper is of any service to the party it is their duty to uphold it by their patronage. To business men I may only suggest the danger of letting their paper go down for want of support, as well as the folly of sending work away from home for a small saving that does not save.

A valedictory is not in my line—I cut it short. I leave the paper in good hands. Its future success will depend upon the people. No paper can carry the party upon its back for the crumbs that fall from the table; if hunger is to be appeased a front seat must be provided for the editor who helps to prepare the feast.

F. W. GIST.

Once more I assume control of THE CHRONICLE. Having previously owned the paper for nearly twelve years, I deem it entirely unnecessary to map out its future course or make any promises. My past record is a sufficient guarantee. I hope to profit by any errors I may have committed in the past, and it is my intention to conduct the paper on a high plane. I hope to merit and receive the liberal patronage of former years. The politics of the paper will be democratic, pure and unadulterated. I shall ask no favors, as the paper is not a charitable institution. It will be run on business principles. I shall rely solely for success on honorable dealings and unceasing hustling.

C. C. DUBOSE.

A DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY.

Let us have a primary for the nomination of democratic candidates for county officers. The reasons for this position are plain, simple and undeniable.

Among the democrats themselves we find a strong sentiment in favor of a primary. We think the sentiment arises from a true conception of the situation, and we are firmly of the opinion that the sentiment ought to be respected by the committee.

In the first place, a primary election will produce an interest among democrats which is now lacking, and which an old-time convention or caucus nominations will but serve to continue. When a few men arrange the nominations the rank and file are inclined to let that few look after their elections. When every democrat takes a part in the nomination every democrat feels it a duty and a pleasure to carry the weight of his influence to the polls. A majority do not always feel constrained to bow to the will of a minority, but the minority has no excuse and rarely seeks one for failing to heartily support the action of the majority. In a convention the minority always controls; in a primary the majority always participate.

In the second place, the democrats in this county can only win in two ways: First, by dividing with the opposition the negro vote; second, by adding to their strength from the opposition white vote. The first of these is an impossibility, too apparent to argue; the second is only possible by making our nominations in a way that will impress itself upon them as being fair, open and conservative. No white populist will ever come into a democratic convention; some may participate in a primary election, and when they do they will be in the party to stay.

The only objection we have heard offered to a primary at the present time is that it will probably result in the nomination of more than one candidate in a given section of the county. We appreciate the value of a varied personal influence brought together in a whole, but it appears clear to us that the manner of selection and the general satisfaction it will give will outweigh the division of personal strength. Besides if a majority of the democrats decide to take all the candidates from one precinct it will be but a tribute to the popularity of those selected.

This general proposition is indisputable, that the days of conventions among white people are fast being numbered. Every white man is a sovereign factor in the affairs of his party, and justly so, and that time has about arrived when the caucus nominees for local offices will never hold office. This is the best time to align ourselves with the new condition of things.

By all means let us have a primary election for the nomination of county candidates.

MORGAN AND THE FORCE BILL

The Mobile Register compiles the following review of the connection of Senator Morgan with the memorable force bill:

> The Republicans had the votes to carry it, but under the rules of the senate debate was unlimited, and Senator Morgan undertook to prevent this crime against the Southern people by using up the remaining time of the session, and so compelling the republicans to abandon their scheme. He was successful, for, after Morgan had held the floor for fifteen legislative days some of them continuing late at night, and one on Christmas day, Mr. Wolcott interposed, asking that the Senator yield to the introduction of another bill. This defeated the force bill, as was stated at the time, and for that defeat Senator Morgan was given all the praise. It is too late now to concoct fables to the contrary effect, with the intention of deceiving the voters. They know better.

Everyone who remembers things as they occurred knows the above to be true. There are those who are inclined to forget.

THE Iowa legislature, which stands 116 republicans to 34 democrats on a joint ballot, voted unanimously last Thursday the following: "Be it Resolved, By the house, the senate concurring, that the people of Iowa are unalterably opposed to the establishment of any tariff duties between the United States and any territory acquired as a result of the American-Spanish war, the people of which accepted the sovereignty of this government without resistance and voluntarily passed under the jurisdiction of its constitution and laws."

THE New York Central system has just placed an order with the Carnegie Company for 35,000 tons of steel rails. All of these rails will be used during the current year in repairs, extensions and renewals. A fair idea of the business of railroading is seen when it is known that this order means 285 miles of new road, and that the order aggregates considerably more than $1,000,000 in value. With business thus booming no wonder Carnegie and Frick made mutual concession and stopped all litigation.

THIS is about the way we see it: Waller is making the race on the needs of a new constitution; Samford is diagnosing a generality of diseases and offering no prescriptions for any; Tomlinson is holding on to free silver and Bryan with one hand, while he hits the school book trust with the other; Shelley is doing the dignified act and resting on his party service; Stallings is hitting the high places and the low ones on a platform of "get there." We hope the state will still live.

ONCE upon a time C. P. Huntington offered Senator Morgan $25,000 a year as counsel of the Pacific railroads. Morgan declined, but Huntington would not take a civil "No." Morgan then said: "I will give you an answer then that you can not fail to understand, sir. There is your hat and there is my door; put on the one and get out the other, and never darken it again." We do not doubt the statement that Huntington is willing to spend his money to defeat the senator.

THE Court Journal comes nearer the truth in the following sentence than it usually does: "What Governor Johnston has done can be stated in a few terse sentences." We presume, of course, the Journal has reference to his good deeds. It might console them to remember that "the good men do is often interred with their bones." Johnston will soon be dead politically, and the question will then be settled.

THE CHRONICLE is authorized by several prominent republicans to say that it has been decided to call a meeting of the old original republican county executive committee for the purpose of reorganizing the party in this county and leaving the populists to fight their own battles as best they can. They are not at all satisfied with the division of spoils, and they say that in future they will have all or none.

IN one paragraph of Monday's Court Journal we find this opening sentence: "We haven't yet seen Senator Morgan's long letter to Mr. Hooper," etc. In another paragraph this: "After carefully perusing it the reader can but come to the conclusion that," etc. If the first is true the second is a fair sample of the Journal's criticisms, always founded on something it don't know anything about.

THE Baltimore Manufacturers' Record has been seeking to get full figures on the subject, and it finds that there are 542 mills now in the South, with 5,774,661 spindles and 147,728 looms. That is, the number of spindles in the Southern cotton mills is increasing at the rate of 1,600,000 a year, and the output of cotton goods in the South will be doubled in less than four years.

A Change of Policy.

From the Baltimore American.

From the Bowersville Clarion: "Next week we will begin running this paper as Captain Kidd would have run it. Delinquent subscribers may expect a call from us with their accounts stuck in the muzzle of a six-shooter. Otherwise this paper will be running as the sheriff would run it."

CALL FOR COUNTY CONVENTION.

By direction of the Democratic executive committee of Shelby County a convention of the Democratic party of said county is hereby called to meet at the courthouse in Columbiana at 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, the 21st day of April, 1900, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Representative and selecting delegates to the State and Senatorial conventions.

For the purpose of selecting delegates to said county convention beat meetings or primaries as each beat may determine will be held in each beat on Saturday, the 14th day of April, at such hour as the beat committeemen may fix for their respective beats.

The following invitation, in the language of the resolution by the Democratic State executive committee, is hereby extended:

"Be it resolved by the Democratic State executive committee of Alabama that we hereby cordially invite all conservative white voters, irrespective of past political associations or differences who can unite with us in the effort for pure and economical government, and who will support the nominees and principles of the Democratic party, to participate in the primaries of the party throughout the State.

"Resolved, further, That all persons participating in the primaries, conventions or mass meetings of the party hereafter to be held thereby pledge themselves to support the nominees of such primaries, conventions or mass meetings, whether municipal, county, state or Federal."

The number of delegates to which each beat will be entitled will be as follows, based on the vote for Governor at the last State election:

1—Columbiana	9
1—Shelby	3
2—Spring Creek	2
3—Calera	5
4—Montevallo	9
5—Tylers	1
6—Helena	3

DIFFERENT KINDS OF CHARITY.

From the Montgomery Advertiser.

The Americans are a generous and charitable people. Appeals to their hearts and purses are never made in vain. But the Americans are not always consistent, and perhaps not always reasonable. We send every year millions of dollars to the heathen in foreign lands. This is a christian duty, let us say, but there are always some millions of heathen nearer home who ought to appeal to the hearts of our people. The people of India are starving by thousands, and America is called on to help them. This, also, is a christian duty, but are there not in America some thousands of widows and orphans who are also suffering, and who deserve and merit a portion of our notice? No doubt about it, but "the poor ye have always with you," and there are persons so constituted that they think it more praiseworthy to give of their abundance to the stranger than to their needy neighbor. This is hardly the right thing to do.

Lately the people of the United States have been called on to contribute to the relief of the families of English soldiers now fighting in South Africa. That, also, may be defended. The English are our cousins, we are in the habit of saying. Their soldiers are fighting bravely in Africa and doubtless many of their families are in need. Out of our abundance we can spare something to them and not feel the loss of it, no doubt. But—and here is the point—the United States has sent something like 100,000 men to the Philippines, first and last. Some of them are dead, and some have returned, but the greater number are still on the islands. Those who died have, in many cases, left widows and orphans who have nothing. Those who are living have, in many instances, left behind them families with no means of support. The small sum paid to a private soldier, even if he should send every dollar of it home, would go but a little way to support a family. Many of them send back nothing.

Has any effort been made to raise a fund for the relief of our own soldiers and their families? Do those who were instrumental in raising a fund for our kinsfolk across the water forget that "charity begins at home," and not abroad? Is it not a fact that there is much room in our own borders for the exercise of all christian kindness and benevolence towards soldiers and their families? They are our own people and to them it really seems to us should be turned our first thoughts when we are making up relief funds.

I had granulated lids for twenty years. I tried many doctors and lots of medicine to no avail. A skim had grown over my eyes, and they grew worse until I could not recognize any one across the street. Sutherland's Eagle Eye Salve cured me sound and well in ten days.—Mrs. W. C. Woodall, Murfreesboro, Tenn. Good druggists sell it.

Headache often results from a disordered condition of the stomach and constipation of the bowels. A dose or two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will correct these disorders and cure the headache. Sold by Williams Bros.

If you ever try Sutherland's Eagle Eye Salve for failing eyesight, granulated lids or sore eyes of any kind, you will be a keen-sighted advertiser among your friends for it.

Redlawn.

Rain in abundance.

J. N. Lyon went to Columbiana last Friday.

S. S. Miner, of Montgomery, is with his mother, who is quite sick with pneumonia.

Several from our community attended court last week and this.

There must be something very attractive to W. I. Miner, as he comes to our town every Sunday.

E. B. Lyon, of Beeswax, was in our parts Sunday.

This community was struck with a bad wave of La Grippe last week.

Mrs. D. M. Smith is visiting in Dogwood this week.

We are glad to see Mrs. Finley out again, after being sick nearly all winter.

Let us not be as the pops, left to share the husk, swill and Brand with the swine, but let us turn to the democrats and kill the fatted calf.

BUD.

Shelby.

Shelby was visited Tuesday with the most disastrous fire we have yet experienced. Four stores were reduced to ashes—Averyt & Averyt, A. H. Averyt, S. J. May & Son, and the Parker building, occupied by D. C. Glenn. The fire started in the Parker building, the upper story of which was occupied as a tenement by James Crawford and family. The fire was discovered about 4 o'clock a. m. Mr. Crawford and his family escaped, but the fire had already made such headway that they saved nothing. The furnace whistle sounded the fire alarm and a considerable number of men soon gathered. It was already obvious that several buildings would be destroyed, but by great efforts a large part of the contents of the Averyt stores were saved. Some insurance was carried by the parties, but the aggregate loss is considerable.

Miss Kate Huyett was in town last Sunday, and assisted in the singing at the Congregational church.

S. Q. Y.

Calera.

Yesterday was fair.

Editor Graham visited Columbiana yesterday.

Rev. W. I. Sinnott preached two sermons at the Presbyterian church Sunday.

Charlie Gist, of Six Mile, was a visitor here Saturday night. All Morgan men down there except a few Pops.

Miss Effie Greene returned home Saturday from an extended visit to Six Mile.

Miss Ellen Crim, the aged aunt of Mrs. Ranse Pilgreen, died at the residence of the latter last Wednesday. She was 73 years old.

Uncle Alex Nelson, an aged and highly respected citizen, died at the residence of his son-in-law, Capt. J. B. Randall, last Friday, and was buried at Montevallo on Saturday. Mr. Nelson was 82 years old, and had lived in this county for fifty years.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Kelly, on South street, on Sunday night last, a girl.

Maj. W. D. Huggins, is still very ill, and it is thought that the end is very near.

Charlie Fields and family returned from Talladega on last Sunday, where they had been called to the deathbed of the wife's mother, who was so severely burned some two weeks ago that she died on Thursday last.

It is rumored that we will have a marriage to report next week.

This morning (Tuesday) about 4 o'clock the dry house of the Calera Lime Kiln burned, consuming near five hundred barrels. Loss, $75 or $100.

Mrs. C. E. VanDeusen, of Kilbourn, Wis., was afflicted with stomach trouble and constipation for a long time. She says, "I have tried many preparations but none have done me the good that Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have." These Tablets are for sale at Williams Bros.' drug store. Price 25 cents. Samples free.

SUPERB MILLINERY!

Stylish, Bright, Entrancing!

The Latest Fads in Ladies Headgear.

I am not boasting when I say that I have assembled in my store not only the latest novelties in millinery, but the most complete line ever offered in Shelby county. A few articles to show that we are up-to-date: Hemstitched Ribbons, all new shades; Ready-to-wear Hats, too pretty to describe, in all the new shapes; Pattern hats, etc., etc.

Miss Horn, our accomplished milliner, has recently returned from Louisville, Ky., where she posted herself thoroughly on styles for this season, and, to sum it up in a few words, she is master of the situation. You will miss a treat if you fail to see this handsome exhibition. To see is to purchase, to purchase is to be happy.

A WORD ABOUT CORSETS.

F. C. and R. & G. CORSETS you know stand at the head of the list—none better made. Avail yourself of the first opportunity to buy one of them. Either one or both are standards.

OUR DRY GOODS AND NOTION DEPARTMENT

Was never so full before, and it is almost impossible to call for anything and not get the very thing you were hunting—or something better. This is no joke! To give you a faint idea (this paper wouldn't hold all the articles) we mention a few: Percals, Madras Cloths, Shirt Waists (beauties, all of them) White Goods galore, especially Pekays; Ladies' Neckwear, the latest and daintiest; Hemstitched Silk for Shirt Waists, in new pastel shades, dreams of beauty; Laces, Swiss and Hamburg Edging. But life is too short to mention them all. Polite and accommodating salesmen will esteem it a pleasure to show you all these pretty goods and many more. Don't be afraid of putting them to too much trouble, it is fun for them

BUGGIES BY THE CAR LOAD.

To those who have owned a James & Mayer buggy it is not necessary to say a word in its praise, for it is A 1 in every particular, neat, substantial and well made. Buying them, as we do, in large quantities, we can sell them at bottom figures. Save a few dollars by investigating this statement. Buggy harness, all you want, in good, better and best qualities—none better for the money. Rest assured we can suit you in quality and price.

IF IT IS WAGONS YOU WANT

We have a car load of Mitchel's in our warehouse for you to select from. It is economy to buy the best of everything, and you need want no better than the Mitchel. Wagon Harness? Yes, and to suit you, plenty of it. Look it over when you come to see us. It speaks for itself louder than we can.

MEN'S and BOYS' CLOTHING,

STRAW HATS,

FURNISHING GOODS

In endless variety, to suit all tastes, the lean as well as the fat—pocket or person. We have never handled a more elegant line of these goods, up-to-date and of the very best grades. Every article of apparel a man or boy needs, clothes or underclothes, shoes or overshoes, anything, everything, from start to finish.

COFFINS

Coffins and Caskets, all sizes and grades. Not an article short in this department. Our prices are as reasonable as you could ask.

In order to attract the cash trade I am giving a fine PORCELAIN DINNER SET FREE. You can get it piece by piece, a full assortment in any quantity desired. Given Absolutely Free to my cash customers. Ask for circular giving full particulars.

One more word before we part. It is my aim to supply every demand. I want your trade. I will deal with you honorably, and give you full value for every dollar you spend. Come to my store and let's talk the matter over.

DURAN & CO.

G. F. Baker, of Wilsonville, was in to see us this week, and left a new name to be placed on the subscription list.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe P. Roberts, of Sylacauga, spent Sunday night with their parents at the parsonage in this city.

The municipal election for city officers is to be held Monday in this city and other incorporated towns in the county.

Sickness prevails among families on every street in the city, la grippe apparently taking the lead in all instances.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Nelson have been confined to their beds for several days with la grippe, and have been quite sick.

Sunday being the fourth and no regular appointments for the day, no morning services were held in either of the churches.

The peach and pear trees are laden with blossoms as never before, and the indications point to an abundance of fruit this year.

Hon. W. B. Browne, who has been quite ill for several week's past, is considered as improving rapidly, and will soon be out again.

Horace Hammond is home from Birmingham for a short while to recuperate, he having had a severe tussle with the measles for more than a week.

R. M. Borum, of Harpersville, came in to see us yesterday, and couldn't resist the temptation to renew his subscription, which is rarely delinquent.

Our fellow-townsman, W. G. Parker, was quite a heavy loser in the recent fire that swept the business portion of our neighboring city below, he being the owner of the storehouse occupied by Mr. Glenn.

Judge Alston, of Eufala, the supernumerary judge, is holding court this week in the absence of Judge Pelham. He makes a favorable impression upon our people.

Soon will be the time for fish, and likewise snakes and fisherman—the latter with a great relish for the former and a proverbial horror of the intermediate power.

Owing to the sickness of Attorneys W. B. Browne and J. L. Peters quite a number of cases go over to the next term of court. Court adjourned today, having gone through the docket.

Spring gardening is engaging the attention of most of our people just now, and with a few more pleasant days like those experienced this week practically all seed will be under ground.

Postmaster Pitts left yesterday for Birmingham, where he goes to have an operation performed on one of his eyes, over which a cataract has grown. It is hoped that the operation will be successful.

Henry Anchors returned Monday from the printing establishment of Roberts & Son, Birmingham, to lead a reformed and repentant life in the ennobling atmosphere of THE CHRONICLE's sanctum sanctorium.

The following teachers passed the recent examination for teachers' license from this county: W. S. McEwen, C. Chesser, C. H. Florey, Spright Dowell, R. F. Lyons, H. S. Stuart, John Evans, Miss C. O. Wens.

Public Speaking.

Hon. B. Dudley Williams, of Oxford, will address the people at this place on political issues on Monday next at 9:30 a. m.

My assistant, Miss Mary Milner, returned last week from Atlanta, where she has been for several weeeks picking up all the latest styles and fads in spring millinery, and she is now bettea prepared than ever before to serve my customers. Don't fail to call and see my elegant assortment of hats, silks, gloves, ladies' underwear and hose.

MRS. L. C. ARMSTRONG.

J. F. Pope, the hustling Wilsonville merchant, is before our people this week with an attractive advertisement. It is Mr. Pope's ambition to carry in stock everything almost that is likely to be called for, and a careful look through his mammoth stock will suffice to show that he can supply your every need. He carries by far the largest stock in Shelby county, and in fact Birmingham can boast 'ev larger establishments. Read carefully his advertisement in this issue.

Weldon News.

E. B. Lyon, of Fourmile, was in our town last Sunday evening, dear hunting, we presume.

J. A. Jackson, of Birmingham, is visiting here this week, and he contemplates moving his family to Birmingham in a few days.

The teachers' institute at Center was a grand success, and was enjoyed by all who were present.

Dr. B. H. Smothers, after spending several days with relatives and friends in Lamar county, returned home a few days ago to resume his practice.

We are sorry to state that L. W. Chesser, who has been very sick for some time, is very low at this writing. He was thought to be improving very fast until last Sunday morning, when he was suddenly taken down again, and is in a very critical condition, but we wish for him a speedy recovery: and may God see fit to restore him to his wanted health again.

It has rained so much the farmers have almost gotten the blues. No farming done yet, but it seems that they are very anxious to raise some more of the fleecy staple, judging by the amount of fertilizer that has been sold. But my advice to them is to buy less fertilizer, raise less cotton, raise more corn, peas and potatoes and make your meat at home and live fat. Plant for a small crop of cotton, for my honest opinion is that the price of cotton will be governed by the amount that is raised. Twelve million bales means 5 cents, seven million means 10 cents per pound. The farmers have it in their power to control the price of cotton, if they could just realize the fact, and then work to that point.

Last Monday morning J. E. Adams with his four imported American fox hounds, and R. J. Ray with one Alabama Bird Sing, and D. R. Ray with two Alabama Long Shanks, set out on a hunting expedition. They had not been gone long until they had Mr. Fox hunting a place of refuge, and after a chase of 50 minutes he was compelled to surrender. It was an old gray fox, and is ahead of anything we have ever heard of yet.

Quite a strange incident occured in our community a few nights ago. A young man called to see his best girl and stayed until late, and it was raining and about as dark as it ever gets. When he started home his girl insisted that he would stay all night, said it was so dark he would get lost. But he only laughed and bid her good night. And then on his way he went, but he did not go far before he realized that he was lost. He wandered around and around and at last gave up all hopes of finding his way home. He then commenced calling for help, and in just a short while the father of his girl came to his relief and carried him back home with him. He was so bewildered when he got there he could recognize no one, but he abode with the family that night.

THE LIME COMBINE.

Vendors Take One-Half of the Stock, and It is a Go.

The Birmingham News contains the following information:

The Saturday meeting of the representatives of the lime factories, which have organized the combine known as the Consolidated Lime Company, was prolonged until late in the night.

At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Sperry, of Sperry, Jones & Co., Baltimore, financial agents of the Consolidated Company, and A. M. Baldwin, of Montgomery, president, gave out a statement, which in substance was as follows:

"It was the concensus of opinion, after mature consideration of all details involved in the transfer of the various plants to the Consolidated Company, that the sale would be complete, and the Consolidated Company would be owner of and operating the various plants under one management by May 1.

"The vendors at their own request will take one-half of the $3,000,000 of stock, and Sperry, Jones & Co. and their friends will take the other half.

"The output of the Consolidated Company will be 1,200,000 barrels per annum, and the profits will aggregate $250,000.

"The Consolidated Company will not advance the price of lime. It will maintain a uniform price everywhere, and its tendency will be to decrease the cost of production. The Consolidated Company will control three-fourths of the production in the country."

There are thirteen Alabama plants in the new company.

The following lime works in Shelby County have not been sold to the Consolidated Lime Company: Newala, two kilns; West Calera, one; Calera, two; Siluria (old), one. These have a combined output of 650 barrels per day. The Consolidated Lime Company will control about 65 per cent. of the lime properties in Alabama.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

Four Stores Burned in Shelby Tuesday Morning.

At 5 o'clock Tuesday morning fire broke out in the upper part of the store of D. C. Glenn at Shelby, and by 8 o'clock four storehouses were in ashes.

The houses burned were occupied by D. C. Glenn, C. S. May, A. H. Averyt and Averyt & Averyt.

Mr. Crawford, a jeweler, with his family occupied the upper floor of the Glenn store. At about 5 o'clock Mr. Crawford was awakened, and found the whole upper portion of the house in flames. He was cut off from escape in one direction, but got down by another stair. His household goods were totally destroyed. The alarm was given and a large crowd soon gathered. Work was directed toward saving goods. Mr. Glenn saved his dry goods, but his stock of groceries was consumed. The stock of Messrs. May and A. H. Averyt were practically saved, while the large assorted stock of Averyt & Averyt was almost entirely removed from the building. All four of the houses were burned to the ground.

The houses were all frame structures and burned readily. Only good work accomplished the saving of so much property.

Does It Pay to Buy Cheap?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the more severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the only remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in severe throat and lung troubles, "Boschees German Syrup." It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy exporation, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try one bottle. Recommended many years by all druggists in the world. Hall Drug Co.

"Let 'em go on," said Farmer Corntossel, as he returned the comic paper he had just read to the news stand. "Let who go on?" asked his wife. "Those folks that repersents the farmer as an innocent feller that buys gold bricks an' don't know anythin' 'bout nothin.' Let 'em spread sech impressions as giner'ly as possible. Them's what throws the city folks off their guard an' enables us to everlastin'ly smite 'em when they come around dickerin' fer summer board or country real estate."—Washington Star.

A TEXAS WONDER.

Hall's Great Discovery.

One small bottle of Hall's Great Discovery cures all kidney and bladder troubles, removes gravel, cures diabetes, seminal emissions, weak and lame backs, rheumatism and all irregularities of the kidneys and bladder in both men and women, regulates bladder troubles in children. One small bottle is two months' treatment, and will cure any case above mentioned. E. W. Hall, sole manufacturer, St. Louis, Mo. Send for Alabama testimonials. Sold by Hall Drug Co.

A Good Cough Medicine for Children.

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says F. P. Moran, a well-known and popular baker, of Petersburg, Va. "We have given it to our children when troubled with bad coughs, also with whooping cough, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children as it contained no opium or other harmful drug." Sold by Williams Bros.

REPUBLICAN MEETING.

County Convention Called for the 14th of April.

The republican executive committee of this county—or a small portion of it—held a meeting at Calera on last Saturday. A county convention was called for the 14th of April for the purpose of nominating the candidates to be apportioned to them on the fusion ticket. A committee of three was appointed to confer with the populist committee looking to a fusion of the two parties.

We learn that only a small number of the committee were present, and that but few of them had been notified of the meeting. Two members from this place, belonging to the anti-Aldrich wing, were invited out of the meeting. It was an Aldrich committee, and it developed that this wing of the party in this county is in sympathy with Mr. Vaughan in the race for state chairman.

In the selection of county candidates three offices will be given to the republicans—the tax collector, the superintendent of education and one commissioner. The rest will be populists.

J. H. Robertson and Rufe Pope represented this beat in the committee meeting, and Prince McAdams was there from Wilsonville. No other members were present from the upper part of the county, and we understand some tall kicking is being indulged in.

Twice Proven.

From the Vindicator, Rutherfordton, N. C.

The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with the most remarkable results in each case. First, with rheumatism in the shoulder, from which he suffered excruciating pain for ten days, which was relieved with two applications of Pain Balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a very short time. Second, in rheumatism in thigh joint, almost prostrating him with severe pain, which was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment on retiring at night and getting up free from pain. For sale by Williams Bros.

"You wish to be relieved from jury duty, but you haven't given a good reason," said the judge.

"It's public spirit," said the unwilling juryman—"on the score of economy. I have dyspepsia, your honor, and I never agree with anybody. If I go on this jury there'll be a disagreement, and the court will have to go to the expense of a new trial."

"Excused," said the judge.—London Tit-Bits.

Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey advances a new theory in the treatment of all cough, lung and bronchial troubles. It cures and cures quickly. Absolutely harmless and pleasant to take. It cuts loose the mucus without exertion or straining, and stops the cough at once by healing the inflamed parts. It gives vigor and vitality to the respiratory organs. It enables the blood to receive the proper supply of oxygen. It builds up the system, rendering it less susceptible to cold. Good druggists sell it.

City Election.

Notice is hereby given that an election has been called, ordered and will be held at the Court House, in the city of Columbiana, on the first Monday in April, 1900, (being April 2, 1900) for the election of a mayor and five aldermen, to compose the board of mayor and aldermen for the city of Columbiana.

J. T. LEEPER,

An Honest Medicine for La Grippe.

George W. Waitt, of South Gardiner, Me., says: "I have had the worst cough, cold, chills and grip and have taken lots of trash of no account but profit to the vendor. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the only thing that has done any good whatever. I have used one bottle of it and the chills, cold and grip have all left me. I congratulate the manufacturers of an honest medicine." For sale by Williams Bros.

At a country fete a conjurer was performing the old trick of producing eggs from a hat, when he remarked to a little boy: "Your mother can't get eggs without hens, can she?" "Of course she can," replied the lad. "Why, how is that?" asked the conjurer. "She keeps ducks," replied the boy, amid roars of laughter.—Tit-Bits.

It is not so much what the newspapers say, as what neighbor says to neighbor, or friend to friend, that has brought Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy into such general use. It is as natural for people to express their gratitude after using this remedy as it is for water to flow down hill. It is the one remedy that can always be depended upon, whether a baby be sick with cholera infantum or a man with cholera morbus. It is pleasant, safe and reliable. Have you a bottle of it in your home? For sale by Williams Bros.

How a Little Boy Was Saved.

Washington, D. C.—"When our boy was about 16 months old he broke out with a rash which was thought to be measles. In a few days he had a swelling on the left side of his neck and it was decided to be mumps. He was given medical attendance for about three weeks when the doctor said it was scrofula and ordered a salve. He wanted to lance the sore, but I would not let him and continued giving him medicine for about four months when the bunch broke in two places and became a running sore. Three doctors said it was scrofula and each ordered a blood medicine. A neighbor told me of a case somewhat like our baby's which was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. I decided to give it to my boy and in a short while his health improved and his neck healed so nicely that I stopped giving him the medicine. The sore broke out again, however, whereupon I again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla and its persistent use has accomplished a complete cure." Mrs. Nettie Chase, 47 K St., N. E.

Gave a Realistic Recitation.

From the San Francisco Argonaut: E. A. Sothern of "Dundreary" fame was once dining at Portsmouth at a regimental mess. After dinner one of the officers asked Sothern to give them a recitation. Now Sothern would not tolerate being treated as an entertainer when he was by way of being treated as a gentleman. He coldly declined. They pressed him. He hotly declined. Still they would take no denial. At last he said, in a manner which showed that he was nettled, but yet yielding, "Well, if you won't let me off, I must. I'll give you the dinner scene from 'David Garrick.'" He did. He had never acted it better. They were delighted until, springing to his feet, he made his wild tipsy exit, just as he did on the stage, and dragged the cloth off the table and with it all the regiment's prized dessert china and decanters and glasses, etc. Thereupon he calmly resumed his seat, but thereafter Sothern dined no more with that regiment.

What Morgan Has Accomplished

a State west of Arkansas at an early day, composed in a large degree of an enlightened and excellent body of Indians from many tribes.

My work in these duties was long-protracted, difficult and laborious. My report on the five civilized tribes and their laws and government comprises a volume of 600 pages. Many debates of great interest on these subjects have occurred, in most of which I have participated, and I have made four tours in visiting those reservations, each of which occupied almost the entire period of the vacation of Congress.

Two other vacations were spent in visiting France, as an arbitrator, and the Hawaiian Islands, as a commissioner, and a third in visiting Hawaii to study its people and its laws, and another in the examination of the Union and Central Pacific Railroads. All of the other vacations have been spent in political speaking in the various Democratic campaigns in Alabama. With the exception of one month, which was spent at the Warm Springs, in Virginia, to restore my health, I have been constantly and laboriously engaged for twenty-three years in my public duties, without rest or relaxation except for one month, and in the advocacy of Democratic men and measures in Alabama. I have done as much work as any other man has done. As there are those who say that I have not accomplished anything for Alabama or the country, I can only refer to the foregoing statement that contains only a part of what I have tried to do. It may be insufficient, but I have not been idle or negligent.

I have attempted to do many things without success, but not for the want of care or diligence. I can justly claim that I defeated the Blair education bill by exertions that occupied much time during three sessions of Congress. The plan of this measure was to take the control of education out of the hands of the people and States and to give full power over the schools and teachers to the Secretary of the Interior. The purpose of it was to tax the Southern people to educate the negroes. The result, as to Alabama, would necessarily have been to tax the people enormously, at least $1,000,000 annually, to sustain free public schools for black and white children. We were not then able to stand such taxation, and will never be willing to turn over the control of our schools to the Federal government.

I have opposed the high tariff in the Morrill bill and the Dingley bill with many votes and speeches, and supported the Wilson tariff bill that enacted the tax on incomes. In the Dingley bill that tax was re-enacted, and I have earnestly endeavored to force the present administration to proceed to collect it.

I have opposed all measures that have given a preference to the coinage of gold over that of silver, voting for the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1 whenever I had a chance to vote. I have opposed all efforts to change our bond obligations, payable in coin, into gold obligations. I have opposed the payment of interest on bonds held by the national banks as the basis of their outstanding circulation. I have opposed involuntary bankruptcy laws, and anti-scalping laws for the railroads, and all acts that create exclusive or class privileges.

I introduced and passed bills for the erection of public buildings at Montgomery, Huntsville, Selma and Anniston. I introduced and passed bills to grant Mount Vernon Reservation to Alabama, and to relinquish title of the United States lands in Tuscaloosa. I introduced and passed bills for ten railroad bridges at various points across rivers in Alabama, and to grant the right of way through the public lands for every railroad in the State that was not built when I came to the Senate.

On all occasions when it was possible I have advocated and urged the refund of the war cotton tax to our people, and the payment of their just claims for the value of cotton taken or destroyed by the government, and the payment of French spoliation claims.

I have aided in passing measures to increase the pay of third and fourth-class pastmasters, and to increase the mail carrier service, and to give premiums for fast railway service in Alabama and the South.

I have introduced and urged the passage of bills for obtaining suitable post offices in all the towns and villages of the country by inducing the peole to build them on the security of ten years leases, at a fair rental to the government. I regard this as a necessity measure of economy, convenience, and safety, and I expect to see it adopted by Congress.

I have advocated and supported measures for the suppression of epidemic diseases, and to relieve sections that have suffered from brought and cyclones by appropriations from the Treasury. Some of those have been of doubtful constitutionality, but my conviction is that it is better to relieve them than to refuse to help those who suffer from such visitations.

I have obtained many pensions for disabled soldiers in all the wars, black as well as white men, and their families. I have worked earnestly for the removal of disabilities from Confederate soldiers as to pensions and all other matters. I have succeeded in getting many just private claims of our people allowed and paid, and have assisted in securing for them many offices and employments. Such services really require almost constant residence in Washington. But I have not sought and will not seek, by personal solicitation of minor officials, or the higher ones, places for my friends, or offices in which I am called on to vote upon questions of their confirmation. That is the duty of the appointing power, and it often conflicts with the duty of a Senator.

As to patronage, I have always refused to use it for my personal or political advantage. It is not a perquisite of the office of a Senator, and sould be used, if at all, with reference only to the good of the public service. I have never refused my cheerful assistance to any worthy Alabamian who has been seeking employment under the government. I have omitted to state many measures as to which I have taken an active part in the Senate, both for and against them, for the reason that it is impossible to condense the history of twenty-three years of active work in the Senate within the limits of a letter that is already far too extended.

I am not aware of general or severe criticism upon any of my conduct in the Senate, but have presented truly those matters as to which any criticism of my votes or speeches has come to my knowledge. Sincerely yours,

JOHN T. MORGAN.

MORGAN DIDN'T.

A charge having been made over the State that Senator Morgan had voted for a negro and attended a negro wedding, by the Johnston advocates, Hon. John B. Knox, of Anniston, wired the Senator, and the following is his reply:

"Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—Replying to a telegram from Hon. J. B. Knox, I say that on the 18th of March 1877, I voted with Garland, of Arkansas, Ben Hill, of Georgia, and Jones, of Florida, to confirm Fred Douglas as marshal of the District of Columbia. After consultation we agreed that this vote would confirm President Hayes in his policy of removing Federal troops from the State capitols of South Carolina and Louisiana. We were not mistaken, and the troops were withdrawn, contrary to the advice of the strong men of the Republican party. Having saved these States from this condition, we did not expect to be censured for a vote that was painful to us personally. Douglass was the only negro for whose confirmation I ever voted, but I have defeated several who were nominated by President Cleveland. I have never attended a negro wedding.

"JOHN T. MORGAN."

JOHNSTON DID.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 3, 1900.

Capt. Frank S. White, Birmingham, Ala.

Dear Sir:—I desire to thank you for your kind letter written some time ago in my behalf, urging Governor Johnston to appoint me to the position of chaplain of the penitentiary at Coalburg and Pratt City, of this county. While I did not secure the appointment, the facts in the case are these:

I made an application to Governor Johnston for the appointment to the position of chaplain at Coalburg and Pratt City, and accompanied my application by a petition, signed by eighty Confederate veterans of Camps Hardee and Davis, together with letters from prominent citizens of this county, touching my character and ability to fill the position I sought. As you will remember, I am a Confederate veteran and a Methodist preacher, and have been ever since the year 1875, being now on the supernumerary list. I received several encouraging letters from Governor Johnston, which led me to believe that I would get the appointment. I also received a letter from the Hon. S. B. Trapp, president of the Convict Board, which also led me to believe that I would receive the appointment, in which last letter the President of the Board asked me if I would accept the position for $300.00 a year. To this I replied that I would accept the position under those terms. There are practically the facts in the case up to the time of the appointment. The administration having the appointment saw fit to appoint one John Washington, a negro Methodist preacher from Tuscaloosa county.

My petition, among others, was signed by Judge M. T. Porter, Col. J. W. Bush, Col. Chas. M. Shelley, present candidate for Governor, Col. Ed. Booker, who was at that time, and now is a member of the Convict Board, and many other gentlemen of high standing signed my petition and wrote letters urging my appointment.

These are substantially the facts in the case and it is true as asserted that a negro named John Washington, was appointed to the position.

Yours truly,

(Signed.) E. A. WRIGT.

I hereby certify the foregoing is a true copy of a letter written by E. A. Wright, the original of which is in my possession.

EXPECTING A BIG CROWD.

Committee Making Arrangements For Republican National Convention.

Important matters appertaining to the Republican convention received the attention of the sub-committee of the national executive committee at Philadelphia Friday. Fourteen thousand admission tickets for each day of the convention were apportioned, arrangements for the dissemination of the proceedings were made and the convention badges, 9,000 in all, were ordered. Sergeant-at-Arms Wiswell will have the appointment of 500 assistants, 300 doorkeepers, 250 pages and 1,000 additional employes, besides issuing permits to the press, messengers and telegraph operators.

WHEELER NOW WAITS.

Looks as If Little General Will Be Retained In Service.

After several conferences Saturday between General Wheeler and officers of the administration it was announced that the war department had temporarily disposed of his case by placing him on waiting orders. This action retains General Wheeler in the service of the United States until opportunity is had to determine whether he shall be given an active command, made the subject of a special retirement act or mustered out of the military service.

RELIEF BILL NOW A LAW

House Passes Porto Rican Appropriation Bill.

McKINLEY SIGNS PAPER

Starving Islanders Will Receive Benefit of Customs Receipts Already On Hand and To Be Collected.

Porto Rican affairs engaged the attention of the house Saturday, the conference report on the relief bill being taken up with an agreement for a final vote at 1 o'clock.

After a brief and spirited debate the last congressional step was taken in completing the relief bill by agreeing to the conference report by a vote of 135 to 87.

The bill turns over to the president, for the use of Porto Rico, about $2,000,000 of customs receipts collected on Porto Rican goods up to January 1st last, and such amounts as may hereafter accrue until otherwise provided by law. The debate lasted but an hour, but in this time the whole range of Porto Rico legislation was discussed.

Mr. McRae of Arkansas, a member of the conference committee severely criticised the general course of recent legislation toward Porto Rico, and Messrs. Pierce, of Tennessee; Wilson, of South Carolina; Cochran, of Missouri; Cox, of Tennessee; Williams, of Illinois; Ridgely, of Kansas; Levy, of New York, and Finley, of South Carolina, also opposed the report.

Several of the speakers made references to a published report that the Porto Rico tariff bill was designed to secure a campaign fund.

At 1 o'clock a yea and nay vote was taken on the report, and it was agreed to—yeas 135; nays 87; present and not voting, 20.

This completed the measure and it was immediately sent to the president.

The vote was on party lines except that a number of Democrats and Independents voted with the Republicans for the report, viz: Bell, of Colorado; Chanler, New York; Cochran, of Missouri; Cummings, of New York; Davenport (Stanley) of Pennsylvania; Davey, of Louisiana; Devries, of California; Meekison, of Ohio; Newlands, of Nevada; Scudder, of New York; Shafroth, of Colorado; Thayer, of Massachusetts; Wilson, of Idaho, and Wilson, of South Carolina.

The bill was signed by the president at 4:30 Saturday afternoon.

DOUBLE LYNCHING.

White Man and Negro Quickly Disposed of By Mob of Both Races at Emporia, Va.

A special from Richmond, Va., says: Cotton, the negro, and O'Grady, the white man, who murdered Saunders and Walton in Greensville county Thursday, were both lynched at Emporia, a small town in that county, Saturday about noon.

The negro was lynched by a mob of white citizens.

The white man was lynched by a mob of negroes.

The bodies of both men were strung up to trees and then shot to pieces by the mobs. There was great glee over the avenging of the dastardly crimes of the negro and white man.

Cotton confessed to killing several men since his escape from the Portsmouth jail several weeks ago, in which he was confined awaiting execution of a death sentence for murder.

The citizens of Emporia held an indignation meeting Saturday morning and demanded the withdrawal of the troops, which were sent by order of Governor Tyler to protect the negro and white man from summary punishishment. The result was the withdrawal of the troops just before noon, and in a few minutes after their departure the mobs were organized and Cotton and O'Grady were taken from the jail and quickly lynched.

HUNTINGTON FIGHTING MORGAN.

Railroad Magnate Said to Be Pulling Against Alabamian.

The most interesting political story in Washington just now is the alleged entry of C. P. Huntington, the great railroad magnate, president of the Southern Pacific Railway, into the senatorial fight in Alabama. It is stated that Huntington is at the head of a secret campaign against the reelection of Senator Morgan.

Senator Morgan himself vouches for the correctness of the rumor.

"It is true," said the Alabamian, "that Huntington is trying to defeat me. Further than this I cannot speak at this time."

SILVER REPUBLICANS

Are Called to Meet In Kansas City On July 4th, Next.

Chairman Charles A. Towne, of the National Committee of the Silver Republican party, has issued a call for a national convention of the party to meet in the Coates opera house at Kansas City, Mo., at 12 o'clock noon, on Thursday, July 4, 1900, to place in nomination candidates for president of the United States and for such other business as may come up.

BAILEY OPENS CAMPAIGN.

Congressman Begins His Fight In Texas For United States Senate.

In a set speech, at Cameron, Texas, Saturday, Congressman J. W. Bailey opened his campaign for the United States senate in opposition to Senator Horace Chilton. A large number of prominent public men of Texas were present to hear him. The senatorship will be decided in the primaries for members of the legislature, a direct vote being taken.

LIGHT SENTENCES

Are Imposed Upon Self-Confessed Conspirators By Judge Speer In United States Court.

The confessed conspirators who pleaded guilty the past week in the United States court at Savannah, were sentenced by Judge Speer Friday. The sentences were as follows:

Daniel A. Tyson, five years in the state prison at Nashville, Tenn., and to pay a fine of $1,000 and costs of prosecution.

W. E. Hutchinson, Morris W. Hutchinson and J. H. Hutchinson, eighteen months each in the state prison at Nashville and a fine of $100 each.

J. S. Wheeler, Jr., twelve months in Chatham county jail and $100 fine.

H. B. Watts and C. J. Phillips and J. T. Hammond, six months in jail and $100 fine each.

J. M. Harrell and T. L. Ricks, four months in jail and $100 fine each.

The courtroom was crowded when court opened. The prisoners were carried into the room fully half an hour before Judge Speer arrived. Many of them were joined by their wives and families. Wheeler's wife was on hand, and so was Harrell's. Tyson had his wife and child with him and all of them shed copious tears.

The wive and children had the deepest sympathy of the audience. They were suffering for the deeds of their fathers and husbands. Judge Speer, however, determined not to have a scene in the courthouse during the time the sentence was being passed. A few minutes after 10 o'clock a deputy United States marshal came into the room and invited all the women and children to accompany him to one of the small rooms at the end of the corridor, some distance removed from the courtroom. The ladies filed out red-eyed and weeping. Tyson seemed more deeply affected than any one of the other prisoners at parting with the members of his family.

The attorneys made short speeches appealing for mercy in behalf of their clients. Then several of the defendants addressed the court.

Tyson was the last speaker and he addressed the court at some length. He said he did not intend any wrong, and asked the judge to be as light as possible with him and he would promise not to do wrong any more. If he had not been prosecuted Tyson assured the court he would have paid up all his debts by the operation of a new telephone line to Savannah he was building. He closed by saying that he had a wife and child, two sisters and a brother dependent upon him and he asked, in the name of the Lord, that the judge be merciful.

Judge Speer, after a few remarks expressing regret at the duty he had to perform, passed sentence as stated.

HOUSE TARIFF STANDS

So Decided Republican Caucus Committee On Porto Rico Bill.

The Republican caucus committee of the senate at a meeting Friday authorized Senator Foraker, in definite terms, to propose the separation of the tariff feature from the Porto Rican governmental bill and to attempt to pass the house tariff bill without amendment. The program is to vote down all amendments if possible to do so, and pass the bill as it is came from the house without any changes whatever.

The committee went over the situation in detail concerning all the points at issue. There were suggestions as to the necessity of amending the bill so as to suit the demands of the Republican free trade element, but these were considered as more than offset by the situation in the house and necessity of maintaining the party tariff principle.

There was, however, a disposition manifested to placate the free traders by making various amendments to the governmental bill. The tariff advocates have gone so far as to draft amendments to that measure which are intended both to correct administrative defects in the house bill and also to meet many of the objections to the house tariff measure.

One of these amendments looks to the enlargement of the free trade list so as to include most of the articles of export in which the constituents of the free trade senators are interested. There is also one looking to the removal of the duty on articles from the United States going to Porto Rico.

PRESIDENT GETS INFORMATION.

Citizens of Kentucky Tell McKinley Their Tale of Woe.

Colonel Andrew Cowan, a merchant of Louisville, Ky.; Samuel J. Roberts, editor of the Lexington Leader, and John Marshall, Republican lieutenant governor of the state, all prominent Republicans and friends of Governor Taylor, had an interview with President McKinley Friday on the situation in Kentucky. They said their sole mission was to explain the exact situation in the state. They said they assured the president that they did not want any federal interference. They allege the Goebel partisans are not abiding by agreement of last month.

Russia Wants Typewriters.

The latest Russian information received indicates that a considerable modification of the imperial Russian law affecting the use of typewriters in that country is about to take place, says the Detroit Free Press. Hitherto the use of this machine has been restricted to such individuals as could obtain special permission, as it was feared that the general use of this apparatus would greatly facilitate the machinists of the nihilistic element. Foreign business houses were almost the only ones making a liberal use of the typewriter. Of late years, however, Russian industry and commerce have extended at such rapid rate and the educated element available for the purpose of correspondence is relatively so small that the Russian government has at last admitted the necessity of acceding to the wishes of Russian merchants. Of course, this means a considerable extension of American trade.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HUMOROUS HIT BY MR. PETTUS

Aged Alabama Senator As a Fun-Maker

AIMS AT MR. BEVERIDGE

Much Merriment Created at Expense of Orators In the Senate--Congratulations In Order.

A Washington special says: The sensation of the day Friday at the capitol was the speech of Senator Pettus, of Alabama, in which he poured upon the head of the youthful Republican orator, Mr. Beveridge, of Indiana, the vials of his wit and synicism. It was an entirely new role for the senator from Alabama to assume, and to say that he made a hit is to give mild expression to the very evident facts.

In the course of a general speech on the Philippines General Pettus delivered a dissertation upon the qualities of orators in general, and the young orator (Beveridge) who addressed the senate Thursday in particular, which was the funniest thing the senate has known in many years.

From this time forward Mr. Pettus' speech was personal in its application. He first took Mr. Gallinger to task.

"I was very much entertained by the senator from New Hampshire on yesterday," he said, "when he informed us that he was not a lawyer and he proved it to us, not only by asserting it, but by his argument. Lawyers know that when you come to read a decision of a judge you must take all he says on a subject; that it will not do to take a sentence here and another there, but that is exactly what the senator did in quoting Justice Bradley on the Mormon church case."

The senator then went on to relate an anecdote illustrative of his point, in which a preacher of the olden time—when the senator was a boy—had figured in Alabama.

"The minister," he said, "was as learned in the Bible as my friend from New Hampshire in the law. (Laughter). He said: 'Brethren, my text today will be the following: Seven sons did Milcah bear unto Enon. Now I expect, brethren, the preacher went on, if you would look at the commentaries you would find various meanings to this text, but taking a common sense view of it, I will say this:

"'I expect that Enon was sick and the doctor told his seven sons, great, strong fellows, that it was absolutely necessary that he should have milk for his nutriment; and thereupon the seven sons went out to look up the cows. The cows had not come up the night before, and so the sons could not find them; but they came across a bear and they milked her and carried the milk to Enon, and so, brethren, it is writ 'Seven sons did Milcah bear unto Enon.'

"That preacher," concluded Mr. Pettus, amid an outburst of hearty laughter, "has as accurate a conception of the scriptures as some of our senators have of the law of the land.'

Mr. Pettus then turned his attention to the speech of Senator Beveridge and said:

"Mr. President, the Master once had to select a man to lead the children of Israel out of Egypt and through the wilderness of Canaan. He did not select an orator. No, he selected one of these men from Iowa or Maine, and his name was Moses. And he was a stubborn man, too (Laughter.)

"But Moses told his Master to his face that he could not do it because he could not speak to the people. And what was the reply? There is Aaron. He speaks well. And they took Aaron along, not in command—that was not allowed; but they took him along as a kind of deputy. And when Moses on his Master's order went up into the mountain for the tables, the orator left in charge had a golden calf framed (laughter) and he put all the people down to worshipping the golden calf. (Laughter.)

"More people worship the golden calf now than did in those days. But while Aaron and his people were all down worshiping the golden calf the man of God appeared and he pulled out his sword and demanded to know who was on the Lord's side, and the orator jumped up from his knees, drew his sword and got on Moses' side and went to killing the Israelites along with Moses.

"All these orators will do the same thing (laughter), the last one of them. We saw an instance of it yesterday afternoon."

At the conclusion of Mr. Pettus' speech senators crowded about him to tender congratulations.

BEVERIDGE "REVOLTS."

Young Indiana Senator Makes Speech Favoring Free Trade With Porto Rico.

A Washington special says: The conference on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was agreed to by the senate soon after in convened Thursday.

A concurrent resolution offered by Mr. Culberson, of Texas, directing the secretary of the navy to keep "seasonably advised" the families of wounded soldiers and sailors of the condition of the men was agreed to.

Consideration of the Porto Rican tariff and government bill was then resumnd.

Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, addressed the senate in favor of the proposition for free trade between the United States and the island of Porto Rico. He said, in part:

"The issue joined in this debate involves the power of congress over the islands and the peoples which Providence has placed in our keeping, and therefore the expediency of retaining them. It involves the power and progress of the republic throughout all its future. For if congress has not a free hand to deal with these islands as their different conditions and changing needs demand, it is not only inexpedient, but it may be impossible to hold them.

"To treat Porto Rico as we treat Hawaii, and to deal with the latter as we deal with the Philippines, and to apply to all without delay the same fixed formula of laws which custom and the intention of statehood has prescribed for our territories from which our states are formed, is a proposition as mad as it is novel.

"We have the greatest opportunity, the greatest duty, with which fortune ever blessed its most favored nation. Events have placed us in positions of command over the Pacific. The key to the commerce of the east is in our hands. We are the wardens of the gates of the Gulf. With the canal a completed work, we control the chosen and the natural highways of the commerce of mankind more than any other power than England. More than any people of history. Events are placing us where we may command and compel the peace of the world.

"Porto Rico, Cuba, the canal, Hawaii, the Philippines, make us literally the sovereign power among the nations. I say make us the master people of the world, for I never will believe that we will surrender our possessions to others, because we cannot invent sane and appropriate methods for their government and control. I will never believe that our constitution manacles our hands and narrows our vision and numbs our brain.

"I will never admit that our constitution is such a charter of death. I will never admit that our fathers, those master minds of history's most expanding and administering race, so anchored us within a narrow and stagnant harbor when the high seas call us, their islands are ours, and the inhabitants thereof need our guiding, restraining and uplifting hand to regenerate, to civilize and to redeem them. No! My faith is in a constitution which is a chart by which we sail all seas and make all ports—a constitution which is a free commission for the exercise of our strength as it develops.

WM. C. SANDERS DEAD.

Was Senior Member of Well Known Cotton Firm of Sanders, Swann & Co.

William C. Sanders, senior partner of the firm of Sanders, Swann & Co., of Atlanta, Ga., and Bremen, Germany, died Thursday morning at Suwannee Springs, Fla.

Mr. Sanders has not been seriously ill long. When he left Atlanta it was for the purpose of spending a week or two in rest and recreation at the Florida resorts. He was suffering with eczema when he left for Florida. In addition to this he had impaired his health by overwork, and the trip to Florida was arranged to restore his natural robust constitution.

The firm of Sanders, Swann & Co. is well known throughout the entire country as a power in financial circles. Telegrams of condolence to the family were received from the northern and eastern connections, in which the loss to the financial world was called attention to. The death of Mr. Sanders will be felt as well in New York as in this section of the country.

Mr. Cleveland added that he hoped the treaty would be ratified.

BOERS CAPTURE BRITISH GUNS

Broadwood's Command Moves Into Trap.

BEAT A HASTY RETREAT

Once More the Invaders Underestimate the Cunning of the Burghers To Their Great Discomfiture.

Advices received at London from Bushman Kop, under date of March 31st, stated that the British force commanded by Colonel Broadwood, consisting of the Tenth Hussars, Household cavalry, two-horse batteries and a force of mounted infantry under Colonel Pilcher, which had been garrisoning at Thabanchu, was obliged, in consequence of the near approach of a large force of Boers, to leave their position Friday night.

Colonel Broadwood marched to the Bloemfontein waterworks, south of the Modder river, where he encamped at 4 o'clock Saturday morning. At early dawn the camp was shelled by the enemy from a near point. Colonel Broadwood sent off a convoy with the batteries, while the rest of the force remained to act as a rear guard.

The convoy arrived at a deep spruit, where the Boers were concealed, and the entire body walked into ambush and was captured, together with six guns.

The loss of life is not great, since most of the British had walked into the trap before a shot was fired.

LONDON DISAPPOINTED.

A London special of Monday morning says: General Buller's anxious inquiry whether British officers will ever learn the value of scouting comes back with enforced emphasis to the British public on receipt of the tidings that a convoy with guns has walked deliberately into a Boer ambush within about twenty miles of Bloemfontein.

Lord Robert's own report of the affair, if yet received by the war office, has not been published and no account of the affair is available to the public except the dispatches from Bushman kop. Nothing can be said, therefore, regarding the exact extent of the British misfortune.

Evidently Col. Broadwood thought it necessary to retreat in haste from Thabanchu, as he marched all through Friday night, apparently followed by a considerable force of the enemy. The convoy and guns had to pass through a deep spruit which the Boers had occupied.

Six of twelve guns, comprising two batteries, all the wagons and, it is feared, many men, fell into the hands of the Boers, whose daring, displayed so near Bloemfontein, shows that they are rapidly recovering heart after their recent reverses.

The hope is expressed that General Colville will recover the convoy and guns and extricate Colonel Broadwood from his difficult position.

Severe criticisms are heard regarding the renewal of the old mistake of underrating the Boers and the absence of proper precaution. No doubt the affair will revive Boer hopes and inspire confidence among the enemy at a critical moment.

Great things are expected by the Boers of the new commander-in-chief, General Botha, who has made his reputation wholly during the present campaign. Foreign officers serving with the Boers have expressed surprise at his tactics.

The proof of continuing Boer activity in the Free State will compel greater circumspection on the part of the British, and will probably delay the march of Lord Roberts northward.

Detailed accounts of the fight at Karee Siding estimate the Boer forces variously from 3,000 to 5,000 men. Brabant's horse occupied Wepener last Thursday unopposed.

Lord Methuen has issued the following notification at Kimberly:

"I have received instructions that if any disturbance occurs west of the Vaal river, my force is to return and punish the rebels immediately."

AN "INDEFINITE" SENTENCE.

Two Chicago Bankers Languishing In the Same Cell.

Robert Berger, a partner of E. S. Dreyer, the banker, recently convicted of embezzling over $300,000 of the funds of the West Park board, was found guilty at Chicago Saturday night and sentenced to an indefinite term in the penitentiary. The specific charge against Berger was receiving funds for deposit when he knew the bank of E. S. Dreyer & Co. to be insolvent. Berger was at once taken to the county jail and locked in the same cell with E. S. Dreyer, his former partner in business.

JOUBERT LAID TO REST.

British Prisoners Send Flowers and Military Attend Body.

Advices from Pretoria state that the funeral of General Joubert took place Friday afternoon and was attended by all classes. The foreign military attaches, in uniform, were among those present and the British officers who are prisoners in Pretoria sent a wreath. There were universal signs of mourning.

PLAN FOR RESERVE.

Bill Providing That State Militia May Be Used In Place of Large Standing Army.

Representative Hay, of Virginia, a prominent member of the military committee, has prepared with great care a bill to create of the militia of the several states a reserve volunteer army for use in time of war, to supplement the regular army. The bill contemplates a general broadening of the national guard, its equipment with the service rifle and its complete organization in time of war into regiments, brigades, divisions and corps, with the three battalion formation, as in the regular army, and is designed to obviate the necessity of a large standing army upon the expiration of the present law July 1, 1901, increasing the standing army to 65,000 and authorizing the present volunteer army of 35,000.

The measure receives additional importance from the fact that Mr. Hay is chairman of the Democratic caucus.

The bill makes all citizens between the ages of eighteen and forty-five liable to military service in the volunteer army.

It appropriates $4,000,000 annually for the maintenance and equipment of the national guard of the several states, this forming the nucleus of the volunteer army, and requires the secretary of war to keep in each state a supply of ordnance stores sufficient for ninety days' use of the national guard of the state in the event of war.

It provides a system of mobilization for the guard by dividing the states into military divisions and provides for a board of officers in each state who shall hold examinations for the position of second lieutenant in the national guard, such officers to be promoted for merit and efficiency.

"The time has come," said Mr. Hay, in explanation of his bill, "when it is necessary to consider carefully the question of the future military establishment of the United States. In the minds of many the maintenance of a large standing army seems a necessity, and at first blush it would seem that there is no other way out of the difficulty which now confronts us.

"A careful consideration of the question has led to the belief that the situation can be met without a resort to that worst enemy of a republic—a large and permanent military establishment. The secretary of war has well said that 'the regular establishment in the United States will never be by itself the whole machine with which any war will be fought.' This being admitted, it will certainly not be contended that in time of peace the regular establishment will be 'the whole machine.'

"On the first day of July, 1901, the present army will be reduced to its peace basis of 26,610 men. Taking into account the situation which may confront us at that time, will it be necessary to increase the regular establishment beyond that number? The reasons given for such increase are various, but the most important are that there must be a sufficient number of men to man effectively our sea coast defenses; a sufficient number to preserve peace and order in the Philippine islands, and a sufficient number to do police duty against the Indians and to take care of the various posts in the United States.

"The number of men sufficient for these purposes is variously estimated at from 65,000 to 100,000 men, but it is not now necessary to determine this question, because a year may materially change present conditions.

"But it will be admitted by all that the strongest argument which can be used against a large standing army is the creation of a well organized and thoroughly equipped national guard.

"This country has fought all of her wars with citizen soldiers and no good reason can be given for departing from that policy."

Confinement Killing Boer Prisoners.

The departure of the British transports from Capetown with the Boer prisoners for St. Helena has been delayed in consequence of the increased sickness among the prisoners. Three died Saturday and twelve died during the week.

Instructions Kept Open.

Secretary Root says that the instructions to the Philippine commission will not be made public at present as it is desired to keep them open for possible change or addition until the last moment.

BOTHA SUCCEEDS JOUBERT.

New Commander of Boers Made Big Reputation In Present War.

A New York Herald dispatch from Pretoria says:

General Louis Botha has been appointed to succeed General Joubert as commander in chief of the Transvaal forces.

Ship Load of Lunatics.

The United States transport Sherman sailed from Manila Sunday with a battalion of the Fourteenth infantry, Captains Richard T. Yeatman, Armand Lasseigne and William S. Biddle, Lieutenants Robert Field and Oliver, 175 military prisoners and twenty-five insane men.

HEAVY DEAL IN COAL.

A Year's Output In West Virginia District Is Bought Up.

One of the largest coal deals ever made in the West Virginia district was closed in Charleston Saturday by C. J. Wittenberg, president of the High Carbon Coal and Coke Company of New York. The owners of twenty collieries signed contracts with this company for the sale of all coals shipped by them east for the ensuing year.

CITIZENS APPROVE STEUNENBERG'S ACTS

Idaho's Governor Upheld By Conservative People In His State.

ROOT IS SHOWN PETITION

Asked Secretary of War To Let the Troops Remain.

A Washington dispatch says: Governor Steunenberg, of Idaho, called at the war department Saturday and presented in person to Secretary Root the petition to which he referred while under examination before the house committee on military affairs in favor of the retention of the Federal troops in the disturbed mining districts. The governor had refused to produce the petition before the committee until he had first submitted it to the secretary of war, to whom it was addressed.

The petition bears about 2,500 signatures, and cities that all of the signers are citizens of Idaho and of the county of Shoshone and the Coeur d'Alene mining district. They petition that the secretary of war be allowed a a small force of federal troops to remain in the quarters provided for them and occupied by them at the town of Osborn, Shoshone county, for as long a time as Governor Steunenberg may think their presence necessary for the preservation of peace and order.

The citizens also express their approval of all the acts that have been done by the governor and the officials of their state to preserve peace and order and to bring criminals to justice.

The petition says that some of the acts of the state authorities may appear to people at a distance to be drastic and severe, but the signers, who are familiar with the conditions which existed for several years prior to the declaration of martial law last May, know that drastic measures were necessary to stop the band of conspirators, who, shielding themselves behind the name of the labor organization, had created a reign of terror and tyranny seldom equaled in the history of the community.

In conclusion the signors beg to state the efforts of the governor and the state officials, assisted by the military officials, have brought peace and good order to the district and given an impetus to all business interests and a sense of safety to all people, which are highly appreciated, and for which the signors are grateful.

AS IN THE OLD DAYS.

The Two Branches of the Methodist Church Will Meet In Washington.

For the first time since 1861, when the Baltimore conference of the Methodist Episcopal church divided, the two organizations, the Methodist Episcopal and the Methodist Episcopal church, south, will meet simultaneously in annual conference in Washington during the week.

The Methodist denomination in the United states divided in 1844 on the question of slavery, but the Baltimore conference remained undivided until shortly after the outbreak of the civil war. Since 1861 there have been two Baltimore conferences.

The sessions of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held at the Metropolitan M. E. church, and Bishop John M. Walden will preside. The M. E. church, south, will meet in the Mount Vernon church and Bishop W. A. Candler, of Georgia, will preside and make the opening address.

ROBERTS SENDS CONDOLENCES.

British General Expresses Sympathy Over Death of Joubert.

Lord Roberts has sent the following dispatch to President Kruger:

"Have just heard of the death of General Joubert, and desire to offer my sincere condolence upon the sad event. Would ask you to convey to General Joubert's family an expression of my most respectful sympathy with their sad bereavement, and to assure them also from me that all ranks of her majesty's forces share my feeling of deep regret at the sudden and untimely end of so distinguished a general, who devoted his life to the services of his country, and whose personal gallantry was only surpassed by his humane conduct and chivalrous bearing under all circumstances."

NEGROES LOSE AGAIN.

For Third Time the Alton School Case Goes Against Them.

The jury in the case of Scott Bibb versus mayor and city council of Alton, Illinois, known as the colored school case, brought in a verdict Saturday for the city. The case is a celebrated one and involves the question of separate schools for white and colored children.

Bibb, who represented the colored people, charged that the colored school children were excluded from the public schools. This is the third time the case has been tried in the circuit court. An appeal will be take to the superior court.

WANT PROHIBITION.

Temperance Folk Ask That Liquors Be Barred From New Possessions.

A Washington dispatch says: A large delegation from New York, Philadelphia and other cities, appeared before the insular affairs committee of the house Friday in behalf of the bill introduced by Mr. Gillette of Massachusetts to prohibit the importation into, sale or manufacture of intoxicating liquors in Porto Rico, Hawaii or the Philippines.

OHIO ELECTIONS.

Summary of the Result Shows Republican Gains.

A summary of the results of the municipal and township elections in Ohio Monday indicates more republican than democratic gains, but no special cause is assigned for it except that the republican faction, which have been fighting for years, have evidently been getting together. The result in Cincinnati, which on the average plurality more than reverses the result at the last general municipal election, is attributed to less factional fighting among the republicans and the indifference of the democrats. In Cleveland, where the factions have been most intense, the result is also decisive. A feature of the day has been the election of Dr. Washington Gladden as a councilman at Columbus, where the question of municipal franchises was a special issue. The republicans elected their ticket at Toledo, where Mayor Samuel Jones has held sway as an independent factor for years. At some interior points the republicans elected officers where they have never before elected them, while there have been no phenomenal gains by the democrats.

DEMOCRACY GAINS IN MICHIGAN.

In Almost Every City Republicans Lost Votes.

The democrats made several striking gains in the municipal and town ship elections, and in all Michigan cities Monday, except Detroit and Port Huron. At Lansing J. F. Hammel was elected by 316 majority, the first democratic mayor in ten years. Mayor George R. Perry, democrat, was re-elected at Grand Rapids over ex-Mayor Stuart by 1,388 majority. His majority last year was only 728.

At Petoskey, which has hitherto been republican, the democrats elected a mayor.

Hudson and Ann Arbor both show democratic gains. At Big Rapids the democrats reduced the republican majorities of last year by half. A democratic mayor was re-elected at Saginaw.

Luddington, Lapeer, Alpena, Mt. Clements, Sturgis, Niles and Adrian also went democratic.

Jackson republicans elected a mayor. At Eaton Rapids the republican ticket was elected, and at Hastings the republicans were successful for first time in the city's history. St. Joseph and Grand Rapids also went republican.

SOUTH POLE DISCOVERED.

Suavivors of the South Polar Expedition Arrive at Campbelltown.

The exploring steamer Southern Cross, bearing Mr. C. F. Brochgrevink and the survivors of the South Polar expedition, fitted out in 1898 by Sir George Newnes, of London, arrived Monday at Campbelltown, near Bluff Harbor, N. Z.

Mr. Brochgrevink's expedition left Hobart for the Antarctic region in December, 1898. During the latter part of February, 1899, the members landed from the Southern Cross near Cape Adair, Victoria, and it having been arranged that the steamer should leave them there with full equipment of every kind and should return for them early in 1900.

Webster Davis Has Resigned.

Assistant Secretary of the Interior Webster Davis' formal resignation was sent to the white house Monday through his private secretary. At the white house no statement was obtainable concerning the resignation other than the fact that it had been received, and the officials declined to say whether it would be accepted.

Increase in Sales of Fertilizer Tags.

The report of sales of fertilizer tags for the past season shows that up to April 1 there were 1,443,110 sold in Alabama. For the same time last season there were sold 911,700, a great increase for the present year of 531,380.

There was in the treasury at the close of business on Saturday, March 31, over a million and twenty thousand dollars. There was paid out for the quarter ending March 31 $220,000 to teachers of the public schools of the state.

Went to Girl's House and Shot Himself.

Bert Taylor, a young 18-year-old lad of Hoke's Bluff, attempted suicide Sunday. He was desperately in love with a young lady, and his love was not returned. He went to her residence, stepped on the porch, put the pistol to his heart and fired, the ball entering the left breast just above the heart. He will probably recover.

GRAND JURY WILL INVESTIGATE.

Judge Cantrell Instructs Them to Be Impartial.

The Franklin county, Kentucky, grand jury for the April term, which will investigate the assassination of Governor Goebel, was announced Monday. It is composed of the following:

Frank Stagg, republican; George Brock, democrat; William Graham, democrat; Lewellyn Gaines, democrat; W. B. George, republican; F. M. Featherstone, anti-Goebel democrat; Robbert Sutter, democrat; Charles Bridgeford, populist; George Bernback, democrat; John Reis, democrat; Bird Carter, democrat; D. S. Cain, democrat.

Judge Cantrill, after the grand jury was formed, delivered a very short charge, in which he said:

"Gentlemen: There is one thing in particular to which I desire to call your attention, and that is the present horrible condition of affairs that exists here just now. It is the desire of the court that you make a thorough investigation. I hope and believe that this grand jury will discharge its whole duty fairly, fearlessly and impartially. You will find this court ready to assist you at any and all times, and the commonwealth's attorney will be with you frequeatly to advise you as to the law."

"Tallow Dick" Combs (colored), charged with being an accomplice in the Goebel assassination, was placed in jail at Frankfort Monday.

While notbing was said by Judge Cantrill in his charge concerning it, it is understood that Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin will recommend the bringing in of indictments against Republican Governor Taylor and all of the other republican state officers on the charge of usurpation of the offices they are claiming to hold.

TO FIRE THE OPENING GUN.

J. J. Willet Will Make a Speech in Brooklyn Favoring Van Wyck.

Hon. J. J. Willett, of Anniston, has accepted an invitation to deliver an address at a "Jefferson birthday dinner" to be given by Brooklyn democrats on the 12th of this month.

The importance which attaches to the approaching dinner from a political standpoint is that it is the opening gun of a campaign by eastern democrats against the nomination of William J. Bryan for the presidency, and in favor of the nomination of Judge Augustus Van Wyck, of Brooklyn, whose presidential boom was launched by Mr. Willet the last Fourth of July in his long talk before Tammany Hall.

BOILER KILLS TWO

And Injures Six in a Blow-Out at an Atlanta Lumber Yard.

An eighty-horse power boiler, weighing several tons, exploded Monday at the G. O. Williams Lumber Company's brick yard in Atlanta, killing two white men and injuring six others. The dead are: John M. Smith, aged 55, one of the owners of the brick yard; James Perkins, aged 25, engineer.

The injured: Walter Evans, aged 21, fatally; Rufus Glass, colored, badly scalded and bruised: Ed Hardeman, colored; Tom Glass, colored, bruised; Charles Hardeman and Charles Bailey, colored, injured by flying debris; Sam Banks, a negro boy, badly hurt.

Half-Million Dollar Fire in Arkansas.

A half-million dollar fire occurred at Newport, Ark., Sunday night, the heaviest that town has experienced in many years. The Union Compress company's plant was destroyed. This represents a loss of about $100,000. There were 8,000 bales of cotton on the platform, which is practically a total loss, estimated at $350,000. Five box cars belonging to the Iron Mountain and the White and Black River railroad were also burned. The losses are only partially covered by insurance. The total loss is estimated at $500,000.

Crazy Man's Deed.

At Kansas City, Mo., harboring imaginary wrongs, John W. W. McKimm, aged 29 years, shot and killed Dr. B. F. Shaw, his brother-in-law, as the latter sat reading the Sunday school lesson to his 5-year-old daughter. Shaw died instantly. McKimm, who had been an inmate of a sanitarium and is believed to be insane, threatened to kill the other five members of the family, and was only restrained after a struggle.

THE CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, EDITOR.

Entered in the post-office at Columbiana Ala., as second class matter.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR CONGRESS.

THE CHRONICLE is authorized to announce Hon. B. Dudley Williams, of Calhoun county, as a candidate for representative in the lower house of congress, from the Fourth congressional district of Alabama, subject to the action of the democratic district convention.

How many Johnston democrats are there in Shelby county? Stand up, gentlemen, and let us count. If there are a hundred, it is our treat. This offer stands good for ten days.

LET C. P. Huntington turn loose his barrel in Alabama if he cares to. It will only cement the affections of the people more firmly to Senator Morgan. Stick a pin there, please.

THE Johnston supporters canvassed beat 21 in Birmingham recently in order to ascertain how big the governor's majority would be. They reported that they found four Morgan men to one for Johnston. And this in his home county. Whew!

I WILL go into a democratic caucus, and I am going to abide the result, the Age-Herald, the Advertiser and all other lying newspapers to the contrary, notwithstanding.—Joseph F. Johston.

If being opposed to the governor puts us under the ban, he might add THE CHRONICLE to the above list of papers. And we might add also that we entertain serious doubts as to the sincerity of the above-quoted declaration.

THE CHRONICLE is firmly of the opinion that a primary election will give more general satisfaction and come nearer reuniting the white voters of Shelby county than any method we could adopt. Of course, if a majority think otherwise, we will gracefully acquiesce. But we respectfully urge our party leaders, and each and every voter to look into the question thoroughly in its every detail before it is condemned.

WE would advise Congressman Stallings to skip the Fourth district in his canvass for governor. We know full well that had he not been recreant to his trust, and had he been in congress attending to his duties, for which he is paid a handsome salary, and had two or three other democratic congressmen been at their post of duty, this district would be represented by a democrat to-day, instead of misrepresented by a combination populo-republican. If we in this neck of the woods owe the honorable gentleman anything it is to help retire him to the shades of private life. He has been weighed and found wanting.

DR. B. DUDLEY WILLIAMS, of Calhoun county, is a candidate for congress from this district, as will be seen by reference to his announcement elsewhere in this issue. Dr. Williams is a life-long democrat, has ability as an orator, and has the courage of his convictions. He is an enthusiastic supporter of Bryan and the Chicago platform, is a hearty supporter of Senator Morgan and is a strong advocate of bi-metalism. He believes that public office is a public trust, and says a servant of the people should remain at his post of duty, and not neglect the interests of his constituents to gratify personal ambition. He defines his position on all questions clearly and emphatically and says he hopes to win the nomination by clean methods and solely on his merits.

WHEN Governor Johnston was a candidate for governor the first time, he came to our town to make a speech. Before the hour of speaking arrived, he held a reception in the office of the probate judge in order that he might meet and become acquainted with our citizens. During the reception the present editor of THE CHRONICLE was introduced to the then Captain Johnston. Among other things he said: "I would like very much to have your support and the support of your paper in my candidacy. You are aware no doubt that I am closer to the populists than any democrat in Alabama." We replied in substance: "Captain, that is the very reason we have for opposing you. You are entirely too close to the populists." And we have never seen any good reason since why we should change our opinion. He is still too close to the populists, and he is relying largely on their aid to win the senatorial race.

THE only objection we have heard against a primary election is that fraud can be committed and there is no remedy. The same objection holds good as to our general elections held under the law. Until the millennium arrives there is sure to be more or less fraud, but, as a rule, it fails to accomplish its purpose. Talladega county committed a flagrant fraud in the last congressional primary, and she went down in ignominious defeat under its weight. We have entire confidence in the honesty of Shelby county democracy, and the candidate who is unwilling to lay his claims before the people and let them as a whole pass upon his fitness and qualifications, must undoubtedly be afraid of the popular verdict or else hopes to reverse it by manipulation. There can be no better way of getting at the voice of the people. Besides it arouses a degree of interest among the members of the party that is essential to the ultimate success of the ticket. It is natural that people would take interest in a ticket that they had a hand in selecting.

ON Monday last Governor Johnston had an appointment to speak at Dothan in the interest of his candidacy for the United States senate. General Oates went there also, in the interest of Senator Morgan, hoping that the governor would give him a chance to reply to his speech. This the high and mighty mogul flatly refused, and in order to make assurance doubly sure he had Judge Hubbard, an appointee of his, adjourn court at 11:30 and announce that an hour and a half would be given for speaking, court to resume business at 1 o'clock. A committee of citizens waited on the judge and requested that a little longer time be given in order that General Oates might speak in the afternoon. The judge, imitating the example of his magnanimous (?) superior, curtly refused to adjourn court for a moment longer than 1 o'clock. Governor Johnston spoke an hour and three quarters winding up at 1:15. If we are not a poor judge of human nature, and are not woefully ignorant of the sentiment of fair play and justice which actuates hightoned, honorable men, the contemptible conduct of Governor Johnston and his appointee will be remembered. Does it not prove conclusively that he is aware that his record will not bear close scrutiny? Is he the right kind of timber to build a senator out of?

Our Position Endorsed.

EDITOR CHRONICLE—After most heartily endorsing your editorial of last week urging a democratic primary election, permit me, on my own responsibility, to urge the powers that be to make an honest effort to so plan and arrange for, and conduct the management of that primary that it may reunite the law-abiding, country-loving white voters of Shelby county under the only flag that can possibly represent white supremacy. Let us so direct our efforts in this matter that our earnest desire for a political reunion of the conservative white men of Shelby county may not be doubted or misconstrued. May we not join forces in a white primary and all stand loyally by the election, regardless of past political differences? If necessary to accomplish this end, call off present plans.

A BOOM FOR SENATOR MORGAN.

From the Washington Star.

It is asserted that the "Huntington barrel," meaning the lobbying fund of the Pacific railroad interests, has been opened in the Alabama senatorial campaign for the purpose of defeating John T. Morgan for reelection. This ought to be good news to Senator Morgan, if true. The more the Pacific railroads hammer him for his persistent championship of the isthmian canal the more his desirability as a member of the upper house of congress is made apparent. No higher tribute could possibly be paid to him than the accusation that for years he has fought and argued for the construction of this waterway, despite the assaults of the railroad lobby, regardless of the political company with which his enterprise might throw him, intent alone upon the consummation of this great national project. If the fight waged by the railroad interests be fairly conducted, upon the square issue of the canal's construction, there can be no doubt whatever as to the outcome. Alabama enjoys a gulf coast line of considerable importance. The harbor of Mobile is believed by many to be destined to become a great port of outlet and inlet for foreign commerce, notwithstanding the advantages of New Orleans, fed by the great river. Mobile is rapidly developing as a railroad center. What more likely than with the isthmian canal in operation this gate of the South should become one of the world's most flourishing ports, pouring out and receiving a vast volume of trade to and from the interoceanic waterway? The growing manufacturing and mining interests of Alabama have already become an important factor in the industrial progress of the South. The state is in no position to repudiate a scheme certain to redound immeasurably to its benefit, and consequently has no warrant to turn the cold shoulder to the man who has done as much as any other man now living to consummate this great project. Assuredly not upon the motion of the interests which have steadfastly wrought for the suppression of the canal plan in order to maintain the trans-continental railway routes intact, thereby excluding the South from a share of this rapidly growing commerce to the Pacific.

Questions Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for billiousness or indigestion. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration or heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Hall Drug Co.

CALL FOR COUNTY CONVENTION.

By direction of the Democratic executive committee of Shelby County a convention of the Democratic party of said county is hereby called to meet at the courthouse in Columbiana at 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, the 21st day of April, 1900, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Representative and selecting delegates to the State and Senatorial conventions.

For the purpose of selecting delegates to said county convention beat meetings or primaries as each beat may determine will be held in each beat on Saturday, the 14th day of April, at such hour as the beat committeemen may fix for their respective beats.

The following invitation, in the language of the resolution by the Democratic State executive committee, is hereby extended:

"Be it resolved by the Democratic State executive committee of Alabama that we hereby cordially invite all conservative white voters, irrespective of past political associations or differences who can unite with us in the effort for pure and economical government, and who will support the nominees and principles of the Democratic party, to participate in the primaries of the party throughout the State.

"Resolved, further, That all persons participating in the primaries, conventions or mass meetings of the party hereafter to be held thereby pledge themselves to support the nominees of such primaries, conventions or mass meetings, whether municipal, county, state or Federal."

The number of delegates to which each beat will be entitled will be as follows, based on the vote for Governor at the last State election:

1—Columbiana	9
1—Shelby	3
2—Spring Creek	2
3—Calera	5
4—Montevallo	9
5—Tylers	1

W. B. BROWNE, Chairman.

A Suspicious Circumstance.

The San Francisco Wave says: While a member of the Nebraska legislature, C. M. Shrader, a populist leader, made it a rule to oppose every bill that had to do with corporations. Whenever he arose to speak on one of those measures he invariably said: "I know there's boodle behind this bill, Mr. Speaker. I know it, because I have been approached." This sort of thing went on for some time. One day Representative White, leader of the democratic side, arose while Shrader was hinting at boodle and asked permission to ask the populist a question. "I am perfectly willing to answer any question the gentleman may ask me," defiantly announced Shrader. White leveled a long lead pencil at the populist. "Will you please tell this body, Mr. Shrader, what there is about you that causes all these fellows with boodle to approach you?"

BILL.

Calera.

W. C. Wade has his two new stores on Montgomery avenue almost completed, and when finished will have three handsome store rooms.

H. C. Martin, our clever railroad agent, will very soon have the addition to his residence completed. The painter is putting on the finishing touches this week.

April came in with a very heavy frost and thin ice, but the windy days at the close of March had thoroughly dried everything; consequently no serious damage to fruit and early vegetables.

On Wednesday evening last Mr. Moses Fields, one of our best citizens, and Miss Emma Hinds, a most amiable and well-loved young lady, were quietly married at the Methodist parsonage in this place, Rev. Herndon officiating. The happy couple are at home to their many friends at the residence of William Killingsworth.

Maj. W. D. Huggins, long a popular citizen of this place, died on Saturday last after an illness of three weeks. Major Huggins was about 68 years old, was a captain in the 4th Alabama regiment, was wounded in the head and leg at the first battle of Manassas, and was afterward promoted to the rank of major. He has lived in this county for many years, and was an excellent man and good citizen, having the respect and esteem of all who knew him. Sympathy of the entire community goes out to his aged brother, who is the only survivor of the immediate family.

Twice Proven.

From the Vindicator, Rutherfordton, N. C.

The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with the most remarkable results in each case. First, with rheumatism in the shoulder, from which he suffered excruciating pain for ten days, which was relieved with two applications of Pain Balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a very short time. Second, in rheumatism in thigh joint, almost prostrating him with severe pain, which was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment on retiring at night and getting up free from pain. The city election passed off quietly on Monday last, only 24 votes being cast and but few scratches made on the ticket. The entire ticket, "unanimously elected," consists of D. R. McMillan, mayor, and E. D. Hall, A. P. Longshore, C. W. O'Hara, J. P. Pearson and J. H. Robertson, as aldermen.

The Pauline DuBose Missionary Society will give an entertainment in the form of an egg hunt and egg supper at the residence of Rev. W. I. Sinnott, Friday, April 13, beginning at 5 o'clock. Admission, 10 cents for those who hunt eggs, and 5 cents each for eggs served; bread, pickles, etc., free. Everybody invited.

Barney McClanahan, one of the oldest and most highly-esteemed negroes of this community, died at his home in this place yesterday morning. He has been a resident of this county practically his entire life, and has always borne an unimpeachable character. The news of his death will be heard with regret by both white and black.

Charles Ledbetter, the bigamist, who broke jail here several weeks ago, has been captured and was placed again in jail on last Friday. He was captured in the neighborhood of his first arrest, near where his second marriage occurred. He was brought to this city by W. A. Wilder. Nothing has been heard from the other escaped prisoners.

News reached us yesterday of a romantic wedding which occurred in Calera Tuesday. The contracting parties were Mr. Lee Kimball and Miss Ethel Leonard, both of this place. In order to elude the old people they slipped off to Calera and were married at the residence of George Porter, Rev. J. P. Word officiating. They left the same day for Texas, where they will reside. Our best wishes accompany them.

Mr. H. Fox, of the Red Store Co., tells us to tell you that his prices for dry goods, clothing, shoes and notions are as they were before the advance in prices. Go to see him and buy what you need. Prices as low as they used to be.

THE CHRONICLE man in his rounds the other day called at the bank, and to his surprise was invited back to where the money is kept and was shown many of the mysteries of the banking business. The thing that most particularly attracted his attention was the large reserve against deposits that is held. The general daily statement for the year just passed showed that the deposits have averaged $21,610.85, against which an average of $8,748.40 has been held in cash. The deposits on the day that we called were $42,759.66 and the cash held that day was $15,233.39. Twenty-five per cent. is considered a safe cash reserve, but Mr. DuBose has kept a reserve of 40.4 per cent throughout the whole year. His bank is seven years old, and is one of the solid institutions of the kind that is here to stay, and he reports that his business is beginning to grow rapidly, both in volume of business and in net profits. As the editor of this paper is a relative of the head of the bank, we make no comment other than to state facts from which the public can form their own conclusions.

Have you been coughing a day, a week, a month, a year? Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey will cure that cough. There can be no doubt about it. It has cured many others equally severe. Good druggists sell it. No cure no pay.

COTTON MILL A CERTAINTY.

The Order Has Been Placed for Five Thousad Spindles.

All Doubt of its Early Completion Now Removed.

THE CHRONICLE is glad to be able to state, upon the authority of a gentleman in a position to speak positively, that the Columbiana cotton mill is now an assured fact, and that it is only a question of a few months until it will be a substantial reality. This is decidedly the most gratifying item of news we have ever had the pleasure of publishing, and we take pardonable pride in stating facts as they actually exist without embellishment.

Tuesday an order was placed with the D. A. Tompkins Co., of Charlotte, N. C., for five thousand spindles, to be delivered as soon as needed. This company will furnish the plans and specifications for the building, which will be forthcoming by the time a suitable lot is purchased and preparations are made for building. Consequently it will be a very short time until the building will be in course of construction.

The amount of stock issued by the Columbiana Manufacturing Co. is $50,000, and not a dollar is to be issued when that is taken. There are 275 shares yet untaken, but an officer of the company has agreed to take all but 75 shares of the unsold stock, and unless the remainder is taken in a few days he will take the balance and the books will be closed. This should be ample warning to those who want stock. If they miss this opportunity they are left out for good, for every dollar of the stock so far taken is in the hands of men amply able to hold it.

This mill means great things for Columbiana. It is only the opening wedge for other enterprises sure to follow in the near future. This spring our old town will wake up and take on new life and activity.

A Card of Thanks.

HARPERSVILLE, ALA., March 31.

MR. EDITOR—Please allow me space in your important paper to thank the people of Harpersville for their exceeding kindness and favors shown my father's family during his affliction and the illness of my sister. May the Lord bless them is the prayer of a true friend and well-wisher.

E. F. BRADLEY.

Harpersville.

Good morning, Editor DuBose, glad to see you back home.

W. A. Gorman is home now from his school at Pelham.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Teague are visiting relatives in the city this week.

Ledbetter was arrested near here one day last week and carried back to jail.

Mrs. Mattie Smothers, of Weldon, is visiting relatives in the city this week.

Earl Martin was over from Birmingham and spent Sunday with home-folks.

Several coalings have started up in our beat, while the crosstie business is booming.

Last week was a beautiful week for work, and the plowman was heard soon and late.

Mrs. Florey has just had her house newly painted. Edwin McGraw, of Vincent, did the work.

Guano planting is the order now, while some are speaking of planting cotton the last of the week.

There was not any preaching at the Baptist church Sunday on account of sickness in the pastor's family.

We fully endorsed your article last week on the primary. This is the best way and should be adopted.

Editor Gist was a good writer and clever gentleman, and we are sorry that he has gone to Washington.

Hugh Gorman is at home now from Birmingham, where he has been for some time having his eyes treated.

The Methodists are beginning to talk about their district meeting, which will be held at Vincent about the middle of next month.

The names of Dewey, Schley, Hobson and Sampson are almost forgotten, but Morgan and Johnston are fresh in everyone's memory.

Clem Butler's left hand came in contact with his planer mill some time ago, and consequently two fingers and thumb had to be amputated.

Jake has just recovered from a spell of mumps. Some say that the mumps don't hurt. Well, those that don't hurt are not the kind that we had.

Harpersville has not had a single case of pneumonia or fever this winter, and if this holds out our doctors will have to emigrate or go at something else.

Who struck Billy Patterson? Don't know. What became of the money made by the Harpersville dramatic club last summer to buy desks? Don't know "dat ether."

Mrs. Sharbutt, daughter of C. A. Glaze, died near Creswell one day last week and was buried here, Rev. R. A. Kidd conducting the burial services. She leaves a husband and two small children, besides a host of friends and relatives, to mourn her loss.

Some few of our people are attending court this week. As a general thing our people are law-abiding, and some hardly ever know when court is in session.

PROCEEDINGS

Shelby County Teachers' Institute, Held at Center Institute March 23-24.

The institute was called to order by Superintendent Eugene Williams at the time designated by programme printed in county papers, who presided over the institute during the session. C. W. Chesser was elected secretary.

Teachers in attendance wer : S. P. Williamson, H. M. Abercrombie, P. M. Abercrombie, G. D. Baldwin, J. M. Rich, J. M. Dye, C. W. Chesser, S. W. Blackerby, John Evans, J. B. Farrell, T. F. Farrell, Geo. B. Wheeler, W. W. Wheeler, J. W. Spearman, R. Lee Hill, John H. Mooney, and Misses Mary Weldon and Eva Farr. Trustees present were A. F. Carden, T. B. Holcomb.

During the session each and every subject on programme was well discussed by teachers and citizens who were in attendance; each meeting being well attended, though the weather was very disagreeable.

Before adjournment the following committee on resolutions was appointed by Chairman Williams: J. B. Farrell, H. M. Abercrombie and Miss Eva Farr. On report of the committee the following resolutions were read and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we, the teachers of Shelby county, Ala., in institute assembled, March 24, 1900, by a unanimous vote, would memorialize the next general assembly of our state on matters pertaining to teachers' examinations.

First, The present school laws of the state savor of class legislation, in that they exempt from examination and payment of examination fees certain teachers, viz : graduates of Alabama state normal schools and teachers in certain exempted districts.

Second, The fact of not requiring these normal graduates to take the examinations gives to them an implied superiority over other teachers and puts those who have not taken normal training in Alabama at a disadvantage when in contest for position with normal graduates.

Third, That normal graduates as a rule are not superior to teachers educated in other schools and other states. We, therefore, will petition the general assembly of Alabama, at its next session, to so amend the school laws of our state as to require every teacher in the state to take the state examination and to pay the examination fee.

Fourth, That we tender our thanks to the citizens of Center Institute and vicinity for the hospitable manner in which they have entertained the teachers of the institute while in their midst.

Fifth, That we thank C. W. Chesser for his faithful work as secretary of this institute, and thank the choir of Center Institute for the excellent music so abundantly furnished us while in session.

Sixth, That we thank our worthy superintendent for the impartial manner in which he has so faithfully presided over this institute and for many kind favors shown us in the past.

Seventh, That in future we shall recognize all township trustees of Shelby county as members of the teachers' institute, and they are hereby declared members thereof.

An Honest Medicine for La Grippe.

George W. Waitt, of South Gardiner, Me., says: "I have had the worst cough, cold, chills and grip and have taken lots of trash of no account but profit to the vendor. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the only thing that has done any good whatever. I have used one bottle of it and the chills, cold and grip have all left me. I congratulate the manufacturers of an honest medicine." For sale by Williams Bros.

Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey advances a new theory in the treatment of all cough, lung and bronchial troubles. It cures and cures quickly. Absolutely harmless and pleasant to take. It cuts loose the mucus without exertion or straining, and stops the cough at once by healing the inflamed parts. It gives vigor and vitality to the respiratory organs. It enables the blood to receive the proper supply of oxygen. It builds up the system, rendering it less susceptible to cold. Good druggists sell it.

Mrs. C. E. VanDeusen, of Kilbourn, Wis., was afflicted with stomach trouble and constipation for a long time. She says, "I have tried many preparations but none have done me the good that Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have." These Tablets are for sale at Williams Bros.' drug store. Price 25 cents. Samples free.

I had granulated lids for twenty years. I tried many doctors and lots of medicine to no avail. A skim had grown over my eyes, and they grew worse until I could not recognize any one across the street. Sutherland's Eagle Eye Salve cured me sound and well in ten days.—Mrs. W. C. Woodall, Murfreesboro, Tenn. Good druggists sell it.

Good old Granny Metcalfe, of Kentucky, 89 years old, says that Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey is the best grip cure, cough, lung and bronchial remedy that has been offered to the people during her life. Sold everywhere.

Blood poison often results from a cut or wound if not properly treated. Dr. Bell's Anti-Pain is the most wonderful discovery of the age for the quick relief of all internal and external pain.

If you ever try Sutherland's Eagle Eye Salve for failing eyesight, granulated lids or sore eyes of any kind, you will be a keen-sighted advertiser among your friends for it.

Annually Says Take
Hood's
Sarsaparilla

In the spring those Pimples, Boils, Eruptions and General Bad Feelings indicate that there are cobwebs in the system. It needs a thorough brushing, and the best brush is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which sweeps all humors before it. This great medicine eradicates Scrofula, subdues Salt Rheum, neutralizes the acidity which causes Rheumatism—in short, purifies the blood and thoroughly renovates the whole physical system.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has been taken in our family as a blood purifier and spring medicine with satisfactory results." LENAH RICHARDSON, 135 West William street, Bath, N. Y. Be sure to get Hood's.

Long Tenure of Office.

From the Washington Star: It is doubtful whether any institution in the world has such a record for long tenure of office on the part of those directing it as has the Greenwich observatory. That institution was established in 1675, and in the 224 years of its existence it has had just eight directors, whose average terms of office have been twenty-eight years. The Harvard observatory has been established sixty years, and has had but four directors. The naval observatory in the district, however, has in the thirty-three years of its existence had ten directors, owing to the custom of detailing naval officers in that duty for a term of three years each. This constant change of directors, it has been claimed, is responsible to a large extent for the lack of continuity in the work of the naval observatory and its consequent failure to meet the requirements of a great national observatory, although more money is spent for its maintenance than for any other like institution in the world.

FOR FARM AND GARDEN.

Ensilage in a Dry Season.

Ensilage is proving a great aid. Indeed, our dairymen are learning that it would be a most profitable adjunct to dairying in a dry summer, like the past one, when the year's profits depend on keeping the herd from shrinking in quantity during a critical shortage of feed.

Fruit Trees Along Highways.

In some sections the farmers have set out fruit trees along the highways in place of the more ornamental shade trees. When properly pruned and cared for the practice is a most commendable one, and if others would follow the example it would result in a great profit to those interested. A fruit like the apple should be chosen, as plums and cherries sprout from the root and grow readily from the pit. If neglected the road would soon present the appearance of a jungle. Late varieties of apples should be chosen.

Stone Crocks in the Dairy.

A word about stone crocks. Their weight alone should decide everyone against their use in the dairy. With the most careful handling they are soon cracked, and then it is impossible to keep them sweet. Seamless tin pans are light and easily kept clean, with no possible lurking places for microbes. Of all substances milk is most susceptible to adverse influences, and from nothing else is so variable a product evolved. Over the purity of the milk the housewife has little or no control. Hundreds of women all over the land are daily disheartened by its want of cleanliness when it reaches their hands. Slovenly milkers are responsible for a great deal of poor butter. Prime butter can never be made from milk having the slightest taint. Milk should never be allowed to stand in the stable while cooling. Cream begins to rise almost immediately after the milk is drawn and agitation causes more or less loss.

Money in Ginseng.

Few crops offer as promising returns as does ginseng when properly cared for, and where the climatic conditions are favorable. In my experience I have found it more satisfactory to make the beds in the open field—giving artificial shade—than in the forest or under trees of any kind. Whether the plants are raised from seed or from roots the beds must be well prepared. I am in favor of planting the seed three inches apart in rows in which the plants are to remain until the roots are ready to be dug for market. Plants raised in this manner and properly cared for will mature a fair quantity of seed the second year and a good crop the third year.

Planted in this manner the roots will be much larger at two years' growth than when the seeds have been planted closer. Then in transplanting the roots nearly one year's growth is lost, and the small stunted roots that result from too close planting are far more apt to be destroyed by grubs and worms infesting the ground than larger and fully developed roots. On sowing the seed it should be borne in mind that not every seed will mature a plant. In the fall, after the first year's growth, the vacant spots can easily be filled with roots standing closer than desired, or these may be transplanted to new beds.—E. D. Crosby, in New England Homestead.

Ground Food for Poultry.

Every once in a while we see in some of the papers articles attacking the feeding of soft food to poultry. Yet soft feed, like most other kinds of feed, is of great value when properly fed. It may indeed be a detriment to the fowls if improperly fed. It may easily be conceived that making soft feeds a constant ration would throw out of order the entire digestive systems of the fowls. It would probably have this effect if fed to fowls that had a very large ration of green stuff, especially in the summer time; as in that case it would be substituted for the grain ration instead of being used to balance the grain ration.

The real value of ground feed is in feeding it to take the place of part of the grain and so render the work of the grinding organs of the fowls less severe. The fowl that has nothing but grain from the time the ground freezes in the fall till the time the grass starts in the spring is the fowl that develops symptoms of a ruined digestive system at the time the most eggs are expected in the spring.

A warm feed of ground grain once a day has a wonderful effect in preventing those disorders that are so frequent with fowls confined and heavily fed on grain feed. The reason that it is not more universally adopted is the disinclination of farmers to take the trouble to scald this feed over night or even in the morning. It is so easy to toss a measure of corn to the fowls that many of them get no other food.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

Care of the Apple Orchard.

Keep the ground stirred about the trees by using the garden rake after rains heavy enough to pack the ground. This will conserve the moisture and is better than any mulch that can be applied, and the trees will take deeper root. If weeds or trash of any kind have accumulated about the trees, clear away or cover up in the fall with soil, making a little mound to prevent a harbor for mice. Remove it in the spring.

There are several reasons why the young orchard should be planted to corn. The cultivation of corn is the proper cultivation for the orchard. The corn helps shelter the trees from the wind. The stalks help lodge and retain the snow, making winter protection, and if the corn is poorly husked there will be plenty of food for the rabbits. Crop to corn until the orchard is fruiting well, then seed to clover.

Spray with kerosene emulsion just before the buds open, or apply whitewash with brush to the body. A solution made thin and strained can be applied with a spray pump to the tops. This will destroy many of the enemies of fruit and fruit trees that find a breeding place and winter harbor on the trees.

Bruises from any cause that deadens the bark make an ideal spot for the propagation of the borer. In the dead bark is where the egg is deposited and by nature's law is brought into life and his work of destruction is commenced and done. Carry a roll of grafting wax and a roll of old cotton and twine to do up any bruise or break of bark as soon as done, before the wood or bark becomes dried, and it will grow fast again, but if left until the sap in the wood and bark becomes dried you will have a scar that will take two or three years to grow over and if the borer gets a lodgment there it may be a lasting blemish. It's better not to break or bruise the trees, but accidents will occur, and the remedy should be applied to save the blemish. Wax a bruise, if the bark is not broken; if broken, put the bark back and wax and wind with cloth and tie fast.—American Agriculturist.

Mineral Constituents of Plants.

A correspondent wishes an explanation of how mineral substances get into plants, that is, as he expresses it, "Minerals that are insoluble except in acid." Insoluble mineral matter cannot get into the plant. But the mineral elements of a plant are carried into it in solution. If it is a mineral that water can dissolve, wholly or partially, the particles that are held in solution are carried by the charged water through the roots into the tree. If salt is added to water in an unglazed earthen dish, like a flower pot, with the hole in the bottom stopped up, it will be found in time that there is a deposit on the outside of the pot, and, if tasted, it will be found to be salty. The moisture has gone through the sides of the pot and carried the salt, with which the water is charged, with it. This is what water does with soluble minerals when it enters the roots of a plant. There is, too, at the end of roots an acid that aids the water in dissolving minerals. It is not true, however, that the water takes into the plant all the minerals which it holds in solution. In the economy of nature, the roots, in a natural condition, permit the entrance into the plant of only such minerals as the plant needs.

There is an important lesson in this connection, for the tiller of the soil to learn. We all know that moisture is necessary for the growth of plants, but if it is necessary for dissolving mineral plant food in the soil, it will be seen that too much or too little moisture in the soil must be injurious to the plant because in the one case the solution will be too weak and in the other it will be too strong, or fail to take up as much mineral as the plant needs. To illustrate: If we place just a little salt in a glass of water, the water will have but a slightly saltish taste. If a plant was in need of salt that weak solution would not supply it with what it required. Now if we keep adding salt to that water there will ultimately be a deposit of salt at the bottom of the glass. There will not be enough water to hold all the salt that we have added. We have too much salt for the water. The tiller of the soil, therefore, can see that if his soil contains too much water at any time, the sooner he drains it, the sooner he will feed the crops as they should be fed; and if he is irrigating he will have no trouble in perceiving that too much water will have the effect that we have mentioned. The necessity of frequent cultivation and of keeping a soil mulch upon the surface in times of drouth will also be apparent. The use of water is not its entire function in relation to plant growth, but it is an important one.—Agricultural Epitomist.

Poultry Notes.

Never allow the mother hen to take her brood out in the early morning.

Brooder chicks should be allowed to go out during the warm portion of the day.

Hens will lay more eggs when confined in yards than when having free range.

Do not let the little chicks get chilled or wet. Either means death for them.

Do not cross pure bred poultry. There is enough variety now for all practical purposes.

One breed is enough to keep on any farm. More than that usually results in neglect of all.

The time to cure a sick hen is wasted. If she lingers longer than two days it is better to kill her.

Do not put over eleven eggs under a setting hen in the early part of the season. Later thirteen will not be too many.

If there are any rats around the poultry house get rid of them before the chickens hatch. Otherwise they will soon make way with every brood that is put out.

Remarkable Coincidences.

There is a man at the head of one of the government bureaus at Washington who is almost entitled to a certificate of twinship with President McKinley by reason of a remarkable chain of coincidences that mark their early careers. Captain Newton M. Brooks, superintendent of the foreign mails, and for over a score of years identified with the administration of that system, is the man. Both of them were born on the 29th of January, 1843. Each was the seventh child of his parents. Both were engaged in their studies at educational institutions when the war broke out and both enlisted as privates at the age of 18. Both carried their muskets for 14 months and then received commissions. Both came out of the service as captains in actual rank. The president, however, came out in 1865 undisabled, while the other mourned a leg at his discharge six months earlier. Then, too, both had served under General S. S. Carroll of this city, though at different times. And there is a striking similitude at other steps in their early lives. — Washington Star.

Family Honors Go to the Dead.

In China when an honor is conferred on a family it is the ancestors and not the descendants who share the glory. If a Chinaman, for his merits, receives a title of nobility, his son can never inherit it or have the right to use any but an inferior title. Thus the nobility in the family goes on diminishing from generation to generation till it finally becomes extinct.

AVOIDED A WAR.

Mc Saved Lafayette's Wife from the Guillotine.

How many people know that Mme. Lafayette, wife of the great French general who was the friend of the United States, was saved from the guillotine by the wife of the author of the Monroe Doctrine? An old chronicle—which spells the general's name "La Fayette," and not "Lafayette"—gives this account of what it calls "A Touching Incident":

When Mr. Monroe was minister from the United States at Paris, and when General Lafayette was confined in the prison at Olmutz by the Emperor of Austria, word was brought to the minister that Mme. Lafayette had been thrown into prison and that she would be guillotined in a few days. Her mother and grandmother had died by the guillotine.

Paris was in the hands of the mob and Mr. Monroe alone could save her, and could save her only by appealing to and arousing the sympathies of the people. The destruction of life had been so great in every state of society where opulence was perceptible that in order to avoid certain death all luxuries and splendor had been laid aside by the wealthy, who, instead of riding in their splendid carriages, either went on foot or rode in the miserable hired cabs of Paris.

It, therefore, created a great sensation when the splendid equipage of the American minister appeared at the gate of the prison, and Mrs. Monroe told the keeper that she had come to see the wife of General Lafayette. The news spread in all directions and before Mrs. Monroe drove away from the prison thousands of people had gathered about her carriage, "and," says the old chronicler, "the feelings elicited by the meeting of two such females in such a situation arrested the axe of the executioner and eventually set the captive free."

The feelings of Colonel Monroe during the absence of his wife cannot be realized. It may be asked, Why did he not accompany her? It would not have been politic for him to have done so—might, indeed, have thwarted the accomplishment of the purpose in view.

When Mrs. Monroe met Mme. Lafayette the poor Frenchwoman was "in a state of perfect frenzy, supposing that she was about to be led out to execution. When she found herself embraced by the lady of the American minister within the walls of the gloomy prison from which, only a few days before, her mother and grandmother had been led forth to execution, it was a long time before she could realize her situation."

Mrs. Monroe not only assured her that she should be saved, but said that Mr. Monroe "had determined to risk all, if necessary, to accomplish her deliverance."

The plain inference is that the execution of Mme. Lafayette would have provoked a war between France and the United States.

Mean Man's Mean Trick.

It was a mean trick, of course, and some day she will doubtless get even with him.

She saw him take a piece of paper from his pocket, carefully fold it up, put it in an envelope, and then place the envelope in one of the far corners of the drawer of the library table.

"What's that?" she asked.

"Oh, nothing of any importance," he replied.

Now, if he had simply thrown it carelessly into the drawer she would have thought nothing of it, but the care he took to put it clear over in the far corner and the fact that he seemed ill at ease after he found that his action had been observed, aroused her curiosity. She wondered what it was, and she reasoned with herself that he had said it was "nothing of importance," so he would have nobody but himself to blame if she took a look at it. She was justified in inferring from his words that there was no reason why she should not. And this is what she read scribbled on a piece of paper.

"I'll bet you a new hat your curiosity will not permit you to let this alone."

It was a terrible predicament in which to place a woman. How could she claim the new hat without giving herself away?—Chicago Post.

Funeral Simplicity.

Some years ago there met in New York City five men, all veterans of the war with Mexico and of the civil war. They were all West Pointers, and while not all classmates, had spent some time at the academy together. The discussion turned upon ostentation at funerals. One of the veterans said that the widow and children were often impoverished in order that the father might have a so-called fitting funeral. Colonel Turnley, who was one of those present, said:

"Boys, I was a carpenter before I was a cadet. If you will agree to use them I will make with my own hands a coffin for each of you, and one for myself. I'll use pine boards, nails, and a little paint, and some leather for the hinges of that which goes over the face. The cost of each coffin will be well within $5."

The old soldiers entered into a compact then and there to use the Turnley coffins. They were all made by the colonel's own hands, and shipped to their destinations, the maker retaining one for his own use.—Chicago Times-Herald.

What Will the Next Generation Whittle.

The time when Oregon and Washington forests will have to bear the brunt of the country's timber needs may be upon us sooner than we think. According to the American Lumberman's annual review the stock of white pine lumber in the country continues to decrease rapidly. The stock at the mills is now 2,278,000,000 net, a decrease of 766,000,000 feet from that of last year. Going back through the previous years it appears that the present stock of white pine is the smallest since 1890, while at the same time the white pine resources of the country are over 25 per cent. less than they were at that time. This shrinkage of the forest area already means a shortage of 2,000,000,000 feet which must be annually filled by the substitution of Georgia yellow pine and Oregon and Washington fir. It has been estimated that the whole remaining area of white pine forests will be practically denuded within five years.

"DOLLARS MEX."

The Common Currency of a Great Part of the Far East.

Reports of recent military operations in the Philippines include statements that the American troops have captured from the insurgents so many thousand Mexican dollars. Such statements must not be interpreted as mere verbal artifices to magnify the importance of the exploit by using a small unit of value in reckoning the booty. The public are thoroughly familiar by this time with the distinction so common among the Americans at Manila between "dollars Mex" and "dollars gold," and the fact that one of the former is worth less than half one of the latter, but the treasury of Aguinaldo was, in all probability, stocked neither with paper money nor with coin of the United States mints, but with actual Mexican silver dollars.

The Mexican silver dollar is, in fact, the popular currency, not only of the Philippine Islands, but also to a large extent of the Chinese coasts, of the Malay Archipelago, and, outside of such great mercantile centres as Singapore, of the Straits Settlements, as well as of Japan. Hong Kong and Canton have in general fallen in with the pecuniary habits of the British colonists and traders, and Japan has a very convenient currency of her own, in harmony with advanced western ideas. But the yellow races of the East, as races, have taken a strong fancy to the white metal of Mexico.

The persistence in the preference is more easily understood than the manner in which the preference first gained its hold. A New York financier explained the original fact partly on æsthetic grounds. "The design of the Mexican dollar," he said, "is a bold and striking one, and it impressed those Orientals from the time the coin first began to circulate among them. That, I suppose, was more than 50 years ago. At that period there was very little trade between this country and the Philippines or any of those far Eastern regions. Of course, among the population of the islands, the natives not being in an advanced stage of commercial civilization, the convenience of English small change was not apparent. Not being informed of the financial stability of of the British Empire, they could not be expected to appreciate the stamp that gives the shilling most of its value; what they did appreciate was the bigness and the weight and purity of the Mexican dollar, as well as the imposing appearance of it.

"As to how the demand came to be so well supplied, that is easy to understand when you remember that most of the silver in the world was then produced in Mexico, and that the coinage of it was free and unlimited. As the traders in the far East wanted Mexican dollars, it was to the interest of the Mexican mines to export their output in that form, and it cost them nothing to have the stamp put on. It was only necessary for them to keep the coining of their dollars down below the point of glutting the market; in other words, it would have been possible to ship so much coined silver to the East, either direct through London or through London by way of New York, that the premium on it would fall.

"There is a premium on the Mexican silver dollar in that part of the world even now. Here, for instance, is a cable from Manila, dated Jan. 12, which quotes the Mexican dollars at 42 1-2 cents, gold. According to the current price of silver, the Mexican dollar was worth at par about 44 cents on that date. The difference is accounted for by local preference for Mexican dollars. The insurgents in the Philippines were well advised in using that coinage, because it is the coinage which the people of the country understand and like. If they were educated bankers, they would know that American money takes up less room in proportion to its real value, and they might admire the design of our dollars and dollar bills as much as the Mexican design; as it is, they don't thoroughly understand the theory of token money and national credit. And so Mexico goes on exporting her 40,000,000 silver dollars annually to be the popular currency of the far East."

Knew What She Wanted.

There was a tall and haughty young woman in a provision store recently, a pretty girl who wore a smart tailor gown and an air of great importance. It was obvious to the least observant on-looker that she took herself and her mission very seriously.

"Have you a nice 'roundhouse' steak?" she asked the butcher sweetly, when he came forward to wait upon her.

The man's face assumed a beefy hue itself, and he looked well-nigh apoplectic as he replied, "No, miss, I haven't a round steak."

"Then send me a 'porterloin.' About seven pounds would be enough I should think."

"Tenderloin is the best cut, miss; suppose you take that?" suggested the clerk, his face growing still redder.

"Kindly send me what I ordered," said the young woman with great dignity; "my mother-in-law is entirely conversant with the cuts of beef, and I am quite sure that's the name she told me; and send 10 pounds of rice with it."

Then she walked out of the shop with the pleased smile on her face of one who has found housekeeping the merest child's play, while the spectators murmured "bride" to each other under their breath.—Baltimore News.

Ostriches in South Africa.

Ostriches have only recently been domesticated in South Africa. Only 80 were in captivity in 1865; ten years later there were 21,751 being cared for in Cape Colony, and in 1897, 237,960. The true wild bird still exists north of the Vaal and Orange River, but is rapidly diminishing in numbers, being eagerly hunted for its feathers, which demand a higher price than those of the domesticated brethren.

GAVE BOY A TONIC CAPSULE.

Reward for the Honesty and Cheek of a Zealous Bellboy.

From the New Orleans Times-Democrat: A well-known drug drummer, who is paying his regular holiday visit to New Orleans, took the train last Monday evening for a little side trip to Baton Rouge and in the hurry of his departure left a handsome bone-handled umbrella hanging on a hook in the lobby of the hotel. It was a tempting prize, but probably every kleptomaniac who saw it supposed the owner was seated near at hand. At any rate, it remained undisturbed and was still there yesterday when the drummer returned. "By the way," he remarked, after he exchanged greetings with the clerk, "I've managed somehow to lose my new bone-handled umbrella. Have any of you seen such a thing lying around the office?" A quick-witted bellboy heard the question and, glacing around, saw the missing article hanging within a foot of his head. Supposing it had been there for only a few moments, he promptly grasped the ferrule. "Is this the one?" he inquired. "Yes!" exclaimed the traveler, delighted, "and I must say I'm surprised nobody has nipped it!" "Aw, they couldn't do that," replied the bell boy, "I've been holdin' on to it fer y' ever since y' hung it up." The drug drummer stopped with his hand half way down his pocket and a whimsical smile overspread his countenance. "Well," he said slowly, "I was intending to give you half a dollar, but if you've been holding that umbrella for three consecutive days you're more in need of a tonic. Here is a capsule of quinine and iron." The gloom which settled down upon the bell bench might have been hewn with an ax.

"The Only Thing That Gives Relief."

Mrs. M. E. Latimer, Biloxi, Miss., had an itchy breaking out on her skin, and she sends $1 for two boxes, saying: "Tetterine is the only thing that gives me relief." New Estimate of Geologic Time.

An ingenious theory for the estimation of the time of the various geological periods has been produced by an engineer whose work on western railroads takes him into primitive country. He says that in one great depression in Wyoming the trees have been recording the rate of erosion of the slopes for about 300 years so accurately that the data to be obtained by a careful study of them will be a factor of extreme importance in enabling scientists to convert geological time into years. While he has not yet had time to collect these data properly, he makes the rough deduction that, according to their records, the Pliocene and Pleistocene periods would represent about one and one-half millions of years, and that, on this basis, the Cenizoic time would be about four millions of years. This would mean that all geological time from the beginning of the Cambrian epoch would be sixty-four millions of years.

Various devices have been used in Europe for the ventilation of tunnels. In some cases oil burning or electric locomotives have been substituted for the trip through the tunnel, and in other cases artificial ventilation has been used.

Tells About Her Daughter's Illness and How She was Relieved—Two Letters to Mrs. Pinkham.

"MRS. PINKHAM:—I write to tell you about my daughter. She is nineteen years old and is flowing all the time, and has been for about three months. The doctor does her but very little good, if any. I thought I would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I want your advice before beginning its use. I have become very much alarmed about her, as she is getting so weak."—MRS. MATILDA A. CAMP, Manchester Mill, Macon, Ga., May 21, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It affords me great pleasure to tell you of the benefit my daughter has received from the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After beginning the use of your medicine she began to mend rapidly and is now able to be at her work. Her menses are regular and almost painless. I feel very thankful to you and expect to always keep your Vegetable Compound in my house. It is the best medicine I ever knew. You have my permission to publish this letter if you wish, it may be the means of doing others good."—MRS. MATILDA A. CAMP, Manchester Mill, Macon, Ga., September 18, 1899.

THE CHRONICLE.

Democratic at all Times and Under all Circumstances--Consequently Opposed to Monopolies.

VOL. XV. COLUMBIANA, SHELBY COUNTY, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, APRIL 12, 1900. NO. 17.

Easter Carols

Sing, that the winter is over,
Sing for the coming spring,
For the showers and flowers and beautiful hours,
And the flash of the robin's wing.
Sing, for the gladness of Easter;
Lift up your voices and sing.

Deep in the heart of the forest,
Down at the roots of the trees,
There is stir of the violets coming,
And smile of anemones,
And many a kiss of fragrance
Goes out to the fragrant breeze.

Sing, for the coming of Easter,
And many a rare surprise
Of beauty and bloom awaiting
The looking of happy eyes.
Sing, for the Easter sunshine
And the blue benignant skies.

And carry the tall white lilies,
And the roses brimming sweet,
To the church where aisle and altar
Are sought by hastening feet.
Sing, to the Lord of the Easter,
Who is coming, your songs to meet.
—Margaret E. Sangster.

Afar and near us, the sound of bells!
The air is throbbing, from sea to sea,
With the passionate thrill of a song that tells
The glory that was, and that is to be!
Echoing sweet, over wilds and dells,
From tower and steeple, from street and town—
From lonely villages nestled down
At the foot of the mountains, rough and bare,

Ah! the wilderness blossoms today anew—
The heart's bleak desert is glad again;
And roses bloom where the brambles grew—
The earth has forgotten her grief and pain
In this benediction of Heavenly calm!
Hark! floating out on the listening air
The myriad cadences of prayer;
Praise and ritual, chant and psalm,
Swelling the world-wide Easter song
That dies, in a dream, the clouds among!
—Madeline S. Bridges, in the Woman's Home Companion.

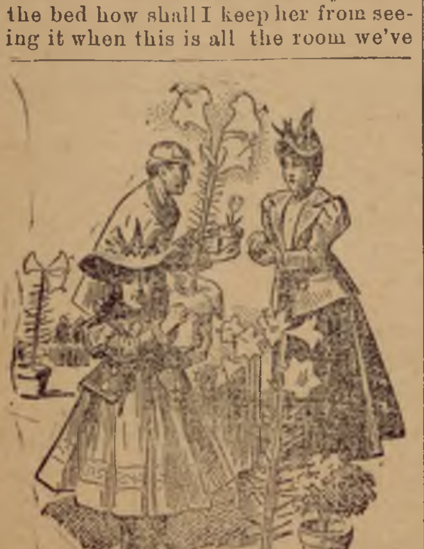
Sweet-One-Darling

SWEET-ONE-DARLING was almost the only sweet thing in the whole neighborhood, or so the older sister, who was father, mother and all to her, believed. Her real name was Marie Eunis, but Sister Annie had long ago decided that such a name was not nearly pretty enough for her darling, and so Sweet-One-Darling had come to be.

Opposite to the shabby old frame house in which Sweet-One-Darling lived stood the "settlement house," in which a number of pleasant people lived together and who knew her very well. Sister Annie was busy all the time stitching away at the heavy garments which earned bread and butter and clothing for her darling and herself. Sweet-One-Darling had never walked a step in her life; she expected never to walk unless the mysterious operation about which the "settlement" doctor had gravely talked to Sister Annie became possible and proved a success. But Sweet-One-Darling enjoyed her share of the pleasant things of this world, nevertheless, but her "Easter miracle" was the best of all, she thought.

It all began with the lily. And the lily began with the bulb which came to Sweet-One-Darling in a Christmas box. The bulb was to be planted in some good earth, the directions on the envelope containing it said, and then it was to be set in the dark for some time. Under this and other treatment it was promised that a glorious white flower would ultimately bloom from it, and the time for this blooming Sweet-One-Darling had decided should be Easter Day. But as Easter Day came on the lily stalk, sprouting from a cigar box full of earth, placed her in a puzzling predicament.

"You see," she explained to the kindly "settlement lady," who, next to Sister Annie, Sweet-One-Darling considered the loveliest person in all the world, "I want to s'prise Sister Annie with the lily, all blooming, on Easter morning, but I'm afraid if it stays under the bed all day and every day till then it won't bloom as it should. And if it doesn't stay under the bed how shall I keep her from seeing it when this is all the room we've got, and she sews here all day, and how shall I manage to s'prise her?"



BUYING THE LILY FOR THE "MIRACLE."

The "settlement lady" smoothed the anxious furrows from the small forehead with tender fingers, and she kissed the little face beneath it consolingly, but she did not suggest that, as Sister Annie moved the box from under the bed and back again every time she swept the room, she probably was too well aware of its existence already to be greatly "s'prised" at anything which happened to it, nor did she tell Sweet-One-Darling that she feared it would be impossible to bring the flower to bloom in time for Easter Sunday. She merely offered, instead, to take the lily over to the "settlement house" with her and give it all the chances for perfection which careful tending and the sunniest window across the street could provide. But Sweet-One Darling had set her heart upon caring for that lily herself, and she could not make up her mind to part with it, even in order to increase its possibilities of blooming splendidly. So under the bed the box with the growing lily remained, save on the semi-weekly occasions when Sister Annie carried her work back to the shop.

One afternoon, when the "settlement lady" was sitting with Sweet-One-Darling while Sister Annie was away, the child asked: "Do miracles ever happen nowadays?"

"Wiser people than either of us have pondered and discussed that question very much of late, little girl," she said. "What made you think of it just then?"

The bright eyes of Sweet-One-Darling travelled slowly to the lily box on the narrow window sill.

"Because," she answered, quaintly, "it seems as if that lily isn't going to bloom for Easter unless a miracle happens, and I want it to bloom anyway. Sister Annie would be so pleased if it did," the thin hands clasping themselves ecstaticully as the child considered the possibility—"and I should be so disappointed if it didn't."

The lady beside her was silent for a few minutes. Before she had fully decided what to say in reply Sweet-One-Darling put a question to her.

"How long does it take for a miracle to happen?" she asked. Again the lady smiled.

"Some of the greatest and most wonderful miracles about which the Bible tells happened in a moment or so," she replied. Sweet-One-Darling smiled happily almost before she had finished speaking and curled herself up more comfortably on the pillow.

"Then I needn't begin to be anxious about it until Easter morning," she remarked, with a peaceful return of her quiet eyes to the morsel of blue sky and the speck of white cloud that peeped in at the window. "I shall say a prayer about it every night and morning until the day before Easter and perhaps the miracle will happen for me. Do people ever see miracles happen?"

"Not often, I think, dearie," her friend told her, but Sweet-One-Darling was not a whit disappointed.

"I think it would be nicer not to," she decided, happily. "I should just like to come upon it suddenly, you know. To go to bed on Saturday night with the lily just as it is"—and it certainly did look as though a miracle would be necessary to enable the stunted, shriveled, almost blighted stalk to come to fragrant bloom and beauty either on Easter day or at any other time—"and to wake up on Easter morning with the scent of the lovely flower filling all the room and the beautiful thing just before me. Then I'll lean over and wake Sister Annie," went on Sweet-One-Darling, in whose mind and imagination the entire affair had long since passed from the realm of romance to that of actuality, "and then, oh me! oh my! how pleased she will be. Do you have to tell people when you're planning miracles?" she finished eagerly.

"I shouldn't tell any one," advised the settlement lady," her eyes moist with sympathy and affection, so Sweet-One-Darling kept her secret all to herself and only smiled wisely when on Easter eve Sister Annie tucked her up, almost too excited and happy to sleep, in the little bed by the window.

Just as a bright shaft of sunshine streaming in through the window touched her face she awoke on Easter morning. Trembling with excitement, yet blissfully certain, she turned toward the window, and there, right before her, gleaming in the sun and gently swaying in the little draught which came from the slightly opened window, was a perfect stalk of blossoming lilies. And as if to make assurance doubly sure the stalk was rooted in a nice earthenware pot, and the pot was daintily wrapped in spotless white tissue paper and tied with white ribbon.

With an ecstatic little cry Sweet-One-Darling carried out the rest of her brief but carefully planned programme, awoke Sister Annie, who honestly professed utter ignorance of the manner in which the shriveled lily stalk had been replaced by the lovely, blooming one which the "settlement lady" and her little girl had bought—although she might possibly have then suspected the reason of the "settlement lady's" unusual request that she leave her door unlocked the evening before—and enjoyed herself that Easter day as she had never done before.—Ethel Maude Colson, in the Chicago Record.

The Easter Egg.

Eggs, eggs, eggs! Big eggs, little eggs, round eggs, long eggs, sugar eggs, paper eggs, real eggs, with no sham about them! Blue eggs, red eggs, yellow eggs, green eggs, purple eggs! Eggs here, eggs there, eggs everywhere, in the store windows, on the street corners, in the parlors, on the tables!

What does it mean, anyhow, this avalanche of eggs once every year?

"They are Easter eggs?" Yes, to be sure, that is plain enough. But why eggs at Easter any more than at Christmas, or New Year, or the Fourth of July, or on any other day in the year? Of course there must be one reason for the almost universal observance of Easter in this one way; must be and is.

But we must go a long way back over the beaten paths of past ages to look for it. The very name of Easter comes from that of the heathen goddess of the Germans, Eastre. She was the goddess of the morning or east, and also of the springtime. The ancient Germans kept her festival in the spring by kindling bonfires and by many other rites, chief among which was the giving of presents to each other, the favorite gift being eggs colored or otherwise ornamented. The north Germans and the Saxons were especially devoted to the worship of Eastre, and from the latter nation it was introduced into England.

Easter Decorations

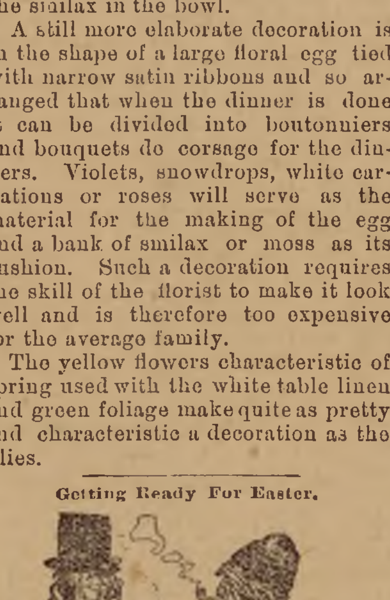
EASTER'S table service should be made as characteristic of the season as possible. To do this the colors of the decorations should be thoroughly in accord with Easter traditions—that is, they should be white, with a few touches of green or yellow for the sake of contrast. Yellow jonquils and white lilies are the flowers of Easter and they may be used for decorative purposes either in pots or with the cut flowers arranged in bowls or vases.

The most spotless linen should cover the table, the table center and the doilies being white embroidered in green. The simplest table decoration of flowers consists of a small glass bowl filled with lilies of the valley. A more elaborate one consists of a larger bowl filled with smilax so that tendrils of the plant fall over the side of the bowl and trail over the tablecloth and great white Easter lilies alternating with the smilax in the bowl.

A still more elaborate decoration is in the shape of a large floral egg tied with narrow satin ribbons and so arranged that when the dinner is done it can be divided into boutonniers and bouquets do corsage for the diners. Violets, snowdrops, white carnations or roses will serve as the material for the making of the egg and a bank of smilax or moss as its cushion. Such a decoration requires the skill of the florist to make it look well and is therefore too expensive for the average family.

The yellow flowers characteristic of spring used with the white table linen and green foliage make quite as pretty and characteristic a decoration as the lilies.

Getting Ready For Easter.



Silas Clone—"Wa-al, by gosh! Bill Smith's yellow hen laid a hand-painted egg."

Silas Lence—"By gosh! you don't say so."

Silas Clone—"Yes, sir; by gosh!"

Silas Lence—"Wa-al, by gosh!"—Judge.

Easter in the Children's Ward.

Over the still gray sky the glory of dawn was breaking;
Slowly the pale little faces turned on their pillows, waking.

Not for these the sweet spring morning over the meadows;
Only the straight white cots, and the sunlit wall, and the shadows.

Not for these the aisles and the arches fair with wonder;
Not for these the chanting of choirs to the organ's thunder.

Not for these the flashing of wings in rainbow splendor;
Yet were the Easter angels near with a greeting tender.

White and pure they bowed in the sunlight's sudden glory;
Sweet on the solemn silence they breathed the Easter story.

Wan little faces flushed, smiling from pain's long prison,
Up to the angel lilies, answering, "Christ is risen!"
—Mabel Earle.

Easter in Turkey.

On Holy Thursday in Turkey every Christian woman boils a number of eggs with cochineal for the approaching Easter festival, and also bakes a quantity of cakes and sweet biscuit. At the hour when the Bible is read she takes as many eggs as there are members in the household and one over, places them in a napkin and carries them to church, where she leaves them until Sunday.

The extra egg is placed before the "eikonostacion," or place of the holy pictures, and is afterward kept as a sovereign remedy against all kinds of ills.

Many of these eggs have traced upon them in elegant characters texts of Scripture and other sacred words besides the date.

EASTER MORNING

The crocus with blossoms of yellow
The green of the grass-plot is gilding,
And the robins in orchard and garden
Their little brown houses are building,
The tulip is lighting its torches,
The daffodil bursting from prison;
For this is the morning of Easter,
And the Lord has arisen.

In the church with its mantle of ivy,
The lilies are sweet on the altar;
The organ is lending its music
To the words of the psalm-book and psalter.
The robes of the saints on the windows
In a glory of color are blended,
Ruby, and sapphire, and topaz,
For the Lord has ascended.

O heart! that is burdened with sorrow,
And soul that is weary with weeping,
There's a rent in the butterfly's coffin,
And the buds of the rose are but sleeping.
Look up to the country celestial,
The grave is no more than its portal.
For the Lord on the morning of Easter
Has made us immortal!

A RAGING FLOOD IN TEXAS TOWN

Great Dam of the Colorado River Swept Away.

THIRTY PEOPLE DROWNED

Heavy Damage to Property Along the Big River In Other Sections---Disasters Caused by Rains.

Saturday night the city of Austin, Texas, was in darkness with a raging river one mile wide and swollen far beyond its natural banks, roaring and surging all through the lower portion of the town, having spread destruction and death in its wake.

In addition to the vast loss of property interests, it is calculated that between thirty and forty lives have been sacrificed, and the reports coming in from the tributary country do not tend to improve matters.

The flood was not unlike the disastrous Johnstown flood some years ago in that a raging river, already swollen far beyond its capacity, bore too heavily upon an immense dam spanning the river at Austin, breaking the same and letting loose a reservoir of water thirty miles long, half a mile wide and sixty feet deep, to aid in carrying destruction down the valleys of the Colorado river.

The great dam in the Colorado river gave way at noon to the enormous pressure of water and debris and with a roar and crash swept the valleys below the city, wrecking the immense light and power plant and drowning eight workmen.

Three days before it began raining very hard at Austin, the storm extending north along the watersheds of the Colorado river. The precipitation continued until Saturday morning and as a finale the downfall averaged six inches within an hour. All this vast quantity of water along the watersheds of the Colorado river rapidly swelled the current until at 8 o'clock the river, which had been rising steadily, was a raging torrent.

The crisis came shortly after 11 o'clock when suddenly, with a report like the roar of the ocean, a great wedge, twenty-five feet high, 500 feet wide and about eight feet thick, rolled out of the center section of the dam, down the face of the sixty-foot depth into the river below.

This left a yawning gap in the very middle of the dam, which through the debris and water fiercely poured. While the flood, already raging, was threatening everything in its path, this sudden breaking of the dam but served to add to the catastrophe. The released water poured into the power house, catching eight employes at work, drowning all of them instantly.

It is estimated that more than 100 houses have been destroyed and the loss to property will be great, independent of the light and power plant, costing $1,500,000. The breaking of the dam engulfed the old water company's plant below the city and it is now lying fifteen feet under water, while the city is in darkness and without water.

Reports from points below Austin are to the effect that the flood has been most disastrous, and the breaking of the dam has occasioned many thousand of dollars' worth of loss to property. According to reports received it is believed that at least thirty lives were lost.

LATER ADVICES.

Sunday fully 30,000 people gathered at the dam and power house to witness the ruins of the plant which cost the city one and three-quarter millions of dollars a few years ago. The waters of the Colorado river were still plunging and foaming around the wreck, eating away the big pile of granite which once formed the dam as though it was nothing more than chalk rock.

Reports from the neighboring country were to the effect that everything was under water. In Williamson county, north of Austin, railroad bridges and trackage have been laid waste and all trains stopped running.

The country tributary to the Colorado river all the way down its course is being inundated, and while it is believed that the worst is over, the loss as estimated so far will exceed some $3,000,000, counting Austin as the largest loser.

Fortunately the list of drowned is limited to those reported in the Associated Press dispatch of Saturday, as it seems the only drownings reported were at Austin when the dam broke and caught the victims unawares.

Reports from several sections of central and south Texas are to the effect that a large acreage is under water and much damage has been attendant upon property and live stock.

GOES OVER THE LIMIT.

Agricultural Appropriation Bill Carries More Than Four Millions.

The agricultural appropriation bill reported to the house Saturday carries $4,116,400, being $390,778 more than the law for the current year. An additional allowance of $40,000 for seed distribution is granted upon the petition of 225 members of the house, $60,000 is appropriated for iron warning towers for the weather bureau in place of the present wooden structures.

EXECUTION WAS LEGAL.

Garroting of Murderers In Porto Rico Interests Officials.

Beyond the mere announcement that five criminals were to be executed at Ponce Saturday for murder and outrage, General Davis, the governor of Porto Rico, made no representation to the war department on this subject. The officials are concerned about the situation, mainly because of the method chosen for the execution of these criminals—the garrote.

But it is explained that neither for the enforcement of the death penalty, nor for the repulsive method of execution are the military authorities responsible. These are the results of the continuance in the island of the Spanish legal methods, according to the officials there. Some of the Washington officials heartily wish that it were otherwise in this particular case. There is, however, a marked indisposition to take any official action that will tend to incite the latent jealousy of the islanders over any encroachment by the national government upon their cherished customs and laws, hence the hesitancy to act in the present instance by commuting the sentence of the criminals.

HAVE HISTORICAL NAMES.

Various Batteries on Southern Coast Designated By War Department.

The war department has given historical names to the batteries forming the new sea coast defenses. Those at southern points are:

Port Royal, S. C., on St. Helena, Fort Demont.

Savannah harbor, Georgia, at Fort Screven, Battery Habersham; at same fort, Battery Brumby.

Key West, at Fort Taylor, Battery DeLeon; at same fort, Battery Osceola; same fort, Battery Seminole.

Tampa bay, Florida, Egmont key, Fort Dade; on Mullet key, Fort De Soto.

Pensacola bay at fort Pickens, Battery Worth; same fort, Battery Cullom.

Mobile bay, at Fort Morgan, Battery Dearborn; at same fort, Battery Bower.

PANACEA FOR TROUBLES.

Suicide Among Soldiers Away From Home Seems to Be Epidemic.

According to advices received by the New York World, from May 1, 1899, to April 1, 1900, there have been 83 suicides in the armies of the United States, nearly every one due to insanity.

During the same period nearly one thousand soldiers have been shipped from their various posts in Hawaii, Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines to the military insane asylum in Washington.

Of these about 90 per cent have come from the Philippines.

Since December 1 last there have been 29 suicides there, all due to insanity.

NO BOER RESOLUTION

Is Allowed to Run the Gantlet In the House of Representatives.

In the house Saturday Mr. Richardson, of Tennessee, asked unanimous consent for the consideration of the following resolution:

"Resolved, That this house views with deep interest the heroic struggle of the republics of South Africa to maintain their independence and hereby tender them our most profound sympathy in their unequal but gallant struggle."

"That resolution should go to the committee on foreign affairs," observed Mr. Payne, of New York, the floor leader of the majority.

"Did I understand the gentleman to object?" asked Mr. Richardson.

"I did," replied Mr. Payne.

BOERS BREAK FOR LIBERTY.

Fourteen Make Successful Escape From Simonstown Jail.

A determined attempt to escape was made Saturday by the Boer prisoners at Simonstown and 14 of them succeeding in getting away.

In the confusion one of the prisoners was killed and another was wounded. One man was recaptured, but about 14 are missing.

Otis Will Soon Be With Us.

General Otis has been formally relieved of the command of the United States forces in the Philippines and of the Eighth army corps, and is scheduled to return to the United States this month.

GOOLSBY BOYS HANGED.

Suffer Death Penalty For the Murder of Young Daniel Mims.

Friday two negroes, Lewis and King Goolsby, brothers, the latter only about fifteen years of age, expiated on the gallows at Baxley, Ga., the murder of Mr. Daniel Mims. The details of their crime are well remembered. They murdered Mr. Mims, a young farmer, and badly beat Mrs. Mims for the purpose of robbery.

Nineteen minutes after the trap fell the negroes were pronounced dead by the physicians. They both faced death fearlessly and seemed wholly indifferent as to their fate.

SHIPPING STRUCTURAL IRON.

Carnegie Company Doing Their Part In Rebuilding of Auditorium.

The Carnegie company, who received from the Gillette-Herzog Manufacturing Company of Minneapolis, the contract for structural iron to be used in the construction of the convention hall at Kansas City, have commenced shipment of the material. As far as the Carnegie company is concerned, the building can be completed on time.

ON AMERICAN SOIL GARROTE IS USED

Old Spanish Custom Still In Force on Island of Porto Rico.

MURDERERS STRANGLED

Business In Ponce Suspended and Crowds Witness Affair.

According to advices from Porto Rico, the five men, Simeon Rodriguez, Carlos Pacheco, Hermogenes Pacheco, Eugenio Rodriguez and Rosalio Santiago, convicted of the murder in October, 1898, of Prudencio Mendoza, at Yuaco, after criminally assaulting the wife and daughters of their victim, who were compelled to dance about the corpse, were executed Saturday by the garrote during the forenoon of Saturday at a spot about a mile from the jail.

The great publicity of the garroting exhibition, with the black-robed condemned men in open carts, the slow procession, the entreaties of the priests and the braggadocio manners of the executioners, with the later exhibition of the corpses to the assembled thousands, made a horrible spectacle.

Business was suspended and large but orderly crowds lined the streets and surrounded the elevated platform upon which the execution took place. The policing was perfect. A company of infantry was held ready in the vicinity, but its services were not needed.

The executioner's cart led the procession. The condemned men were manacled hands and feet and wore black caps and robes which were adjusted about them by the chief executioner, who told the men to be brave. Eugene Rodriguez resisted the executioner and in the scuffle his clothing was torn. Before he was subdued, five officers were required to overpower him. He addressed the crowds on his way to the platform, declaring his innocence and blaspheming and cursing everyone in spite of the efforts of the priests.

Some of the condemned men walked up, but others had to be carried to the platform, where they were seated and bound with their backs to the posts. As the executioner tightened the screws rapidly the bodies twitched for two or three minutes and then all was over.

The last body slipped from its fastening and fell to the floor an hour after the execution. The other bodies remained in position on the platform for four hours. Thousands of people, unmoved, viewed the spectacle and heard the speeches of three of the condemned men from the platform, but they refused to hear the speech of the executioner, who coolly paced the platform. The Pacheco brothers kissed each other farewell just before the execution.

The citizens of Ponce censure the authorities for permitting the Spanish mode of execution, although they favored the death penalty being inflicted.

The prominent Americans, however, think that the actual killing of the men was sure and quick and not inferior to hanging. The method of adjusting the garrote and the employment of human agency to complete the execution they consider bad.

ROBERTS REPORTS CASUALTIES.

Reddersburg Affair More Serious Than Was at First Thought.

A London special says: Lord Roberts reported to the war office as follows:

BLOEMFONTEIN, Friday, April 6.—The casualties at Reddersburg were:

Officers killed, Captain F. G. Casson and Lieutenant C. R. Barclay, both of the Northumberlands.

Wounded, two; captured, 8.

Non-commissioned officers and men killed, eight.

Wounded, 33. The rest were captured.

Our strength was 167 mounted infantry and 420 infantry. The enemy was said to be 3,200 strong, with five guns.

Paid Tributes To Bland.

The house session Saturday after 1 o'clock was devoted to paying tribute to the memory of the late Richard P. Bland, of Missouri.

NEGROES HAVE COTTON MILL.

Enterprise at Concord, N. C., Will Be Run Entirely By Colored People.

The machinery has all been placed in the Coleman cotton mill at Concord, N. C., and as soon as some delayed shafting arrives the mill will be put in operation.

This enterprise has attracted more or less attention both north and south on account of the fact that it is owned and will be operated by negroes. The president of the company, Warren Coleman, is one of the industrial leaders in this section, and has been working for some time on the mill scheme.

The Coleman mill contains 5,200 spindles, 140 looms and 22 cards, besides other necessary machinery.

MRS. DEWEY AN EPISCOPALIAN.

Report That Admiral's "Best" Half Had Quit Catholic Church.

A report was in circulation in Washington Sunday that Mrs. Dewey had left the Catholic church and had become an Episcopalian, but no verification of the rumor could be obtained. Rev. Mackin, who married the admiral and his wife, and who is rector of her church, refused to talk concerning the report.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBose, Editor.

Entered in the post-office at Columbiana Ala., as second class matter.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR CONGRESS.

The Chronicle is authorized to announce Hon. B. Dudley Williams, of Calhoun county, as a candidate for representative in the lower house of congress, from the Fourth congressional district of Alabama, subject to the action of the democratic district convention.

During the last quarter of '99 the number of foreigners who came to this country at New Yoak was 74,892, an increase of 23,000 over the same time in the year previous. Thus we grow.

Cuba, it seems, is no place for a man without money. The island is so full of Americans without resources that General Wood has asked the war department for authority to ship them back to this country on army transports.

Gov. Johnston appointed a negro constable in Hale county, and the Advertiser published a letter from the governor to his negro appointee requesting his aid to defeat Senator Morgan. Truly politics makes strange bed-fellows.

Mr. Bryan is said to have traveled 100,000 miles during his canvassing tours for the presidency. If he has paid his railroad fare at the regular rates of three cents a mile, this would mean an expenditure of $300,000, aside from hotel bills and other expenses.

Here's a story with a hidden moral. It was recently recounted that Mr. Gasgill, of Iola, Kan., had sold his wagon in order to get money to pay taxes on his dogs. Well, the other night one of the dogs overturned a lamp and burned Gasgill's house down.

Another rich find of iron ore is reported from the Anniston district, this time on the lands owned by I. M. Sproule, of Anniston, and Dr. Jones, the latter a citizen of Chicago, but who will soon come to Anniston to live. The ore is of the needle variety and very rich. Arrangements will be made as soon as Dr. Jones gets located in his new home to mine the product on a large scale.

The Philadelphia Record says that one of the greatest benefits of the war with Spain was the cement it poured into all the gaps betwixt North and South left open by the civil war. It was worth all the cost to see once more the veterans of the blue and the gray marching together to the front under the old flag. With the stolidity of the nation firmly established its invincibility was confirmed both in home and foreign estimation.

There is fun brewing, and lots of it, if we can read the signs in the political horizon aright. Chairman Vandiver has called a meeting of the old-time republicans which will be held here Saturday. It is intimated that it is the object of the meeting to put out a full county ticket and run it through to a finish. If this scheme should materialize there is certain to be one of the warmest campaigns in this county the oldest inhabitant ever saw. Chairman Vandiver evidently means business if he can get the necessary backing from those who were formerly his followers, but who strayed off into the populite ranks.

When Charles Sumner was the Senator from Massachusetts nobody ever asked when his term would expire. Everybody knew it would end only with his death. Massachusetts was so proud of Sumner that there was never any thought of opposing his reelection. I did not sympathize with Sumner's politics, but he was a great man, and the people of Massachusetts honored themselves in honoring him. John T. Morgan is the senator from Alabama. Is not Alabama proud of him? Is there a man in the senate that any state should be more proud of than Alabama should be of Morgan? He is now nearing the end of his fourth term. While he has always been a member of the minority, no senator in the majority has commanded more respect for his preeminent abilities, his staunch patriotism, his integrity, personal and political. To me it is incomprehensible that any democrat in Alabama should for a moment entertain any other name as a candidate for the senate in Morgan's place while he lives and possesses the mental vigor and physical energy that have given him a foremost rank in Washington. —W. D. Mann, in Town Topics.

AHEAD OF THE WORLD.

Reed & Hunt, strong financial brokers of New York, in their special market letter of the past week, have the following to say about the South:

The South is the coming country. Richer in natural resources—beyond doubt or comparison—than any other region of like area in the known world, yet the very nature and character of the wealth, requiring large capital, in money, scientific knowledge, organization and skilled labor, to form it for the uses of man, has forbidden its development until all the other foundations of the United States had been broadly and securely laid down. Now the leading agricultural country in the world, with a railroad system composing half the world's mileage, with only a beginning in industrial development yet leading the world in that department of human endeavor, the United States is in position to open up the great magazine of the South—and of the world—where nature herself has assembled the interdependent materials, coal, iron and other minerals, in the finest workshop known to man, the mountain country of the South, carrying with it the energetic climate of the North. The day of the South has come.

While the South is preparing for production, the Pacific coast states are preparing for trade across the Pacific with a population greater than Europe's.

The development of these two great sections of the republic, bound to go forward rapidly, will constitute a balance wheel to assure the steady and full running of all national work in agriculture, manufactures, mining and commerce.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

By F. W. Gist.

The trip here from Alabama to one who has made it before is rather tiresome, but the Southern Railway has developed its accommodations to the test. It seems to appreciate patronage, and gives excellent service.

One is impressed with the new cotton mills along the route, and the nice little towns built up around them. It is the talk of the country, the increase of manufacturing in the South in cotton goods, and people wonder why we didn't go at it before.

A story is told here by an Alabamian of the governor's wily scheme to get votes. It is stated authoritatively that in Jackson county the representatives of the governor procured pardons for votes, and that he got the votes and the pardons were granted.

Senator Morgan is suffering no uneasiness on his own account. He feels sure of reelection, and the reports received here all point that way.

There is a general impression here that the democrats now stand a good show to win in the next presidential race, and there is evidently some uneasiness felt by the republicans. The Post, an independent and well informed paper, sums up the situation as follows:

It has already been intimated that the conditions which now confront the leading political parties are very different from those which existed in 1896. This assertion does not need elaboration. The questions arising out of the conclusion of the war with Spain have directed public thought into channels that were unknown four years ago. With these grave problems engrossing the public mind, it does not seem possible that the financial question will be the principal issue in the approaching campaign, especially as it has been relegated by the enactment of the gold standard law. With the fear of free coinage of silver removed, the election of Bryan becomes a debatable question, to say the least.

The administration enters the campaign with many burdens. It is loaded down with all the disappointments and friction which invariably attaches to the distribution of the offices, wherein one lukewarm friend is gained and a hundred enemies are made. It has united the Germans and the Irish in common antagonism for the first time in political history by its friendliness to Great Britain. The administration leaders in the senate have smothered a resolution of sympathy with the Boers, and they have found in the Hay-Pauncefote canal treaty grave defects which warrant the universal criticism which that document has received. The refusal of the republican majority to follow the president's recommendation to establish free trade between Porto Rico and the United States as a plain duty, has occasioned the greatest storm of indignation witnessed in this country for many years, and popular feeling ascribes the action to the domination which the protected interests exercise over congress. The disclosures of the Frick-Carnegie suit, showing millions and millions of dollars annually pocketed by a gigantic trust, are not calculated to decrease the antipathy to these combinations of capital which have flourished under the present administration.

Briefly stated, the McKinley administration is threatened because the passage of the gold standard law has removed the fear of the free coinage of silver; because its friendly attitude toward Great Britain excites the latent hostility of the American people, and lastly, because its ungenerous treatment of the Porto Ricans, coupled with the declaration that the constitution does not follow the flag, is in direct antagonism to the sentiment and belief of nine-tenths of the people of the United States, irrespective of party. It remains to be seen, however, whether these issues, now so prominent, will be factors in the campaign. If they are, there is ample ground for the anxiety which is now manifest among the republican leaders over the result.

This view is a very sensible one, and is entertained by a great many prominent men about the capital.

The candidacy of Admiral Dewey is not looked upon by anyone as a serious matter. The race will be between the two former candidates, and the issues will be fanned by somewhat new conditions as indicated above. It is by no means certain that Mr. Bryan will not be the next president.

MADE MONEY ON ROUND BALES.

Patrons of Roundlap Gin Plants Tell of Their Big Profits.

The past ginning season again demonstrated the incomparable superiority of the American Cotton Company's Roundlap bale. Not only were farmers benefited who had their cotton put up in Roundlap bales, but even the patrons of old-style gins profited by the presence of Roundlap competition.

Farmers all over the cotton states have written letters to the owners of Roundlap plants telling of the profit that has come to them from having their cotton put up in Roundlap bales. Mr. W. F. Hartley, Sr., who patronized the Greenville, Ala., plant, wrote Feb. 3, 1900: "The most important point in the Roundlap bale's favor to the farmer is the advance in price above that of the square bale. It has averaged the entire past season $2 per bale more than the square bale. More than $5,000 has been placed in circulation by the advanced price caused by this one press."

F. M. Rogers also wrote from Greenville, Ala.: "I have received from ⅝ to ½ cent per pound more than the market price here for square bales. The Roundlap bale is a Godsend to the farmers, and has saved them thousands of dollars in a few months."

J. D. Reily, Centreville, Miss., wrote Dec. 4, 1899: "Another advantage to the farmers is that Roundlap cotton brings such a good price that the buyers of square cotton have been forced to put their prices up. Thus all the farmers are benefited in a town where their is a Roundlap press."

F. B. Simonton, Temple, Tex., Nov. 12, 1869: "I have received from $1.50 to $3.50 per bale more for my cotton than if I had ginned and sold in the square bale. Besides I know that the prices the American Cotton Company has paid for seed cotton have been the cause of those buying the square bale paying from 10 to 50 points more for it."

J. L. Wood, of Venus, Tex., Dec. 2, 1899, wrote: "I sold to the American Cotton Company at its East Waco plant the first bale of cotton that was ever ginned by the Roundlap bale system in Waco, and have been selling my cotton in the seed to you since that time. For the last three years, including 1899, I have sold my cotton to your Venus plant. I can safely say that I have made $2 per bale more by selling to you in the seed than I would have made if I had ginned it into square bales, besides saving a great deal of annoyance with the street buyers. In view of the fact that the custom ginners and those opposed to the Roundlap system say that you do not let the farmer have cotton seed I will say that I have always gotten seed when I asked for it."

P. B. Hall, a merchant and planter of Waynesboro, Ga., wrote Nov. 10, 1899, to Messrs. Wilkins & Jones, owners of the Roundlap plant at that place: "I had one lot of 20 bales turned out by you, and without saying anything to anybody I put the samples on the market. All of the buyers in town bid upon same, thinking it square bale cotton. One of the buyers bid 5⅝ cents, another 5.87½ cents, and another 5.95 cents, the latter remarking at the time that he was really bidding a full sixteenth more than the lot of cotton was worth. Without knowing what bids I had received—in fact I did not tell you that anybody had bid upon it—you offered and paid me 6.50 for the lot of cotton, which was a clear difference of 55 points in favor of the Roundlap bale. I believe that the Roundlap bale is the bale of the future, as it effects a large saving of waste, and enables the planter to get a higher price for his cotton."

Abram Williams, Nov. 10, 1899, wrote Messrs. Wilkins & Jones: "To-day I had two Roundlap bales of cotton packed on your Roundlap bale press, for which you paid me 7½ cents per pound, when the same grade of cotton in the square bale here today is only bring 7 to 7¼ cents per pound."

J. S. Collins, Pike Road, Ala., Nov. 11, 1899, wrote: "I have gotten for my cotton $2.50 per bale more than I could have gotten for it in square bales. I believe that the Roundlap press is the salvation of the farmers of our county. I believe that it has saved in our neighborhood of eight or ten miles square $5,000 in the price of cotton, and 20,000 pounds of lint cotton that would have been lost in samples, theft and weight, and $1,500 in warehouse charges, besides drayage and railroad expenses."

The England Gin Company, which operates a Roundlap plant at England, Ark., Dec. 13, 1899, wrote: "We are very much pleased with the Roundlap bale press. It is a recognized fact in this community that we have made the price of cotton from ¼ to ⅝ cents higher than it would have been. Only this last week when we were out of the market about four days seed cotton dropped from 2¼ to 2 cents per pound."

Does It Pay to Buy Cheap?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the more severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the only remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in severe throat and lung troubles, "Boschees German Syrup." It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy exporation, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try one bottle. Recommended many years by all druggists in the world. Hall Drug Co.

Twice Proven.

From the Vindicator, Rutherfordton, N. C.

The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with the most remarkable results in each case. First, with rheumatism in the shoulder, from which he suffered excruciating pain for ten days, which was relieved with two applications of Pain Balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a very short time. Second, in rheumatism in thigh joint, almost prostrating him with severe pain, which was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment on retiring at night and getting up free from pain. For sale by Williams Bros.

A Good Cough Medicine for Children.

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says F. P. Moran, a well-known and popular baker, of Petersburg, Va. "We have given it to our children when troubled with bad coughs, also with whooping cough, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children as it contained no opium or other harmful drug." Sold by Williams Bros.

CALL FOR COUNTY CONVENTION.

By direction of the Democratic executive committee of Shelby County a convention of the Democratic party of said county is hereby called to meet at the courthouse in Columbiana at 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, the 21st day of April, 1900, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Representative and selecting delegates to the State and Senatorial conventions.

For the purpose of selecting delegates to said county convention beat meetings or primaries as each beat may determine will be held in each beat on Saturday, the 14th day of April, at such hour as the beat committeemen may fix for their respective beats.

The following invitation, in the language of the resolution by the Democratic State executive committee, is hereby extended:

"Be it resolved by the Democratic State executive committee of Alabama that we hereby cordially invite all conservative white voters, irrespective of past political associations or differences who can unite with us in the effort for pure and economical government, and who will support the nominees and principles of the Democratic party, to participate in the primaries of the party throughout the State.

"Resolved, further, That all persons participating in the primaries, conventions or mass meetings of the party hereafter to be held thereby pledge themselves to support the nominees of such primaries, conventions or mass meetings, whether municipal, county, state or Federal."

The number of delegates to which each beat will be entitled will be as follows, based on the vote for Governor at the last State election:

1—Columbiana	9
1—Shelby	3
2—Spring Creek	2
3—Calera	5

One Hundred Dollars for Bright People.

If you are bright enough to re-arrange these four groups of letters, "Guras," "Eat," "Uofrl," "Foecef," into the names of four well-known and common food articles, which are used by every housekeeper, you are sure to secure a cash reward for the publisher of that interesting monthly magazine, Evening Hours, will pay one hundred dollars to the persons sending the correct names. You can only use each letter in its own group, each group makes a name. The object is to advertise and introduce my publication into new homes. Send ten cents silver or six two-cent stamps for a sample copy, and I will also send you free three packets of fresh and beautiful flower seeds. You will like Evening Hours, and every member of the family will enjoy its illustrated short stories, literary selections, artistic fashions and its departments for women, children, the household and garden. The $100 will be paid at close of contest, April 30, 1900. If two or more persons send the correct answer the $100 will be equally divided. Send your answer as early as possible, and if your answer is correct you will receive cash reward as above stated. Address, J. W. Ring, Publisher, 120 Market st., Newark, N. J.

It is not so much what the newspapers say, as what neighbor says to neighbor, or friend to friend, that has brought Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy into such general use. It is as natural for people to express their gratitude after using this remedy as it is for water to flow down hill. It is the one remedy that can always be depended upon, whether a baby be sick with cholera infantum or a man with cholera morbus. It is pleasant, safe and reliable. Have you a bottle of it in your home? For sale by Williams Bros.

"What do you think of this controversy as to whether marriage is a failure?" he asked for want of something else to say. "I don't know anything about it," she replied, "but," she added hastily," "I always was fond of experiments."—Chicago Evening Post.

Headache often results from a disordered condition of the stomach and constipation of the bowels. A dose or two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will correct these disorders and cure the headache. Sold by Williams Bros.

Bacon—I see the Western Undertakers' Association had a dinner, and one of them gave a funny toast. Egbert—What was it? "May we each of us live long enough to bury one another."—Yonkers Statesman.

Have you been coughing a day, a week, a month, a year? Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey will cure that cough. There can be no doubt about it. It has cured many others equally severe. Good druggists sell it. No cure no pay.

Good old Granny Metcalfe, of Kentucky, 89 years old, says that Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey is the best grip cure, cough, lung and bronchial remedy that has been offered to the people during her life. Sold everywhere.

Blood poison often results from a cut or wound if not properly treated. Dr. Bell's Anti-Pain is the most wonderful discovery of the age for the quick relief of all internal and external pain.

If you ever try Sutherland's Eagle Eye Salve for failing eyesight, granulated lids or sore eyes of any kind, you will be a keen-sighted advertiser among your friends for it.

To cure a cold in one night take Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. It clears the throat, soothes the bronchials and exhilarates the lungs. All druggists sell it. No cure no pay.

SUPERB MILLINERY!

Stylish, Bright, Entrancing!

The Latest Fads in Ladies Headgear.

I am not boasting when I say that I have assembled in my store not only the latest novelties in millinery, but the most complete line ever offered in Shelby county. A few articles to show that we are up-to-date: Hemstitched Ribbons, all new shades; Ready-to-wear Hats, too pretty to describe, in all the new shapes; Pattern hats, etc., etc.

Miss Horn, our accomplished milliner, has recently returned from Louisville, Ky., where she posted herself thoroughly on styles for this season, and, to sum it up in a few words, she is master of the situation. You will miss a treat if you fail to see this handsome exhibition. To see is to purchase, to purchase is to be happy.

A WORD ABOUT CORSETS.

F. C. and R. & G. CORSETS you know stand at the head of the list—none better made. Avail yourself of the first opportunity to buy one of them. Either one or both are standards.

OUR DRY GOODS AND NOTION DEPARTMENT

Was never so full before, and it is almost impossible to call for anything and not get the very thing you were hunting—or something better. This is no joke! To give you a faint idea (this paper wouldn't hold all the articles) we mention a few: Percals, Madras Cloths, Shirt Waists (beauties, all of them) White Goods galore, especially Piques; Ladies' Neckwear, the latest and daintiest; Hemstitched Silk for Shirt Waists, in new pastel shades, dreams of beauty; Laces, Swiss and Hamburg Edging. But life is too short to mention them all. Polite and accommodating salesmen will esteem it a pleasure to show you all these pretty goods and many more. Don't be afraid of putting them to too much trouble, it is fun for them

BUGGIES BY THE CAR LOAD.

To those who have owned a James & Mayer buggy it is not necessary to say a word in its praise, for it is A 1 in every particular, neat, substantial and well made. Buying them, as we do, in large quantities, we can sell them at bottom figures. Save a few dollars by investigating this statement. Buggy harness, all you want, in good, better and best qualities—none better for the money. Rest assured we can suit you in quality and price.

IF IT IS WAGONS YOU WANT

We have a car load of Mitchel's in our warehouse for you to select from. It is economy to buy the best of everything, and you need want no better than the Mitchel. Wagon Harness? Yes, and to suit you, plenty of it. Look it over when you come to see us. It speaks for itself louder than we can.

MEN'S and BOYS' CLOTHING,

STRAW HATS,

FURNISHING GOODS

Walter O'Hara was called to Selma Monday and a position as telegrapher assigned him on the B. B. & B. railway.

Robert O'Hara went over to Montgomery Tuesday to stand the civil service examination for the postal service.

Rev. T. K. Roberts and wife, who have been spending several weeks in Montgomery, returned to their home in this city Friday last.

It is now time to take your sarsaparillas and THE CHRONICLE; both are so ennervating and make such nice new creatures of us all.

There are more bicycles now in use by the young people of this city than at any previous time, and the streets present a gay scene on pleasant evenings.

W. F. Adams, of Weldon, dropped in to see us last Thursday. The 'squire has been in ill health for some time, much to the regret of his many friends.

Some of the charcoal belonging to J. H. Mason caught fire at the coal chute last Sunday morning, but prompt action prevented any serious damage.

E. H. Hosea, former marshal and all-around good citizen of this place, has moved to Shelby, where he will work and likewise receive THE CHRONICLE.

Correspondents should send in their communications so they will reach us by Tuesday or early Wednesday morning, as the forms for the paper are closed always on Wednesday afternoons.

Don't forget the egg hunt and egg supper at the residence of Rev. W. I. Sinnott tomorrow night, given by the Pauline DuBose Missionary Society. Let all the young people turn out and have a jolly good time.

There will be a total eclipse of the sun on or about the 28th of next month, and some of the great railroads have announced a reduction in care fare to certain points on their lines for the occasion. They will doubtless run excursions into this city at the next session of commissioners' court.

Mrs. James Joiner died at her home in this city last Sunday night of consumption, and was buried Monday about six miles west of here. She leaves a husband and several children, all in a destitute condition.

On last Friday afternoon, while distributing mail, Mr. Falkner noticed a small blaze on the floor of the postoffice, but was able to extinguish it before any damage was done. The fire was the result of an "overheated" ash box.

Nightwatchman Pitts thought he heard someone in the mercantile establishment of Pearson & Co. on Wednesday night of last week, and called up the proprietor, who made an investigation, but found everything serene and calm.

See those children's sailor hats, 15 cents, at Fox's, and children's ladies' and misses' slippers at 60 cts., at Fox's.

One of the large glass windows to the front of the Hall Drug Company was broken in Wednesday night of last week by would-be burglars. The key to the back door, which was locked from the inside, was pushed out in an effort to effect an entrance, but this proved unsuccessful. No entrance could be gained, and likewise no damage done, save only to the windows.

The case of Mrs. Lizzie LeGrone, charged with infanticide, which has been before the courts for some time, came to an end last week when the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. She was charged with the murder of her new-born babe at Aldrich, and was placed in the jail at this place soon after the committal of the crime, but was released on bail after only a few weeks' incarceration.

When in the city you should not neglect to call around and renew or subscribe for THE CHRONICLE. Two hot campaigns are before the people this year, and every citizen wants to keep himself well posted on the political state of affairs in the county, as well as on other matters in general. This information can be obtained for only one dollar, and if you will take the trouble to call around we will tell you how and why.

Meager details of a shooting at Shelby Springs reached us just before going to press. Powell Blair and Wiley J. Nelson, who are neighbors and live near the Springs, met about 9 o'clock yesterday in the enclosure. Blair was armed with a shot gun and he lost little time in using it very effectively, discharging both barrels in the chest of Nelson. A runner who came here for a physician reported Nelson dangerously wounded. Blair claims that Nelson had been imposing on his children. No arrest has yet been made.

Charles Ledbetter, the bigamist, was given a trial at the criminal session of court last week and plead guilty to the charge docketed against him. The court gave him the full penalty of the law, five years in the state penitentiary, and expressed regrets that it was not in its power to prolong the sentence. The Elmore county wife of Ledbetter was present, and would have testified against her husband. The victim of his criminality in this county was a Miss Sewall, member of a highly respected and prominent family.

An old negro man, charged with bigamy, was given a trial in the circuit court last week for his crime. He did not deny the charges, but plead guilty, saying that he thought it no violation of his first vow to take unto himself as many wives as would come and lean on his strong arm for support and protection, promising to love and cherish him, so long as his license was procured and marriages occurred in different sections of the state. The negro's ignorance was so evident that the court could not refrain from giving him the lowest penalty.

In a four inch extract of Governor Johnston's speech at Birmingham last week, published in the daily papers, the personal pronouns, "I, my, mine," are found twenty-seven times—not counting the "us'es" and "we'unses." He spoke for two hours. The extract referred to could easily have been delivered in three minutes, and if a strict adherence to this ratio were observed throughout those little harmless monosyllables of the governor's would have floated out on Jefferson county air at least 1080 times—enough for every voter present and a handfull for the children at home.

Mr. H. Fox, of the Red Store Co., tells us to tell you that his prices for dry goods, clothing, shoes and notions are as they were before the advance in prices. Go to see him and buy what you need. Prices as low as they used to be.

Important Notice.

A beat meeting is hereby called to convene in the Court House at 2 p. m., on April 14, 1900, for the purpose of selecting delegates to a democratic county convention to be held in this place on April 21st.

THESE ARE SWELL DOGS.

How Fashionable Pets Are Costumed in Paris.

Dog tailors have a good time in Paris. Under the impression that nature has not provided the right kind of coat for a dog, the dog lovers—or fashion lovers—of Paris has fostered a new industry, the providing of clothing for ladies' pets. Some very interesting and suggestive facts about this industry are collected by Good Words. "Our clients belong to the very highest classes of society," said one of these Parisian dog tailors. "We recently had a very remunerative order from the daughter of a diplomat in Paris for a set of gala clothes for her dog to match the liveries of her father's lackeys. She was about to be married, and as she entered the residence after the ceremony, her three dogs were to be waiting for her at the top of the grand staircase. They were to be dressed in their liveries, and each was to have a bouquet of orange blossoms attached to its collar." Even this was exceeded by another bride, who ordered for each of her half dozen dogs a regular bridesmaid's costume of white faille embroidered with lace and garlanded with orange blossoms. White satin slippers were also made to measure for each four-footed pet. One step further have these lovers of fashion gone in making their dogs an excuse for fresh display. Sets of fine linen must now be provided for the society dog. No self-respecting animal would think of possessing less than half a dozen undergarments of fine lawn, if he is in health, and of silk or surah if he is subject to colds. A dozen embroidered cambric handkerchiefs must be added to his equipment if he is troubled with watery eyes. A further trial awaits him in the shape of boots of leather or rubber, as the case may be. Bracelets and tie-pins, perfumery and fancy soaps, ivory combs and brushes make up the dog's toilet necessaries. Surely if a fashionable Parisian dog could speak, he would explain that his foolish friends lead him the life of a dog in the worst sense.

Nothing in the Wide World has such a record for absolutely curing female ills and kidney troubles as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Medicines that are advertised to cure everything cannot be specifics for anything.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will not cure every kind of illness that may afflict men, women and children, but proof is monumental that it will and does cure all the ills peculiar to women.

This is a fact indisputable and can be verified by more than a million women.

If you are sick don't experiment, take the medicine that has the record of the largest number of cures.

Rev C. W. Buck died in Montgomery Sunday morning. The deceased was an ordained Baptist minister, but has been following the profession of dentistry for several years. He was a prominent temperance lecturer and prohibitionist at the time of his death.

Given the Death Penalty.

Albert Curry, one of a gang of five negroes charged with killing Pink Dobbins, at Talladega, was convicted at that place Monday and sentenced to hang on May 18. Dobbins, who was a white man, was assaulted by a crowd of negroes and literally cut to pieces. The tragedy occurred about a month ago. Curry is a mere youth.

Captain Young Dead.

Captain James H. Young one of the most prominent citizens of Scottsboro, died Saturday and was buried Sunday. Captain Young was born in Christian county, Kentucky, in 1825. He was a strict member and a ruling elder in the Cumberland Presbyterian church. He was a captain in the Confederate army.

Epes Is a Progressive Town.

Epes is rapidly coming to the front as one of the most prosperous towns of the state. Less than two years ago, when the town was burned, there were only frame structures of not very much value. Today there are ten big brick structures, besides many smaller buildings of wood. A cotton oil mill is to be erected for the next season by local capital.

Marion is still infested with the railroad fever and has received some tangible assurances that the Birmingham Selma & New Orleans may possibly turn that way instead of being extended down into Marengo.

Prominent Manufacturer Dead.

F. G. Oxley, president of the Oxley Stave company, operating six large plants in various sections of the south and west, and who has for thirty years supplied the Standard Oil company with staves for its barrels, died at Bridgeport, Ala., Monday of heart disease.

A Gigantic Combination.

Negotiations are in progress for a combination of the gigantic new Carnegie company and the Cramp Ship Building company. If the conference now going on in Atlantic City results in a satisfactory arrangement, the coalition between these two great interests will soon be announced.

An Important Decision.

In the case of Morris Keim vs. the United States the supreme court Monday decided that the courts have no supervisory powers over the heads of the departments of the government in discharging their subordinates. The opinion was handed down by Justice Brewer

Another Enoch Arden.

Boy Killed by Horse.

Willie Vinson, the 9-year-old son of H. J. Vinson, was kicked by the family horse, at Gadsden, and died from the effects an hour later. The boy was leading the horse to water and struck him with a hickory, as he had done hundreds of times before, but for some reason the horse kicked at the boy, striking him on the back of the head, at the base of the brain, rupturing a blood vessel and causing death soon afterward.

Drowned in a Cistern.

While playing at the home of Mr Ferguson, in Decatur, Bessie, the 6 year-old daughter of George Johnson an L. & N. railroad fireman, fell into a cistern and was drowned before assistance could reach her.

Child Burned to Death.

Georgie Coole, a 12-year-old girl of Madison Crossroads, was burned to death. Her clothing ignited from a blazing pile of trash.

Lowe Calls Senatorial Conventions.

R. J. Lowe, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, has issued a call for senatorial conventions for the following named districts, being districts in which there are no senatorial committees, to meet in Montgomery, April 25, 1900, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the state senate from their respective districts. The districts to which this call applies are as follows: First district, Lauderdale and Limestone; Fifth district, Jackson and Marshall; Fifteenth district, Chilton, Shelby and Elmore; Seventeenth district, Butler, Conecuh and Covington; Nineteenth district, Clark, Choctaw and Washington; Twenty-first district, Monroe, Escambia and Baldwin; Twenty-third district, Henry, Dale and Geneva; Twenty-fifth district, Pike, Crenshaw and Coffee; Twenty-ninth district, DeKalb and Cherokee.

To Connect the Warrior and Tennessee.

A movement has been launched in Birmingham looking to the emptying of a portion of the waters of the Tennessee river into the Warrior canal, which it is proposed to build from somewhere in the vicinity of North Birmingham to the Warrior river. With this end in view former Mayor J. A. VanHoose some time ago had G. D. Fitzhugh, the well known civil engineer, to prepare a blue print of the proposed route for the canal connecting the Tennessee river and the Warrior canal. Mr. Fitzhugh pronounced this proposed canal as entirely feasible, and says the engineering difficulties to be overcome are few and of small importance.

Vein of Rich Phosphate Found.

A splendid vein of phosphate has been discovered in Limestone county not far from Elkmont and is yielding a very fine quality. In the same section a vein of gold has been discovered, but whether in paying quantities or not can not yet be told; also a little east of that village a splendid deposit of silver has been discovered.

STATE BREVITIES.

The Central of Georgia will spend some $6,000 in fixing up tracks at the new cotton mill which is to be erected at Roanoke.

Paul Pittman, a grocery merchant of Florence, will erect a soap factory in that city, with a daily capacity of some 3,000 pounds.

The fourth furnace at the plant of the Alabama Steel and Shipbuilding Company at Ensley began making steel Thursday and two others will be making steel within the next few days.

The work of rebuilding the town of Prattville where it was so badly burned March 19 has been going on at a rapid rate for the last ten days, and if the good work keeps up at the same rate the new town will be a great improvement.

H. C. Forbes, of Russellville, who has already had much experience in gold mining in Alaska, will lead a party of Franklin county fortune hunters to the Cape Nome fields, the intention now being to leave Russellville about the last of the present month.

The coroner's jury in the case of Joe Scott, the negro who was shot to death and his house set on fire near Birmingham, returned a verdict charging Floyd Brown, Tom Carter and Robert Anderson with the murder. These men are in jail, Brown having made a partial confession.

The first week of the United States court was concluded at Huntsville Saturkay. About twenty moonshiners have been convicted and sentenced so far. Andy Barton, Buck Northington, Sam Shoemaker, Ed Cantrell, Philip Frost, Luce Tharp, James Vandiver and Foster Dooley were convicted and sentenced to $100 one and one month's imprisonment.

Pasha Reported Dead.

A Constantinople dispatch says: Ghazi Osman Nubar Pasha, the hero of Plevna, died Wednesday evening, although the recent improvement in his condition led to the hope of his recovery. He was born in 1832.

House Passed Hawaiian Bill.

The house, after four days' debate, Friday, passed the substitute for the senate bill providing for a territorial form of government for Hawaii. The bill now goes to conference.

RAG TIME FROM WAGNER.

Also in Part From Mozart, Beethoven and Other Great Masters.

From the Chicago Tribune.—Ragtime has been given its rating by F. W. Root, musical authority. He says it bears the same relation to the great things of the musical world that Mother Goose melodies do to the masterpieces of the world's literature. While criticising this lowly but extremely popular sort of music, Mr. Root says it came from the great maestros of the earth. Wagner lapsed into it much after the manner of statesmen who sometimes get tired and drop into versification. Mozart also had moments of fatigue or exuberance, when he dashed off a few notes in the measure of the cake-walk melody. Some of the great litterateurs have written along the mental altitude of Mother Goose, says Mr. Root, and so have Bach and Beethoven yielded to the impulse to put their lofty thoughts into sharps and flats that would be appreciated in Halsted street. "I would not do away with rag time music," said Mr. Root. "If some one should ask me if I would blot out Mother Goose rhymes I would say unhesitatingly I would not do it. Mother Goose is a good thing in its way. So is rag time. To make the matter plain rag time is syncopation. All the great masters have employed syncopated notes. That is all right, or the masters would not have done it. But they did not write all of their works in syncopation. That shows that syncopation is good for awhile, but we do not want much of it. Now, Mother Goose literature is a good thing, but suppose you had nothing else to read you would get tired of it after awhile." "What would you suggest be done about it?" he was asked. "Let it alone. The people who like it may learn after awhile to like something else better." "What objection lies against rag time music?" "It is a repetition of the same thing, that's all. There is nothing else in the world the matter with it. As I said, if it were not a good thing the masters would not have used it." Among many oddities of rag time an example of its effect may be seen in the setting of "Old Hundred" to that measure. 'There is no such thing as good music or bad music," said Prof. Emil Liebling. "You may set good music to bad or vicious wordings and the music becomes bad by implication. So with rag time. It is now lending itself to low vaudeville, in the main, and because of that association the music is denounced. The song from 'Carmen,' 'Love is a Wild Bird,' is one of the best examples of rag time in modern music. In the overture to 'Don Juan,' by Mozart, and in the sixth two-voiced invention of Bach we have good examples of syncopation. Rag time is simply having its day. It will be forgotten as a craze in a few years."

"NEW LEAVES" WET BLANKETS

Make Themselves and Everybody Around Them Unhappy.

Now comes the melancholy time of year when everyone is making resolutions not to do the things they like best to do, and the gloom and discontent and general all-around pessimism attendant upon such heroics, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. "It's all very well to resolve not to smoke if it's bad for the health and pocket," said a pretty girl at a party the other evening. "But when a man resolves not to smoke he ought also to resolve not to look funereal over it, and make all his friends yearn to supply him with pipes and cigars the instant he puts his gloomy face in the door. It's bad enough to dance with men who tell you frankly that parties are bores and that they've only come to oblige Mrs. C., but to have to sit and talk to a man whose mind is in the clouds, whose nerves are in a jangle, and whose face suggests the 'knight of the rueful countenance'—and all on account of some ascetic resolution—is too great a tribute to pay to the new year, and I, for one, cross reformed smokers and new leaves generally off my list of nice men. What a cruel and immoral proceeding. Think of Billy Strongly. Now, there's a new leaf who looks jolly and gay, and he swore by the bunch of mistletoe at Mrs. Van Dusen's ball that he wasn't going to stay up till 1 o'clock a single night this season. Oh, I don't mind Billy Van Dusen. He likes 'Cinderellas' any way, and he won't keep his resolution long enough to make anybody unhappy. When it begins to bore him and his friends, why, he'll just break it and people will say, 'How like Billy.' It's the stern, ascetic men who do things they don't want to do because they want to do them, and for no other reason; that I object to. Do you follow me?" 'Oh, yes," faintly. "So, if you really intend to read Mr. Howells and Thomas Hardy all winter and never go to the theater to see anything gayer than Duse, why, just let me know. I am frank and I try to be fair. But I don't like unhappy, strong-minded persons. If it hurts to be good, why, just let me know, that's all."

Knit All Their Lives.

All the women of Shetland knit. They learn the art in early childhood and continue it all through their lives. The wool used for their knitting is grown on the islands and is carded and spun by the people themselves. Machinery they have not, except the primitive spinning wheel. Many of the most elaborate shawls have taken months to make, and some even years, so that a very fine shawl may be worth as much as $150 to $200. Most of the knitting is, however, of the more homely and serviceable kind and may be bought from the women themselves for a moderate price.

The manner in which the washing of knit shawls is accomplished in Shetland is a matter of interest to most visitors. They are washed carefully in soap lather and then to prevent their shrinking, they are laced from point to point of the scalloped border in a large square wooden frame and placed outside the cottage to dry.

TRACED BY FINGER PRINTS.

Remarkable Cases in Which Criminals Were Thus Detected.

The fiasco of Berlin in the recent Dreyfus trial at Rennes gives some additional interest to the discussion on finger prints that took place at the latest meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. Galton read a paper on the finger-prints of young children, in which he maintained that these prints, if properly taken, would suffice for after-identification by an expert. The grave defect in the Bertillon system is its reliance upon a system of measurements—a defect that does not exist, it is claimed, in the more accurate system of taking prints. At the same meeting Mr. E. R. Henry, inspector general of police in Bengal, gave a demonstration with a magnifying lantern of this same method. He claimed that the "personal equation," which vitiates results in the Bertillon system of anthropometry, is entirely eliminated in the printing method. Finger-prints, being absolute impressions taken from the body, are not so uncertain as a set of measurements usually are. The method described by Inspector General Henry is as follows: A thin film of printers' ink is spread over a piece of tin, and each finger in turn is pressed on the film and then pressed on paper, by which means a clear impression is secured. Mr. Henry gave some remarkable illustrations of cases in which criminals had been identified by their finger-prints—one by finger-marks on the soft paint of a window sill, and another by blood marks made by the fingers on the covers of a book. In consequence of these remarkable facts, the legislature in India had amended the law of evidence. With such respectable authority to vouch for it, this method may yet rise in esteem in American courts of justice. English prison officials are not, as a class, likely to become enamored of any mere theoretical scheme—a reproach to which the French will possibly be exposed by the extravagant demonstration made by Bertillon. At any rate, this system of identification by means of finger-prints seems worthy of further experimental trial, and would be a good field for some of our prison officials to utilize in order to demonstrate that they take an interest in the science of criminology.—Medical Journal.

The notion that small and regular doses of camphor impart to the complexion a peculiar clear creaminess is said by a London physician to have developed a new habit among many well-to-do young women. Like other drug-taking habits, this is difficult to abandon after it is once established. Mild exhilaration and stupefaction are produced, and the doses are often very large. In some cases the effects are hardly to be distinguished from those of alcohol. Extreme weakness generally follows regular doses, and the camphor-eaters all have a dreamy, dazed and very listless air, usually with a constant longing to sleep. The complexion, instead of being in any way improved, is given a ghastly pallor.

Madame Patti's Parrots.

Among the possessions of Mme. Patti are two parrots, one of which talks all day long and imitates his mistress' trills, while the other is dumb, though he has only been so since his purchase by Mme. Patti. Before that he was the most wonderful talking parrot in captivity, and was valued at $200, the price which she paid for him in New York.

A geological party recently discovered in a glacier of the Rocky mountains in Montana, a large quantity of grasshoppers buried in the ice. It is supposed that when the prairie grasshoppers go north and cross this glacier, many of them succumb to the cold and are entombed in the ice. The glacier has been named for the grasshoppers.

VOL. XV. COLUMBIANA, SHELBY COUNTY, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, APRIL 19, 1900. NO. 18.

DIRECT VOTE IS RECOMMENDED

By House For the Election of Senators.

MEMBERS GO ON RECORD

Vote Was Almost Unanimous---Resolution Passed Suggesting a Change In the Constitution.

A Washington special says: The house Triday by a vote of 240 to 15 adopted a resolution for a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people. Fourteen Republicans and one Democrat voted against it. By the terms of the resolution the amendment to be submitted to the legislatures is as follows:

"The senate of the United States shall be composed of two senators from each state, who shall be selected by a direct vote of the people thereof for a term of six years and each senator shall have one vote. A plurality of the votes cast for candidates for senator shall be sufficient to elect. The electors in each state shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislatures, respectively.

"When a vacancy happens, by death resignation, or otherwise in the representation of any state in the senate, the same shall be filled for the unexpired term thereof in the same manner as is provided for the election of senators in paragraph 1: Provided, that the executive thereof may make temporary appointment until the next general or special election, in accordance with the statutes or constitution of such state."

The remainder of the day was devoted to the consideration of private pension bills. Several sharp attacks were made upon Mr. Talbert, Democrat, of South Carolina, for his course in delaying action upon bills.

There were two joint resolutions on the popular election of senators when the house adjourned Thursday. The majority resolution of the committee left it optional with the states whether their senators should be elected directly or by the legislature. The minority resolution made it incumbent that each state elect by direct vote. The minority resolution which was offered as a substitute was voted upon first and was carried by an overwhelming vote—ayes 135, noes 30. Mr. Corliss tried unavailingly to get an aye and no vote, but only nine members seconded the demand. The vote was then taken upon the adoption of the amendment, the whole house rising in support of the demand. The resolution was adopted, 240 to 15.

The negative votes were cast by Messrs. Allen, of Maine; Burleigh, of Maine; Calderhead, of Kansas; Fordney, of Michigan; Gardner, of New Jersey; Hedge, of Iowa; Henry, of Connecticut; Lane, of Iowa; Lester, of Georgia; Littlefield, of Maine; McPherson, of Iowa; Mann, of Illinois; Russell, of Connecticut; Sperry, of Connecticut, and Thomas, of Iowa.

Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, asked unanimous consent to set aside May 1st for the consideration of the Nicaraguan canal bill.

"I object," shouted Mr. Burton, of Ohio, emphatically.

Mr. Hepburn then took steps to overcome this opposition and a petition to the committee on rules was prepared, requesting that body to fix a time for taking up the canal bill. Mr Hepburn circulated the petition on the Republican side, and up to the time of adjournment secured sixty-one signatures.

Mr. Adamson, who circulated the petition on the Democratic side, said:

"There is no opposition whatever on this side, and every man present today has signed the petition. The number exceeds sixty."

Notwithstanding these efforts, it was intimated pretty strongly in well-informed quarters that the committee on rules was not likely to bring in a special rule. The members of the committee declined, however, to make any definite statement on the subject.

STOCKHOLDERS LIABLE.

Judge So Decides Regarding National Bank Assessment.

In a suit involving the liability of stockholders of the First National bank, of Little Rock, Ark., now defunct, on an assessment of 92 per cent levied by the comptroller of the currency to discharge the bank's liabilities, Federal Judge John A. Williams has decided that the stockholders are liable.

The assessment was levied on $250,000 bank stock, representing the amount of the increased capital stock preceding the bank's failure. The principal defense was that the increase was void because not authorized.

WAR NEWS.

Lord Roberts Wires Government That Forward Move Has Been Checked.

A London special says: "The forward movement is checked," says Lord Roberts. This is taken to mean, not by fighting, but by dispositions to head off their advance and bar their way to vulnerable points in the line of British communications.

Relief is on the way to Wepener. The Boers in Natal appear incapable of developing an aggressive move at Elandslaagte.

Lord Methuen is at the Zwartkopfontein, twelve miles east of Boshof, and is sending small, swift columns through the adjacent country. Lord Chesham, commanding one of these, encountered a small commando about ten miles southeast of Zwartkopfontein. He found most of the farms occupied by women and children only.

An editorial note in The Daily Mail avers that Mafeking is in a very bad way, and that hope of relief is far off, as no force is advancing from the south.

The war office announces that 4,000 horses will arrive at the Cape this week. It is well understood that the animals are not fit for work until about ten days after the voyage. Two thousand more are due at the Cape within a few days. The war office has called out the reserve companies of several infantry battalions which will be sent to South Africa forthwith.

The Boer peace envoys have documents, the Rome correspondent of The Daily News says, that urgent advances to the Transvaal to wage war were originally made by Germany.

The correspondent also asserts that Count von Buelow, the German foreign minister, who was said to have gone on a visit to a sick brother, really went to Milan for the express purpose of conferring with the delegates.

SHOT WIFE DEAD.

Atlanta Man Does Bloody Work as Result of Separation.

At Atlanta, Ga., Friday night James L. Baker shoved a pistol into his wife's face and fired four shots. With a groan the woman fell to the floor, the blood gushing from two wounds in her head from which she died a few hours later.

Mrs. Baker had separated from her husband a week before, and had gone to live with Mrs. Martha J. Payne, at whose house the tragedy took place.

The inmates of the house were at supper when Baker walked into the dining room, and with the remark, "You have turned the old dog out, have you?" shot straight in his wife's face. There was so little said, and the shooting was all done so quickly, that it was some moments before it was realized what had happened.

The affair has some very highly sensational and dramatic features. Baker claims, first of all, that his wife and himself disagreed on account of her son by a former husband, and he also claims that he shot his wife because of Charles A. Pittman, a young carpenter, who is a son-in-law of Mrs. Payne. He first admitted shooting at his wife, but later in the evening he changed that statement and said he shot at Pittman and, missing him, hit his wife accidentally.

Pittman and all the other inmates of the house state that Baker shot point blank at his wife, after addressing a remark to her.

The wounded woman said her husband shot her because she refused to live longer with him.

Baker is a meat cutter by trade. He is said to be addicted to drink, and was under the influence of whisky when the shooting occurred.

Pittman was arrested at the same time with Baker, and the charge against him was booked as "suspicion." Baker was charged with assault with intent to murder.

JOIN FORCES IN OREGON.

Democrats, Silver Republicans and Populists Decide to Fuse.

The state convention of the Democrats and Populists of Oregon, after being in session for two days in Portland, effected a fusion of the two parties and adjourned.

The silver Republicans also joined in the fusion movement, though they held no convention. Both the Democrats and Populists indorsed William Jennings Bryan for the presidential nomination, but the Populist delegates were instructed to vote only for a Populist for vice president.

DAGO STRIKERS DEFIANT.

Will Fight "Tooth and Nail" Against Employment of Outsiders.

A dispatch from Croton Landing, N. Y., says: While everything was quiet and peaceful in the neighborhood of the Cornell dam Sunday night, where Italians are on a strike for increased wages, nearly 300 armed deputies guarded the works and each one of them was guessing what would happen next. The striking Italian laborers, whose homes are in the vicinity of the works, are behaving quietly, but are doggedly determined. The strikers swear that if outside labor is brought in they will fight tooth and nail to prevent it.

A Washinton special says. Owing to continued ill health Hon. John Addison Porter, secretary to the president, has tendered his resignation and the president has accepted it to take effect May 1.

George B. Cortelyou, of New York, the present assistant secretary to the president, has been appointed to the office.

MORGAN WINS THE VICTORY

Returns Indicate That He Will Have a Walkover for Re-Election.

SAMFORD LEADS IN GUBERNATORIAL RACE

The Lee County Candidates Will Enter the State Convention With More Delegates Than Any Two Candidates.

Democratic primary elections were held in fifty-four of sixty-two counties in Alabama Saturday for United States senator, for governor and state and county officers. Returns up to midnight indicate a sweeping democratic victory for Senator Morgan over Governor Johnston for senator, but the governorship is in doubt, with a probability that no one of the five candidates in the race has a majority of the delegates, and that the contest will have to be fought out on the convention floor.

The latest returns from counties throughout the state have increased the majorities of Senator Morgan, and his victory over Governor Johnston has been confirmed. It seems not a single county on Saturday endorsed the governor. It was reported in the various newpapers that Johnston had carried St. Clair, but a vigorous protest comes from the citizens of that county, saying a majority of their votes were cast for Senator Morgan, and that county has been transferred to the Morgan column.

Out of 133 members of the general assembly of Alabama at least 120 will vote for the return of John T. Morgan to the United States senate. Many of the hold-over senators who have been pledged to Johnston will be forced to vote for Morgan under instructions from their constituency.

The greatest surprise furnished has been the remarkable strength shown by William J. Samford, of Lee. Late returns confirm his heavy vote and a few more counties have been added to his list. From present indications he will go into the state convention with more votes than any other two candidates, and his friends are claiming his nomination on the first ballot. From conservative reports it is estimated that he now has 211 delegates. With his chance of securing the uninstructed counties his showing for the nomination is very strong.

Charles E. Waller, of Hale, has also developed considerable strength and he will run second to Samford. His vote Sunday night was 76 with his supporters claiming several doubtful and unheard from counties.

The generally conceded strength of Congressman Jesse F. Stallings failed to materialize and his strength is at present confined to his home county and one or two adjoining.

Shelley has carried Colbert and Madison counties, a total of 20 votes in the state convention.

The fight between Tomlinson and Shelley in Jefferson county is still undecided and it may be several days before the result is known.

From all indications, it seems that the candidates for governor have carried the following counties:

Samford—Autauga 4, Barbour 12, Bullock 9, Chambers 9, Cherokee 7, Chilton 5, Clay 5, Cleburne 4, Coffee 4, Conecuh 5, Coosa 5, Cullman 4, Dale 6, Elmore 7, Etowah 7, Fayette 4, Geneva 4, Henry 8, Lamar 5, Lauderdale 8, Lee 10, Limestone 7, Lowndes 11, Macon 6, Morgan 8, Pike 8, Randolph 6, Russell 8, Shelby 7, St. Clair 6, Tallapoosa 8, Walker 5. Total 211.

Waller—Montgomery 19, Mobile 17, Marengo 11, Perry 10, Hale 9, Greene 7, Washington 3. Total 76.

Shelley—Madison 13, Colbert 7. Total 20.

Stallings—Butler 7, Jackson 9, Marshall 6, Covington 3. Total 25.

There are several counties which have elected delegates without instructions for the purpose of assisting some county candidates for minor state offices. Many of these are claimed by the several candidates.

Owing to the remote locations and tedious counting many counties have not been heard from, or are so close as to be placed in the doubtful column.

County Returns.

Autauga.—The election today was a landslide for Morgan and Samford. Enough beats have been heard from to give Doster, the Morgan candidate, a majority in the county convention. Samford will carry the county by a safe majority.

Barbour—On primary day Barbour county gives Morgan for senator and Samford for governor safe majorities.

Bibb.—The primary election for Bibb county passed off very quietly, a very light vote being polled. The indications are that Wilson, the Morgan candidate, is nominated for the legislature. Crawford is ahead for sheriff, Jones for collector, Hicks for assessor. The other offices in doubt. Most of the delegates are for Samford ford for governor.

Blount.—Incomplete returns indicate that Morgan carries the county by a safe majority. Samford carries Oneonta and three other precincts so far as heard from. Stallings has carried four beats. Hipp, fcr senator has the county by 500 majority. T. is close between Dixon and Jones for representative. Four precincts give Morgan 200 majority.

Bullock.—All beats heard from but three (they cannot change the result) so far give Johnston 392, Morgan 583, Samford 569, Stallings 395, Shelley 20, Tomlinson 3. M. M. Baldwin and N. B. Powell are safe for representatives.

Butler.—Only beat meetings to select delegates to the county convention were held in this county. The county convention is called for the 21st inst. for the selection of delegates to the various primary conventions on June 2 to nominate representatives and county officers, when United States senator will be voted for and representatives instructed accordingly.

Calhoun.—Returns indicate nomination of Fred L. Blackman, Anniston, as senator, and Harry C. Gunnels, Anniston, and Joseph J. Arnold, Jacksonville, as representatives. All three are Morgan men. There were no Johnston candidates. Waller probably leads for governor, with Samford or Stallings second.

Chambers.—Chambers is safe for Morgan and Samford by practically unanimous vote. Johnston will not get an average of fifteen votes to the precinct. Oliver, Morgan candidate for the legislature, nominated by a large majority. Close vote between Forman and Heflin for state senate.

Cherokee. — County practically unanimous for Morgan. No Johnston candidates. This precinct gives 21 delegates for Samford in county convention. No primary on governor delegates; appointed next Saturday.

Chilton.—Returns received from seven boxes give H. I. Huneycutt, Morgan candidate for the legislature, a plurality. The county has gone for Samford.

Colbert.—No direct vote on senator or state offices. Morgan will get the vote of the county. D. C. Almond is nominated for the legislature. Returns are slow coming in and incomplete. Tomlinson chances are good. Bailey for treasurer.

Conecuh.—Five beats heard from give Morgan 835, Johnston 82, Samford 237, Stallings 138, Miller 239, Wiley 131. These beats are representative.

Coosa.—Goodwater gives Morgan 92, Johnston 81. Eight precincts heard from, seven of them solid for Morgan. Kellyton went two majority for Johnston. County solid for Morgan and Samford.

Cullman.—Thirteen out of seventeen precincts heard from indicate that the county will go for Morgan 4 to 1. Samford for governor by a good majority.

Dallas.—Twenty precincts out of thirty-six in this county so far have been heard from. F. L. Pettus, B. H. Craig and Calvin Young for the legislature, leads the ticket, and the returns from the other precincts will not make any change. It is a Morgan trio. The delegation to the state convention is uninstructed except to use itself to the greatest possible advantage for Craig Smith for treasurer.

Escambia.—The beat meetings today in this county elected delegates to county convention on the 21st. Indications point to no instructions for any candidate except McMillan for state treasurer.

Etowah.— Samford and Morgan swept Etowah county. B. H. Hammond, a Morgan man, was nominated for representative. Wm. Chandler and B. M. Pike close for sheriff, Adam Barnes tax collector, A. B. Stephens commissioner Third district.

Jefferson.—The contest in Jefferson county resulted in a complete tidal wave in the senatorial contest for Senator Morgan. He carried every beat in the city but one and a great majority of the beats in the county. Thirty-two of the forty-six beats heard from show the Morgan vote to be 7,651 and the Johnston vote 3,341.

Hale.—It is conceded that Hale county has gone largely for Morgan Tunstall and Knight are the nominees for the legislature. They are Morgan men.

Henry—. The total vote at the Columbia beat is, Morgan 186, Johnston 61, Samford 235, Stallings 12, Lee, Morgan candidate, 107 majority over Searcy. Telephone messages from interior beats indicate Morgan and Samford are safe by not less than 500 majority.

Lauderdale.—Morgan carried this county by a vote of 6 to 1. Eleven boxes out of eighteen in Lauderdale county give Morgan 1,650, Johnston 744. Kennedy is state senator by a vote of 1,310 to 925 for Ex-Representative Killen. It looks like R. E. Simpson and Calvin P. Anderson for representatives, though A. A. Williams will run Anderson a close second. Morgan's present majority of 1,014 out of 2,800 votes is gratifying to his friends in Lauderdale.

Lamar.—Seventeen out of ninety beats heard from; Morgan vote about 6 to 1, with a majority of 900 in Lamar. J. Q. Guyton, Morgan man, nominated by two hundred majority for representative.

Lee.—Lee and Russell counties cast their votes for John T. Morgan for United States senator, and W. J. Samford for governor of Alabama.

In Lee county the Morgan men were victorious by 1,000 majority. There were a very few Johnston votes cast in the county, the Johnston men claiming that the primary today, which was ordered by two-thirds of the county executive committee, was not regular. In Phoenix City 152 votes were cast, all for Morgan. Opelika polled a big vote for Morgan. In the country districts a few scattering Johnston votes were cast.

Morgan carried Russell county by 10 majority. He went up to Girard with 78 majority in one election in February. Girard beat was thrown out in the recent election on account of fraud being practiced there, and the election in that one beat in the county was held over today. Girard today gave Johnston 68 majority, and Morgan gets the county by 10 votes. Russell went for Samford without opposition.

In Russell, W. A. Bellamy is nominated for sheriff: Abner H. Vann, tax assessor; tax collector, J. E. Owens; treasurer, J. J. Ware; superintendent of education, C. W. Field; representatives. J. E. Henry and J. M. Holt.

Limestone.—Saturday was a warm day politically in Athens. It was the date of the democratic mass-meeting ordered by the democratic executive committee for the purpose of selecting seven delegates and seven alternates to attend the state convention. At 11 o'clock the meeting was called to order. It soon developed that the friends of Samford, who were in the majority, had determined to carry things their way. The following delegates were selected and sent to the state convention bound with instructions to vote first, last and all the time for Samford for governor: Bedford Pugh, Walter M. Williams, Earle Pettus, John B. Tanner, H. B. Malone and J. W. Tilman.

Lowndes—This county has gone for Morgan by a big majority. Thirteen beats have been heard from.

Macon—Morgan has about 100 majority in the county. Samford carries the county almost solid for governor.

Madison—In the democratic primary fourteen precincts out of twenty-two in Madison county give Morgan 1,794 votes and Johnston 193 votes in the contest for United States senator. General Shelly for governor has received a majority of about 600, and the Morgan legislative candidates, John H. Wallace and W. B. Bankhead, are elected by majorities of from 500 to 600.

Marengo—A mass meeting of citizens of Marengo county, called today by Chairman Hecker, of the executive committee, held at Linden, ratified the action of the convention of January 13 last, which instructed candidates for Morgan.

Mobile.—All returns and estimates so far in are for Morgan, except Beaver Meadow precinct, a small one. It is almost sure that Mobile county has gone for Morgan against Johnston by two to one. Mobile elects Morgan legislative candidates by majorities of from 500 to 800.

Monroe.—Election returns coming in slowly. Morgan and Samford lead. Morgan will carry the county.

Montgomery.—Of the twenty-one beats in Montgomery county, with a representation in the convention of 265 delegates, Morgan carried eleven beats with thirteen delegates each and one with five delegates, giving him 148; Waller carried the same strength, and Stallings eight beats and Samford one.

Morgan.—Senator Morgan has carried the county by a handsome majority. Out of seven boxes heard from Morgan's majority is 194. Samford has carried the county beyond doubt. The vote, therefore, is as follows: Samford 502, Stallings 289, Tomlinson, 88.

Perry.—Sufficient beats have been heard from to sustain the opinion that the county has gone overwhelmingly for Morgan. Hogue and Hardie will carry the county by good majorities. Both are Morgan men. The delegation to the state convention will be a mixed issue—Waller vs. Stallings, with Samford and Tomlinson second choice.

Pike.—Everything indicates a large majority for Morgan and Samford, and Wiley for congress.

Randolph.—Roanoke beat is solid for Morgan. But little news from the county, but indications are that it will be solid for Morgan.

Shelby.—The county is practically solid for Morgan. For governor, Waller is in the lead; Samford and Shelley close for second. No representatives voted for.

Sumter.—Morgan sweeps Sumter by probably 1,000. All three candidates for legislature are for Morgan. Tomlinson has a plurality of delegates, but the ten delegates to the state convention will be protested

St. Clair.—The majority of delegates elected in Saturday's beat meeting at St. Clair are for John T. Morgan for senator. The race was close between Samford and Stallings for governor.

Tallapoosa.—Reports from all except two small beats give Morgan 835 majority. Samford carried the county by an overwhelming majority. For representatives, Bulger and Gillam are elected by good majorities. Bulger's majority over Lackey is 800.

Talladega.—J. W. Heacock and Charles Whitson, both Morgan men, were overwhelmingly nominated for the legislature. No Johnston man ran and not a vote was cast for Johnston in this county.

Seven beats from Clay county average four to one for Morgan against Johnston. Morgan will carry Clay.

Tuskaloosa.—Tuskaloosa county gives Morgan 400 majority. For state senator, George D. Johnston and F. S. Moody have made a close run and the result is still doubtful. At this hour Moody is two ahead. Both candidates are Morgan men. Henry B. Foster and William W. Brandon are nominated by a large majority for the lower house. Foster is for Morgan and Brandon for Johnston, but the assemblymen are all instructed for Morgan. Dispensary for the county was carried by a small majority. John H. Bankhead was nominated for congress from the Sixth district without opposition. The election passed off quietly.

Wilcox.—Eight beats of North and Central Wilcox give Samford 182, Stallings 209. The same beats, with Bethel and Peachtree, give Morgan 421 and Johnston 238.

Walker.—Beats heard from give Samford 21 delegates, Tomlinson 9, Shelley 8, Stallings 5 There will be 77 delegates in county convention. The delegates to state convention will be anti-Stallings. The delegates reported are unanimous for Morgan.

DETECTIVES TO BE TRIED.

Grand Jury Returns Indictment Under Charge of "Embracery."

Detectives David S. Looney and William A. Bradley were indicted by the Fulton county grand jury at Atlanta Friday for embracery.

The indictment of the two men is the result of the sensational developments arising from their alleged attempt to see if members of the Atlanta bar would use improper means to obtain a verdict from a jury.

Judge J. H. Lumpkin has placed the bond in each case at $3,000.

In the indictment Looney and Bradley are charged with attempting to influence Juror Penn in the Mattie Adams will case. Penn is now serving a sentence of twenty days in the Tower for contempt of court, having left the city in order to keep from appearing in court.

Penn was taken from the Tower to the court house Friday morning, where he appeared before the grand jury. He was in the grand jury room but a short time, but he repeated the charges against the detectives that he made in the superior court before Judge Lumpkin. He denied that he had gone to Bradley and offered to sell out, as Bradley claimed, but insisted that he had never agreed to accept money. Penn declared that he was approached first by Bradley and later by Looney.

Attorney R. J. Jordan was also a witness before the grand jury. He testified that Looney had approached him in regard to the will case and made what Mr. Jordan considered an offer to secure him either a verdict or a mistrial.

At the same time, the attorneys made a motion to advance the case on the docket and urged the court to take up the case and decide it as quickly as possible. The suit will be argued before the supreme court by Messrs. McQuown and ex-Chief Justice William S. Taylor, for the Democrats, and by Helm Bruce and ex-Governor W. C. Bradley for the Republicans.

QUIET ON GOOD FRIDAY.

Boers and Britons Observe the Day By Resting In Camps.

A London special says: Judging from the lack of news from the front, Good Friday was kept in South Africa as religiously as it was in London. Presumably the situation remains unchanged, though word from Wepener is awaited with interest.

The war office had nothing to communicate to the public Sunday. It may be taken for granted that the rumor of General Brabant's victory at Wepener is premature.

STATE TROOPS NEEDED.

Five Hundred Militia Are Ordered To Scene of Croton Dam Trouble.

A New York dispatch says: General Roe announced Sunday night that he had received a formal written demand from Sheriff Malloy, of Westchester county, to call out 500 troops to go immediately to the scene of the Italian laborers' strike at the Croton dam.

POWELL SEEKS OUTSIDE HELP

Head of the Telegraphers Calls For a Labor Boycott.

REQUEST MADE OF AGENTS

They Are Urged To Divert Traffic From the Southern.

An Atlanta dispatch says: President Powell, of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, who is conducting the telegrapher's strike against the Southern railway, has officially notified the ticket and freight agents of all of the other railroads in the United States of the existing strike on the Southern, and asked them to route passengers and freight via other lines than the Southern pending the present trouble. He has also asked the American Federation of Labor to boycott the Southern until the existing troubles are settled.

Mr. Powell declares that his request to the Federation of Labor to boycott the road will put 800,000 workingmen against it and that his request to the ticket and freight agents will prove more effective than the telegraphers' strike.

President Powell has also stationed "scouts" at a number of the principal points on the Southern system to keep him informed as to the progress of events; to hearten and encourage the strikers and to enlist the sympathy and good will of the citizens at the various points at which these "scouts" are stationed.

The telegraphers say that the law forbidding the movement of frieght trains in Georgia between midnight Saturday and midnight Sunday will prove of material benefit to them.

From a local standpoint the boycott declared by President Powell was the only development in the strike situation.

Southern railway officials say that the business of the road is not affected in the slightest degree, and that they have no personal knowledge of the existence of a strike save the reports in the daily papers. They say that so far as the road is concerned the strike is over and they are as busy as can be carrying passengers and freight.

At Assistant General Superintendent Thompson's office it was said that numerous applications were being received daily for positions as operators and agents from competent, experienced men.

None of the Southern officials appear disturbed or alarmed over the situation. They declare that not only all passenger trains, but all freight trains are running on their usual schedules and on time.

WELCOME TO DEWEY

Is Extended By Bryan Democrats With Several Provisos.

A Chicago dispatch says: Bryan Democrats have decided to welcome Admiral Dewey into the Democratic party. Such is the position officially outlined in Saturday's issue of the Democratic press bulletin.

"We may accept the admiral's declaration of his political faith as indicating that he is with the Democratic party at least on an overwhelming majority of the issues it has taken up," runs the article, which is written by Willis J. Abbott, head of the Democratic literary bureau. "This is a most gratifying fact," the article continues. "It indicates that should the Democratic party, after mature deliberation, deny the admiral the nomination which he seeks, it may, nevertheless, count on his co-operation and his influence in behalf of its efforts to end the evils of McKinleyism by ending the reign of Emperor William I."

In commenting upon the purport of his article, Mr. Abbott says:

"We are naturally delighted at the prospect of such a distinguished acquisition to our ranks as Admiral Dewey, but of course we expect the admiral to 'play fair' and to accept the good old Democratic doctrines."

Keep Americans Hustling.

Reports of encounters between the American troops and the insurgents continue to be received at Manila from many points.

ALGER IS SO SORRY.

Ex-Secretary of War Deeply Sympathizes With Admiral Dewey.

"I think Admiral Dewey has made a grave mistake in announcing his candidacy for the presidency," said ex-Secretary of War Alger, in the course of an interview. "It looks as though the wealth of praise showered on the admiral since his return from the east has turned his head. It is harder to resist prosperity than adversity. I feel sorry for him, for his ambition will certainly be unfulfilled. His action is ill-advised. I predict for him in his presidential aspirations a melancholy disappointment."

CLAIMS TURNED DOWN.

Contention of Spain In Regard To Islands Is Ignored.

A special to the New York Herald from Washington says:

Secretary Hay has formally notified the Madrid government that the United States cannot accede to its claim that Sibutu Island and Cagayan Sulu, of the Philippine archipelago, belong to Spain.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR CONGRESS.

THE CHRONICLE is authorized to announce Hon. B. Dudley Williams, of Calhoun county, as a candidate for representative in the lower house of congress, from the Fourth congressional district of Alabama, subject to the action of the democratic district convention.

SHALL WE HAVE A PRIMARY?

Next Saturday a representative body of Shelby county democracy will assemble in a convention in this place. The object of this convention is to nominate a candidate for a representative and select delegates to the state and senatorial conventions. There is a question of vital interest that should be brought before that body, whether or not it would be best to have a primary election or a convention to nominate county officers. It is true this question is one to be decided by the county executive committee, but by bringing it up before a large representative gathering and having it thoroughly discussed in all its aspects and bearings, it will throw a flood of light on the subject and will enable the committee to not only act more intelligently but more in accord with the desires of the party as a whole.

As is well known, THE CHRONICLE is decidedly in favor of a primary election, for a number of reasons already given, and which are not now necessary to repeat. We think that plan would give entire satisfaction, and we shall advocate it until the question is finally acted upon by the committee. The suggestion we desire to make is this: Every delegate to the coming convention should post himself as to the wishes of the people in the beat he represents, and should come here Saturday prepared not only to give expression to his individual views, but those also of the people in his beat, and, if all will adopt this plan, the executive committee will have no difficulty in determining the wishes of the majority of the democratic voters and can and will act in accordance with their views. We want to hear a full expression on this question next Saturday.

THE VERDICT OF THE PEOPLE.

The people of Alabama have spoken and they spoke in thunder tones. Senator Morgan, the noble old veteran and statesman, was unanimously endorsed; Governor Johnston, the demagogue and politician, was buried in political oblivion by an avalanch of ballots. There is no mistaking the voice of the people. The verdict is so plain that he who runs may read.

Senator Morgan is now conscious of the fact that he not only enjoys the confidence and respect of the people of Alabama, but it seems that he enjoys to the fullest extent the confidence of his political opponents as well, a consummation not only to be wished, but one which few men of any age or party have attained. Indeed, we doubt if there is today in America a statesman more respected and loved by political friends, and we know there is not one in all the ranks of democracy who commands the respect and veneration of his political opponents to the extent he does. His endorsement was emphatic, overwhelming, practically unanimous. He could ask no more.

Let's shift the scene from the grandest of living statesmen to the demagogue and slick politician. When Governor Johnston first announced his intention of making the race for the senate, he had a good many admirers and a few very strong supporters, and it will be remembered he carried several of the counties which first acted. But from that day on his decline has been pronounced and rapid. Why? The cloven foot came into evidence too plainly to be mistaken. His demagoguery and blatant self-praise drove those from him who intended to support him, and his methods became so contemptible as to be unbearable and his mad career was cut short by an upheaval unprecedented in the history of the state. Never before in Alabama has a candidate been so overwhelmingly condemned, and this stern and emphatic denunciation carries with it a lesson that may well be studied and heeded.

The governor is the servant of the people, not their master. He can suggest, but can not dictate. He can not throttle the people; they may be led, but never driven. Demagoguery, trickery and boodle are contemptible methods in politics and always disgust the better class of voters. The people have arisen in their might and buried Governor Johnston and his methods in political oblivion, and other politicians of his ilk had better learn the lesson taught by his downfall. The people want clean men and clean methods and nothing short of this will come up to their standard. But, come to think of it, we are speaking of the dead. We bow reverently at his grave. Peace to his ashes.

"A PROPHET hath honor save at home and in his own country," says the Bible. Respectfully referred to Gov. Johnston.

A BITTER PILL.

The Vaughan, or populite wing, of the republican party in Shelby county held a convention in Calera last Saturday. Upon careful inquiry we found that the convention was composed of six or seven whites and about twenty negroes. They passed a resolution favoring fusion with the populists on the same terms as before, and then nominated John Robertson, Eugene Williams and Pleas Shaw to fill the offices of tax collector, superintendent of education and commissioner, being the only three officers alotted to them by the populites.

It was a cut-and-dried affair from start to finish. Only those delegates who were known to favor fusion and the nomination of Robertson, Williams and Shaw were permitted to take a hand in the deal. These nominees are not satisfactory to a majority of the white republicans and like a whole lot of pleasing the populites, many of whom say openly they will not support the ticket. We know full well it took a tight pull to get this part of the ticket through before, and there is open revolt against it now. Eugene Williams promised in a speech on Fourmile that if he was given the nomination then he would not ask further honors, but would work in the interest of S. S. Crumpton. It remains to be seen how he can explain his second nomination. For a second time the white populites of Shelby county are asked to support the nominees of a negro convention. Will they do so again?

SINCE the question has been settled, and very emphatically settled, that Senator Morgan is to be his own successor, public interest now centers in the gubernatorial race. Samford is decidedly in the lead, and Shelley and Waller both have a strong following; Stallings is a dead duck—not in it, and Tomlinson is out of the race, having signally failed to carry his home county. The chances are that Samford will be nominated on first ballot, but if he is not the struggle may be a long and heated one. Shelby county will send a solid Samford delegation to the state convention.

An Explanation.

EDITOR CHRONICLE:

In view of the misrepresentation which has, and is, being made in reference to the primary election held in this beat, I deem it advisable that the public should be informed as to the true status of the matter.

A movement was made to eliminate the Johnston men from the list of delegates to the county convention, and this was the outgrowth of personal feeling. The executive committee, composed of two Morgan men and one Johnston man, after mature deliberation, deemed it inadvisable and that it would result in injury to our ticket in August. It was conceded on the part of the Johnston men that a Morgan man would be the nominee of the county convention for representative and that they would assist in his nomination, as a Johnston man had no earthly chance among the democrats of the county and would not be a candidate. In other words, no fight was made here in the interest of Johnston. The democratic executive committee of the beat considered it to the best interest of the party to place some Johnston men on the list of delegates to be voted for and submitted their conclusion to some of the leading citizens of the beat. This at first seemed to meet the approval of the voters, but soon reports began to be circulated that the Morgan men of the executive committee were in reality Johnston men and intended to capture the delegation and cast the solid vote in the convention for Johnston. This conduct is characteristic of some men in this community and fully in keeping with their idea of right and justice and truth. The executive committee agreed upon a list of delegates to the county convention, among whom were four Johnston men and five Morgan men, with the explicit understanding that a Morgan man would be voted for in the convention for representative. This was made known to the opposition and their cooperation and support requested in order that our ticket in August might be strengthened. The opposition opposed the plan and put out a ticket composed solely of Morgan men. This they did solely upon personal grounds and with the avowed intention of slapping the Johnston men in the face. We Morgan men did not need the Johnston men in the election just held. Their aid and support will be needed to elect the ticket we will put out in August. Johnston was not in the race with the democrats in this county, and those who opposed the plan suggested by the beat executive committee were well aware of that fact. The 123 votes cast at this box for the solid Morgan ticket did not represent Morgan's strength. Most of the votes cast for the delegates selected by the executive committee were cast by avowed Morgan men.

The spirit which characterized the opposition to the ticket of the executive committee surely does not pervade the democrats of the county. Otherwise it seems that there is very little regard for our August ticket.

Montevallo, Ala.

On account of the meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention at Hot Springs, Ark., May 10-17, the Southern Railway will sell tickets from points on its lines to Hot Springs and return at rate of one fare for the round trip. Tickets will be sold May 7 to 10 inclusive, with final limit to return May 24. The schedule and sleeping car service afforded by the Southern Railway is excellent, and those contemplating the trip should communicate with nearest ticket agent for any information.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

By F. W. GIST.

"Morgan swept the State," was the headline that caught my eye when I opened the paper Sunday morning, and right glad was I to see it. Five times has that same thing happened in Alabama, but this is the most gratifying victory of them all. Not even the first time, when Morgan in the full bloom of his great strength came home from the mountains with victory crowning his efforts for the redemption of his state from worse than negro rule and received as his reward from a grateful people his first commission to the senate of the United States—I say not even then was his election so gratifying as now. Then he triumphed over an open enemy to his people, an enemy that fought under its true colors, and against which every white man was easily marshalled. This time he was opposed by an enemy of democratic organization within the ranks; an enemy to good government; an enemy to democracy's most cherished creed—that of white rule; an enemy to purity in politics. The defeat of that enemy is most highly gratifying, the more so when one remembers that Johnston used all the arts known to ward healers and petty politicians; that he used the patronage of his high office to buy the support of men who wore the collar of his ownership; that he used money in plenty; that he pardoned criminals for the votes of their relatives; that he brazenly sought to excite the passions and prejudices of men by wilfull lies as to his own official acts and as to the position of his opponent upon public questions.

The most gratifying thought that comes to me is that the Alabama democracy appreciates honesty, ability, wisdom, loyalty, greatness in their public servants. That is because the Alabama democracy is honest, loyal, wise and great in its superior strength.

Right after I had read the news I went to Senator Morgan's house to hear more of the great victory he had won from his post of duty. The senator sent me down a batch of telegrams to peruse until he came. Among them were many expressions of rejoicing.

The grand old man came in, and as he took my hand there was a smile of eloquent gratification about his face, a peculiar glistening in his eye, a faint tremor in his voice. I could see that his soul was full of appreciation for the testimonial of the love of his people, and I knew that their love was not greater than his.

He said to me: "It is a source of great pride to me that the people have thus honored me for the fifth time, and the most comforting thought of all is that still no man can say that I have asked him to support me. In this fight my friends have urged me to write letters asking for support, but I have not done so. I made up my mind to die with my record untarnished. I do not regard the victory as due so much to my personal popularity, but that the people have seen fit to rebuke the methods that were used against me."

I listened to him for an hour as he reviewed the political history of the state and his connection with it, and prophesied its future. Not much did he say of the present, but I could see that his heart was full of love for his people and gratefulness for their confidence.

Everybody one meets here is rejoicing over the result. The people in Washington are practically good judges of great men, and without exception they regard Morgan as a great man. Had Alabama retired him now she would have aroused disgust at her folly on every hand.

Again I remark that it is a source of gratification that Alabama has not yet passed into the hands of the briber, the pot-house politician, the demagogue, the traitor, the ingrate, the trickster. Pardon these harsh words; one should not speak ill of the dead.

I hear a great many criticisms of Mr. Stallings here. His absence has lent aid to more than one victory for the scant republican majority, and people are saying that he has been very unfaithful. He was the only absent and unpaired member in the sharp fight over the Porto Rican bill. Since Alabama has so largely rewarded Morgan for attending to his duties people are wondering whether she will punish Stallings for his neglect.

Hon. G. A. Robbins was here this week for several days. He had nothing to say for publication about Fourth district politics, correctly holding that the congressional matters should not be injected into the state and county campaigns at this time.

Questions Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for billiousness or indigestion. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration or heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Hall Drug Co.

AMERICA'S INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS.

London Statist.

With a gold standard assured, and with the possibility of a modification of the banking laws later on, by which the supply of money may become much more flexible and be made to respond to the demands of trade, and by which money will be prevented from accumulating in the treasury to the detriment of business, there is no limit to the possible growth of the trade and wealth of the United States and of the earnings and profits of its railways. The natural resources of the country are incomparable. It raises far more agricultural produce than any other nation; its cotton crop is of immense value and of universal importance; it possesses inexhaustible quantities of coal, lumber and petroleum, and produces immense amounts of iron, copper, gold and silver. Moreover, the country is rapidly becoming a great manufacturer. Its machinery has already taken a foremost place in the world; its productions of pig iron and steel now far surpass those of this country; its cotton mills are rapidly growing in number and in power, while its minor industries are spreading quickly. Its geographical position is favorable for supplying Asia, South America and Australia with manufactured goods, and it is now preparing to take full advantage of its situation by constructing the Nicaragua canal and by creating a large fleet of merchant vessels. Added to these natural advantages, it possesses magnificent waterways, by which produce can be moved cheaply; and its railway system of vast extent is operated upon the most scientific principles, combining expedition with economy of working and the cheapness of transport. And the business of the railways must improve in proportion to the nation's growth of population, of wealth, of manufactures, of agriculture and of mining.

One Hundred Dollars for Bright People.

If you are bright enough to re-arrange these four groups of letters, "Guras," "Eat," "Uofrl," "Foecef," into the names of four well-known and common food articles, which are used by every housekeeper, you are sure to secure a cash reward for the publisher of that interesting monthly magazine, Evening Hours, will pay one hundred dollars to the persons sending the correct names. You can only use each letter in its own group, each group makes a name. The object is to advertise and introduce my publication into new homes. Send ten cents silver or six two-cent stamps for a sample copy, and I will also send you free three packets of fresh and beautiful flower seeds. You will like Evening Hours, and every member of the family will enjoy its illustrated short stories, literary selections, artistic fashions and its departments for women, children, the household and garden. The $100 will be paid at close of contest, April 30, 1900. If two or more persons send the correct answer the $100 will be equally divided. Send your answer as early as possible, and if your answer is correct you will receive cash reward as above stated. Address, J. W. Ring, Publisher, 120 Market st., Newark, N. J.

Go to the Moore corner and get your groceries of J. H. Hammond.

Sweetshrubs, honeysuckles, crabapples and dogwoods are in full blossom and attract quite a number of young people to the mountains on pleasant days. Fish, too, are budding, and the blooming fisherman is also in evidence.

FOR SALE—At a great bargain, small stock of groceries. Will sell cheap and on good terms, and rent building very cheap. Cause for selling, "moving."

DENSLER MERCANTILE CO.
Wilsonville, Ala.

The heavy rains of Tuesday played havoc with things in general in northern and western Alabama, railroads and coal mines being the greatest sufferers. The creeks in this county were considerably swolen, and much damage to farm lands will no doubt result.

Alphonso Verchot received a very ugly gash on his cheek last Sunday afternoon by a falling stone. He, with some young ladies, were on the mountain, and in his effort to ward off a stone which had been turned loose down the mountain side by thoughtless boys, he received the full benefit of it in his face.

Jim Wilson, colored, was placed in the county jail last Monday morning on a warrant charging him with criminal assault upon his ten year old adopted daughter. The assault occurred on Sunday afternoon, and there are several eye-witnesses to the crime, but no warrant was sworn out until the next morning. His bond was fixed at $500, and in default of this he was remanded to jail to await the action of the grand jury, which convenes in the fall. Jim is a bad egg and has taken his meals behind the jail doors previous to this.

Rumor has it, and it is not denied by the parties interested, that we are to have two new brick buildings in the very near future. The buildings are to be located on Main street and will be used for mercantile purposes. With the cotton factory an absolute certainty there is no reason under the sun why such reports as these should not have a good and substantial foundation.

The Christian Endeavor Society held its regular weekly meeting at the Baptist church last Sunday afternoon, the topic on this occasion being India. The services were very appropriate, and though a very large crowd was not present more than $45 was pledged by the audience for the relief fund of the famine-stricken land. A committee was appointed to canvass the town and make an effort to increase this sum.

A musical recital was given at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Mason on Tuesday night complimentary to Mrs. Wm. Calohan, who is visiting here. Those present and participating were: W. F. Thetford, J. T. Leeper and Miss Pearl Hendricks, Henry Walthall and Miss Pattie Mason, Fleming Miller and Miss Brown, of Carrollton, Ga., W. F. Jackson and Miss Allie Nelson, Harry Roberts and Miss Essie Mason. The evening was pleasantly spent and much enjoyment derived.

At a beat meeting held here last Saturday afternoon the following delegates were selected to represent this portion of the beat in the county convention: Geo. R. Vasser, J. B. Elliott, D. R. McMillan, C. C. DuBose, S. W. Nelson, sr., J. R. White, J. T. Leeper; alternates, E. B. Nelson, J. H. Hammond, Henry Milner, Rufus Lester, Claude Duran, J. A. Cameron, J. S. Thompson, W. G. Parker, Hardy Nelson, jr. All of these geneleman are enthusiastic Morgan men. Samford for governor was the favorite of every one present at the meeting, with one exception.

Republican Mass Meeting.

Chairman Vandiver's mass meeting called for last Saturday materialized to a limited extent, that is, limited as to attendance, notwithstanding the absence of Mr. Vandiver. Various reasons were given for his absence, some of his brethren claiming that Aldrich used a very effective persuader (dust) to induce him to remain in his native Bear creek hills. However that may be several of the faithful met at the academy and mapped out a plan of action for the future. An executive committee for the county was selected with W. W. Walls as chairman; also delegates to the district convention at Calera and the state convention at Montgomery. A convention was called to meet in this place on May 12th for the purpose of putting a full county ticket in the field.

These old-time republicans claim that they have been dictated to by the populists as long as they care to, and as they furnish the bulk of the votes they want a good slice of the political pie. They are very much dissatisfied with the present encumbents in office, who claim to be republicans. They say they intend to make a clean sweep and have every office or none. Developments later on will no doubt be interesting.

Redlawn.

Rain, lots of it.

J. D. Smith, of Dogwood, was here Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. J. R. Finley is improving from a slight attack of pneumonia.

Easter passed off quietly. No one seemed to know it was the day of Christ's resurrection.

J. W. Spearman, of the Columbiana free school, spent Sunday with homefolks and best girl.

Rev. J. C. Lyon is convalesent.

Dr. B. H. Smothers, of Weldon, was in our parts Saturday administering unto the sick.

Rev. H. M. Millstead filled his appointment at the Methodist church Sunday, and delivered a very interesting sermon.

Mrs. Walton and Mrs. Smothers, of Weldon, attended divine services at the Baptist church Sunday.

Rev. Martin filled the pulpit at the Baptist church Sunday and delivered an interesting sermon from the subject: "From the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

George Baker, of near Chapel, was at Redlawn Monday.

The singing at the Baptist church Sunday evening, conducted by Amos Acker, was quite a success and enjoyed by all present.

W. J. Miner, of Beeswax, was in our town Sunday on his bike.

John Smith and family, of Maylene, are visiting relatives and friends here this week.

W. N. Miner spent Sunday near Lewis.

BUD.

Calera.

Very heavy rain and wind storm Tuesday morning.

The sick of our town are all better. Rev. Herndon was able to fill his appointment Sunday.

The children of Calera held an Easter service Sunday night, under the supervision of Mrs. Cora Scott. The program was a very interesting one, and well presented by the Junior Endeavor Society.

T. C. McKibbon, a very popular young railroad man of this place, has taken steps to organize a camp of sons of Confederate veterans, and desires the co-operation of all sons in the county. We appeal to all sons of the old veterans to confer with "Tom" at an early day that he may organize the camp in time to be represented at the meeting of the U. C. V. at Louisville, Ky., in June.

Our beat held a regular primary on Saturday, and turned out very well. The election resulted: For senator, Morgan 52; Johnston 3. For governor: Samford, 8; Shelley, 9; Stallings, 3; Tomlinson, 00000; Waller, 34. Peters received 4 votes and Smith 1 for representative. There were ten delegates elected to the county convention to cast our 5 votes. Of course they are all enthusiastic Morgan men. The delegates are: S. Stein, W. R. Oliver, J. H. Gunn, J. R. Hill, N. A. Graham, B. E. Kidd, B. J. Holcomb, C. C. Oliver, J. M. Sanders, S. H. Gist.

The Confederate veterans and widows of veterans who were rejected, unless turned down on the ground of fraud, can again apply by first Monday in June, and can get proper blanks by applying to probate judge.

'Rah for Samford!

Spring has come.

Winter has gone.

Summer is coming.

The wet weather continues.

We want J. L. Peters for representative.

John Spradley has moved to Sterrett.

William Bradley has moved to Montevallo Junction.

Clem Butler has treated himself to a new team of horses.

Otis Adair left here Sunday for his home at Goodwater.

Rev. Mr. Clifton went down and preached for the people at Creswell Saturday and Sunday last.

Alfred Gorman has come home from Uncle Sam's army to stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Tharp, of Ironaton, visited relatives here last week.

They say—

That candidate Brand was in this beat last week.

That after the presidential convention Mr. Dewey will ask himself the question, "Where was I at?"

That if Mr. Dewey is 60 years old and has never voted, he is too late in the day asking for office.

That Bryan and McKinley will be the standard bearers at the presidential election.

That quite a number of our people attended preaching at Vincent last Sunday.

That Mrs. Caldwell attended the marriage of her brother, Dr. Sam Welch, to Miss Ethel Cleveland at Talladega last week.

That a stroll through the woods now will convince any one that spring, sweet spring, has come, for on one side is the dogwood bloom, on the other is the honeysuckle, while all around are various kinds of flowers, and overhead is the humming-bird, while the wasp and butterfly can be seen in every direction.

JAKE.

AFTER APRIL 14TH.

There was a man in Alabam,,
  And he was wondrous wise,
He never failed to boost himself
  Right upward to the skies.

And in his mind he sho'ly was
  A senate-winning man.
And was all fixed to tell about
  The mighty race he ran.

But folks, you see, could not but feel
  That he was out for pelf,
And that the compass which he used
  Could p'int alone to self.

And that big, fine machine of his
  Jes' simply slipped a cog,
And the band-waggin it likewise
  Went right into a bog.

Because the folks ariz in wrath
  And sat upon him hard,
And into a big field of oats
  Is where they turned his pard.

And then these two they howled and squalled.
  A-nussing of their hurts,
But people smiled and knew that they
  Each got his just deserts.

Roundlap Bales Made Cotton Higher.

Wherever the American Cotton Company's Roundlap presses were operated last season higher prices prevailed for cotton whether baled round or square. In order to get cotton, square-bale buyers were obliged to pay more than the market price and more than cotton was selling for in neighboring towns where there was not a Roundlap plant. In some cases the premium paid by square-box ginners in competition with Roundlap gins during the greater part of the season was as much as half a cent per pound above the price ruling at other old-style gins in the same county. The inevitable result followed. Cotton (and the owner's trade with it) was drawn for long distances to Roundlap points to the profit of the entire community, and at the expense of towns that did not enjoy the advantages of round bale competition.

The effect of such object lessons has been a demand for Roundlap presses for next season which will tax the full capacity of the American Cotton Company's works running day and night.

Stomach Troubles In Spring

ARE THAT BILIOUS FEELING, bad taste in the mouth, dull headache, sleeplessness, poor appetite.

No matter how careful you are about eating, everything you take into your stomach turns sour, causes distress, pains and unpleasant gases.

Don't you understand what these symptoms—signals of distress—mean?

They are the cries of the stomach for help! It is being overworked. It needs the peculiar tonic qualities and digestive strength to be found in

Hood's Sarsaparilla

The best stomach and blood remedies known to the medical profession are combined in the medicine, and thousands of grateful letters telling its cures prove it to be the greatest medicine for all stomach troubles ever yet discovered.

Gen. Butler's Ready Wit.

I see that Watkins Grant of Boston, has lately been telling some stories about Gen. Butler. I have in mind several good ones which he didn't tell. Once when Gen. Butler was in congress he rose in his place and gently insinuated that the member who was occupying the floor was transgressing the limit of debate. "Why, general," said the member, in reproachful tones, "you divided your time with me." "I know I did," rejoined the grim old warrior, "but I did not divide eternity with you." But perhaps Butler's most savage retort was made in a political convention, in which a distinguished Unitarian divine, I think it was James Freeman Clarke, sat as a delegate. While the subject of candidates was being discussed this clergyman announced that if a certain nomination was made he would bolt it. "Very likely," Butler blurted out. "You are good at bolting; in your religion you bolt two-thirds of the Trinity." The convention broke into a roar of laughter in which the clergyman joined.—New York Mail and Express.

RACE PROBLEM DISCUSSION

Conference to Be Held in Montgomery May 8, 9 and 10.

STRONG PROGRAM; LARGE ATTENDANCE

Ex-Secretary Herbert, Burke Cochran, Gov. Johnston, C. R. Breckenridge, Gov. McCorkle and Dr. Curry Among the Speakers.

Notice has already been made of the Inter-State Conference at Montgomery, Ala., on the 8th, 9th and 10th of May for the discussion of race problems in relations to the welfare of the south. This conference is to be held under the auspices of the Southern Society, and it is to be controlled entirely by southern men. The movement originated in Montgomery, and it has already become representative of the various ecclesiastical, educational and political forces in the life of the south. Visitors from all quarters of the country are expected, and terms have been arranged with the Southeastern Traffic Association for a rate of one fare and a third to Montgomery and return upon the certificate plan.

The program is one of deep and varied interest. The sessions of the conference will be held in the new Auditorium at Montgomery, and they will be opened on the evening of May 8, at 8 o'clock. The Hon. J. B. Gaston, of Montgomery, will call the meeting to order as the temporary chairman, and will introduce the Hon. E. B. Joseph, mayor of the city, who will in a brief address deliver Montgomery's welcome to the visitors. The Hon. J. F. Johnston, governor of Alabama, will then perform a like service as the chief executive of the state. Judge Gaston will then introduce the Hon. Hilary A. Herbert, ex-secretary of the navy, as the permanent chairman of the conference, and Mr. Herbert will deliver the chief address of the evening on "The Problems That Present Themselves."

On the following morning, May 9, at 10 o'clock, will begin the session of the Conference which will be devoted to the subject of "The Franchise in the South." The solution of this problem, which is pending in North Carolina, will be advocated by the Hon. Alfred M. Waddell, mayor of the city of Wilmington, N. C. A prominent jurist of the south will then speak either in behalf of the Mississippi or of the Louisiana provision. The set speeches will be closed by an important speech from ex-Governor McCorkle, of West Virginia, who will advocate such a suffrage test as will fairly bear alike upon both races. The meeting will then be opened to volunteer speeches from the floor under the ten minute rule. In order to prevent valueless discussion from consuming the time of the convention, the cards of the volunteer speakers must be submitted beforehand to the members of the executive committee, who will see that the various sides of the debate are fairly represented. On May 9, at 3:30 p. m. will take place the annual meeting of the Southern society.

On the evening of May 9 the conference will take up the discussion of the subject of "Popular Education in the South." This will open with a paper by Dr. Hollis Burke Frissell, the principal of Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va. Dr. Frissel is the head of the parent institution of this country for the industrial education of the negro race. It is the school where Booker T. Washington himself received his training. Dr. Frissell has proved the worthy successor of General Armstrong, the great founder of Hampton, and he is a man of broad patriotism—interested in all that concerns the educational welfare of both races in the south. Dr. Frissell will be followed by a prominent educator of the south, who will speak of the need of industrial education, especially for the white population. The closing speech appointed for the evening is to be by Dr. J. L. M. Curry, of Washington, D. C., agent of the Peabody and Slater funds and an educator and orator of national reputation. After general discussion, the session will adjourn to meet the next morning, May 10, for the discussion of the religious aspect of work among the Negro race. This subject will be handled in an able and interesting way by leading representatives of the Baptists, Methodists, Episcopalians, Presbyterians and Roman Catholics. On this closing day there will be an afternoon session, at 3 o'clock, for the consideration of the lynching problem. The discussion will be opened by a paper upon the legal defects in the penalties for the punishment of crimes against women, with a consideration of the remedies for such defects, and a general discussion of the legal aspect of the whole question. This topic will be presented by the Hon. Alex C. King, of Georgia. Following this paper the conference will take up the question "Is Lynching Advisable?" The negative will be presented by the Hon. Clifton R. Breckinridge, of Arkansas, ex-minister of the United States to the court of Russia. For many years he was a member of congress from Arkansas, and his father, John C. Breckinridge, was beloved throughout the south. Among those who, it is hoped, will join the discussion under the ten-minute rule are some of the strongest men in the south, including the Hon. John Temple Graves, of Atlanta, and Dr. Dreher, the principal of Roanoke College, Virginia.

The evening session of May the 10th will be opened by an address from Mr. Walter H. Page, of North Carolina, until recently editor of the Atlantic Monthly, of Boston, and now of the firm of Doubleday, Page & Co., New York City. Mr. Page will speak from his experience as a southern man upon "The Significance of the Color Line in Relation to the Race Problem."

After this address the Hon. W. Bourke Cochran, of New York, will deliver the oration of the evening on "The Negro as an American Problem." Mr. Cochran has long felt an intelligent and sympathetic interest in the great difficulties presented by the race problem to the south and the nation. He has expressed very warmly the feeling that southern men are peculiarly fitted to deal with the problem in their midst. The presence, however, of the negro in our civilization involves a responsibility which rests in a certain sense upon the whole country, and it is of this phase of the subject particularly that he has consented to speak. He has expressed the most cordial interest in the plans of the southern society, and his speech will indicate that the best sentiment of the north is in cordial and sympathetic touch with the best life of the south upon the subject of the negro as a national responsibility.

Mr. Cochran's opinions upon the subject of the franchise should carry great weight with the country at large. After this oration the conference will be adjourned with a brief word of farewell from Mr. Herbert, its presiding officer.

The officers of the executive committee of the Southern Society are giving of their best effort to make the conference worthy of Montgomery, of Alabama, and of the whole south. The membership of the Southern Society now extends through every southern state. Letters from every quarter are reaching the committee, which indicate that there will be a large attendance. There will be visitors from the north, and there will be many more from the various sections of the south. The address of the secretary of the executive committee is P. O. Box 370, Montgomery, Ala., and communications as to rooms, rates, etc., thus addressed will be turned over for reply to the committee on hospitality.

RAILROADS TIED UP.

Heavy Rains in Mississippi Doing Great Damage.

All railroad lines entering Jackson are indefinitely tied up as the result of the heavy rainfall, generally throughout Mississippi. The main line of the Illinois Central is flooded in several places, the chief obstacles being at the Camelback, and a washout bridge below Canton. The Yazoo branch of the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley is inundated at numerous places, and all of the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley road is also flooded and at several points between Jackson and Harriston the low lands are covered with water for miles.

The Alabama & Vicksburg road has also abandoned its trains, bridges being washed away and tracks under water at several places between Vicksburg and Meridian.

SURPRISED INSURGENTS.

Killed Fifty-three of Their Number and Captured Forty-four.

A Manila dispatch says: Captain Dodd, with a squadron of the Third cavalry, recently surrounded a village in Benguet province and surprised two hundred insurgents living in barracks, apparently a recruiting center for the province. The enemy lost fifty-three men killed. Our troops also captured forty-four men and burned the village. One American was wounded.

Hoke Smith Sells the Atlanta Journal.

Hon. Hoke Smith has sold his interest in the Atlanta Journal to H. M. Atkinson, Morris Brandon and J. R. Gray, of Atlanta. Complete control of the Journal passes into the hands of Mr. Atkinson and his associates, as the minority stockholders also disposed of their holdings. Mr. Smith realized three for one on his stock, and the money turned over to him for his fifty-three shares was $159,000. The minority stockholders received two to one. The amount involved in the entire transaction is $275,500.

Lake City Postoffice Re-established.

The postoffice at Lake City, S. C., has been re-established and Mrs. Della D. Carter (white) appointed postmistress. This was done upon petitions filed by nearly all of the white and colored citizens requesting the re-establishment of the office and this lady's appointment. There has been no postoffice at Lake City since the colored postmaster there was killed by a mob two years ago.

Kentucky Cases Before Supreme Court.

The cases involving the Kentucky governorship were docketed in the United States supreme court Monday. A brief, in which counsel for both Taylor and Beckham joined, was filed at the same time, asking for an early hearing.

Dr. Pearson of Chicago goes Mr. Carnegie one better in the matter of being his own executor. The revelation of Mr. Carnegie's profits last year have mitigated any fear that he was giving away his funds at a too rapid rate; but Dr. Pearson proposes to get rid of his remaining million and a half at once, reserving only an annuity during the rest of his life, and he is nearly 80. What he chiefly hopes for is that his example will be contagious. It may be with some rich men about his age, but in this phase of philanthropy the time element is important. It depends upon how long a man is willing to act as his own executor. The margin of working years left him will likely decide that. Dr. Pearson's example would, perhaps, have been more effective had his intentions been declared 15 or 20 years ago.

NEW MAJUBA HILL.

SPION KOP, WHERE BRITISH SUFFERED DEFEAT.

A Barren and Open Slope, the Ridges of Which Are So Steep That Conquest Is Almost Impossible — Center of a Group of Kops—Joubert and Jameson.

Spion Kop, the new Majuba Hill, where the British experienced the worst reverse of the present South African campaign, is a rugged mountain crest of about 4,600 feet elevation, and nearly fourteen miles south and a little west of Ladysmith. Gen. Buller described it as a "barren and open slope, the ridges so steep that guns cannot be placed upon them." It is one of innumerable kops or plateau peaks lying between the Tugela river and Ladysmith, and is as formidable a place of defense as the first eastern ridges of the Rocky mountains would be. Old Majuba Hill, where Sir George Colley fell before the Boers in 1881, is nearly 8,000 feet high, but Spion Kop is high enough to have served the purpose of the Boers well this time. Near it, crowned by Boer batteries, are half a dozen other kops, all higher than the one Gen. Warren scaled only to be defeated. Some of them are 4,700 feet in elevation, others 4,800 feet and 4,900 feet. Guns mounted upon them, properly depressed, would sweep Spion Kop so that nothing living could remain upon its summit. Between the kops are ragged ravines, affording fine retreats for Boer riflemen, whose duty it would be to harass a retreating enemy. The rocks are rough, difficult to climb over and unprotected by tree or bush. From the Tugela river almost to Ladysmith is constant rise of land that blisters with heat by day and is dangerously chill by night.

An interesting story is told in connection with the capture of the Jameson raiding party by the Boers in 1896, and shows how near to summary punishment Dr. Jameson and his officers were at that time. A score of the leaders of the Boers had assembled to decide their fate. The majority favored the shooting of all concerned in the raid and, while President Kruger advocated mercy and used all his great power to make his counsel prevail, his efforts were of no avail. Finally Gen. Joubert, who sided with Oom Paul, got a hearing and as a last effort, throwing argument aside, related the following parable: "Friends," he said, "suppose I have a farm, and my neighbor's dogs are always worrying and killing my sheep, what would you advise me to do? Shall I kill the dogs and stop the nuisance? If I do so, my neighbor may come to me and say, 'You have killed my dogs; they were of much greater value than your sheep, and you will have to pay for it!' Would I not be better advised to catch the dogs, to bring them to their master, and say: 'Your dogs are worrying and killing my sheep; take your dogs, punish them, and refund me for the loss I have suffered?'" Nobody answered, and Gen. Joubert continued, "We have caught the dogs. Would it not be better to send them back to the English government for punishment and to claim damages instead of giving them a cause to demand reparation, and to send from their kennel other and maybe worse dogs to worry us?"

The parable turned the scales.

The codfish are feeding on the young lobsters to such an extent that it will not take long to exterminate them. Through the efforts of the United States fish commission codfish seems to have increased greatly in numbers. The fishermen around Block Island and Watch Hill say that cod are growing more plentiful every year, and they say further that when dressing codfish they frequently find young lobsters whole inside of the larger fish. Evidently young lobsters are becoming a delicate morsel for some of their companions of the sea.

FLOGGING IN BRITISH NAVY.

Still in Practice, as the Following Account Shows.

On Sept. 23 Thomas McGeehan, late second-class leading stoker of her majesty's ship Doris, was flogged at Simon's Town for the offense of malingering, says London Truth. The report of the circumstances, which appeared in the Western Morning News of Oct. 24, is not very lucid, but I gather from it that the malingering took place while the man was undergoing a sentence of imprisonment on the Penelope for striking a chief stoker. A "medical survey" was first held on the accused, which presumably resulted in a finding that he had been shamming sickness. On this a board of three officers sentenced the man to eighteen lashes. "After receiving eleven lashes," said the report, "the prisoner became insensible, and the medical officer present (the staff surgeon of the Monarch) stopped the cruel proceeding, and the wretched man was borne bleeding and senseless to his cell." There does not appear, therefore, to be any suggestion that he was malingering this time. The Western Morning News, in chronicling this incident, expresses the hope that it may lead to a renewed agitation for the abolition of flogging in the navy. I can hardly conceive it possible that any one possessed of ordinary human feeling will fail to join us in this hope. As to the desirability of corporal punishment, whether in the navy or elsewhere, for certain peculiarly brutal classes of crime, opinion may differ. But the idea of flogging a man senseless for such a trumpery offense as that of pretended sickness to evade prison discipline is revolting in the most elementary feelings of justice and humanity. The reader will note that this poor wretch was sentenced (by three officers commanding her majesty's ships, and with the approval of the commander-in-chief of the station) to receive eighteen lashes, and what that punishment would have meant, had it been carried out, may be judged from the fact that the man had become senseless from pain and a medical officer had to interfere before two-thirds of the sentence had been executed. Such a result, considered in conjunction with the paltry character of the "crime" for which this murderous penalty was imposed, should convince any one of the utter unfitness of many of our naval officers to be intrusted with such powers over their subordinates.

Insects Committing Suicide.

It is stated that insects have been known deliberately to kill themselves under certain forms of torture or provocation. Experiments have been tried upon wasps, which are extremely sensitive to benzine and dislike the odor very much. A tumbler was sprinkled with benzine, then inverted over a wasp, which at once attacked a bit of paper that was under the glass. Finally the wasp appeared to become desperate. He threw himself on his back, bent himself together and drove his sting three times into his body, then he died. Repeated trials convinced the scientists that wasps would, under these circumstances, take their own lives, as several of them got out of their uncomfortable atmosphere in this way.

The process by which an English factory converts rancid butter, bought up at a low price, into fresh butter is stated to consist in working into a uniform semi-liquid mass with fresh buttermilk, then blowing through this a current of hot air, and afterward a current of cold air. The former expels the butyric acid to which the smell and taste of rancid butter are due, while any impurities present fall to the bottom. The cold air separates the butter into globules, when it is kneaded with water, salted, colored a little if necessary and is ready for sale as fresh butter.

BLUES

Ever have "the blues"? Then you know how dark everything looks. You are completely discouraged and cannot throw off that terrible depression. A little work looks like a big mountain; a little noise sounds like the roar of a cannon; and a little sleep is all you can secure, night after night.

That's
Nerve Exhaustion

The truth of the matter is, your nerves have been poisoned and weakened with the impurities in your blood. The thing for you to do is to get rid of these impurities just as soon as you can.

You want a blood-purifying medicine,—a perfect Sarsaparilla,—that's what you want. You want a Sarsaparilla that is the strongest and best nerve tonic you can buy, too.

That's AYER'S

"The only Sarsaparilla made under the personal supervision of three graduates: a graduate in pharmacy, a graduate in chemistry, and a graduate in medicine."

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

"During last year I was suffering from nervous prostration. For weeks I grew worse, became thin, could not sleep, had no appetite, and was in a wretched condition. After taking several kinds of medicines without result, I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla with more than pleasing results. My appetite returned, I slept soundly, my strength and weight increased, and now I am well and strong without the slightest trace of my old trouble. Indeed, I would hardly believe it possible for medicine to bring about such a change in any person."—CLARA MEALEY, Winter Hill, Somerville, Mass., Dec. 21, 1899.

Stumbled, but Won a Wife.

Gov. Aaron V. Brown of Tennessee was a Chesterfield for politeness and a Talleyrand for wit. When he, a much admired widower, was paying his addresses—as yet unavowed—to an attractive young widow, he called at her house one day and was ushered into a room darkened to the degree which the prevailing fashion of those days declared to be elegant, and before the governor had familiarized himself with the surrounding objects in the gloom the young widow entered the room. With enthusiastic devotion he advanced to meet her hastily, not noticing a low stool directly in his path; way; unhappily, he stumbled over it and plumped upon his knees directly at the feet of the object of his affections. Before she could utter a word of apology or sympathy the adroit governor, seizing her hand, exclaimed: "Madam, a happy accident has brought me where inclination has long led me." The formal declaration which followed was, of course, successful, for such ready gallantry could not be resisted.—February Ladies' Home Journal.

BACON INQUIRY IS ANSWERED

Army Officers In Cuba Are Paid Extra Salaries.

ROOT MAKES ADMISSION

War Secretary Further Says That the Money Is Well Earned--Criticism By Washington Post.

A Washington special says: Senator Bacon's resolution calling for facts about extra compensation paid to army officers in high statione in Cuba was adopted by the senate Saturday, as was the other one on the same line calling for the details of certain elaborate expenditures said to have been made in fitting up quarters for the American representatives in Havana.

The introduction of the resolutions, and their consideration, brought forth not only a lively discussion in the senate, in which some startling admissions were made, but it brought from the secretary of war the admission that the allegations are true.

Secretary Root is quoted as admitting that American army officers now occupying administrative positions in Cuba, are drawing additional salaries of Cuban revenues.

The Washington Post, referring to the matter, says:

"Most surprising of the misuse of this Cuban money is that it has had the sanction of the administration, as represented by the president and Secretary Root. The Cubans have, of course, been powerless. They have not even been consulted. The United States is in control of the island, and so in the pockets of American army officers thousands of dollars of Cuban revenues merely jingle, alongside of the dollars regularly paid to these officers as their legal salaries."

This act, which is in direct conflict with the specific law which provides that no army officer shall receive extra compensation by pointing out that it has only gone to a few, and that the money which went to these favored few came from the revenues of Cuba, and not from the funds for the payment of army officers' salaries.

Senator Bacon says he will push the investigation vigorously, as he proposes to get to the bottom of these charges. Secretary Root, in admitting the facts, also stated that the officers who were doubly paid, were worth more than their salaries from this government, and this he considered an extenuating circumstance.

TAYLOR IN NEW YORK.

Appeals to Governor Roosevelt to Assist and Protect Him.

The New York World publishes the following in Sunday's issue: W. S. Taylor, governor of Kentucky, is in New York in consequence of the finding of an indictment against him by the grand jury of Frankfort, charging him with being an accessory before the fact to the murder of William E. Goebel. He appealed to Governor Roosevelt asking that any demand for extradition be denied. The interview between the governor of Kentucky and the governor of New York lasted for an hour and a half. The utmost secrecy was observed.

According to a Frankfort dispatch the indictment against the Republican Governor Taylor, charged with being an accessory to the murder, will be held up till after the argument of the governorship contest cast, which is docketed for hearing before the supreme court at Washington, April 30th, and it is said by persons in the councils of the prosecution that no steps will be taken in the case till after that time.

The rumor that Governor Beckham had been applied to for a requisition is without foundation.

DEAD EMPLOYEE HONORED.

All Railroad Traffic Suspended While Body Was Buried.

The Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis and Western and Atlantic railroads paid a last tribute to the memory of Superintendent of Motive Power James Cullen, who died in Nashville Thursday night, and was buried Saturday at noon.

TO PAY EXPENSES.

Resolution Introduced In Senate Asking For $25,000.

Senator Davis has introduced an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill appropriating $25,000 for defraying the expenses of a delegation from United States to the international conference of American states, proposed to be held in Mexico in the interest of the union of American republics. The amendment is offered in response to suggestion by president.

BOERS ACTIVE.

They Are Pressing Britons at Wepener and Skirmishes Are Frequent.

Latest dispatches arriving in London from the seat of war, though meager and unsatisfactory, clearly indicate renewed activity at all points where the British and Boer forces are in striking distance of each other. Interest for the moment centers at Dewets dorp and Wepener, with fighting evidently in progress.

A dispatch from Ailwalnorth of April 21st says there was heavy firing on the previous day between Dewets dorp and Wepener, and around Wepener on Saturday, but no particulars have been received. A special dispatch from Masue dated Saturday, April 21st, says:

"The investment of Wepener continues. The Boers seem determined to do their utmost to capture the garrison before relief arrives. Severe fighting appears imminent."

The activity of the Boers at Elandslaagte apparently has failed to draw General Buller, if that was its object, into doing more than repel the attack made on his advance posts. A dispatch from Warrenton, also dated Saturday, says:

"There has been intermittent and ineffective sniping by the Boers, who also fired a few shells, both during the day and night at the station, the past two days."

Spenser Wilkinson, reviewing the sitution in South Africa for the Associated Press, says:

"The Boers admirably understand how to suit their tactics and strategy to the country. Their art consists in compelling the British to attack and make exhausting marches across a country ill-provided with roads. Thus their first step is to surround in superior force any isolated party of British. This compels the British, if they try to escape, to attack under conditions which give all the advantages of cover and defensive use of rifle fire to the Boer force. The British commander-in-chief is then forced to send a relief expedition from a distance. The Boer force interposes, and the British, in order to get forward, are again compelled to attack.

"This is the history of Wepener, where Colonel Dalghety has 1,500 men surrounded by Boers. General Brabant, from the south, and General Rundle, from the west, have to fight their way to the relief of Dalghety.

"General Rundle has part of his own and General Chermside's divisions, which if fully present would make 18,000 men. His plan should be to try to surround the Boers in front of him, but as they ride and his men walk, he may find this impracticable and have to push them back slowly by a combination of a flank with a frontal attack.

"The Boers are using their small forces with great energy. A day or two ago they were reconnoitering General Roberts' position north of Bloemfontein. Next they attacked Lord Methuen, who was retiring toward Boshof.

COLSON ACQUITTED.

Jury Declares Kentuckian Not Guilty of the Murder of Lieutenant Scott.

Ex-Congressman David J. Colson, who was tried at Frankfort, Ky., for the murder of Lieutenant Ethelbert Scott and Luther W. Demaree, was acquitted at 6:35 o'clock Saturday evening. The trial lasted four days. The jury was out only eighteen minutes. There was silence as the jury filed into the court, and the court clerk, Ford, read the verdict.

As the last words were read, the crowd arose and sent up a wild cheer. Colonel Colson, the defendant, was standing near the witness chair. The crowd took no notice of the court officers, who pounded vigorously for order, but piled over the railings surrounding Colson and insisted on shaking hands with him. They gave an ovation to the jury and Colonel James Andrews, Colson's chief counsel. The cheering was kept up till Colonel Colson left the court room, and as he did so, it was taken up by the Beckham soldiers in front of the court house, to which the colonel very very gracefully returned the salute.

Colson received messages from all over the state congratulating him on his acquittal. The tragedy which resulted in Colson's trial was a duel with Lieutenant Ethelbert F. Scott in the lobby of the Capital hotel in Frankfort, in which Colson killed his antagonist, Scott, and Luther W. Demaree and Charles Julian, bystanders, and wounded Captain B. B. Golden.

Both Scott and Colson emptied their pistols, fifteen or twenty shots being fired in all. Scott had seven bullets in his body; Colson was wounded in the arm. He received the wound early in the fight and it was shown that Scott fired first.

Colonel Colson was tried on an indictment charging him with the murder of Scott. He is also indicted for killing Demaree, but this will now be dismissed.

EX-BANKER IN TROUBLE.

Grand Jury Indicts Him For Alleged Embezzlement.

An indictment was returned by the grand jury at Lima. Ohio, Friday afternoon against N. L. Michael, ex-vice president of the American National bank, which was mysteriously robbed two years ago of $18,000. Michael declared some time ago that the efforts to connect him with looting the now defunct bank were being made for the purpose of blackmail.

LOSS BY FLOOD IS APPALLING

States of Mississippi and Louisiana Suffer.

HIGH WATER EVERYWHERE

Many Houses and Railroads Are Either Washed Away Or Greatly Damaged. Terrible Loss of Animal Life.

A special to the Memphis Commercial-Appeal from New Orleans under date of April 20 says:

The flood which commenced the early part of the week has already caused, at a conservative estimate, fully $3,000,000 loss in central and southern Mississippi, to say nothing of the damages by the railroads. The extent of the losses have not yet been fully realized, and it may be some days yet before an accurate total can be reached. For days mail communication has been totally cut off between those localities which have suffered most and the outside world, while telegraph lines suffered greatly, so that the news is just now beginning to arrive by wire.

In Louisiana, too, the damage done by the unprecedented rains was great, but in this state they are more inferential than positive. A special from Columbia, Miss., which was received Friday night, fixes the loss in that little town and its immediate vicinity at $500,000.

Many farm houses were carried away by the mad waters, the occupants barely escaping with their lives, and the number of cattle destroyed was great. A great many gins and mill houses were washed away and many saw mills saw their lumber piles melted away as if by magic.

Nearly every big bridge around Columbia was swept down stream. Pearl river is now higher that it has been known for many years. Miles and miles of the New Orleans and Northeastern track are still under water. Honey island, the rendezvous of the noted train robber, Burch, is under twenty feet of water, and the island, which has for years been one of the neutral game preserves of the south, is now devoid of wild animals. Hundreds of deer were drowned, and the hills near the banks of Pearl river are now the temporary abiding places of all manner of four-footed life. The log booms in the neighborhood of Pearlington were all carried away and the loss sustained in this direction alone amounts to thousands of dollars.

Distressing news comes from Hickory, Miss., a small town on this road, which is now completely surrounded by water and inundated in many localities. Hundreds of hogs and cattle near this place were drowned and miles of fencing have been washed away. The latest advices from the town of Enterprise state that the losses there have been great and much destruction prevails. Half a score of towns are completely cut off from the outside world, as they have been since the early part of the week. From Chunky river swamp, near Enterprise, comes the news of a heavy loss of life.

The Illinois Central road is crippled badly. The New Orleans and Northeastern, the East Louisiana and the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley are as yet unable to move trains and the Mobile and Ohio is also a heavy sufferer.

BUYS COPPER MINE STOCK.

Standard Oil Company Secures Control of Valuable Property.

A Salisbury, N. C., special says: The recent rumor that the Standard Oil Company was trying to secure a controlling interest in the Union copper mine was not altogether an idle one, for now they own all the shares of stock except $100,000, retained by W. G. Newman. This means that the Standard Oil Company will have the controlling interest in the mine in future. Those who know most about the transaction state that the consideration Mr. Newman received was enormous.

SCOTT THE AGGRESSOR.

Witnesses Testify That Dead Man Fired First Shot.

In the Colson trial at Frankfort, Ky., Friday, William Smoot testified that he overheard Lieutenant Scott and Golden talking in front of the Capitol hotel a few minutes before the tragedy occurred, in which Scott and two others were killed. Smoot heard Scott say to Golden:

"This trouble has been brewing long enough and has got to end now," to which Golden replied:

"Whatever you do, don't let him get the drop on you."

Max Hansberry and Max Redin, of Midway, both testified that Scott fired the first shot.

Pascagoula Bridge Wrecked.

A Scranton, Miss., dispatch says: One-half of the L. and N.'s magnificent bridge over the the West Pascagoula river is gone, and if the wind shifts the bridge will be totally destroyed. The wreck of the structure now is bad, and it will require much time to repair it.

Boers Stronger Than Ever.

Latest advices state that Boers around Wepener have been reinforced and are now stronger than ever.

CONVENTION SPLIT.

Tennessee Republicans Will Send Two Sets of Delegates To Philadelphia.

A Nashville special says: The expected split in the Tennessee State Republican Convention came Friday with the result that not only were two delegations sent to the Philadelphia convention, but two full state tickets were nominated, two platforms adopted and two state committees named. The Evans men were patient to the supreme moment and exhausted their resources for getting what they called fair treatment before choosing the only alternative of bolting or submitting.

The convention sat for two hours awaiting the report of the committee on credentials, which had worked all night Thursday. This committee finally reported at noon Friday, recommending the seating of the Brownlow delegation in twenty-three counties, the Evans delegation in one county, and that both delegations be seated and the vote divided into twelve counties.

A minority report, favoring the seating of the Evans delegations in nineteen counties was presented, and a motion to substitute the minority for the majority report was voted on without debate, the vote being ayes, 163; noes, 309.

As soon as this result was announced Colonel W. S. Tipton hurried to the rear of the hall, and after a moment's consultation with Newell Sanders, Evans' manager, returned and called upon all of Evans' friends and all the delegates who were for the fair thing to leave the hall. The majority of the Evans delegates left and proceeded to the lower floor of the capitol, where Colonel Tipton made a speech, telling how Turneyism in Tennessee and Goebelism in Kentucky had been outdone.

A band, which was on hand, then struck up a lively tune and the hundred or so delegates who had quit the hall and the four hundred or more who had been refused admission, marched to the Amusement hall and organized another convention.

HIT CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS.

Rev. Vance Declares Their Creed As Senseless and Silly.

A sensation marked the first session the Christian Endeavors' convention in Atlanta, Ga., Thursday night. Rev. James I. Vance, of Nashville, in the course of an able sermon, attacked the Christian Scienists' creed vigorously and condemned it as senseless and silly.

Dr. Vance made an allusion in his remarks which is believed to be at least a partial endorsement of Dr. Hillis' and Dr. Parkhurst's attack on the Westminster confession of faith. He said:

"I want to say that I do not delieve we should be held back from truth by a dead hand. The modern conception of God is truer, I believe, than it has ever been before. If I am clinging to any faith that can be torn down by the light of truth, the sooner I find it out the better it will be for me."

Referring to Christian Scientists, he said:

"How do you explain that so many senseless and silly isms get so many followers? Any creed can get a following these days. If a man should say that dropping off this house and falling on the hard flag stones below is the only way to salvation some people would drop off the house to be saved. Take, for example, Christian Science. Can you explain how it is that sensible people can bring themselves to believe in such a creed as that? I believe it is because they have never been able to establish themselves in God's doctrine."

The preacher took for his text the tenth verse of the fifth chapter of first Peter, and founded on it his subject: "God's Altar Stairs to Perfection."

He referred to the admirable faith of the Boers in the South African war.

"Whatever side we are in sympathy with," he said, "we cannot help but admire the Boers for their sublime faith in their God."

Close of Commercial Congress.

The eleventh annual session of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial congress adjourned at Houston, Texas, Friday afternoon to meet next year in Cripple Creek, Col. A plan was adopted for the organization of the congress on a permanent basis.

FOR HAWAIIAN GOVERNMENT.

Measure the Subject of Sharp Criticism In Senate.

A Washington dispatch says: The senate had under consideration during the greater part of Friday's session the conference report on the Hawaiian civil government measure. Senator Cullom made an extended explanation of the changes in the bill. The report was the subject of sharp criticism.

Youtsey Plead "Not Guilty."

In the circuit court at Frankfort, Friday, the case of Henry E. Youtsey, one of the men indicted as principals in the assassination of Henry Goebel, was called. Youtsey pleaded not guilty.

SULTAN DON'T CARE.

Diplomats Think That Turk Would Welcome War.

A special to The New York World from Washington says:

"It is intimated by diplomats familiar with the situation that the sultan of Turkey does not care particularly whether an ultimatum is issued by the United States because of the neglect to pay the claim for $100,000 which the United States is now demanding after years of promises, as he has means of reprisal at hand."

BLOODIEST WEEK OF ALL THE WAR

Filipinos Go Against Americans With Reckless Daring.

THEY FALL BY HUNDREDS.

Our Losses are Slight But Troops Are Kept Unusually Busy.

According to advices from Manila the past week was one of the bloodiest of the war since the first day's fighting around Manila.

Authentic reports, mostly official, shows a total of 378 Filipinos killed, twelve officers and 244 men captured and many more wounded. The number of wounded is hardly guessable. Considering that the Filipinos entirely lack hospital facilities, a great majority of the wounded will die. Probably the week's work finished 1,000 insurgents. The Americans' total loss was nine killed and sixteen wounded. Two sergeants and one private were killed in ambushes while escorting provision trains.

The insurgents have been aggressive in almost every province of Luzon. General Pio del Pilar's band, numbering 300, which was out of sight for three months, the leader being reported killed, has reappeared in its old field about San Miguel. Pilar is supposed to be again in command. He gave the American garrison at San Miguel, consisting of three companies of the Thirty-fifth infantry, with a gatling, a three hours' fight, during a night attack. The loss of the insurgents in this engagement is not included in the foregoing total, as they removed their dead and wounded, but presumably it was considerable.

Twenty Filipinos in the province of Batangas attacked Lieutenant Wende, who with eight men, was scouting near San Jose. The lieutenant and five men were wounded and one private was killed.

Sergeant Lendoius, of the Thirty-fifth infantry, was badly wounded in an ambush near Baliang. Lieutenant Balch, of the Thirty-seventh infantry, with seventy men, had a five hours' fight with 400 insurgents in the Nueva Caceras district. Twenty of the insurgents were killed.

Colonel Smith, of the Seventeenth infantry, who captured General Montenegro and brought him to Manila, is in the isolation hospital suffering from smallpox, presumably caught from the Filipinos.

Colonel Smith's command captured 150 officers and men with Montenegro. The officers were brought to Manila. Montenegro, who was formerly one of the most dapper officers in the Filipino army, looks worn and haggard. He says he had led a terrible life for months, and he has offered to return to the north with Colonel Smith to endeavor to persuade his former comrades of the uselessness of opposing the Americans.

One hundred Spanish prisoners from the province of Tayabas, South Luzon, have arrived at Malina.

RESOLUTION OF INQUIRY

Is Made By Representative Livingston Regarding Gaynor Case.

Representative Livingston, of Georgia, introduced a resolution in the house Saturday calling upon the attorney general to inform the representatives what further steps, if any, have been taken to cause Benjamin D. Greene, John T. Gaynor, Edward H. Gaynor and W. T. Gaynor to be remanded to the jurisdiction of the district court of the southern district of Georgia for trial.

The resolution recites that the defendants were duly indicted in the courts of the Savannah district for defrauding the government of more than two million dollars, in connection with Captain O. M. Carter; that the defendants were arrested in New York upon requisition, and ordered by Commissioner Shields to be delivered, and that Judge Brown, of New York, overruled the order.

There is a bill now pending to extend jurisdiction in this case to the southern district of Georgia, but there is a disposition on the part of the chairman of the house commmittee on judiciary to delay the matter in every possible way.

DECLINED THE PROPOSITION.

North Carolina Populist Asked For Joint Debate With Democrats.

A Raleigh, N.C., dispatch says: Saturday, Democratic State Chairman Simmons received a letter from Populist State Chairman Marion Butler saying the Populist candidates for state offices and senator desire a joint discussion with the Democratic candidates for said position "in order that the voters who must next August vote in approval or disapproval of the proposed constitutional amendment, the election laws and other issues in North Carolina, may hear the facts and arguments which may be presented by both sides, and render their verdict accordingly."

Chairman Simmons in reply respectfully declined the proposition.

MANILA MARKET CLOSED.

The Place Discovered to Be a Plague Spot And Will Be Burned.

The sudden deaths of Filipinos and Chinamen in Quiapo market in Manila have led to an investigation showing that fifteen cases of the plague, fourteen of which were fatal, have occurred within a week. The market is located in the center of the city and has been ordered closed and burned.

STATE NEWS GLEANINGS.

Capt. A. W. Bowie Killed by a Freight Train.

Captain A. W. Bowie, one of the oldest and most prominent citizens of Talladega county, was killed Monday morning at 8 o'clock by a freight train on the Southern railway.

The accident occurred near the depot where the train was switching. Captain Bowie was standing on the track apparently unconscious of his danger, and was struck by the train and dragged several feet before the train could be stopped. His body was not mangled, the unfortunate old man having been struck on the head, which caused death.

Captain Bowie was 78 years old and was a soldier in both the Mexican and civil wars, gaining his title as commander of Company D, First Alabama Infantry. He leaves several sons, J. C., F. B., A. Y., and Leroy Bowie, of Talladega, and Hon. Sid J. Bowie, of Anniston.

Died From Overjoy.

A telegram was received in Huntsville announcing the sudden death at Washington of Christopher Columbus, a well known negro preacher. The cause of death was overjoy. Columbus was a veteran of the union army, having been a member of one of the negro regiments that fought in the civil war, and went to Washington a short while ago to put in a claim for a pension. The claim was allowed. and back pensions to the amount of $300 ordered paid. This sudden step from poverty to comparative affluence had some strange effect and caused death.

Gen. Wheeler Resigns.

The following letter explains itself:

"To Governor Joseph F. Johnston,
Montgomery, Ala.:

"Sir—I forwarded my resignation as a member of congress to you yesterday. It has been suggested that it might be well if it were accepted to take effect when my successor is elected, as that would enable me to do more in working for the district in the meantime, but that is a matter for your better judgment.

"Very respectfully yours,
"JOSEPH WHEELER."

The Floods Around Selma.

A Selma dispatch says: The first train for several days over the Southern came in Monday morning from Meridian via Akron. Trains are now running only as far as Faunsdale, just this side of Demopolis. The Southern track is under water for ten miles this side of the Tombigbee river and the bridge at Devil's Run is floating, and several box cars had to be left on it to keep it in place. The Cahaba river is two miles wide and the Alabama at this point is still rising slowly.

Blackman Nominated.

Fred L. Blackman, of Anniston, a law partner of Knox & Bowie, and a strong Morgan man, was nominated for state senator from the Seventh district, composed of Calhoun and Cleburne counties in the democratic convention held Monday.

Prof. J. S. Laverty, of Talladega, has discovered a large deposit of iron ore on his place near Shocco Springs. There are 120 acres of the land, and the ore analyzes a very fine grade.

A fine vein of coal has been opened up a few miles south of Moulton. Arrangements will be made to develop the property at once.

In Command of Asiatic Squadron.

According to cable advices to the navy department, Rear Admiral George C. Remey assumed command of the Asiatic station Friday.

Mississippi Veterans to Meet.

Brig.-Gen. George V. White, commanding the Mississippi Division of United Confederate Veterans, has issued a general order calling for a meeting at Vicksburg on the second day of May, with a special request to all camps in his brigade to attend in a body.

Turkish Boat Destroyed.

News has just been received from Beyrout, Syria, to the effect that the Turkish torpedo boat Schmayl blew up in that harbor April 21, resulting in the loss of twenty-three lives.

ROBERTS ADVANCES TOWARDS PRETORIA

News From Seat of War In Transvaal Difficult To Obtain.

CENSORSHIP VERY STRICT

Garrison At Mafeking Is Asked To Hold Out a Little Longer.

A London special says: The report of the fighting at Karee Siding, six miles north of Glen, collected in a special dispatch from Bloemfontein Friday, may be the first news of the progress of the British advance on Pretoria, but even if this were only an unimportant skirmish, there are many other indications that Lord Roberts is either starting or has already started for the northern goal. A dispatch from Capetown under Friday's date says:

The censorship restrictions have been increased, owing to the movement of the troops. All the dispatches bear traces of the strenuous efforts of the correspondents to give their papers an inkling of what is afoot.

The Boers south of Bloemfontein are reported to be retreating. Large commands were seen April 19 near Thaba N'Chu moving to the north. Their progress was slow, however, owing to the terrible condition of the country.

By way of Pretoria comes a report that fever is decimating the Mafeking garrison, and a letter from the mayor of Mafeking says Lord Roberts asked Colonel Baden-Powell to hold out until May 20.

Cecil Rhodes will return to Cape Town at once. The announcement of his departure was unexpected. Never has a man so prominently connected with the vital questions of the day paid such a quiet visit to London. It is learned that the so-called "empire maker" came to England purely on business connected with the British Chartered South African company and the DeBeers Mines company.

He has accomplished his objects, and hating inaction and not wishing to meet people or freely express his views, has suddenly determined to return to South Africa, where he will watch the interests of these two companies. Mr. Rhodes has absolutely refused to be interviewed, though privately he has expressed scathing comments on several of the generals still holding commands at the front. Lady Gatacre will be a fellow passenger of Mr. Rhodes. She is going as far as Madeira to meet her husband, the British general, who has been called back to England.

RECEIVER IN CHARGE.

Creditors of Southern Agricultural Works Appeal To Court.

Petition for involuntary bankruptcy was filed in the Federal court at Atlanta, Ga., Thursday afternoon against the Southern Agricultural Works, of that city, alleging insolvency. The petitioners were V. H. Krirgshaber, the Atlanta Terra Cotta company and S. Spiro, whose aggregate claims are over seven thousand dollars.

In addition to the bankruptcy petition a bill for receiver was filed by the same creditors, asking that some one be appointed to take charge of the property. The case was set for a hearing by Judge W. T. Newman for 10 o'clock Friday morning.

When the case was called Judge Newman, by consent of parties interested, named George W. Parrott receiver.

According to order issued by Judge Newman, Mr. Parrott will take immediate charge of the property. He will be required to give bond in the sum of $20,000.

The failure of the Southern Agricultural Work, recalls the suicide of its former president, Mr. Sigmund Landauer, which occurred on the banks of the Chattahoochee six months ago. His brother, Mr. Adolph Landauer, who has recently been in charge of the business, left the city immediately after the bankruptcy proceeding were instituted.

Dreyfus Located.

Former Captain Dreyfus arrived in Geneva Friday and drove with his nephew, M. Paul Valabrogue, to Cologne, where he has taken a villa for the season.

DEPEND ON ROAST BEEF.

Department Now Forced to Use Canned Goods In Philippines.

The war department officials have been compelled to resort to the use of canned roast beef in the subsistence of the army in the Philippines. This is due to the fact that it is absolutely essential that the soldiers shall be served with fresh meat and the impossibility of providing refrigerated beef or cattle on the hoof under existing conditions.

When the bulk of the army was located near the seashore and at easily accessible points, there was no difficulty in providing fresh meats.

FLOODS SUBSIDING.

Reports From Mississippi of a More Encouraging Nature.

A Jackson, Miss., special says: The flood situation is considerably improved and the Illinois Central road is getting its trains through to New Orleans over the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley tracks without difficulty.

All previous estimates of damage to railroad and farming interests have been multiplied as the extent of facts of the situation are gathered.

THE ✶ CHRONICLE.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR CONGRESS.

The Chronicle is authorized to announce Hon. B. Dudley Williams, of Calhoun county, as a candidate for representative in the lower house of congress, from the Fourth congressional district of Alabama, subject to the action of the democratic district convention.

SITUATION IN SHELBY COUNTY.

The chances of the democrats for winning the next election in Shelby county become brighter every day. It is becoming more and more evident to the people of the county that a love of office is about the only principle that moves the leaders of either the populite or republican parties in this county. We might add to this platform a hatred of the democratic party, and we will have all the motive that either party has for fighting. They have nothing in common with each other. Take the platforms of the national republican party and of the national populite party and you will see that the measures which they advocate are as different as measures possibly can be. The principles of the republican party today are nearer those of the democratic party than they are to the principles which are claimed by the populite party. And in the same way the principles of the populite party are nearer the principles of the democratic party than they are to the platform of the republican party. But a little thing like this has no effect on the leaders of these parties in Shelby county. To them the pleasures of an office appeal very much more strongly than do all the princi, ples for which our forefathers fought, bled and died.

We are reminded of an old school teacher who applied to the trustees of a school in Georgia for a position. The trustees said they must first know his position on the question as to whether the world was round or flat. The teacher said that he was familiar with both systems and that he would teach the one that would best please his patrons. The populite and republican leaders are ready to adopt any system that will keep them in office, and the question of principle is a thing that never troubles them in the least.

We see that this is true, for as soon as they are in power they find there are not enough offices for all of the faithful brethren, and they also find that like the officeholders of Thomas Jefferson, "few of them die and none of them resign." And we now see them fighting each other more fiercely than they fought the democrats in the last election. If there were enough good paying offices in the county fo- every populite and republican to have one, there would be no trouble and the fusionists would still love one another. But when they fight a hard fight and win it does seem to them that they themselves should have an office to pay for the labor, and when they find that some other man wants the same office that seems so attractive to them a trouble begins, that up to the present time no doctor has been able to subdue, and it now looks very much as if the honest men in the county would again get their dues.

Æsop used to tell of a dog that had stolen some meat and was carrying it across a stream of water. When he looked down into the stream he thought he saw another piece of meat and, as the dog was partly hog, he thought he would steal the other piece as well. But when he went to snap at the piece in the water he dropped the piece that he had in his mouth, and wound up with no meat at all. The fusion plan worked very well and both sides had some offices, but now it seems as if each side thinks that many offices are better than a few and are about to turn loose what they have in a wild scramble to get more.

All of this is so plain to the people of the county that it is hardly worth while to tell them of it. And if the democrats will only be reasonably active from now until August we will have no difficulty in putting Shelby county back where she belongs, and we will for the first time in several years be represented in the legislature of the state.

Speaking of the indictment that Mr. Brand read against Mr. Deans last Monday night, we all remember that in the last campaign it was freely reported by the populites that if McMillan and Lyman were elected the first thing they would do would be to pass a stock law, and it must be a very pleasant thought to the populites who voted for Longshore and Sturdivant to remember that they were so well represented in the legislature when the stock law was passed, and to recall the fact that it is the hand of their own probate judge that signs the order making the law apply to Shelby county. If the populites who don't want the stock law feel that they were any better off by having Sturdivant and Deans in the legislature, it is a pleasure that they are selfish enough to keep to themselves, for we have never heard of their telling anyone else about it.

Chairman Walls, of the middle-of-the-road republicans, is out in a circular calling a mass meeting for Saturday, May 12th, for the purpose of putting in the field a straight republican ticket. He says his brethren have strayed off into forbidden paths long enough, having been made tools of by the populists, and he urges them to return to the old lick-log and get back in line.

COTTON'S GREAT FUTURE.

G. E. W. in Scientific American.

The most remarkable advance in cotton for a quarter of a century has been made this winter, and our Southern cotton belt is in the process of a transformation that can hardly be comprehended by those not directly interested in the business. For the past three years cotton has been selling at 6 and 6½ cents per pound, and at that price there was little profit in the staple crop of the South; but right on top of the pessimistic predictions that cotton would never again prove a paying crop in this country, the price advances to 9 and 10 cents per pound. This advance does not represent a proportionate gain to the grower, for much of the crop was harvested and sold before the high prices were realized. It is estimated, however, that 6,000,000 bales of the crop sold at an average of 7½ cents per pound, or $35 per bale, and 3,000,000 bales at 9 cents, or $45 per bale. This gain represents an enormous amount of wealth that has gone to the Southern cotton farmers this winter.

But the future of this industry is even more promising than the present. The sudden increase in the cotton valuation naturally attracted the attention of thousands of farmers who had decided to give up cotton growing, and it has been feared that the acreage will be so largely increased that there will be a big slump in prices next year, and instead of a great gain, the growers would actually lose. Under the present system of "future" trading, the cotton farmers could sell their new crop for delivery between next October and January at 8 cents, or $40 per bale. This would make the normal yield of 11,000,000 bales sell at $440,000,000, an increase of some $80,000,000 over the present year. The farmer is thus enabled to assure himself of 8-cent cotton even before the crop has been planted, and a profit large enough to make his industry one of the best paying in the agricultural regions of the country.

The new acreage of cotton will undoubtedly be the largest on record. There are safe indications of this in statistics already collected by official authorities, and the amount of land in the South that will be planted with cotton cannot fall far short of 26,000,000 acres. Last season the cotton crop was a small one, amounting to 9,000,000 to 9,500,000 bales, while the two preceding years it reached 11,250,000 bales. But it was not this difference in the yield of two years alone that caused the unexpected boom. India's crop proved almost a total failure also, while the Egyptian crop has more recently been threatened with a similar fate. In addition to these causes the world's consumption of cotton has increased, and this is likely to continue for some time to come. A combination of such factors is directly responsible for the advance in cotton prices which transform the conditions of the South in a gratifying way.

Co-extensive with the improvement of the cotton field and better has been the development of cotton mills in the South. The mills of North Carolina alone employ 40,000 operatives, who have been raised from a miserable condition of poverty to one of comparative affluence. Ten and fifteen years ago these poor operatives could barely make $180 a year on the average off their small farms. They rarely had any ready money, and they dragged along from year to year with but few of the benefits of modern civilization. Today in the cotton mill districts there is hardly a family that can not make from $300 to $400 annually, and many of them find little difficulty in earning from $500 to $1,000 a year. The advance in the price of cotton distinctly helps and brightens the future of most of these cotton mill settlements in the South, for besides working in the factories nearly every family has a few acres planted with cotton, which some member of the household finds time to cultivate.

There is hardly a crop in this country that distinctly helps general business more than cotton. It almost equals in this respect king corn or wheat. The farmers, the small merchants, the large dealers, shippers, machinests, truckers in cities, operatives in mills, and clerks and assistants from New Orleans to New York and from New York to Liverpool, find a distinct benefit whenever cotton moves upward and prices promise good returns to the grower. If our trade in the cotton goods in the far east proves as large and remunerative as merchants anticipate now there will be new channels of commerce to feel the quickening impulse of a large crop of 8 and 10 cent cotton.

It looked for a while Saturday as if we would have one peaceful convention in Shelby county, and we really think that there would have been no conflict at all if the rest of the county had allowed Calera to control. There has never been a time in the history of the democratic party when minorities have been allowed to control. Our Calera brethren will talk long and loud about their familiarity with the democratic party and its principles, and it seems to us that if they are so deeply learned in the faith they would not expect to rule unless they had a majority of the delegates in the house.

We feel highly gratified at the action taken by by the county convention Saturday instructing the executive committee to call a primary election. Whether or not The Chronicle had anything to do in bringing about this result cuts no figure. We are glad a primary has been called, not because we wanted it, but because the people wanted it, and we know it will result beneficially to our party in more ways than one. Watch the results and see if our prediction is not verified.

The Democratic County Convention.

Pursuant to a call of the executive committee the democratic county convention convened in the court house in this place last Saturday at noon. All of the eighteen beats in the county were represented by full delegations, with six exceptions. Prof. C. H. Florey was elected as chairman.

The following delegates were selected to represent our county in the state convention: T. J. Martin, E. A. Turner, W. B. Browne, W. R. Oliver, J. F. Pope, J. F. Averyt, J. H. Wilder. Alternates: C. C. DuBose, H. C. Reynolds, Walter Cary, Dr. B. H. Smothers, E. G. Givhan, J. P. Christian, E. V. Caldwell.

The following named gentlemen were selected to attend the senatorial convention: J. T. Leeper, J. H. Gunn, E. S. Lyman, J. H. Weldon, C. H. Florey, J. E. Ruffin, J. L. Peters.

Dr. C. C. Oliver introduced the following resolution, which was adopted by a unanimous vote:

Whereas, our illustrious and world-famed senator, Jno. T. Morgan, has swept the entire state, from the mountains of north Alabama to the blue waters of the Mexic Gulf, and has proven that he is yet in the estimation of his people the grand old statesman that he is;

Resolved, That as a convention we manifest in some feeble way our intense heartfelt endorsement and approbation of this splendid triumph of democracy, and hope that he may long live to represent Alabama in the senate of the United States.

Judge McMillan introduced the following resolution, which was adopted without a dissenting vote:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that a primary election should be called by our executive committee to nominate candidates for county officers, and that said primary election shall be held and managed substantially under the rules and regulations governing general elections, and that the qualifications of voters and participants in said primary election be such as are prescribed by the state executive committee of the democratic party.

Resolved, second, That the nomination of a candidate for the legislature, which was contemplated that this convention should make today, be postponed and referred to said primary election, nominating said representative at the same time and in the same manner as the other candidates are nominated.

Delegates to the state convention were instructed to vote for Colonel Samford for governor as a unit so long as he was in the race, then to vote for Waller.

The nomination of a representative having been left to a primary election and the convention having completed the work for which it was called, adjourned sine die.

The editor is in Montgomery this week attending the democratic state convention, so any shortcomings in the paper may be charged up to the devil—not his satanic majesty who rules in the regions of fire and brimstone. [And the paper is being run this week, if you please, "Just as the Devil Would Run It."—The Devil.]

We fail to see how it will profit a man to spend his time in working to carry a county, and after it has been carried by his friends to allow an outsider to come and get the delegates.

We are afraid that if Deans is elected to the legislature about the first thing the Calera people will do will be to have him introduce a bill to move our cotton factory to Calera.

Our Growth in Population.

There were 5,300,000 people in America when this century opened. France had five times as many people; Germany, and even Austria, had four times America's population; Italy had three times as many, and so had Great Britain. Even Spain had double our number of people, and little Portugal was almost our rival in numbers. We have more people now than any European nation except Russia, which alone leads us. We have as many people as live in all Great Britain and France combined. We have one-half more people than Germany. We have practically, 75,000,000 people in the United States, and 10,000,000 more in our new possessions.—May Ladies' Home Journal.

The Barber—Have you ever tried anything for your baldness?

Man in the Chair—Yes. I have tried to be contented with it, and I have succeeded. Try to sell that bottle of stuff to somebody else.—Chicago Times-Herald.

There were only five large cities in America in 1800. Philadelphia, with 66,000, was the largest, the seat of government and the centre of wealth and culture. New York was next, with 60,000; Baltimore was third, with 26,500; Boston fourth, with 25,000, and Charleston, South Carolina, fifth, with 19,000 people.—May Ladies' Home Journal.

A Hint to Suitors.

From The New York World.

"Good evening, Mr. Manygirls," said the young man.

"Evening!" responded Mr. Manygirls, gruffly. A pile of papers, evidently bills, lay scattered in front of him. Hence his gruffness. The young man smiled.

"Bills for your seven daughters' spring clothes and bonnets, I presume," said he.

"Yes," replied the old man. "But is it any of your business?"

"It is. I have come to ask you if I may not take one of those daughters off your hands. I—"

The old man rose with a smile.

"Take one?" he exclaimed. "Why, boy, you can move to Utah and take the whole seven!"

The young man had caught him at the right time.

An Indian Lawyer's Speech.

A native Indian barrister of Bengal, according to an exchange, recently made the following unique address in court: "My learned friend, with more wind from a teapot, thinks to browbeat me from my legs; but this is a guerrilla warfare. I stand under the shoes of my client, and only seek to place my bone of contention clearly in your honor's eye. My learned friend merely and vainly runs amok upon the sheet anchors of my case. My client is a widow, your honor; a poor chap, with one post-mortem son; a widow not able to eat more than one meal a day, or to look after a man: so my poor client has not such physique or mind as to be able to assault the lusty complainant. Yet she has been deprived of some of her most valuable leather—i. e., the leather of her nose. My learned friend has said that there is on the side of his client a respectable witness—namely, a pleader; and since this witness is independent, therefore he should be believed. But, your honor, with your honor's vast experience, is pleased enough to observe that truthfulness is not so plentiful as blackberries in this country; and I am sorry to say—though this witness is a man of my own feathers—that there are in my profession black sheep of every complexion, and some of them do not always speak gospel truth. Until the witness explains what has become of my client's nose leather he can not be believed. He can not be allowed to raise a castle in the air by beating upon a bush. So, trusting in that administration of British justice, on which the sun never sets, I close my case."

One Hundred Dollars for Bright People.

If you are bright enough to re-arrange these four groups of letters, "Guras," "Eat," "Uofrl," "Foecef," into the names of four well-known and common food articles, which are used by every housekeeper, you are sure to secure a cash reward for the publisher of that interesting monthly magazine, Evening Hours, will pay one hundred dollars to the persons sending the correct names. You can only use each letter in its own group, each group makes a name. The object is to advertise and introduce my publication into new homes. Send ten cents silver or six two-cent stamps for a sample copy, and I will also send you free three packets of fresh and beautiful flower seeds. You will like Evening Hours, and every member of the family will enjoy its illustrated short stories, literary selections, artistic fashions and its departments for women, children, the household and garden. The $100 will be paid at close of contest, April 30, 1900. If two or more persons send the correct answer the $100 will be equally divided. Send your answer as early as possible, and if your answer is correct you will receive cash reward as above stated. Address, J. W. Ring, Publisher, 120 Market st., Newark, N. J.

There were 903 post-offices in 1800; to-day we have 75,000—that is, in America alone. It took a letter sixteen days to go from Philadelphia to Lexington, Kentucky; twenty-two days to Nashville, Tennessee. The cheapest letter postage was eight cents, and to send a letter more than a hundred miles cost a shilling. Three million letters and papers were then sent in a year; at the present time the post-office handles about 30,000,000 pieces of mail in a single day.—May Ladies' Home Journal.

"Did you lose any money at the races?"

"Not a cent," answered the patient man.

"That was lucky."

"Well, I suppose so; but I was entitled to some luck. You see I had my pocket picked just before the race started."—Chicago Record.

Burkley—Why is it a woman can never keep a secret?

Henpeck—But she can. I have never succeeded in getting my wife to tell me where she hides our pocketbook, and I have been trying for fifteen years.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Willie—Pa, what's the difference between "insurance" and "assurance?"

Pa—Well, the latter is what the agent has, and the former is what he tries to sell you.—Philadelphia Press.

SUPERB MILLINERY!

Stylish, Bright, Entrancing!

The Latest Fads in Ladies Headgear.

I am not boasting when I say that I have assembled in my store not only the latest novelties in millinery, but the most complete line ever offered in Shelby county. A few articles to show that we are up-to-date: Hemstitched Ribbons, all new shades; Ready-to-wear Hats, too pretty to describe, in all the new shapes; Pattern hats, etc., etc.

Miss Horn, our accomplished milliner, has recently returned from Louisville, Ky., where she posted herself thoroughly on styles for this season, and, to sum it up in a few words, she is master of the situation. You will miss a treat if you fail to see this handsome exhibition. To see is to purchase, to purchase is to be happy.

A WORD ABOUT CORSETS.

F. C. and R. & G. CORSETS you know stand at the head of the list--none better made. Avail yourself of the first opportunity to buy one of them. Either one or both are standards.

OUR DRY GOODS AND NOTION DEPARTMENT

Was never so full before, and it is almost impossible to call for anything and not get the very thing you were hunting—or something better. This is no joke! To give you a faint idea (this paper wouldn't hold all the articles) we mention a few: Percals, Madras Cloths, Shirt Waists (beauties, all of them) White Goods galore, especially Piques; Ladies' Neckwear, the latest and daintiest; Hemstitched Silk for Shirt Waists, in new pastel shades, dreams of beauty; Laces, Swiss and Hamburg Edging. But life is too short to mention them all. Polite and accommodating salesmen will esteem it a pleasure to show you all these pretty goods and many more. Don't be afraid of putting them to too much trouble, it is fun for them

BUGGIES BY THE CAR LOAD.

To those who have owned a James & Mayer buggy it is not necessary to say a word in its praise, for it is A 1 in every particular, neat, substantial and well made. Buying them, as we do, in large quantities, we can sell them at bottom figures. Save a few dollars by investigating this statement. Buggy harness, all you want, in good, better and best qualities—none better for the money. Rest assured we can suit you in quality and price.

IF IT IS WAGONS YOU WANT

We have a car load of Mitchel's in our warehouse for you to select from. It is economy to buy the best of everything, and you need want no better than the Mitchel. Wagon Harness? Yes, and to suit you, plenty of it. Look it over when you come to see us. It speaks for itself louder than we can.

MEN'S and BOYS' CLOTHING,
STRAW HATS,
FURNISHING GOODS

In endless variety, to suit all tastes, the lean as well as the fat—pocket or person. We have never handled a more elegant line of these goods, up-to-date and of the very best grades. Every article of apparel a man or boy needs, clothes or underclothes, shoes or overshoes, anything, everything, from start to finish.

COFFINS

Coffins and Caskets, all sizes and grades. Not an article short in this department. Our prices are as reasonable as you could ask.

In order to attract the cash trade I am giving a fine PORCELAIN DINNER SET FREE. You can get it piece by piece, a full assortment in any quantity desired. Given Absolutely Free to my cash customers. Ask for circular giving full particulars.

One more word before we part. It is my aim to supply every demand. I want your trade. I will deal with you honorably, and give you full value for every dollar you spend. Come to my store and let's talk the matter over.

J. H. HAMMOND.

Mr. Brand's Speech.

B. W. Brand, populist candidate for representative, entertained a good-sized audience Monday night in the court house. He spoke about an hour, and during most of the time he had his audience convulsed with laughter. We failed to get a shorthand reporter, else we would give his speech in full. However we will quote a few things he said:

"The stock law district in Shelby county is a living hell."

"In beat 2 my horse mired down in the public road, and it took eleven men to get him out. In one instance I had to take my buggy to pieces and prize it out of the mire wheel by wheel." These complimentary statements were made to show that after an expenditure of $9,000 what magnificent roads we now have.

Speaking of the recent purchase by the commissioners of a road plow: "It will take ten mules to move it on a level with the plow out of the ground. It took a whole box-car and two locomotives to bring it here."

Mr. Brand is a strong advocate of the dispensary and says that when he establishes the system in this county by legislative enactment, we shall enjoy undreamed of prosperity and wealth. "Every man living in ten miles of the Coosa river on the Talladega side will own a canoe or flat-boat so he can come over on this side at will to purchase liquor."

In conclusion he soared on the wings of eloquence to a height seldom reached by gifted orators, until he reached this grand climax: "Next Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock the glad acclaim will go up from every hill and valley in Shelby county, 'Hon. B. W. Brand is nominated to the legislature.'"

More deaths have occurred among the colored people in this city during the past month than for the same period in a number of years. La grippe, in most cases, is the direct cause.

Strawberries are making their appearance in the city—home-raised ones—and are of fine appearance and delicious taste. We take them in payment of subscriptions, if you bring enough.

The Mercantile Co. possesses the first rubber-tired vehicle to be brought to this city. It is a buggy and is of fine appearance. They also have a fine specimen of horse flesh to draw the same.

"The rain for the past week," said an innocent-looking darky on our streets last Monday, "has been the wettest I ever knowed of," and everybody agreed with him that it had been extremely damp.

Some recent improvements have been made to the Southern depot at this place in the way of a new coating of paint and an operator's office. The agent can now answer the call for signals without leaving his office.

When you come to the city and go back home and can't find your name in the paper, don't get mad and curse out the universe—the editor was just out of the city visiting delinquent subscribers and overlooked you.

The second quarterly conference for this circuit will be held at Shelby next Saturday and Sunday, with Elder Britain presiding. The conference proper, the transaction of business, will be held Monday morning.

A total eclipse of the sun occurs on the 28th of next month, and will be visible in this section of the country. The line of totality will pass over the southern portion of the gulf states, and can be observed through the ordinary smoked glass.

Mrs. A. J. Sullivan died early Friday morning at the home of her son at Saginaw. She was about 80 years old, and died of paralysis. Her home was at Weldon. She leaves several children and many friends to mourn her loss.

Several communications, including the Washington letter and local correspondence, are crowded out of this issue, the delay in arrival of trains and previous copy on hand the cause. THE CHRONICLE dislikes to leave out such contributions, and does so only on unavoidable occasions.

The northbound Southern passenger was delayed two hours Monday, and did not reach this city until near 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The two passengers, north and south, met at Wilsonville. Tuesday the train going north was six hours late, and yesterday it was also a few hours behind.

Mr. J. P. Harrell and Mrs. Lee Jinks were married near Yellow Leaf last Sunday. Mr. Harrell is the father of our depot agent and was formerly a citizen of this place, but moved to Woodward, where he and his bride will make their home. Congratulations and best wishes are now in order.

Go to the Moore corner and get your groceries of J. H. Hammond.

Harpersville.

Last Sunday was a beautiful day.

Farm work is almost on a standstill.

Dr. Teague will preach at the Baptist church next Sunday.

Sheriff Walthall was in our community last week.

Miss Birdie Vincent, of Vincent, is visiting relatives in the city.

The Methodist district meeting will convene at Vincent on Thursday before the fourth Sunday in next month.

Rev. Mr. Burns filled his regular appointments Sunday. He is a good preacher, and we are always glad to hear him.

There was a shooting scrape at Vincent last Saturday in which William Wallace, col., was severely shot by Tom Abbott. Wallace's face was torn all to pieces, and he is not expected to live. Abbott claims that he did the shooting in self-defense.

We have just received the second number of the Vincent Courier, a paper which is said to be published by J. F. Pope & Co. It does not state its politics, but I suppose it is democratic, for Jim Wilder would not have it any other way. Anyone wishing to subscribe can do so by applying to Ben Davis or "Dr." Will H. Kidd.

Almost every little town we know of is booming in some way or other, but Harpersville is still standing—if anything it has taken the other end of the road. Right here we claim to live in the garden spot of the county when it comes to farming; if a man don't make from 7 to 10 bales of cotton to the mule, besides plenty of corn, etc., he is not counted in it. Our country is healthy, we have good schools, and our churches are supplied with the best of preachers. But the old town still stands as it did years ago, with a tendency of going backwards. We are sorry that such is the case, but it is true, and we can't help it. We hope, however, that a change may take place and that Harpersville may yet blossom as a rose.

We think the action of the convention last Saturday in postponing the nomination of a representative until a general primary was very wise, and meets with our hearty approval. Have a primary; give the people a chance to vote for their choice. This way of just a few making a ticket wont work smooth every time, and it is one thing that has got the democratic party in the fix that it is today. Have a primary, let every man vote for his choice, and if his man gets beat he will feel under more obligations to support the other. We are tired of just a few ruling the majority in everything. The time has come for a halt.

The roads in this portion of the county are in a terrible condition; in some places they are almost impassable. There was a road tax paid in the treasury, but if it has ever been spent on roads we don't know anything about it. There, too, was a road commissioner appointed by the commissioners' court, and if the one appointed for this beat has ever prorated the money alloted to the different roads we have not heard of it. A person can travel for miles and miles without seeing a mile post, and sign boards—well, they are as scarce as money, and there is no money. Now there was money paid to improve the roads, and if the present administration can't or wont see to their duty, I make a motion that they be asked to retire and new ones appointed, and let us have better roads.

JAKE.

As will be seen by reference to the advertisements in this issue, the Columbiana Manufacturing Company will receive sealed bids on the 10th of next month for brick to be used in the construction of the factory building. The machinery has been ordered and will be ready for use when the building is completed.

The twelfth anniversary edition of the Birmingham News published Monday is a stupendous feat in Southern journalism, and is a reflection for good upon the newspaper craft of the state and upon the management of this particular paper. It contains sixty-four pages and is an able and comprehensive exposition of the manufacturing and industrial interests of the state as associated with the Birmingham district.

Centre Institute.

When will the farmers plant their crops?

Bright, beautiful spring is here again, and the grass and leaves growing and the birds singing makes us glad.

L. W. Chesser went over to Birmingham last week to see Dr. Russell. He is back home now, and we sincerely hope that he may be restored to health once again.

W. J. Jackson and little daughter, Beulah, visited Columbiana last week.

Miss Ola Dye returned home Sunday from W. J. Sewell's where she has been teaching music for a month.

We are glad the people have relegated Johnston and Stallings to the rear. The people now, as heretofore, prefer statesmen to demagogues.

John M. Dye and Walter Lester attended the democratic convention at Columbiana Saturday.

Walter Chesser visited Columbiana Saturday.

Hurrah for Morgan, Samford and Peters.

At the Dinner Table.—"George, don't stare at Mr. Crumley that way. It isn't polite" "I was just waitin' to see him pick up his glass of water, ma; I heard pa tell you that he drinks like a fish."—Exchange.

Money for Famine-Stricken India.

The following explains itself:

NEW YORK, April 23.

W. F. THETFORD,
Columbiana, Ala.

Dear Sir: We beg to acknowledge receipt of your esteemed favor of the 16th enclosing $50 from the citizens of Columbiana, to be devoted to the relief of the famine-smitten people of India. In behalf of these starving ones I thank you most sincerely for this generous contribution. May God bless each and every contributor to this fund, and reward them a hundred fold for all the good which the wise expenditure of this money will accomplish.

Very cordially yours,
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Mr. J. F. Pope, of Wilsonville, writes us that the patronage of his millinery department this season is most gratifying and that to keep up with the ever-changing whims of the ladies he has arranged to receive fresh shipments in this line weekly. A change will likely occur in his advertisement next week, and a careful perusal of what he has to say might interest you.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of a fi. fa. issued from the circuit court of Shelby county, and to me directed, I will proceed to sell, in front of the court house, in the town of Columbiana, on the 21st day of May, 1900, within the legal hours of sale, to the highest bidder for cash, the following described property, to-wit: All of the stone and timber right of Mrs. Minnie Gist on all that portion of the W½ of the NE¼ and the SE¼ of the NE¼ and the SE¼ fractional, all in Sec. 24, Tp. 22, R. 3 west, lying east of a certain line beginning on the Freeman line at a point 280 yards east of the SW corner of the SE¼ of said section, township and range, and running from thence due north to the northern boundary of said section 24, except 40 acres off the east end of said land formerly belonging to Hiram Butler situated in the county of Shelby and state of Alabama. Levied upon as the property of Mrs. Minnie Gist (nee, Hardy) to satisfy said fi. fa. in my hands in favor of H. Jemison & Son, this 16th day of April, 1900.

J. L. WALTHALL, Sheriff.

Notice.

There will be a meeting of the stockholders of the Climax Coal Co. at its office at Maylene, Ala., on May 21, 1900, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of electing directors for the ensuing year and transacting such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

C. F. HUNTER, Secretary.

Bids Wanted.

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be received by the Columbiana Manufacturing Company on the 10th day of May for making the brick for their factory. The company reserves the right to reject all bids.

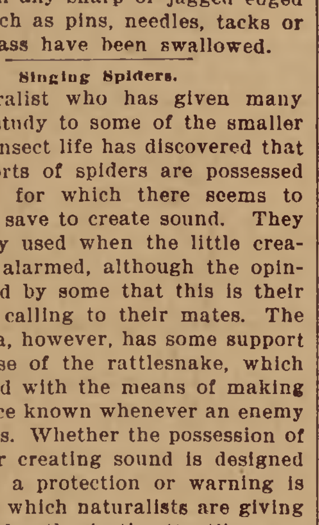
BOY SWALLOWS FISHHOOK.

His Life Saved by a Common Sense Physician.

Early in my husband's professional career, says the wife of a busy physician in What to Eat, he was called in haste to the assistance of a boy who in some way had succeeded in lodging a fishhook in his throat. It was such a queer accident that we could not help laughing over it, despite the gravity of the case. Arming himself with various instruments for the dislodging of foreign bodies in the throat, the young doctor hurried away to find, upon arrival, the features of the case entirely changed by the lad having swallowed the hook. The parents were naturally much alarmed over the outcome of the unheard-of accident, and in the excitement everybody was prescribing what to do. Some were for pouring emetics down his throat, others suggested the stomach pump or a knife as the only means of saving his life, while others were for dosing him liberally with oil. While questioning the boy regarding the size, and so forth, of the hook, merely to gain time for thought, my husband, calling common sense to his aid, directed that the boy be allowed to eat all the solid food he could manage to digest, being aware that the safety of the delicate organs through which the hook must pass depended solely on imbedding its cruel points in a mass of solids, so as to protect the surrounding tissues. The amount of bread, meat, potatoes and other solids that that boy managed to put out of sight that evening astonished even those who knew something of the capacity of a boy's stomach. Only the minimum of fluids was allowed, and, well, the young doctor was gratified, to be assured, on the following day, that his original method of treating fishhooks was both safe and practical. This is an accident not likely to become epidemic, but I repeat the formula, not knowing but that it might prove advantageous in other emergencies, such as sometimes arise when any sharp or jagged edged bodies, such as pins, needles, tacks or bits of glass have been swallowed.

Singing Spiders.

A naturalist who has given many years of study to some of the smaller forms of insect life has discovered that certain sorts of spiders are possessed of organs for which there seems to be no use save to create sound. They are mostly used when the little creatures are alarmed, although the opinion is held by some that this is their means of calling to their mates. The alarm idea, however, has some support in the case of the rattlesnake, which is provided with the means of making its presence known whenever an enemy approaches. Whether the possession of organs for creating sound is designed merely as a protection or warning is a point to which naturalists are giving careful and enthusiastic attention.



A Mother's Tears.

"I Would Cry Every Time I Washed My Baby."

"When he was 3 months old, first festers and then large boils broke out on my baby's neck. The sores spread down his back until it became a mass of raw flesh. When I washed and powdered him I would cry, realizing what pain he was in. His pitiful wailing was heart-rending. I had about given up hope of saving him when I was urged to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, all other treatment having failed. I washed the sores with Hood's Medicated Soap, applied Hood's Olive Ointment and gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla. The child seemed to get better every day, and very soon the change was quite noticeable. The discharge grew less, inflammation went down, the skin took on a healthy color, and the raw flesh began to scale over and a thin skin formed as the scales dropped off. Less than two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, aided by Hood's Medicated Soap and Hood's Olive Ointment, accomplished this wonderful cure. I cannot praise these medicines half enough." Mrs. Guerinot, 37 Myrtle St., Rochester, N. Y.

The above testimonial is very much condensed from Mrs. Guerinot's letter. As many mothers will be interested in reading the full letter, we will send it to any-one who sends request of us on a postal card. Mention this paper.

NAPOLEON ON SUICIDE.

The Imprisoned Emperor Had Meant to Find An Asylum in America.

The last instalment of the Century's extracts from the diaries of Dr. O'Meara's "Talks with Napoleon," includes the Emperor's views on suicide, and his own account of his intentions in the event of defeat at Waterloo.

"They perhaps think that I will put an end to myself. No; there is greater courage in supporting it. A gamester or an adventuress may finish themselves, but it becomes not a man of my character. True, I could do it in an instant beyond your help. They seize upon me with violence, and forcibly transport me here, and want me to pay fourteen or fifteen thousand pounds yearly for living in such a place as this. Do they think I am sufficiently coglione? Cosa m'importa questa maledetta isola? Che la mandano a buzzarare! [What do I care for this cursed island? Let it go to the devil!]

"They tell the governor to let me spend as much money as I like of my own. It is true, I believe, I am above want, but I do not know how much money I have, and I do not choose to let them know where it is, as probably they would seize upon it as they did before. I did not settle my affairs after that battle of Waterloo; I had not time, and before it I had other things to do. Besides, I never was a man who occupied himself much with money affairs. I never knew what I had. I thought that I would go either to London or America, and I had bills for whatever sums I chose to take upon America. I have probably as much money as I ever shall want, but I do not know exactly where it is." Here he said that he had spent sixteen millions of ready money before the battle of Waterloo which belonged to himself. . .

"The people of England want to know why I still call myself emperor. I have here explained it. It was my intention to have lived in England as a private person, but since they have sent me here, and wanted to make it appear that I was never emperor or chief magistrate, I still retain the title. The admiral told me that he had heard Lord Liverpool and Castlereagh say that the principal reason they sent me here was that the ministers were afraid that I would be caballing with some of the opposition, and that I would tell the truth of them, and explain some things they would not like. They knew they must let people of rank see me, and were afraid for themselves." Here I said that the ministers were afraid that if they left him in England he would mount again upon the throne of France and wage another war against England. "Bah, bah!" said he, "the times are changed; the time for that is over. I am old, and besides, fifty years must elapse before France will be able to face England again. No, no; I know all that well; I know that that is all gone—vanished."

Niagara at Its Best.

If Mrs. van Rensselaer's opinion is correct, Niagara Falls will be a less beautiful object in the year 2500 than it is to-day. In the Century she gives the reasons for her belief:

The Niagara River belongs to our own era of the world's interminable history, and to it alone. We may believe, with some recent investigators, that it began to cut its way through the higher table-land about six thousand years ago, or we may say with others, thirty thousand years ago. But even the farther end of thirty thousand years is a geological yesterday; and if it is true that the falls will stand well back of the head of Goat Island in five or six hundred years, this is a very near to-morrow. Moreover, the finest phase of Niagara's life belongs to the geological to-day. It is at its very best now that Goat Island is the central feature of the falls. Before they reached it they must have formed a single undivided and relatively narrow cataract or series of cascades; and after its upper end is left behind there can never again be such a combination of diverse majesties and lovelinesses. Only for the half mile along Goat Island's side are there divided yet fraternal channels filled with shining, shouting rapids. When it has been left behind, the wide river, flowing over an almost level bed, will approach its cliff quite calmly, and will calmly make its plunge, like a mill-stream over a dam. And this forest-clad island, lifted high and set in a fortunate elbow of the river-bed, gives views which no other, farther up-stream, can ever afford. It separates and yet unites the cataracts. Now it puts the eye far above them, and again it brings them quite close. With the islets that lie near it, it gives outlooks up both the streams of rapids and the placid river beyond them, across the gorge and down its length, and athwart the one fall and the other; and most of these views it enframes in draperies of luxuriant green. Truly the pilgrims of a later day will not see the Niagara the marvel that belongs to us.

A Wise Precaution.

A young freshman, while waiting one day last autumn for a room to be assigned to her in a college dormitory, picked up an old newspaper and read in it an editorial upon escape from burning buildings. The suggestion was there made that by once thinking out a plan of action for an emergency the action itself would become somewhat mechanical. The girl laughingly said to herself that an opera-cloak would be a good thing to have near in case of fire at night. When she unpacked her trunk her warm evening cloak was given a hook near the closet door. She decided also that her night slippers might reasonably be kept under the bed. A few weeks ago, on a bitterly cold night, that very dormitory burned to the ground. The young girl, aroused from sound sleep by the alarm, had only time to seize her cloak and slippers and flee for her life. Not another of her belongings was saved. Having to run some distance for shelter the wraps saved the girl from an exposure which on such a night might have been fatal.

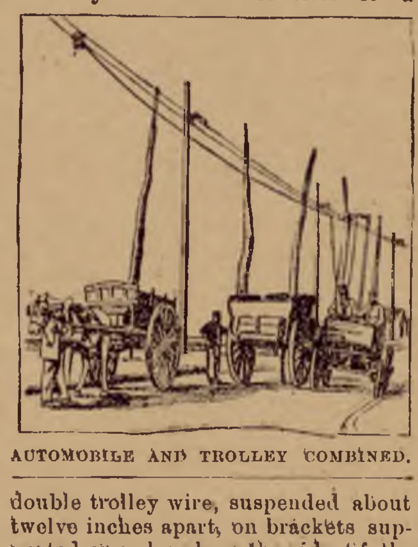
TROLLEY AND AUTOMOBILE.

The Features of Both Combined in One Vehicle.

EFFORTS to combine the principles of the automobile and the trolley have resulted in an experiment being made by a French inventor, M. Lombard-Gerin, and a test line, one-half mile long, has been laid down along the Seine just outside of Paris. This inventor's scheme is to equip the "trolley," that is, the support which runs on the trolley wire, with an individual motor, in addition to the motor driving the vehicles, so that it is self-propelling and has an independent movement of its own, irrespective of the movement of the vehicle on the ground, though dependent upon and proportional to the speed of such movement.

Briefly the outfit consists of a double trolley wire, suspended about twelve inches apart, on brackets supported on poles along the side of the roadway; a "trolley," consisting of two bearing wheels, an electric motor for their operation; a long flexible cable connecting the trolley with the vehicle running on the street, by means of which current is supplied to the series motor which propels it. This unique arrangement gives great freedom in the operation of the vehicle, as it can be operated on the side close to, or away from, the trolley wires. The wagon can turn out for teams without interfering with its operation or placing undue strain on the trolley wires, and go backward or forward at will, ascend or descend hills or steep grade, and, in fact, execute any manœuvre that would be expected of a vehicle pulled by horses along a thoroughfare.



AUTOMOBILE AND TROLLEY COMBINED.

The flexible cable, twenty-five or thirty feet long, which does duty for the ordinary trolley pole, is connected to the vehicle at the top of a standard some thirteen feet above the level of the ground, additional cable being wound on a drum, if it is required.

While the trolley wires may make sharp turns, following curves or bends in the roadway, it is evident that two vehicles operated from the same trolley wires could not pass each other going in opposite direction. This is overcome, however, by arranging the connections of the flexible cables so that they can instantly be transferred from one vehicle to another, all the fittings being interchangeable. Thus, if two automobiles met while going in opposite directions, it would only be necessary for them to exchange trolleys, by exchanging cable connections, when they could continue on their respective ways.

Slaughter of Herons.

The battle waged by the Audubon Society against the fashion of wearing bird's feathers and particularly the egret has been so effective as to seriously influence the sale of these bits of millinery. With a view of meeting the objection of women to purchasing these plumes those interested in their sale have been very successful in their efforts in circulating the story that the herons, from which the egrets are taken, are no longer slaughtered, but they are regularly farmed for the purpose and the egret gathered up when cast by the birds.

In all cases which have been investigated by the American Ornithologists' Union Committee on Bird Protection there is absolutely no truth in the reports.

Bush Fires in New Zealand.

The worst bush fires experienced in Australia for fifty years have just devastated the Warrnambool district, in Victoria. A million acres of grass were destroyed and 20,000 sheep, besides hundreds of cattle, perished. The damage is estimated at $500,000. The inhabitants fought the flames heroically, and many narrow escapes are reported. Bush fires have also been playing havoc in New Zealand, but no lives have been lost, although the damage to property is considerable.

GATHERING RUBBER.

HOW THE MILKY SAP IS COLLECTED.

Gives Employment to Industrious Colonies on the Para River — As Seen From the United States Steamer Wilmington.

By studying on a map of Brazil you can see that the Para river extends almost due west, south of the island of Marajo, to a network of narrow streams, known as the Passes, which connect the Para with the Amazon. These numerous channels are from 70 to 150 yards in width, and some of them are navigable for vessels of 18 to 20 feet draught. These passes are interesting enough to those traversing them in small craft, but to the officers and sailors of such steamers as the United States ship Wilmington they are trebly so. At night there is little to arrest the attention other than the weird, dark shapes of the banks, which ever seem close aboard. The land being low and flat, and the trees near the water's edge, it seems as if the ship has forsaken her natural element and is running overland on invisible wheels. When daylight comes in a sudden burst of light like the unheralded flash of the theater's illumination, there is revealed on each side of the narrow channel the forest's solid wall, exposing to view a panorama of overhanging vines, of creepers and foliage and branches brilliant with the multitudinous hues of tropical vegetation. There is a strange chattering of animal life and a whirr of winged insects. The discordant cries of myriad parrots echo from the trees. There is human life, too. Here and there embowered in the jungle can be seen little wooden huts, with thatched roofs and sides open to the cooling winds. These are the houses of the rubber gatherers, who labor day in and day out collecting the milky sap of the Hevea brasiliensis. This rubber gathering is interesting, and the Wilmington's crew watch curiously as the winding channel reveals little groups of natives at work along the edge of the stream. Those on board who have read the descriptions tell others of the manner in which the half-naked Indians labor, of how each family works what is called an "estrada," or street, a path through the forest, which embraces as many rubber trees as can be conveniently tended, of how these trees are slit with a machete and a cup fitted in the cut to catch the sap, and of the manner in which the ownes makes his daily round and brings to his hut the collected juice. There is also interest in the description of its next stage, when the sap is dipped up by a stick and revolved over a smoky fire. The smoke causes each layer to coagulate on the stick, and when the desired amount is formed it is removed and made ready for shipment. These balls of crude rubber usually weigh in the neighborhood of twenty-five pounds, and are of a dark, lustrous hue. It was a novel experience, this visit of the Wilmington's crew to the home of the rubber gatherers, and the closest attention was paid to the ever-changing scenery as the white cruiser steamed slowly along through the Passes.—Ainslee's Magazine.

A Dangerous Occupation.

Much time and labor have been bestowed by scientific men in experiments relating to the use of phosphorus in the manufacture of lucifer matches. It is found that while the present factory rules in England have led to improved conditions and lessened risk, further advances are imperatively necessary. Some of the works in that country are old and lend themselves with difficulty to the improved structural arrangements found in the more efficiently equipped establishments, and in most of them methods now shown to be obsolete are in use, involving unnecessary risk to the operatives, and the dangerous processes are said to be largely carried on by persons in whom the danger is further aggravated by unsound teeth. The fact is particularly noted of the neglect in substituting machinery for hand labor in the dangerous processes, in the want of attention to the condition of operatives' teeth and neglecting to report well known cases of phosphorus poisoning, or even watching for their occurrence—deliberate and long continued concealment being practised in the latter.

Reading Aloud.

An accomplishment that receives too little attention among trained nurses is the art of reading aloud. Only those who have had to lie on a sick bed through long weeks and months can appreciate the comfort of being enabled to listen to intelligent reading. A gentle, pleasantly inflected voice, a clear and distinct articulation, and an intelligent comprehension of the matter read have a soothing effect upon the most irritable nerves, and for that reason should be considered desirable qualifications in a sick nurse. There are many people who cannot afford the expense of having both a companion and a nurse, but a nurse who can be a companion as well must be considered an acquisition indeed.

Quaint London Rents Paid.

Certain ancient and quaint rent services, which are due to the crown by the corporation of London, were, in accordance with custom, performed at the offices of the queen's remembrancer, in the royal courts of justice, in the presence of a number of curious and interested spectators. George Pollock, the remembrancer, made the usual explanatory statement as to the origin of the custom, and proclamation was then made: "Tenants and occupiers of a piece of waste ground called 'The Moors,' in the county of Salop, come forth and do your service." The city solicitor advanced and cut a faggot of wood with a hatchet and another with a billhook. Proclamation was made next: "Tenants and occupiers of a certain tenement called 'The Forge,' in the parish of St. Clement Danes, in the county of Middlesex, come forth and do your service." The city solicitor on this occasion counted six horse shoes and sixty-one nails. The queen's remembrancer replied, "Good number." Faithful suit and service having thus been made the ceremony ended.—London Telegraph.

Lamartine's Barber Still Alive.

Lamartine's barber, a certain M. Isopy, is (says a Paris correspondent) still alive. He is just ninety-two, and his greatest delight is to talk of his hero. He treasurers up a faded daguerreotype of the sentimental politician, who, having been the dominant figure in France, died in obscurity. M. Ispoy's show was the favorite gathering place of the celebrities of '48. It is probable that M. de Lamartine, who used to summon his hairdresser to Macon, employed him as an emissary in those turbulent days. It was pleasing to know from such an authority that Lamartine was the inventor of "genuine bear's grease from Russia," and that this unguent was the cause of the poet's silky locks.

Heating Capabilities of Wood.

From time immemorial soft wood has been regarded as comparatively valueless for heating purposes. Hard wood has brought high prices and has been in much greater demand than soft, on account of this generally prevailing notion. Experiments with woods of various sorts have demonstrated that the linden, which is one of the softest of woods, gives the greatest amount of heat. The value of other woods in their order, as ascertained, is as follows: Fir with 0.99 heating power; next follow the elm and pine with 0.98; willow, chestnut and larch with 0.97; maple, spruce and fir with 0.96; black poplar with 0.95; alder and white birch with 0.94 only; then comes the hard oak with 0.92; the locust and the white beech with 0.91, and the red beech with 0.90. Hence hard wood heats the least." It is one of the remarkable facts of the day that so many theories that have been held for many years are fast giving way before the critical analysis of science.

Earnest Letters from Women Relieved of Pain by Mrs. Pinkham.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—Before I commenced to take your medicine I was in a terrible state, wishing myself dead a good many times. Every part of my body seemed to pain in some way. At time of menstruation my suffering was something terrible. I thought there was no cure for me, but after taking several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound all my bad feelings were gone. I am now well and enjoying good health. I shall always praise your medicine."—Mrs. Amos Feschler, Box 226, Romeo, Mich.

Female Troubles Overcome

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I had female trouble, painful menses, and kidney complaint, also stomach trouble. About a year ago I happened to pick up a paper that contained an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I read how it had helped others, I thought it might help me, and decided to give it a trial. I did so, and as a result am now feeling perfectly well. I wish to thank you for the benefit your medicine has been to me."—Mrs. Clara Stieber, Diller, Neb.

No More Pain

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—Your Vegetable Compound has been of much benefit to me. When my menses first appeared they were very irregular. They occurred too often and did not leave for a week or more. I always suffered at these times with terrible pains in my back and abdomen. Would be in bed for several days and would not be exactly rational at times. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and menses became regular and pains left me entirely."—Mrs. E. F. Custer, Brule, Wis.

A HARD ROAD FOR BRITONS

Roberts Advances While Boers Fall Back.

WAR NEWS NOW LAGS

British Take the Town of Brandfort Without Wasting a Great Quantity of Ammunition.

London advices of Friday contained the followed "war" news:

The mounted infantry with Lord Roberts, among which are the Canadians, have picketed their horses on the south bank of the Vet river 18 miles north of Brandfort. The head of Lord Roberts' columns has thus advanced thirty-two miles north of Bloemfontein.

Little powder was spent. The British work was hard marching, the Boers retiring out of the reach of British shells. The correspondents supplement Lord Roberts' plain statements with a few details. As General Hutton, with the First mounted infantry brigade, drew near Brandfort, he saw a khaki-clad body of troops ahead of him. He was surprised, but thought they must be British. Soon, however, they opened fire upon the men, who replied heavily. They were the Irish-American brigade from Lourenzo Marques, and it is reported that the Irish lost heavily.

The Boer flag was flying over Brandfort as the British entered the town. Several British wounded were found in the hospital. The Boer postmaster gave up the keys of the public buildings to Captain Ross.

Lord Kitchener arrived at Brandfort at noon and Lord Roberts at dusk. General French's cavalry is sweeping the country northward. The expectation is that the infantry advance will be continued toward Kroonstad immediately. Although no prisoners were taken and although no hot pursuit was attempted, the news greatly cheers London. Nevertheless, it has not been received with the fine rapture that attended the first successes of Lord Roberts.

Brabant's division now occupies a strong position on a range of hills on the Ladybrand road, about twenty miles from Wepener. The troops are confronted by a large force of Boers who recently occupied Wepener and who have now been located in the mountain known in the Free State as Zwartlapherg. Friday morning the Borderers Horse, under Colonel Maxwell, came in contact with the Boer outposts, but returned to camp after having located the enemy. Later a group of 500 Boers was discovered marching past the Boer position, but the British were unable to tell whether they were friend or enemy until they had disappeared in a hollow a few miles away, when they proved to be a Boer command.

General Hunter's crossing the Vaal at Windsorton brings the relief of Mafeking, 195 miles beyond, almost within a calculated interval. It is now regarded as quite possible that Mafeking may be succored before the queen's birthday.

The debate in parliament on the Spion kop dispatches proved a disappointment to the supporters of the government. The ministerialist papers confess to a certain amount of inconsistency and weakness in the statements of the spokesmen of the government. On the other hand, as The Standard points out, the opposition professes to be well satisfied with the debate, as they believe it has injured the government and has rendered Lord Lansdowne's continuance at the war office difficult.

Wepener is to be garrisoned with a strong force from General Chermside's division, commanded by Lord Castletown.

Henry F. Lucy, writing in The Daily News, says he has ascertained that Sir Alfred Milner's letter against ladies visiting South Africa was written as the result of an intimation from Queen Victoria.

MACARTHUR IN COMMAND.

Orders Issued From Department Releasing Otis and Naming Successor.

In accordance with General Otis's request to be allowed to return to the United States, the war department issued orders Saturday relieving him, to take effect Sunday morning, May 5th, the date fixed by General Otis for his sailing. The other order designates Major-General MacArthur to succeed General Otis in command of the division of the Philippines. Brevet Major-General Wheaton is designated to succeed General MacArthur as commander of the department of southern Luzon.

Cuban Police Indifferent.

At a meeting of the municipality of Havana Friday it was charged that the island police were a demoralized body, and that the municipal were not much better. It was further alleged that degrading outrages and abuses were being committed by the secret police.

Big Blaze in Mining Town.

The chief portion of the mining town of Sandon, East Kootenalf, B. C., was destroyed by fire Friday. The loss will exceed $250,000.

AN ADDED HORROR.

Cholera Has Now Attacked the Starving Millions of Famished India.

The report received at London that cholera is strengthening its deadly hold on famine-stricken India brings the pitiful condition of that country more than ever to the public view. About 93,500,000 persons, for this is the population of the districts affected, are sweltering their squalid existences away amid pestilence and misery that show no signs of abating. Hundreds of thousands of pounds in good British gold, good German marks and American coin have been thrown into the country, but, judging from the latest advices, all this charity is merely a drop in the ocean.

The famine and its attendant complications appear to exceed in virulence any previous visitations. The viceroy, Lord Curzon, of Kedleston, and the government are making ceaseless exertions to meet the terrible emergency, but the stupendous difficulties confronting them prevent the present supplying of relief to more than five millions. In the meantime the native states are dotted with heaps of dead and dying, and the roads are crowded with ghastly bands seeking to escape from the stricken territories, but who, for lack of food and water, mostly succumb in the attempt. One of the most hopeless features of the whole affair is contained in the statement of a special correspondent at Simla, who writes:

"Ten times the total relief could be laid in a single district without fully describing its distress. All we can hope for is a succession of good years to put the people on their legs again."

The British districts are reported to be so far escaping the large starvation and mortality that mark the native states. But that their condition is not enviable is evident from the following description sent by a Bombay correspondent on the scene at Ahemdabad, a city in the presidency of Bombay:

"In an open space upward of 200 were seated, old and young, being famine personified. The smell arising from their filthy rags was sickening, and had attracted myriads of flies. Some, especially the old men, were bony frameworks. A girl suckling two children was ghastly to look at, but the little ones, with hollow temples, sunken eyes and cheeks and the napes of their necks falling in under ther skulls, which seemed to overbalance their emaciated bodies, and with wisp like arms and legs, were more dreadful still. Many were suffering from disease and numbers had the fever. Those who could work were sent on where tanks were being dug; others were given a meal and passed on to the poorhouse."

This picture is from a less seriously affected part of the country. The sufferings in the remoter districts, where the famine is severe, where all the cattle have long since died, where the water is precious and where cholera has now added its dread scourge, can well be imagined.

CULTON REMANDED.

Evidence Pointed Strongly to Guilt and Bail Was Refused By Judge Cantrill.

A Frankfort, Ky., special says: At the conclusion of the arguments on the motions for bail of W. H. Culton, charged with being an accessory in the murder of Governor William Goebel, Saturday night, Judge Cantrill denied the application and Culton was remanded to jail.

In rendering his decision Judge Cantrill said that the uncontradicted evidence on some of the points in the case left the coort no recourse but to refuse the defendant's application for bail. Culton's trial will come up at the regular September term of court. The trials of the other accused prisoners will be held at Georgetown.

They Go to Populist Convention.

Senator Butler, of North Carolina; Senator Pettigrew, of Dakota; M. C. Gavock, of Virginia; N. W. Fitzgerald, of West Virginia, and George H. Shibley, of New York, headed a party of eastern populists that left Washington over the Baltimore and Ohio railway Saturday for Sioux Falls, S.D., to attend the populist national convention.

EX-CONGRESSMAN DEAD.

Hon. D. B. Culberson Expires at His Home in Jefferson, Texas.

Ex-Congressman David B. Culberson, father of United States Senator Charles A. Culberson, of Texas, died at his home in Jefferson, Texas, Sunday.

Ex-Congressman Culberson served several times as a Democrat in the lower house of the national legislature, and was at one time a prominent candidate for the speakership. He was for a long time chairman of the judiciary committee of the house and was regarded as one of the best constitutional lawyers in public life.

Senate Ratifies Geneva Conference.

The senate in executive session Friday ratified a treaty negotiated with all the maritime nations of the world, extending the Geneva conference regulations to naval warfare.

Greatest Funeral Train.

The greatest funeral train in the history of western America started on its sad journey from Scofield, Utah, Friday. The train had upon it the remains of sixty victims of the Winter Quarters mine disaster.

PREACHER PURSUES ATLANTA'S MAYOR

Rev. Broughton Asks That He Be Impeached at Once.

SERIOUS CHARGES MADE.

It Is Claimed That Mayor Woodward Has Broken Promise.

Mayor James G. Woodward of Atlanta was for the second time denounced from the pulpit by Dr. L. G. Broughton at the Tabernacle Baptist church Sunday night, and the second arraignment, like the first, was on the charge of drunkenness and immorality.

Dr. Broughton, in the presence of a congregation of 3,000 people, charged that the mayor of Atlanta had been on a drunken spree for the past week or ten days, and visited, while in such a condition, houses of prostitution.

In the same breach with the charges, Dr. Broughton demanded that the mayor be impeached, and impeached at once.

He gave a history of what he claimed to have been Mayor Woodward's conduct in the past, and said that there was no longer any room for mercy.

In making the charges and the demand for an impeachment Dr. Broughton read what he had to say from three sheets of paper. What he read was as follows:

Before beginning my sermon tonight, I must beg your indulgence while I speak of a matter which needs the immediate consideration of every patriotic citizen in Atlanta. I refer to the present condition of the mayor of our city. I do not suppose I will surprise you very much when I say that the mayor of Atlanta is at present, and has been for the last week, in a beastly state of drunkenness.

About nine months ago, it will be remembered that I denounced the mayor as a drunken sot, a libertine and a gambler. You are all familiar with the outcome of those charges. A committee was appointed by the council to look into them, and the mayor confessed them, and mercy was extended upon his positive promise to abstain from these crimes in the future. I want to say that no man favored granting this mercy more than I did. I believe in mercy, and though I was naturally skeptical, I was for giving him a chance to redeem himself.

About two months after this he trampled these pledges—made the council and an outrraged community —under his feet, and outraged us again by a disgraceful drunken cakewalk at a dive in this community.

Again he was brought before council and was about to be impeached, when he succeeded in getting a compromise by allowing him to hand in his resignation to this high and honorable office—this resignation to take effect just as soon as he was guilty again. I was out of the city at this time, and was surprised that the council should permit such an outrage again to be excused. But I kept my faith in the matter, and have let it all alone.

Now what? After all this our community must again suffer the outrage of a drunken mayor. What is mercy to a man like this? Who can stand such an insult in the face of a patience already worn threadbare? I say to you frankly, I will not submit to it without as vigorous a protest as I know how to make. Atlanta don't deserve this disgrace.

The mayor of this city ought to be impeached, and that now, or the city council forfeits every claim to our respect. There is no use whining mercy now. The man who tramples the good name of this city with its churches and its business interests under his feet and then disregards his own pledges and outrages our patience don't deserve mercy.

I am sorry for him. I pray for him in his weakness. But are we still to submit to such a disgrace while we are losing everything and gaining nothing? As a citizen of Atlanta, in the name of our city, our churches, our women and our children, I protest and demand again that the mayor of this city be impeached tomorrow at the meeting of council.

In addition to all of this there is another and more recent charge which I would not mention but for the gravity of the subject. The mayor was in a house a prostitution just last week and so maudlin drunk that he reported to a police officer that the woman had robbed him of $100.

In the name of Almighty God, Christian men and women, have we not had enough? I for one have had, and I say it shall stop, and stop now!"

Death of Ex-Secretary Endicott.

William Crowninshield Endicott, secretary of war under President Cleveland's first administration, died at his residence in Boston Sunday afternoon of pneumonia, aged seventy-three.

Collecting Statistics.

The collection of census statistics in regard to manufacturing has been begun in New York and Chicago, and will soon be under way in seven of the other principal cities. The collection of such statistics must be completed within ninety days.

Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria has appointed Emperor William of Germany field marshal general of the Austrian army.

GUN IS LOCATED

Which Fired the Fatal Shot At Goebel From Statehouse Window In Frankfort.

The most important testimony yet in connection with the assassination of Goebel was brought out at Frankfort Friday night in the hearing for bail in the Culton case. Assistant Secretary of State J. B. Matthews and McKenzie Todd, private secretary to Governor Taylor, were the star witnesses and gave testimony nearly as sensational as that of Culton.

Matthews stated that pardons were issued also to Charles Finley, John L. Powers, Harlan Whittaker and possibly W. H. Culton. The witnesses first said a pardon had been issued to Culton, but later said he was not sure as to Culton, but said he thought he entered a pardon for him at the same time he entered the other three pardons and those to Caleb Powers and John Davis, March 10th. The Culton case was resumed Friday with Captain J. F. Howe, a Barbourville military officer, on the stand. He testified regarding Caleb and John Powers coming to him ten days before the assassination and trying to get him to bring his company to Frankfort disguised as citizens. He declined to do so unless ordered by Governor Taylor, and no orders came until after the assassination.

Captain Chinn, who was with Goebel when he was shot, stated that he was sure the shot that hit Goebel was fired from the executive building.

Ed Steffee, who was standing on the portico in front of the state house, saw Goebel fall. Immediately after the shot he looked toward the executive building and he thought he saw the barrel of a rifle pointing out of the window of the office of the secretary of state. The weapon was drawn in and the window closed.

In the cross-examination, Steffee said that after the shot was fired he thought he saw a little smoke rising above the window from which he saw the rifle. He did not look to see where the shot came from until atter Goebel fell.

At the afternoon session arguments were heard from attorneys of the telegraph company in regard to the submission of telegrams as evidence. The court ruled that the writ should apply only to messages bearing on the Goebel assassination.

Several telegrams were read to and from the defendants, and relating to the visit of armed mountain men to Frankfort last January. At the night sitting of the court, ex-State Auditor L. C. Norman testified that prior to the assassination he overheard Judge George Denny, of Lexington, say:

"Somebody ought to kill Goebel, and Governor Taylor ought to pardon the man that did it."

The witness said the tenor of Denny's conversation was that Goebel's death would save the lives of other people. Witness communicated the remark to Goebel.

McKinzie Todd, private secretary to Governor Taylor, testified that he saw Culton and Youtsey at the governor's office several times. He did not know Jim or Berry Howard. He saw armed men around the governor's office the day of the mountaineer excursion. Asked if he saw any guns in the office of the secretary of state, witness said he saw two there on Saturday prior to the assassination.

Youtsey was in the room and later picked up one of the guns and took a position near the window. He asked Youtsey what he was going to do. Youtsey said he thought there was trouble in the legislative building and that "if it started he wanted to be prepared.

Youtsey said he would not start any trouble, but would be prepared to protect the building if it did start.

Public Printer George G. Fetter told of printing badges for Caleb Powers and John Powers which were used by the 1,200 mountain men on January. Private Dudley Williamson, who was with the soldiers in the arsonal, said that they got marching orders one hour before the assassination, and were uniformed and armed at the time of the tragedy. The soldiers did not know what had happened till they got almost to the state house.

Direct Line Contemplated.

The transportation company of the board of trade of Tampa, Fla., and a number of business men are planning for a direct line of steamers from that city to New York.

GEN. OTIS SAILS.

Leaves Manila Amidst Booming of Salutes From the Warships.

The United Transport Meade sailed from Manila for the United States at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon with Major General Otis and two aids de camp on board. The warships in port fired a major general's salute as the steamer raised her anchor.

The Twentieth and Fourteenth infantry, drawn up ashore in front of the city walls, presented arms and the bands played "Auld Lang Syne," while a shore battery saluted.

During the morning the supreme court judges and many officers called at the palace to bid farewell to Otis.

EXTENSION OF TREATY.

Hay-Pauncefote "Arrangement" Will Be Open Ten Months Longer.

Saturday Secretary Hay and Lord Pauncefote, the British ambassador, signed a treaty extending for seven months from August 5th next, the period of time allowed for the exchange of ratification of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. This was arrived at from the conviction that no legislation upon the treaty can be secured during the present session of congress.

ARMY MEASURE PASSES SENATE

Department Will Be Reorganized In Many Features.

VOTE WAS DECISIVE ONE

Artillery Revolutionized; Staff Plan Is Changed.

Friday's session of the senate was rendered especially notable by the passage, after a debate lasting three hours, of the army reorganization bill. In military circles the measure is regarded as one of the most important of the present session. It practically revolutionizes the present system of permanent appointments in certain staff corps to one of detail by a gradual process, as the officers now in those corps go out of active service. As vancancies occur in departments of the adjutant general, the inspector general, quartermaster general and commissary general they are to be filled by detail from the line, the details to be temporary and not exceeding four years.

The new system is not applied to corps of engineers, medical department, pay department nor judge advocate general's department. The bill discontinues the regimental organization of the artillery and establishes an artillery corps of two branches, viz, 128 batteries of coast artillery and 18 batteries of field artillery, with a total of 17,448 men.

The bill provides for an increase of 100 in the corps of cadets at West Point; two at large from each state and ten more to the present number of twenty from the United States at large. Two of the most important provisions of the bill are those raising the rank of the commanding general to that of lieutenant general and that of the incumbency of the present adjutant general, General Corbin. The president is empowered to place on the retired list any officer who has been suspended from duty by sentence of courtmartial, or by executive order in mitigation of such sentence, for a period extending to or within one year of the time of his compulsory retirement for age. This is well understood to apply to Commissary General Egan.

The amendment creating a veterinary corps for the army, consisting of a captain and thirty-five other commanding officers, was attached to the bill after a spirited debate, the amendment being adopted by a vote of 25 to 23. The fortifications bill, carrying about $7,500,000, was passed.

FROM GENERAL OTIS.

War Department Is Advised of Operations In Philippines.

The war department has received the following report from General Otis:

"MANILA, May 4, 1900.—April captures from enemy thirty pieces artillery, 1,209 rifles, considerable ammunition and large stores property. During early portion of the month the enemy was active in extreme northern and southern Luzon and some Visayan islands.

"Our reported losses for the month, thirteen enlisted men killed; three officers, twenty-four enlisted men wounded; rumored recent loss in Samar of nineteen killed and number wounded not yet reported. This is due to small detachments scouting in mountains in the interior of the island. The enemy losses officially reported were 1,721 killed, wounded and captured. Leading Filipinos express confidence in the early pacification of the islands. They say the war has terminated. Leading insurgents are surrendering.

BILL OF REMOVAL

Of the Ganor Case Is Taken Up By Judiciary Committee.

The house judiciary committee gave a hearing Friday on the bill introduced at the suggestion of Attorney General Griggs to provide for the removal to the proper district for trial of persons indicted for offenses against the United States. The bill was prepared to cover the case of Benjamin Greene, John F., William T. and Edward H. Gaynor and Michael A. Connelly, who were indicted by the grand jury in the southern district of Georgia for conspiracy.

SIX SEAMEN DROWN.

British Steamer Strikes Shoals and All Hands Take To Boats.

A special from Cape Henry, Va., says: The British steamer Virginia, Captain Charles Samuels, from Daquiri, Cuba, for Baltimore, with a cargo of iron ore, with a crew of twenty-six men, including one stowaway, stranded on Diamond shoal about 6 p. m., Wednesday, May 3d, during thick, heavy weather. The entire crew took to the boats and attempted to leave the ship. One boat with fifteen of the crew got away, but the other boat was swamped and six men were drowned. The remaining five got back on the steamer and were rescued.

DISASTROUS TORNADOES

Sweeps Over State of Kansas Causing Loss of Life and Damage.

Half a dozen distinct tornadoes occurred in central Kansas Sunday afternoon, following a day of exceedingly high temperature. Two people are known to have been killed and three injured. Wires were down in the affected districts, making it difficult to accurately sum up the damage done.

ALABAMA STATE NEWS.

Tragic Death of a Small Boy Near New Decatur.

News was received at New Decatur of the tragic death of Ed E. Thickston's 6-year-old son, which took place late Sunday afternoon at Russell mill, ten miles west of the city.

The little fellow, in company with several other children, was playing on top of a high bluff, when he lost his footing and fell over the embankment to the bottom of the bluff, a distance of 50 feet. In falling his body displaced a large rock, which fell with terrific force, striking his body and mashing it almost beyond recognition and causing instantaneous death.

An Eventful Trip to the Transvaal.

Rev. I. N. Fitzpatrick, presiding elder of the A. M. E. church, has just returned to Opelika from an extended trip through South Africa, and more especially the Transvaal, where he was ordered by Bishop Turner in December to put down a revolt in the colored Methodist church there.

Bishop Dwane, of South Africa, had revolted from the authority of the church and constituted himself the supreme power in church circles, and over 2,000 of the members had followed him. Rev. Fitzpatrick had an eventful trip, calmed the ruffled waters, and restored the church to its usual calmness, besides adding over 500 to its membership.

He travelled over 25,000 miles on the round trip at an expense for fare alone of over $1,000. He has been recommended for the bishopric of South Africa, India, Abbyssinia, and Egypt. He is a man that stands well with the white people of his home.

Coosa River Improvement.

When the matter of improvements on the Coosa river comes before the house committee on Rivers and Harbors at Washington on the 15th instant, a strong body of Alabama citizens will be on hand to add their efforts to those of Congressman Burnett, of the Seventh district, who is pushing the measure. It will compose, among others, Hon. Frank Lathrop, of Riverside; Judge Cabot, Lull, of Wetumpka; O. R. Hood and W. P. Lay, of Gadsden. It is the desire of Chairman Lay that every section to be benefited by the opening should send a strong delegation to Washington on the 15th. It is hoped that congress can be induced to appropriate $600,000 to be used on the Coosa river during the next six years. This amount it is thought, will open the stream from Rome, Ga., to the gulf.

Shooting Affray in Dadeville.

The Fifth district republican convention met at Dadeville Saturday and resulted in a shooting affray. A difficulty arose between Deputy Collector King and his brother, Neely King, and Postmaster J. T. Howie, in which Neely King was shot through the lower part of the abdomen, the bullet inflicting a very serious and probably fatal wound. Fifteen or twenty shots were exchanged in the melee, which occurred on the public square, crowded with people. Postmaster Howie surrendered to the sheriff and was released later on $1,200 bond.

Destructive Fire in Montgomery.

The business portion of Montgomery was threatened with destruction by fire Tuesday morning. Todd's Gun store, on North Court street, was destroyed. The stock was valued at $10,000, with $3,000 insurance. The building destroyed was the property of P. N. Tyson, and valued at $5,000. It is covered by insurance.

Wheeler Will Not Be a Candidate.

Private telegrams received at Huntsville from a close friend of General Joseph Wheeler in Washington states that General Wheeler has announced positively that he will not be a candidate for the position in congress made vacant by his resignation.

$6,000 Increased.

The receipts of the internal revenue collector's office in Birmingham for the month of April, 19.0, exceeded the receipts for the same month last year by $6,000. The receipts were, in round figures, $40,000 for the month.

Birmingham's Street Fair.

The Elk's street fair begins in Birmingham May 14. The fair will be held in an enclosure on Second avenue, between Fourteenth and Eighteenth streets. The avenue has been graded and rolled in the limits to be occupied by the street fair and is now as smooth and level as a board. The work of enclosing it will be done this week and by Friday it will be ready for the reception of the Midway and the other attractions.

HOUSEHOLD AFFAIRS.

Wooden Bedsteads Return to Favor.

Wooden bedsteads are coming into fashion again, not only in this country, but in England, whence the idea of the metal bedsteads was imported. Aside from the love of change which has its effect in causing many housekeepers to revert to the wooden bed, the advance in the price of brass is partially responsible for this revival. Then many persons like to have sets of furniture and can match things up better with a wooden bed than with one of iron or brass.

Most people who have welcomed the simplicity and cleanliness of the metal beds will be loath to give them up or to believe that any one will, but the fact remains that dealers are selling five or six times as many wooden beds as they did last year.

Dainty Laundering.

Unless a professional laundress be employed, it is of the greatest importance that a woman know how to do up her own lingerie. Tucks are very much worn now and require special skill in ironing. Fine tucks should be ironed first on the wrong side. Then they should be turned over on the right side, raised with a knife and ironed again.

In washing gloves use gasoline, but never at night time, as gasoline is very explosive and should not be used near a light.

If one exercises considerable judgment and patience a nice dress may be washed without taking it apart.

An all-wool light cashmere or challis, even though it be trimmed with silk and lace, may be cleansed without injury, but it must in a way wash itself. It must be soaked over night and squeezed out and rinsed in the morning. A pail large enough not to crowd the garment should be used, and plenty of water to cover the dress well. The water should be cold, with a tablespoonful of pearline dissolved before the dress is put in.

But the greatest ingenuity is required in the ironing to get at all the out-of-the-way places.

Delicately tinted mulls and nearly all delicate goods should also be washed by soaking. And all tinted fabrics should be dried in the shade.

Storing Linen.

Every true woman should be a good housewife, and every good housewife should take a special pride in her household linen.

In these days of machinery we are exempt from the duty of the spinsters of old, who had to spin with their own fair hands to produce the various items wherewith they filled the old oak dower chest, providing for that day when they should leave their father's house to be installed in houses of their own.

We have not to work so hard now, and if our household linen does come in for a share of our needlework it is usually for the embellishment thereof in the way of embroidery, but, nevertheless, we are as proud of our store of linen as our great-grandmothers were, and, though we are not spinsters in very deed and truth—and may perhaps congratulate ourselves thereupon—there is one thing in which we are far behind the times of our forebears, and that is in the possession of good linen closets.

The present day establishment is also terribly bare of shelves and cupboards, and the young housewife has often nothing better than a chest for the storing of the necessary linen.

This might be either an old carved oak receptacle or a low box, which could be converted into an ottoman by having a cretonne frill hanging round the sides and a padded cover to the lid. Such an addition to the furniture of the upper hall is by no means to be despised, but a cupboard with plenty of shelves is infinitely more desirable.

Recipes.

Duval Fried Potatoes—Slice five medium-sized raw potatoes. Put into a granite saucepan a heaping tablespoonful of butter and one-half cup water. When this is hot pour in the potatoes, season with a half teaspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of pepper, cover and cook until tender over a slow fire.

White Cake—Whites of four eggs, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of sweet milk, one-half cup of butter, one-half cup of cornstarch, one and one-half cups of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, flavor to suit taste; put all ingredients together and stir briskly until it is a smooth batter and bake in a quick oven.

Sawdust Pudding — One cup chopped suet, one cup molasses, three and a half cups flour, one-half cup currants, one cup milk, one cup raisins, one-half teaspoonful soda, one teaspoonful cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful cloves. Mix, pour in mould, allowing plenty of room for it to swell and steam three and a half hours.

Cream Prune Pies — Stew the prunes until tender and rub through a colander. To each cupful of prunes add one cupful of sweet cream, the beaten yolks of two eggs, one cupful of sugar, the beaten whites of the eggs and flavor with pineapple. Bake with an undercrust. Cover with a meringue made of one beaten white of egg and one tablespoonful of sugar and flavor with pineapple.

Halibut Savory—Make a sauce of one teaspoonful each of butter and flour and one cup of hot milk in which a "pea" of soda has been dissolved. Cook until smooth and then add a gill of strained tomato liquor, a half teaspoonful of onion juice, saltspoonful of salt and dust of cayenne. Stir in last one and one-half cups of flaked cold cooked fish, toss and stir until the fish is heated through and serve on crisp buttered toast.

THE * CHRONICLE.

J. B. KILPATRICK.

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

FOR GOVERNOR,
WM. J. SAMFORD, of LEE.

FOR SECRETARY OF STATE,
ROBT. P. McDAVID, of MONTGOMERY.

FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL,
CHAS. G. BROWN, of JEFFERSON.

FOR SUPERINTENDENT OF EDUCATION.
JOHN W. ABERCROMBIE, of CALHOUN.

FOR TREASURER,
J. CRAIG SMITH, of DALLAS.

FOR AUDITOR,
WALTER H. MATTHEWS, of MARION.

FOR COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE,
ROBERT R. POOLE, of MARENGO.

FOR SENATOR 15TH SENATORIAL DISTRICT,
W. R. OLIVER, of SHELBY.

GEN. JOSEPH WHEELER has at last announced positively that he will not be a candidate for congress from the Eighth district. Marrying a rich widow beats running for congress all holler.

THE editor of the Alabama Home, a republican, evidently sees the handwriting on the wall. Hear what he says:

The republicans are not in business this year in Alabama, the pops are closing out and winding up their affairs, and the democrats will be able to rake in the pile without any false counts.

THE republicans are making a desperate effort to prevent the passage of the Nicaragua canal bill through the senate this session. They may succeed so far as this congress is concerned, but the people will demand its passage so emphatically in the fall that it will go through with a whoop. You can now put it down that the canal is a certainty.

THE CHRONICLE contains this week the announcement of Wm. R. A. Milner as a candidate for the office of tax collector of Shelby county. Mr. Milner is so well known throughout the county, having been a candidate before, that he needs no commendation at our hands. He has been tried and has always made a faithful official, and that is the best of recommendations.

OUR fellow-townsman, H. M. Millstead, announces this week that he is a candidate for the important office of sheriff of Shelby county. Mr. Millstead is well and favorably known over most of the county, and has many warm friends who will work for his nomination. He is competent, capable and honest, is a christian gentleman and would make an acceptable and efficient officer. He has been a life-long democrat and seeks the nomination from the party of his boyhood.

JOHN W. INGRAM, of Calcra, announces this week his candidacy for the office of sheriff. Mr. Ingram has been a faithful, energetic worker in the ranks of democracy from his boyhood up, and has never before asked or sought any reward. Where he is best known he is most liked, and his friends are legion. There is no question of his ability to manage the office successfully, for he has been a success in the conduct of his own business and that is a very good criterion to judge a man by.

MR. ALONZO M. CROSS is before the democrats of Shelby county as a candidate for sheriff. As will be seen by reference to a card in another column he has the hearty endorsement of a number of citizens of beat 4, his home, who know him intimately and claim for him all the qualities that go to make a good official. Unless these gentlemen are woefully mistaken, Mr. Cross is a most excellent man and would no doubt make a hustling sheriff. He seeks his nomination through the democratic primary.

THERE is a rumor afloat that Representative Aldrich will not be a candidate for reelection, and that State Senator Deans, of Shelby, will fall heir to the republican-populite nomination. Everybody will be glad when Aldrich quits. He has misrepresented this district long enough. But for his 'barrel,' little Willie would never have been heard of. He has doubtless realized that the next house will be democratic, and then he knows that his name will be mud.—Selma Times.

As betwen the two, Aldrich or Deans, we would not turn on our heel for the difference; only Deans has no "barrel."

PROF. J. B. KILPATRICK, of Montevallo, is a candidate for county superintendent of education, subject to the democratic primary. Prof. Kilpatrick has been a resident of this county several years, having taught three or four years at Wilsonville, where he has many warm admirers. He is now located in Montevallo, at the door of one of the best educational institutions in the South, which affords him unexcelled facilities for acquiring up-to-date methods in pedagogy. Mr. Kilpatrick is a christiam gentleman, an accomplished scholar, honorable and upright in all the relations of life, is a splendid instructor, having devoted his life to that work, and would make an energetic and very efficient officer.

PROF. C. H. FLOREY, of Vincent, wants the democrats of the county to entrust in his hands the office of county superintendent of education. Prof. Florey is a native of this county, and needs no introduction to our people. He is and always has been a staunch democrat, and has worked long and zealously for the success of the party. He is a teacher by profession, and has spent his entire time in the school room, and there is not a man in the county better equipped or more competent than he to look after Shelby county's educational interests. He is a christian in all that the word implies; modest, unassuming; young enough to be active and wide awake; old enough to possess that rarest of all traits—discretion; in short, is a most excellent citizen.

A STORY WITH A MORAL.

Last week THE CHRONICLE placed a four-line local in its columns stating that it had on hand a quantity of government seed for free distribution to its subscribers. There were about one thousand small packets of these seed, and it required one of the largest canvas mail bags to bring them to us. They had been on our hands for more than a month without anything being done with them, and we were consequently in a quandary as to the best method of their disposal. Last week we placed the local in this paper and it was our purpose to keep the fact constantly before the people until all seed were removed from our office and memory.

One week's notice was sufficient. The seed were all gone by Friday night, and the office devil had that kind of a time supplying the demand for seed, as well as the printers being delayed on several important jobs in waiting upon "our many customers." Ye editor caught himself in the rush, but managed to leave the office right after noon Friday to look after his own garden. He stayed their working faithfully (a few cold-blooded cynics may question this assertion) until the news reached him that the office boy was alone and sadly in need of assistance. (Like the cherished ideal of his childhood, the hero of the Casabianca, his post of duty was maintained because no means of escape presented itself.) He started down light-hearted and with a buoyancy only experienced by happy spirits, but turned back hastily when he saw the throngs of people crowding into the office. The office doors were closed earlier than usual Friday and the intimation given out that the office force were not at home to visitors that night.

Verily, verily the man who hath oft said within himself that advertising in THE CHRONICLE availeth naught is indeed a great joker, and belongeth not to this generation longer, but to some other.

Republican Mass Meeting.

Republicans of Shelby county will please not forget that Saturday, May 12, is the day appointed to meet in Columbiana to put out a county ticket. No fusion—straight goods.
W. W. WALLS, Chairman.

Properly Described.—"Well, Willie," said mama, contemplating the result of her handiwork, "papa's old knickerbockers look very well on you. Of course, they're a trifle large." "Yes, ma," replied the bright boy, "I guess 'wide ex-pants' would describe them."—Philadelphia Press.

Executive Committee Meeting.

The democratic executive committee of Shelby county met at noon yesterday in the court house. There was a large attendance, only three or four beats not being represented.

In accordance with the instructions of the recent county convention, the following resolution calling a primary election and fixing the qualifications of voters was adopted:

RESOLVED FIRST, That the chairman of the democratic executive committee of Shelby county be and he hereby is directed to call a primary election to be held on Saturday, the 16th day of June, 1900, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for representative in the next legislature of Alabama, and candidates for each of the following offices: sheriff, treasurer, superintendent of education, tax assessor, tax collector, commissioner from the first and second districts, justices of the peace for each precinct, constables for each beat, and three from each beat as members of the democratic executive committee of Shelby county.

SECOND, That said primary election shall be held and managed substantially under the rules and regulations governing the general elections, and that the qualifications of voters in said primary election shall be such as are prescribed by the state democratic executive committee.

THIRD, That the chairman of this committee appoint five members of executive committee to meet in Columbiana, on Thursday after the primary election on Saturday the 16th, to count the votes and declare the results of the said primary election.

FOURTH, That the said primary election shall be held under the supervision of the beat committeemen of each beat, who shall make up the returns and forward the same properly sealed to the secretary of this committee.

FIFTH, That the chairman of this committee be and he is hereby directed to issue a call to the newly elected committee not later than the 22d day of June, 1900.

SIXTH, That the candidate receiving the highest number of votes in the said primary election for the respective offices for which they are running, shall be declared the nominee of the democratic party.

In order that all may know the qualifications of voters who may wish to participate in the primary election, we give below the invitation extended by the democratic state committee, and endorsed in the above resolutions by the county committee:

Be it resolved by the democratic state executive committee of Alabama that we hereby cordially invite all conservative white voters, irrespective of past political differences or associations who can unite with us in the effort for pure and economical government, and who will support the nominees and principles of the democratic party, to participate in the primaries of the party throughout the state.

Resolved, further, That all persons participating in the primaries, conventions or mass meetings of the party hereafter to be held thereby pledge themselves to support the nominees of such primaries, conventions or mass meetings, whether municipal, county, state or federal.

WHITE MAN'S GOVERNMENT.

From The Mobile Register.

While our Northern friends are expressing their condemnation of the people of the South for wishing to mitigate the evils that resulted from the granting of the full rights of citizenship to the negroes of the country, who are in the main ignorant and not desirous of knowledge, they will do well to turn their attention to their brethren of the District of Columbia who prefer to do without the suffrage themselves rather than share it with the negroes who live with them. In voluntarily disfranchising themselves the white men of the district utter the most sincere protest of which man is capable against the forcing into citizenship of the blacks who care nothing for the obligations while they are eager in seeking the privileges of citizenship. Congress was asked to assume absolute jurisdiction over the affairs of the district and consented to do so. Since then the district has taken a great advance, the city has become the beauty spot of the nation, and, although some local lights feel that they are deprived of the opportunity of holding office, the citizens are convinced that they have found the best solution for their troubles. A meeting was held a few nights ago to look into the question, some of the inhabitants having expressed the view that the district is now able to take care of itself without the aid of congress, but a vote in proportion of nine to one showed that the majority thinks that reversion to the old order of things would be harmful.

This example of what white men find it necessary to do in order to protect their property interests is offered by a community where we may presume that the negroes are of the better class of their race, have some education, have accumulated some property and are capable of performing some of the duties of citizenship; so, if the action of the whites of the District of Columbia is justifiable in the forum of public opinion, how much the greater right have the whites of the South to seek their protection also!

The latter can not go to the length of surrendering the franchise altogether, because they have a state government to sustain, and can not give this over to congress even if they would do so. Yet they have a deal with a large 'population of the least informed beings in the world, negroes but little removed in intelligence from their brothers in the heart of Africa, who know nothing but the art of agriculture, and that in a primitive form. Under the constitution of the state the whites are required to regard these blacks as men and brothers, and as equally entitled to a voice in the conduct of a government that concerns the material and moral welfare of the commonwealth. Of course, this is expecting too much of the whites, and the result is that methods of negativing the legal rights of the negroes are resorted to. The day has passed where bulldozing has to be employed to accomplish this end. The negro in the interior rarely asserts his rights as against the whites; but the whites themselves, although they recognize the necessity of maintaining white supremacy, do not like the process to which they have resorted and do yet resort in maintaining it, and urgently call for a form of law that will free them from the necessity of doing acts that their moral nature revolts from.

It is said that the Northern people will punish the Southern people for legally strengthening their position, but we do not believe it. They have allowed existing conditions to establish themselves, although some among them have ably pressed force bills upon the attention of congress, they are gradually learning that the South must be left to work out its own salvation, and that the South is best able to solve its social problem. Therefore, we have little fear that, if the Northern people come to understand our position and conditions, they will do anything to prevent or to punish, but rather take a neutral attitude, as they seem to have taken in the District of Columbia case. We feel sure that when it comes to the battle between civilization and barbarism, between good government and bad, between progress and retrogression, the white people of the whole union will stand together, especially when all become acquainted with the fact that what is to be done is as well for the good of the blacks as that of the whites.

THE COSTS OF DRINK.

The costs of eating are rarely figured, and we shall not attempt to go into it. The American Grocer, however, has gone somewhat into detail on the costs of all kinds of drinks in this country, and says the grand total for the past year was $1,146,397,822. Alcoholic drinks—whisky, brandy, wine and beer stood for $973,589,080 of this total and tea, coffee, etc., for the balance. The coffee bill alone was $134,695,000. The amount consumed, in gallons, was:

	Gallons.
Coffee	1,346,951,542
Beer	1,135,520,629
Tea	433,474,880
Spirits and wines	113,670,924

The whisky, wine, brandy, beer, etc., bill is about $14 per head, that much for every man, woman and child. Add the tobacco consumption to the drink, and the total is about equal to the national debt, of all kinds, exclusive of the greenbacks and other paper money obligations. That is to say, the American people drink, chew and puff away in smoke an amount yearly that would put their country entirely out of debt. It is alarming, and quite evident that if we all could just quit eating and drinking we'd soon become a rich people.

THE BILLIONAIRE HAS ARRIVED.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Standard Oil Company has declared a quarterly dividend of $10 a share, payable June 15. This makes a total of $30 a share placed to the credit of stockholders since January 1, 1900.

Mr. John D. Rockefeller owns $31,000,000 of the Standard Oil stock. His share in the dividend will be $3,100,000, which will make his profits $12,400,000 since January 1. Adding to this the profits in his holdings of stock in subsidiary companies, Mr. Rockefeller's income this year is estimated at $75,000,000. At 5 per cent. this represents a capital of $1,500,000,000. The billionaire has arrived.

The enormous power of such vast wealth is scarcely conceivable. John D. Rockefeller with his associates in his various syndicates wields a power which may be greater than government itself.

Kings and princes have in times past ruled as absolute monarchs, but it is doubtful if they ever enjoyed the dominion over their subjects possessed by the man or men who can command the wealth of this republic.

Power once resided in political will. Now it is in economic advantage, which is rapidly passing into the hands of a very few. Government by and for billionaires is one of the dangers which threaten American liberty.

Reduced Rates via Southern Railway.

On account of the Elks' Street Fair at Birmingham, Ala., May 14-19, 1900, the Southern Railway and Alabama Great Southern will sell Tickets from Columbus, Miss.; Tallapoosa, Ga.; Anniston, Ala.; Selma, Ala.; Livingston, Ala.; Fort Payne, Ala., and all intermediate points to Birmingham and return, at rate of one fare for round trip. Tickets will be sold May 14 to 19, limited to return until May 21.

The Southern Railway announces reduced rates from points on its line for the following occasions:

General Assembly, Cumberland Presbyterian church, Chattanooga, Tenn., May 17-24, 1900, tickets will be sold at one fare for the round trip, selling dates May 15 to 18 inclusive, with final limit to return May 28.

General Assembly Presbyterian church, Atlanta, Ga., May 17-26, 1900. Tickets will be sold on May 15-17, limited to return May 29, at rate of one fare for the round trip.

General Assembly Presbyterian church, St. Louis, Mo., May 17-31, 1900. Tickets will be sold May 15-17, with final limit to return June 3, at rate of one fare for the round trip, plus $2.

On account of the meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention at Hot Springs, Ark., May 10-17, the Southern Railway will sell tickets from points on its lines to Hot Springs and return at rate of one fare for the round trip. Tickets will be sold May 7 to 10 inclusive, with final limit to return May 24. The schedule and sleeping car service afforded by the Southern Railway is excellent, and those contemplating the trip should communicate with nearest ticket agent for any information.

For further information regarding these occasions, apply to nearest Southern Railway ticket agent.

A WORD ABOUT MILLINERY

We Have Anything Everything The Ladies Want In This DEPARTMENT.

We have had an elegant trade this spring, larger than ever before, in fact so heavy that we had to employ extra help in this department. This fact alone goes to show that our goods are attractive, up-to-date, and at prices the people can afford to pay. We are constantly adding to our stock, receiving goods every week, and all we ask is an inspection of our stock before you purchase elsewhere. We have anything and everything in the millinery line.

DRESS GOODS DIMITIES PIQUES ORGANDIES

Or any of the newest and latest dress fabrics, in the loveliest shades and colors, can be found in our shelves. It is our ambition to make our store one of the most inviting and attractive to be found in the county. We spare no pains or expense in securing the very best selections obtainable as the result of thorough experience, together with the desire to make ours the leading business in all lines.

LADIES' FANS The prettiest, catchiest line you ever inspected. No matter what your taste, we have the very fan you want, or a better one at the same price.

MEN'S AND BOYS' CLOTHING.

In this line we outstrip all our competitors. There are few city stores that carry any better assortment. We have all the new styles in the latest fabrics, and we defy the defiers to fit you better, in better style, or better goods, or at better prices. If skeptical call and see that all we claim is true, and a great deal more that we haven't time to mention. Our line of serges, especially double-breasted coats, is all that you could ask. Crash suits in abundance.

STRAW HATS

Try us for anything and everything in this line. You will not go away disappointed. We can fit your head and your purse, and your head will look far better and your purse will suffer less than you imagine. No need to go to a city to get a neat, pretty hat, straw or any other kind, when I can fit you in superb style.

BUGGIES BY THE CAR LOAD.

To those who have owned a James & Mayer buggy it is not necessary to say a word in its praise, for it is A 1 in every particular, neat, substantial and well made. Buying them, as we do, in large quantities, we can sell them at bottom figures. Save a few dollars by investigating this statement. Buggy harness, all you want, in good, better and best qualities—none better for the money. Rest assured we can suit you in quality and price.

CLAY FURNACE Indispensable in every well regulated household. Handy and economical for heating irons and other purposes. You can't do without it.

SORGHUM SEED Both the Early Amber and Orange varities. You can't beat either one of them. See them before you get your supply.

Having devoted the best years of my life to the mercantile business, and having built up from a very small beginning, I think I can say modestly that indomitable pluck, energy and a determination to supply every demand has been the bed-rock of my success. Of course a wealth of experience has been gained in all these years, and I come very near knowing what my people want, and it is my intention to supply their every need. If you are not a regular patron call and let's talk the matter over. I am in a position to help you if you need it.

Today is when the Columbiana Manufacturing Co. will receive sealed bids for the manufacture of brick to be used in the construction of the cotton factory.

Sunday was the first time in two weeks the northbound passenger train was not even one minute late, and it had to change schedule to accomplish this phenomenal feat.

THE CHRONICLE is the first thing to reach the postoffice Thursday mornings—publication day—and no delivery boys are employed for the numerous city subscribers. They get the paper while the ink is damp and the news is fresh.

A change in schedule occurred on the Southern Sunday. The southbound passes here at 1.45 p. m. and the northbound at 2.11 p. m. The trains meet at Shelby Springs.

Dr. A. J. Massey, dentist, from 118½ 21st st., Birmingham, Ala., will be at the Huyett House, Columbiana, Ala., from 14th to 18th of May, 1900. Come promptly, all who wish his services.

The members of the Baptist church gave an ice cream supper at the residence of Mrs. L. C. Armstrong on last Friday night, which was well attended by the younger people of the city.

It won't be too late to subscribe for THE CHRONICLE after the elections are over and the inaugurations are a matter of history, but many people prefer the paper while the campaigns are on.

Richard Francis, of Chicago, is at Shelby attending the bedside of his brother, William, who is quite sick. This is "Dickey's" first trip back to Shelby county after an absence of many years.

Correspondents should send in their communnications so they can reach us on Monday or Tuesday. The paper usually goes to press on Wednesday evenings, and copy coming in on the trains that day is likely to be crowded out.

FOR SALE—At a great bargain, small stock of groceries. Will sell cheap and on good terms, and rent building very cheap. Cause for selling, "moving."

DENSLER MERCANTILE CO.
Wilsonville, Ala.

Three white boys, Albert Blount, Mike Kervin and Tom Hawkins, the oldest of the trio being only 15 years old, were arrested yesterday near Helena charged with buaglary, and are now resting from their labors in the county cooler. They will likely learn early in life that "the way of the transgressor is hard." Birmingham, of course, is their home.

From now until June 1st we will sell full regular dollar sizes Celery Compound and Sarsaparillas for 50 cents,

Hall Drug Co.

Ten or twelve of our enterprising young men have organized a base ball team for this season. They will give an ice cream supper next Tuesday night, May 15, and hope to take in sufficient money to buy their uniforms, which have already been ordered. All lovers of this greatest of all games should encourage the boys by attending their supper. We admit candidly that we have a very decided weakness for the national game, and we hope to see the boys encouraged in this laudable undertaking.

There are several bad boys in Columbiana who have been guilty of such despicable conduct in church recently that they have had to be very severely reprimanded by the minister. If this contemptible conduct continues any longer these boys will be taught that there is a law against disturbing public worship. Surely the parents of these boys do not uphold them in such disreputable conduct, and if not why do they not find out whether or not their boys are guilty, and if so put a stop to it? We hope to see this nuisance abated.

LET 'EM RIP.

So here goes to beat the crowd of hungry fellows--I will for the next twenty days sell my entire stock of fancy and staple groceries at the lowest price ever before offered in the county. Come and see. I am just obliged to have money, and if you have the cash I will sell you.

J. H. Hammond.

Endorsement of Mr. Alonzo Cross.

We, the undersigned citizens of beat 4, Shelby county, Ala., earnestly desiring the election of good men for county and state officers, heartily recommend Alonzo M. Cross, of Montevallo, Ala., as one of the most diligent, honest and upright christian men it has ever been our pleasure to know, and will, in our opinion, if elected, make one of the best—if not the best—sheriffs that Shelby county has ever had. No man in this beat can poll so large a vote for sheriff as Mr. Cross, and we announce him as a candidate for that office.

P. Miner transacted business in your town Saturday.

Cotton cropping is the order of the day.

Mrs. Collier, of Fourmile, was visiting Miss Miner Sunday.

We have a flourishing Sunday school at the Methodist church, and invite all to come and take part in the good work.

Several of the young people attended the singing at the Kingdom Sunday.

Prof. J. W. Spearman spent Sunday on Yellow Leaf with his best. We wish him success, for it is a long way up there.

We have had fine weather for the past week, and the farmers have hustled things to the front.

W. T. Taylor visited your town Saturday on business and to talk politics.

Let us have W. A. Lyon for sheriff, as he is competent and has lived in the county all his life. Don't forget to cast your ballot for him in the primary, as he is worthy your vote and will fill the office all O. K.

It is with sadness we chronicle the death of Miss Maggie Elliott, which occurred on the 19th ult. She was an obedient child, a devoted christian, and loved by all who knew her. She was not known to speak an unkind word to any one. She loved the work of the Lord and would be at church when health would admit. She was sick for about two years, but bore her sufferings with patience and was ready to go at any time the Lord saw fit to call her from this sinful earth to the house of joy and peace. Friends and relatives, weep not for her, for she has gone home where there is no pain, sickness or death. Do not wish her back, for your loss is her gain, and by the grace of God you can one of these days be with her and sing the praises of God, the Most High King.

SOMETHING NEW AT BULL FIGHT

Some of the Spectators May Lose Their Sight.

A disgraceful scene was witnessed in a bull ring, when there was a struggle between a small panther, an old lioness, a large bear, and a powerful bull, says a Madrid correspondent of the London Standard. In a short time the bull terribly gored the panther and the lioness, but he had more trouble with the bear, which required several terrific tossings and wounds from which blood flowed freely, before the wretched animal gave in. The proceedings were witnessed by 12,000 spectators of all ranks, who were so much engrossed in the fight and so enthusiastic over the victory of the bull, that they hardly noticed the report of a gun fired by the keeper to goad on the wild beasts when at first they did not show fight. About twenty persons, however, hurriedly left one of the stone galleries, and when the performance was nearly over it was found that these twenty spectators had been wounded, several seriously, in the eyes and face by the slugs fired at the animals. All the injured were instantly attended to by the doctor of the infirmary at the bull-ring, who stated that one man—an Austrian baker—would lose the sight of both eyes, while another would not be able to see again with his left eye. On hearing this the crowd became very demonstrative toward the tamer, who was at once arrested and taken to the office of the civil governor by the gendarmes. He is to be prosecuted for having caused the injuries to the occupants of the gallery. The Madrid papers denounce the authorities for allowing the use of firearms in a crowded bull-ring, but only El Correo and El Correspondencia have the courage to lament the fact that such scenes are possible in the capital of Spain.

The Power of Imagination.

Stories illustrating the power of imagination are many. Here is a new one. It comes from a recent number of the Psychological Review which relates an interesting experiment made by Mr. Slosson with the view of demonstrating how easily this faculty of imagination may be called into play. In the course of a popular lecture, Mr. Slosson presented before his audience a bottle which he uncorked with elaborate precautions, and then, watch in hand, asked those present to indicate the exact moment at which a peculiar odor was perceived by them. Within fifteen seconds, those immediately in front of him held up their hands, and within forty seconds, those at the other end of the room declared that they distinctly perceived the odor. There was an obstinate minority, largely composed of men, who stoutly declared their inability to detect any odor, but Mr. Slosson believes that many more would have given in, had he not been compelled to bring the experiment to a close within a minute of opening the bottle, several persons in the front rank finding the odor so powerful that they hastily quitted the room. The bottle contained nothing but distilled water. It would be interesting to know the effect of the explanation on the audience, but this part of the story is left to the imagination of the reader.

For Black Eyes.

It is often the case that people meet with accidents and bruises that cause disfiguring and discolorations from which they suffer not a little embarrassment and annoyance. It is worth while to know that there is a simple remedy, and one quite within the reach of everyone. Immediately after the accident, mix an equal quantity of capsicum annuum with mucilage made of gum arabic. To this add a few drops of glycerine. The bruised surface should be carefully cleansed and dried, then painted all over with the capsicum preparation. Use a camel's-hair brush and allow it to dry; then put on the second or third coat as soon as the first is entirely absorbed. A medical journal is authority for the statement that if this course is pursued immediately after the injury, discoloration of the bruised tissue will be wholly prevented. It is also said that this remedy is unequaled as a cure for rheumatism or stiffness of the neck.

MAKING STRAW HATS.

DIFFERENT PROCESSES THROUGH WHICH THE MATERIAL GOES.

A Finished Hat Made by Modern Factory Methods Represents the Joint Labor of About Thirty-five Persons—The Glue Bath and the Hydraulic Press.

Along no other line of industry has Baltimore attained such fame as in the manufacture of straw goods. In the lines of cheaper goods New England is superior, but when it comes to the finer grades of straw hats, those made in Baltimore are inferior to none. She has only six factories, but each of these has a capacity of nearly 100 dozen per day. The capital invested in the industry is over $2,000,000, and employment in these factories is given to over 1,500 hands, for the most part women and girls. The capital invested by jobbers and retailers is much greater and a much larger number of persons find employment with them.

A straw hat in process of manufacture passes through a large number of of hands. Ten processes are involved, and in each process several are engaged. The work is essentially girls' work, men having but little to do. In the straw hat factories the principle of the division of labor is also seen, each individual having his small but important task on each article. A finished hat, made by modern factory methods, represents the joint labor of about 35 persons.

THE PLASTER ROOM.

The first department in such a factory is what is known as the plaster room. Patterns of the various styles of hats are made from plaster paris by hand. The workmen, who must be skilled modelers, shape with their hands the mass of pliable plaster into hats of such shapes and sizes as fashion demands. The work is slow, each portion of the pattern having to be correctly shaped. From this pattern a mold is then made. The plaster is caked around the pattern and pressed till each crevice of the pattern is filled. Then when the pattern is removed a mold of the hat of the desired shape is at hand.

Work on the hat proper begins in Department No. 2, known as the braiding room. The straw which goes to make the hat is received in strips yards in length and about half an inch in width. This straw all comes from abroad, principally from Japan and China, no straw being braided in this country. It is received, as has been said, in long strips, and is examined by expert examiners to see if there are any breaks or flaws in the strips. This straw is braided by hand in the Oriental countries, the braiders receiving from 1 to 3 cents per day, according to their skill. The braids are bleached in this country, however, the bleaching imparts to the straw so treated the white, clean appearance. When first received, it is dirty and dark.

In Department No. 2 the sewing of the hat is done. The braid is on reels above the seamstress, and machines are used in the sewing. These machines vary from regular sewing machines only in that the braids mechanically go round in a circle. The reels revolve as the machines are in motion. The crown and brim are made separately and then stitched together. When the hat has passed through this department it has no size and but little distinctive shape.

WHERE STIFFENING IS APPLIED

In the third or "sizing" department the straw of the hat is rendered stiff by glue. Huge iron pots of imported glue are ranged side by side, and into these the hats which have passed through the sewing-room are plunged. They are then placed in a position so that the surplus glue can drip. The glue is necessary in order that the hat may be given shape, as loose, pliable straw would not retain form. When the hat has been dipped in glue, dripped and dried it goes to the blocking and pressing room.

In the blocking and pressing room zinc molds and patterns are used. The hat, as yet without distinctive shape and size, is fitted over a zinc "head," the size of which is known. The hat is blocked, or given shape, and is then pressed. While on the zinc pattern heavy irons are run over it, hardening the glue and pressing the seams. Each pattern differs in size from the others, there being one for each size hat on the market. The pressing "sets" the hat at a distinct size. After the hats have been blocked and pressed they go to the hydraulic press.

The hydraulic presses are in the fifth department, and the hats are brought to this department from the blocking and pressing room. Each hydraulic press is for a different sized hat. The crown of the hat fits snugly in a cavity, leaving the brim resting on the flat surface around the miniature well. Suspended from above is a rubber bag well filled with water. The bag is mechanically lowered and pressed, being rubber and elastic, the bag conforms to the interior of the hat, filling every crevice. Then the hydraulic pressure begins, more water being forced into the bag. A heavy steel lever keeps the bag from enlarging as more water is forced into it. For each thimbleful of water forced into the bag the pressure is increased 50 pounds, such is the resistance of water to compression. This pressure is gradually increased until it reaches 250 pounds. When the hat is taken from the press, the straw, which heretofore has been rough and "shaggy," is smooth, and the corners are distinct. Previous to entering the press the hats have but an ill-defined shape, the corners being round rather than at angles. The water pressure, however, affects every inch of the straw touched, and so circles are transformed into angles.

FINISHING PROCESSES.

The rough work on the hat finishes with the fifth department, the remaining departments being devoted to "finishing" processes. In the sixth the "tips" or strips of silk or satin, which are seen on the interior of straw hats, are cut and printed. A separate die is used for each class of hats. The hats with the loose tips then pass to the next department, where the latter are sewed in the hats. The leather strips of lining are also sewed in this department. The sewing on all fine hats is invariably done by hand. A leather band, the proper length, is cut from a roll and sewed on the interior of the crown. In the cheaper grades this stitching is done by a machine, but on the finer lines it is done by hand.

The bands are sewn on the exterior of the crowns in the same way. All hat bands are imported in rolls. The seamstress cuts off a strip of sufficient length and pins it around the crown. Then she stitches it. After the band is sewed on the hat is practically finished. However, the leather interior brim is rough, the "tip" is wrinkled and the band has not a smooth appearance. In order to remedy these defects the hats pass again through the hydraulic press; and when the pressure has been removed the hat presents a smooth, neat appearance. Work on it ends with the second hydraulic press—the last two departments being devoted to packing and shipping.

HOW BOERS PITCH THEIR LAAGERS.

Always Put Tents Between Parallel Lines of Hills.

A. C. Hales, the Australian correspondent who was captured by the Boers and released by President Steyn, writing from Burghersdorp, says:

"Possibly it may interest English men ad women, too, for that matter, to know what a fighting laager is like, and, as I have seen half a dozen of them from the enemy's side of the wall, a rough pen sketch may not be amiss. In war times the Boer never under any circumstances makes his laager in the open country if there are any kopjes about. No matter how secure he may fancy himself from attack, no matter if there is not a foe within fifty miles of him, the Boer commander always pitches his laager in a place of safety between two parallel lines of hills, so that an attack cannot be made upon him, either front or rear, without giving him an immense advantage over the attacking force, even if the enemy is ten times as strong in numbers. By this means the Boers make their laagers almost impregnable. If they have a choice of ground they pick a narrow ravine or gully, with a line of hills front and rear, covered with small, rocky bowlders and bushes. They drive their wagons in between these hills.

"The women are placed in safety, for it is a noticeable fact that very large numbers of women have followed their husbands and brothers to the war, not to act as viragoes, not to unsex themselves, nor to handle the rifle, but o nurse the wounded, to comfort the dying and to lay out the dead. I have heard them singing round the camp fires in the starlight, but it was hymns that they sang, not ribald songs. I have seen them kneeling by the side of men in the moonlight, but not in wantonness, but in mercy, and many a man who wears the British uniform to-day can bear me witness that I speak the truth.

"The foot scouts take up their positions among the rocks and shrubs on the hills in front and rear of the laager. Each scout has his rifle in his hand, his pipe in his teeth, his bandolier full of cartridges over his shoulder and his scanty blanket under his left arm. No fear of his sleeping at his post. He is fighting for honor, not for pay; for home, not for glory, and he knows that on his acuteness the lives of all may depend. He knows that his comrades and the women trust him, and he values the trust as dearly as British soldiers ever did. No matter how tired he may be, no matter how famished, the Boer sentinel is never faithless to his orders."

Even Senators Do It.

A well-dressed gentleman, whose bearing indicated standing, refinement and wealth, clung to a strap in a Pennsylvania avenue car a few days ago. The car was crowded. When he was approached by the conductor and his fare requested he ran his fingers in the little change pocket of his overcoat.

His hand sought his right trousers' pocket, the left and those of his vest, at last, going through every pocket in his clothes.

A blank look of amazement overspread the gentleman's face, followed by a smile, in which the passengers near him joined.

"Really," he exclaimed to the conductor, whose smile had not yet appeared, "really, I am much embarrassed. I find to my chagrin that I haven't any money whatever upon me, not even a car ticket. I will have to ask you to pass me on my face."

"I can't do that," answered the conductor. "I don't know you. Could not, anyway."

"Can't you make an exception this time? I am Senator ——, and will certainly send the fare to the company immediately upon reaching the capitol."

The conductor joined in the laugh, which by this time had become general, and walked to the front end of the car. A pasenger handed the Senator a car ticket, which the latter accepted with appropriate thanks and paid his fare with it.—Washington Evening Star.

A Fish-Hawk Story.

Henry Seymour, a veteran fisherman, and one of the most practical men in Talbot County, fishes on the Choptank River, and was bothered the other day by fish hawks robbing his nets of early roe herring. He was losing at least a dollar a day by the depredations of these birds. His practical sense came to his aid and he trapped the hawks in a very ingenious manner. He had stakes driven down about the nets and shaped out from shingles wooden decoy fishes, which he fastened to the ends of the stakes with barbed steel spears, so that the imitation fish showed just under the water. The fisherman watched the artful fish hawks until four, diving from aloft for the wooden fish, were pierced through and killed by the barbed spear.—Baltimore Sun.

The latest statistics show that the United States has over 200,000 miles of railroad, and less than 20,000 miles of good wagon roads.

COURAGE IN BATTLE.

THE INHERENT BRAVERY OF EVERY MAN.

Individuals Who at Home Are the Most Peaceful of Men Become Demons in the Face of an Armed Enemy—Stories of Heroism.

Among the millions of citizens whose lives have run along in peaceful channels and who have never been urged by duty or inclination to forsake the ordinary routine of life for the camp and battlefield there is a sentiment of warm admiration and love for the soldier who performs daring deeds in time of war. It matters not the nationality of the warrior, or on which side our personal sympathy may be placed, the announcement of some daredevil act of heroism calls forth our hearty applause. And why should it be otherwise? It is natural. It is the strong heart that wins. The dashing blade or free lance who with his life in his hands faces death calmly is to be respected, for in most instances really brave men are always true men. The great majority of people who have casually noted and dissected this universal applause for feats of military prowess have completely misunderstood the real meaning. The performance of a great tragedian may thrill us and bring forth our unstinted admiration, an admiration increased perhaps by the knowledge that we ourselves have none of the qualities he possesses and that a century of training would not bring us an inch closer to rivaling his wonderful genius. And not one man in a hundred who has read the stories of heroism that have come from Cuba and the Philippines, or later from South Africa, but places the possibility of his ever performing similar deeds just as far above him. He is in error. The inborn genius of dramatic fire is the property of the favored few, but the recklessness and courage of the soldier on the battlefield are simply an outcropping of the common heritage of mankind. At home, in a progressive community, a man may be a merchant or a bank clerk, but, whatever his station, the environment of civilizing influence is strong upon him, and most of his chances for the display of courage come to the moral side of his nature. But out in the open, with most of the trammels cast off and the enemy in front, with the ripple of the colors about him, and, more than all, the feeling that comes from companionship in a common danger with many of his fellows, it is the animal that gains supremacy. And man, being by nature a brave and fearless animal—the most fearless of all the animal species—simply remains true to his birthright and goes through the ordeal in the natural way. What can be the deduction? There is only one. It is that battle gallantry and battle brutality, springing as they both do from the same source, must necessarily be allied. You cannot slip the leash of a bloodhound and stop him half way to his scent. If any proof were needed to make the fact of inherent bravery and—the other thing—certain, it is to be found in the marvelous change in face, manner and even speech that comes to nearly every man when he is engaged in battle. Those who have seen their fellows under such conditions will have no difficulty in calling to mind what this change means. Refined men, and rough, uncultured men, too, for that matter, with the tenderest and most humane feelings, men who would shudder and turn sick at the sight of a slight accident on their home streets, have been frequently known to stand and deliberately watch the writhings and death agonies of their comrades who have been hit and torn to pieces by bursting shells, as if it were the commonest sight in the world. It may be urged that the excitement of being under fire would be sufficient reason for this callousness, but such an explanation will not account for the entire subversion of a man's whole life training. The real reason is that at such times it is the animal nature that takes full and complete possession of the human body.

DEAF CHILDREN LEARN MUSIC

Interesting Experiments With a Successful Result at Detroit.

An interesting work with deaf children is being done under the direction of the superintendent of music in the Detroit public schools. A class from which the best results are obtained consists of about six pupils. The children gather around a piano, resting their hands and in some cases their arms upon the instrument. Soon after a piece is started the children will begin to count in correct time with the music, catching the accentuation of beats through the vibration of the wood. Occasionally a child would seem to progress beyond the mere response to time and count aloud with some approximation to the tune. When this fact was observed by the teacher the pupils were told to repeat the words "baby, baby," over and over and at the same time a lullaby was played on the piano. In a short time it was noticed that nearly all the children with whom the experiment was tried indicated the air with more or less distinctness. Still another experiment was tried by singing the scale into the ear of a boy and playing it on the piano. After a few trials the pupil was able to sound the notes as well as could many children with unimpaired hearing. These tests seem to indicate that singing with some degree of accuracy may be taught the most deaf children. If such proves the fact a new pleasure and a new educative influence will come into their lives.

Military Salute.

You've undoubtedly noticed during a military review the officers salute while passing the reviewing stand by bringing the hilts of their swords to their faces. It is a custom which dates back to the time of the Crusaders. When the Crusaders were on the march to the Holy City, the knights were in the daily habit of planting their long, two-handled swords upright in the ground, thereby forming a cross, and before this they performed their morning devotions. On all military occasions they kissed the hilts of their swords in token of devotion to the cross. The method of saluting by bringing the hand to a horizontal position over the eyebrows dates back to the tournaments of the middle ages, when after the Queen of Beauty was enthroned, the knights, who were to take the part in the sports of the day, marched past the dias on which she sat, and as they passed, shielded their eyes from the rays of her beauty by placing their hands horizontally to their foreheads.

Big Crops in Arid Lands.

Can the arid lands of western Kansas, Utah and other states subject to drought be made to raise crops regularly year after year, and that without irrigation? H. W. Campbell, a farmer, formerly of Brown county, South Dakota, claims that they can. He has originated a method of cultivation which, he asserts, never fails to produce crops in the sun-baked territory, no matter how dry the season may be. His plan is based upon the theory that droughts are caused not by lack of sufficient fall of moisture, but by too rapid evaporation. He plows the soil deeply and subpacks the lower portion, thus forming a shallow water reservoir under the surface. The top strata of earth is then pulverized as fine as dust and kept so by frequent stirrings, forming a fine dust, which chokes the pores of the soil, cutting off evaporation and leaving the moisture in the earth to be drawn on by the roots of the growing plants.

Spring Body Cleaning

Every spring you clean the house you live in, to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected in the winter. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up during the winter with all manner of filth, which should have been removed from day to day, but was not. Your body needs cleaning inside. If your bowels, your liver, your kidneys are full of putrid filth, and you don't clean them out in the spring, you'll be in bad odor with yourself and everybody else all summer.

DON'T USE A HOSE to clean your body inside, but sweet, fragrant, mild but positive and forceful CASCARETS, that work while you sleep, prepare all the filth collected in your body for removal, and drive it off softly, gently, but none the less surely, leaving your blood pure and nourishing, your stomach and bowels clean and lively, and your liver and kidneys healthy and active. VOL. XV. COLUMBIANA, SHELBY COUNTY, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, MAY 17, 1900. NO. 28.

CAR STRIKERS ARE ENJOINED

By a Federal Judge at Kansas City, Mo.

STREET CARS CAN NOW RUN

Injunction Granted Is Absolute and Effectually Ties the Hands of Striking Union Workmen.

The federal authorities found alleged cause for interfering in the strike inaugurated Saturday morning by the union employes of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company in Kansas City.

Judge William C. Hook, of Leavenworth, Kansas, sitting in Kansas City, issued from the United States district circuit court an injunction that is more absolute and sweeping in its terms than any injunction ever before secured in the district in a contention between labor and capital.

The injunction is made absolute for a week, the matter being set for a hearing Saturday, the 19th, and if its restrictions shall be observed by the strikers the Metropolitan company has its fight won, for the strikers' hands are tied for seven days, and in the meantime the Metropolitan company can go about the organization of its disrupted forces.

The injuction is predicated upon the fact that several of the persons complained against as threatening the interests of the company are residents of other states, and the further fact that the strikers threaten to prevent the company from carrying out its contract with the United States government to transport the city mail carriers to and from their routes.

Harry Bryan, the national organizer of the Amalgamated Association, described as a resident of Michigan, is one of the parties enjoined, and the others named are twenty-two local leaders of the union, several of whom are mentioned as residents of Ohio and Kansas.

The injunction restrains the persons named and all others from in any manner, directly or indirectly, stopping or interfering with the running of cars on the lines of the Metropolitan Company; enjoins them from harrassing, assaulting or in any manner interfering with any person who may be in the employ of the company as he goes to or from his work or as he is engaged in the operation of a street car; enjoins union men and all others from picketing or patrolling the car houses, stopping places, stations, tracks, or approaches thereto, or loitering in large numbers in or about any of the places named, or making loud or boisterous noises in the vicinity thereof for the purpose of intimidating or interfering with the company's employees.

The injunction even goes further than this and enjoins any concerted action to cause any act or annoyance which will assist in stopping the operation of the cars, or interfering in anywise with an employee in moving a car which may carry a mail carrier, or a messenger, or upon which a mail carrier or a messenger may wish to ride.

The restrictions not only apply to Organizer Harry Bryan and the twenty-two men named, but to all others who may be acting in concert with them after the entering of this injunction.

In addition to the police and the deputy marshals sworn in, a force of United States marshals will be on hand to interfere in case the injunction is ignored, and there is every probability the strikers will now desist in their efforts to bring out the men who have so far jailed to join them.

SUNDAY CARS RUNNING.

Every street car line in Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kan., was in full operation Sunday and no show of violence was offered by the strikers.

The injunction of the federal court, enjoining the union men from interfering with the running of the cars, and the added fact that it was Sunday, combined to have a salutary effect on the strikers. Early in the day groups of strikers gathered at the different power houses and quietly urged the crews to join the strike. Less than a dozen responded, however, and the places of these men were promptly filled.

Railroad officials had applications from twice as many men as they could use, and to be sure of no delay placed half a dozen extra crews at the terminus of each line, paying them full wages, to fill the gap that might be caused by any recruits to the strikers' ranks.

SCOURGE IN FAMINE CAMP.

Four Hundred In Three Days the Death Rate From Cholera.

The Bombay correspondent of The London Times says:

"The cholera continues to rage in the famine camps. There have been 400 deaths in three days at Mandivee, and so numerous are the cases at Godra that it is impossible to collect the bodies. These lie for days in the sun. The people have fled and cannot be induced to return. A similar state of things prevails at Broxeh."

BAPTISTS AT HOT SPRINGS.

Southern Convention Opens Auspiciously--Northen Re-Elected.

The Southern Baptist Convention began its sessions in Hot Springs, Ark., Friday morning. Georgia's distinguished ex-governor, Hon. W. J. Northen, and the association's president, faced a magnificent assemblage in the big Eastman hotel when he called the convention to order. A veteran in the work said that it was the greatest gathering in the fifty-five years' existence of the organization. Almost all of the 1,506 delegates were present with a great crescent behind them, of sons and daughters of the south, the big number of young men in the hall seeming to emphasize that the Baptists of the new and vigorous southland are well equipped for the work of the dawning century.

Three sessions—morning, afternoon and night—were held the first day. Rev. J. P. Eagle, of Little Rock, former governor of Arkansas, nominated ex-Governor Northen for reelection as president. The unanimous vote of the convention was cast for him.

President Northen made an eloquent and feeling speech of acceptance. Then Rev. H. S. Moody, of Hot Springs, welcomed the delegates, whom he termed messengers of the civil and religious liberty. Frequently the Arkansan made the big crowd shout with laughter.

"This is a place of many waters," he said, "both cold and hot, and I congratulate you on having followed the example of the original Baptists. We all believe in immersion here and most of us practice it."

Rev. Mr. Melton of Augusta, Ga., accepted the hospitality of Arkansas and Hot Springs in an appropriate speech. Rev. Dr. R. C. Buckner of Texas, S. H. Ford of Missouri, Joshua Levering of Maryland and ex-Governor Eagle of Arkansas were elected vice presidents, while Rev. Dr. Lansing Burrows of Nashville and Rev. O. F. Gregory of Baltimore were chosen secretaries. G. W. Norton of Louisville, treasurer, and Rev. Dr. W. P. Harvey of Louisville, auditor, were elected.

There was a remarkable scene when a superb vase of silver was placed on an ebony pedestal on the platform. With warm words Rev. Dr. Burrows, on behalf of the Baptists of the south, presented the vase to Rev. Dr. D. F. Tichenor, the honored and venerable secretary of the home mission board. The aged minister, who attended his first convention in Charleston in 1849, accepted the token of esteem with a voice broken with emotion, while scores of stalwart men and fair women were moved to tears. Then the great assemblage arose and streamed up to the platform and showered congratulations on the "grand old man" of the church.

ROBERTS MOVING FAST.

Red Coats Are In Close Proximity to Free State Headquarters.

A London special of Friday says: A British column 3,000 strong has arrived at Vryburg, 100 miles from Mafeking. It reached there Thursday, and although harassed by the Boers, is pushing swiftly forward. Fifty miles south of Vryburg, at Taungs, is General Hunter's main body moving slowly and contending with considerable forces. The pick of his mounted men are the 3,000 who are going without wheeled transport and at a rate that may possibly bring them to Mafeking within three days.

So quickly has Lord Roberts advanced that his cavalry is only 22 miles from Kroonstadt, while the main army is only 11 miles behind them. He reports the British are in striking distance of the Orange Free State headquarters. Opinions differ widely as to whether any determined stand will be made there by the Boers. The presence of 10,000 Boers in the neighborhood of Thaba N'Chu is confirmed. They are holding a line 20 miles north to southeast of Thaba N'Chu.

Mr. Winston Churchill says there were only 2,000 Boers who opposed the British at Zand river. Another estimate is that 6,000 Boers with six guns made a rear guard action, while many other thousands with convoys retired without firing a shot.

President Steyn and a council of the leaders of several thousand Free Staters in the Ladybrand and Ficksburg district determined to submit to the men the question of continuing the war or not at a great open air meeting. The fighting men decided to fight on.

WOULD WELCOME BOERS.

These Governors Favor Their Settlement In Their States.

The St. Louis Sunday Post-Dispatch printed the result of an hour's conversation held by it, over 691 miles of telegraph wire with Governors Dan S. Jones of Arkansas; William E. Stanley of Kansas and Lon V. Stephens of Missouri, at their respective state capitals, in connection with the announcement of State Secretary Reitz that he, with others, intends to emigrate to the United States in the event of the defeat of the Boers by the British. Each governor was asked if he would extend an invitation to the Boers to locate in his state. They each answered in the affirmative.

WORKERS LOCKED OUT.

Mill Owners Object to Their Employes Joining Union.

The Proximity cotton mill at Greensboro, N. C., finding that its employees were about to strike, a labor union having been organized among them, shut down and locked them out. The employees thus discharged have employed counsel, and decided to take a novel step by suing the company for one year's wages, aggregating about $90,000.

GRAVES URGES RACE SEPARATION

Contends That Prominent Negro Leaders Are With Him.

NO HOPE WITHOUT IT

Georgian Makes Strong Plea at the Montgomery Convention.

During the meeting of the society for the promotion of study of the race conditions held in Montgomery, Ala., the past week, Hon. John Temple Graves argued for separation of the races in distant localities as the cure for existing evils. Mr. Graves said in part:

For twenty years I have been in constant protest against the complacent assertion that there was no race question in the south. Men of power and influence in my own and other states—politicians of prominence, skimming the surface of events—have soothed us with the assurance that there was no problem and that time and patience and folded hands would settle these great questions in the perfect way.

The issue of races is not peculiar to America. It is the problem of the Anglo-Saxon peoples. It burns in India, in Africa and in America.

"Will the white man permit the negro to have an equal part in the industrial, political, social and civil advantages of the United States? This, as I understand it, is the problem."

This question, asked by Council, as the deliberate representative of his people, is the core of the race question. I adopt it as my own and ask that question here today.

The answer to it is in every white man's heart, even if it does not lie openly on every white man's lips. It may be expressed in diplomacy; it may be veiled in indirection; it may be softened in philanthrophy; it may be guarded in politic utterance, and oftenest of all it is restrained by ultra conservatism and personal timidity. But, wherever the answer to this vital question comes, stripped of verbiage and indirection, it rings like a martial bugle in the single syllable—"no!"

If the fifteenth amendment be repealed you may be sure that it will never be re-enacted in nation or state. The enfranchisement of the negro was the American mistake of the century. It is best recognized by those who did it.

Industrial education will not solve, but complicate the problem. Will industrial education raise the moral status of the negro when the academy and the classic school have failed? Will the education of the hand produce a higher type of citizens than the education of the mind?

On this great question I stand now where I have always stood—where Webster stood and Henry Clay; where Thomas Jefferson stood and Abraham Lincoln, and Henry Grady and Council and Turner and the rest—where in time all men will stand who see the light and dare to face it.

Separation is the logical, the inevitable, the only way. No other proposed solution will stand the test of logic and experiment.

Education complicates the problem. Every year of enlightenment increases the negro's apprehension of his position of his merit and attainment, and of the inconsistency between his real and his constitutional status in the republic.

We have come in God's providence to the parting of the ways.

In the name of history and of humanity; in the interest of both races, and in the fear of God, I call for a division.

We make it peaceably now. We may be forced to accomplish it in blood hereafter.

The time is propitious and the country is ripe for separation.

I have more than casual reason to believe that the solid judgment which rests behind the beneficient experiment of Booker Washington teaches him that neither worth, nor merit, nor achievement will ever bridge the impossible barrier of race prejudice, and that when the last arrow of his noble effort has been shot, it must come to this at last.

There is not a hope in fact or reason for the negro outside of separation.

FAMINE NOT EXAGGERATED.

Lord George Hamilton Confirms the Stories Coming From India.

In the house of commons at London Friday afternoon the secretary of state for India, Lord George Hamilton, replying to a question on the subject of famine in India, confirmed the reports heretofore received of the excessive famine and the mortality therefrom in the native states.

They Seek Protection.

Southern growers of casava and manufacturers of starch have appealed to the ways and means committee of the house to take action restricting the importation of their product.

EXEMPT FROM BANKRUPTCY.

Virginia Federal Judge Sets Precedent In This Decision.

Judge Edmund Waddell, Jr., of the United States district court at Richmond, Va., has decided, in the case of the Commercial Building and Loan Association, that the association is not a corporation such as could be forced into bankruptcy under the act of 1898. The proceedings will be dismissed. The case is the first of its kind and establishes a precedent.

RIOTING RESULTS.

Police Forced to Use Pistols In Troubles Brought On By Strike of Car Men.

Affairs in the street railway strike at St. Louis Friday showed a complete reversal of the conditions prevailing on Thursday. The day opened quietly, but later reports began to circulate of renewed rioting in various parts of the city. In one instance the police fired into a crowd, and in others used their clubs on those who attempted to interfere with the running of cars. While rumors of casualties were rampant during the day, up to a late hour of the night none of a serious nature had been corroborated.

The suburban system ran all its cars under an escort of police. So close was watch maintained by the force that practically no disturbances occurred on its lines. The Transit Company started cars on a number of its branches, and notwithstanding the ample police protection afforded, trouble cropped out in various directions. Two cars were taken out of the station at Geyer and Jefferson avenues at 2 o'clock and the 300 strikers around the carsheds were forced back by the police.

President David Kreyling, of the Central Trades and Labor Unions, says the situation is far more critical than at any time since the strike begun.

He says it is a fight of unionism for its very existence and must be won if it takes every union man in St. Louis to do it, who, he says, only awaits the word of their officers to go on a sympathetic strike.

This would mean 100,000 men and women would lay aside their work.

JEFFRIES THE VICTOR.

Champion Pugilist Puts Out Ex-Champion After Hard Tussel.

In the arena of the Seaside Sporting club at Coney Island, Friday night, James J. Jeffries reaffirmed his right to the world's pugilistic championship by knocking out James J. Corbett in the fastest, prettiest and closest heavy weight ring battle ever fought in New York.

The contest lasted twenty-three rounds of the twenty-five limit.

Corbett emerged from a year's retirement from the ring rejuvenated and fresh. He was as fast and clever as back in the days when people marveled at his skill. His foot work was wonderful and his defense perfect. He outboxed his man at both long and short range, and if he had had the strength necessary, he would have gained an early victory. A hundred times he ducked the punch that knocked him out. At times he made the massive Jim look like a beginner in the art of defense with his hands, and when Jeffries stood over his quivering form, his face showed marks of the punishment that Corbett had inflicted.

Corbett went down to defeat that was regretted by a vast majority of the men who filled the hall. The money was against him, but he had a wealth of sympathy. It was probably his natural heritage as the short ender, but before the battle had ended he won more support by his display of speed and skill. Jeffries won with his strength, both that strength that lies in the power of massive muscle and that strength which is the essence of vitality.

Jeffries had many points of advantage over Corbett. To begin with, he is nine years younger than the ex champion and is an inch taller. He went into the ring weighing 210 pounds and Corbett's weight was 183. The normal girth of Jeffries' chest is 44 inches and of Corbett's 42 inches. expanded, Jeffries' chest measures 49 inches and Corbett's 44½ inches. With arms extended Jeffries reaches 76¾ inches and Corbett 74¾ inches. Jeffries' biceps measure is 16 and Corbett's 14 inches.

There was never a more orderly affair under the Horton law. There was order in the assembling and handling of the great crowd and order in the contest. The small army of police present was taskless and the contestants themselves neither wrangled nor quarreled throughout the evening.

POPULIST COMMITTEE OFFICERS

Named at Organization Meeting In Sioux Falls, S. D.

The Populist national committee met in Sioux Falls, S. D., Friday, and organized by the election of the following officers:

Chairman—Senator Marion Butler, North Carolina.

Vice Chairman—J. H. Edmonston, Nebraska.

Treasurer—W. D. Washburn, Massachusetts.

Secretary--J. A. Edgerton, Colorado.

Many Pension Bills Passed.

The house Friday broke all records in the matter of passing private pension bills. In all, 180 went through. Among them was the senate bill to pension the widow of the late General Guy V. Henry. As the bill passed the senate it carried $100 per month, but the house reduced this amount to $50.

Sultan's Representative Coming.

Ahmed Pasha has left constantinople for the United States, charged with the mission of settling the indemnity claim of this country.

A BIG OVATION TO MR. COCKRAN

New Yorker Speaks On Race Problem At Montgomery.

"WHITE MEN WILL RULE"

Speaker Declares That Fifteenth Amendment Is Dead.

Bourke Cockran received an ovation when he was introduced to make an address on the negro problem before the southern society convention in Montgomery, Ala., the applause lasting for five minutes. He boldly advocated the repeal of the fifteenth amendment to the Federal constitution. He argued that it was a bad limb on the tree; that it had been nullified by the states; that it had been lynched, so to speak, by the people of the south. He declared that the reconciliation of the theoretical status of the negro, under the constitution, should be reconciliation with his actual status in the public opinion of the country.

He maintained that this repeal was best for the negro as well as for the white man, since both races had to live together, to prosper together or go down together. Every source of irritation between the two should be removed and the fifteenth amendment was the greatest. He asserted that the path of the negro to political and social rights lay through their deportment.

He asserted that the path of the negro to political and social rights lay through the development of the unit, the individual, and that the only means was by industrial education. He lauded the generosity of the south for spending thirty-five years after its devastation, and out of its poverty, over one hundred millions of dollars for negro education, and pointed out that it was the duty of the federal government to assist in preparing its wards for the duties of citizenship.

He said that it would be far more defensible for the country to spend ten or twenty millions a year in helping uplift the black men of the south instead of one hundred millions in putting down the brown man of the east. He believed that the establishment of a Tuskegee school in every county in the south and the multiplication of Booker Washingtons was the duty of national government; that the white and black man are here and must live here and work out their own salvation; that the intelligence of the white man will always triumph and the black man must be content to take second place; that the interests of both races are identical and when one prospers both prosper; that it is possible for the two races to live together and prosper and that the negro furnishes the best labor for the south, that the question of suffrage should be left solely to the states, but they should see that the negro should have absolute protection to life and property. Rape cannot be stopped by lynching and the records show that where the lynchings are resorted to the crime of rape becomes more frequent. We must help the black man to become a good citizen.

Mr. Cockran closed the meeting and the audience rose to their feet and for ten minutes applause continued. No such ovation was given a speaker at the conference.

John Temple Graves of Georgia, in a ten minutes' speech, captured the crowd by saying after all that had been said, one fact was patent, "that when rape was committed there would be a lynching."

APPROVE NICARAGUA ROUTE.

Commission Appears Before the Senate Canal Committee.

Friday the entire membership of the interoceanic canal commision appeared before the senate committee in charge of the Hepburn bill.

All of the members of the commission were given an opportunity to express their views and were questioned at considerable length by the senators.

As to the Nicaragua route all reiterated what the Walker commission has reported—that the waterway is entirely practicable from an engineering standpoint at about the same range of estimates heretofore made, from $118,000,000 to $140,000,000.

BRYAN IS COMPLACENT.

Nebraskan Makes No Comment On Action of Populists.

The least concerned man in Lincoln, Neb., in the outcome of the Sioux Falls convention apparently was the nominee of that convention, W. J. Bryan.

Mr. Bryan spent the day and evening with his family at his city home, and the first notification of his selection by acclamation was the Associated Press bulletin. He asked to be excused from commenting on the action at Sioux Falls or Cincinnati, nor would he express himself on the respective platforms or the apparent division at Sioux Falls on the question of nominating a candidate for vice president.

Bacon After Money Spenders.

Senator Bacon introduced in the senate Friday a lengthy resolution calling for all possible facts concerning the expenditure of moneys by the representatives of this government in Cuba and he expects to strongly urge its adoption.

Telegraph Company Claims Damages.

The Cuba Submarine Telegraph company has filed claims against the government for damages to its property during the Spanish-American war.

COOSA RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

Committee From Alabama and Georgia at Washington.

A committee from Alabama and Georgia is in Washington to appear before the river and harbor committee asking an appropriation of $500,000 for the improvement of the Coosa river. The committee is comprised of Captin P. Lay, chairman; O. R. Hood, Gadsden; Captain Frank Lathrop, Riverside; Judge Cabot Lull, A. Hohenberg, W. A. Austin, Wetumpka; H. H. Henderson, Baltimore; Colonel D. B. Hamilton, B. J. Hughes, Captain J. B. Fitzpatrick, Rome.

Practically the entire Alabama delegation in the house and senate will appear, but arguments, as decided by a meeting, will be made by members of the committee and not by congressmen. The committee will present a memorial giving strong arguments for the improvement, showing the extent of business and manufacturing along the river, its importance nationally, resources of the state, with a map showing Alabama's river system of coal and iron deposits.

Tredegar Mineral Railroad Purchased.

The Tredegar Mineral railroad has been bought by Alex T. London, of Birmingham, and will at once be extended from Jacksonville to Anniston, a distance of twelve miles. The road was built by General J. W. Burke and others, and is three miles in length, reaching from Jacksonville to the East and West railway, the latter using it to get into Jacksonville. The East and West and Seaboard Air Line are believed to be behind the deal.

Mobile Gets Encampment.

Mobile gets the encampment of the Alabama National Guards. Adjutant General Brandon and the committee of officers, who were in Mobile Monday, were invited to remain over until Tuesday to confer with the Commercial club. They did so, and the club guaranteed to contribute $1,500. The site selected is on Mobile bay, near Monroe park. The committee is well pleased with the selection.

Rev. H. L. Hargett Accepts.

Rev. H. L. Hargett, pastor of the Congregational church at Gate City, has accepted the nomination for governor on the prohibition state ticket, and will make a canvass in the interest of the ticket. Dr. W. B. Crumpton was nominated for this place by the state prohibition convention. but declined to make the race.

Track Laying Begun.

John T. Cochrane, general manager of the Carrollton Short Line railroad, says that the roadbed is now completed to within two miles of Carrollton, and all the rails have been received, and also the engine for the work train has arrived and that they have commenced to lay the track.

John Blount Dies From Wounds.

At Huntsville John Blount, who was injured by being thrown from a excursion train near Madison, died at the Hospital in Huntsville. Will Berney and Houston Patterson, of Cherokee, were arrested, charged with the murder of Blount, and are in jail.

Will List on New York Stock Exchange.

The Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron company, with principal offices in Birmingham, has made application to have its securities listed on the New York Stock exchange, and there is little doubt but that the application will receive favorable consideration.

Atkinson Coming to Alabama.

F. W. Atkinson, of Massachusetts, recently appointed superintendent of instruction in the Philippine islands by the Taft commission, is going to Tuskegee to study the educational system there. He will also visit the school at Huntsville.

Ramsey Recaptured.

Dick Ramsey, a former merchant of Anniston, who was convicted of burglary three years ago and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary, and who escaped from jail, has been recaptured.

New Officers of Christian Endeavor.

The state convention of Christian Endeavor closed at Huntsville Sunday. Montgomery was selected as the next place of meeting, and the following officers elected: President, J. W. Sibley, of Birmingham; world vice president, Rev. O. P. Speigel, of Birmingham; vice president, H. D. Self, of Montgomery; treasurer, Paul Speake, of Huntsville; secretary, Miss Naldo Allen, of Birmingham.

BAPTIST CONVENTION ENDS.

Negro Missionary From Africa Captures the Vast Audience.

A Hot Springs, Ark., special says: Another Booker Wasnington appeared at the last moments of the Southern Baptist convention. He was Rev. Charles S. Morris, a young man of brown skin, and with eloquence that thrilled the big assemblage. He is a missionary among the blacks of Africa, and had been granted a few minutes for the purpose of making a plea for missionary work on the dark continent.

A half dozen other missionaries had just told of the labors, and while the convention listened with great interest, it remained for the negro to stir the great gathering to tumultuous enthusiasm, when, with splendid eloquence, he told his hearers that Carey was not the first modern missionary, but that the pioneers were the godly women who took charge of the slaves when they landed in old Virginia, and clothed and fed them and gave them the gospel. The thousands in the audience overwhelmed him with their applause.

It was some time before Ex-Governor Northen, the president, could obtain silence. "Brethren," said he, "I am in sympathy with your applause, but it is against the law."

Crowds pressed forward and struggled to get near enough to throw money on the platform. Several hundred dollars in silver and notes were thrown at Morris' feet. He said not to give money to him, but turn it over to the treasurer and have it used to send messengers throughout the south to arouse the colored people to co-operation in the mission work in Africa. The outpouring of money was so spontaneous that even after the eloquent black orator had refused it, it was flung at his feet.

The speech of the African missionary and the incidents attended it formed the climax of a highly enthusiastic convention.

The delegates selected New Orleans, and the Friday before the second Sunday of next May as the time for holding the next convention.

NAVAL BILL PASSED.

Committee's Report on Armor Plate Was Adopted.

After a discussion lasting five full days, the senate passed the naval appropriation bill. The secretary of the navy is authorized to secure armor of the best quality at $445 per ton, but if he be unable to obtain it at that price he is then authorized to pay $545 per ton for armor for the battleships Maine, Ohio and Missouri, and proceed to erect an armor factory not to exceed $4,000,000 in cost, half of which amount is made immediately available. The committee's proposition carried by a vote of 31 to 29. The secretary of the navy is directed to purchase five Holland torpedo boats, at a price not exceeding $170,000 each.

Just before adjournment, Mr. Nelson, of Minnesota, called up the "free homes" bill, and it was passed without a word of debate.

The house passed the general deficiency appropriation bill, and the military academy bill, the last of the supply bills, will follow it. The deficiency bill carried $3,839,021, and was passed substantially without amendment.

Killed His Wife, Then Himself.

A tragedy occurred at Dyersburg, Tenn., Monday. L. D. McAllister, a wealthy citizen of Heloise, shot and instantly killed his wife, and after an ineffectual attempt to slay his wife's brother, turned the smoking revolver to his own head and blew out his brains.

New Branch Railroad.

The construction of the Illinois Central branch from Parsons to Grenada, Miss., now seems an assured certainty. All hitches have been straightened out and the contract let for the work, which will be commenced at an early date and completed before October 1.

The Inheritance Law.

The United States Supreme court decided in the inheritance tax law to be constitutional and valid, but held it applied to the amount of legacy and not to the estate as a whole.

Lynching in Georgia.

William Willis, a negro who shot and killed Alexander Whitney, of Augusta, Ga., was lynched near Grovetown, about twelve miles from there, Monday.

Reported Favorably.

The Senate committee on interoceanic canals Monday ordered a favorable report on the Nicaragua canal bill as it passed the house.

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

FOR GOVERNOR,
WM. J. SAMFORD, of Lee.

FOR SECRETARY OF STATE,
ROBT. P. McDAVID, of Montgomery.

FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL,
CHAS. G. BROWN, of Jefferson.

FOR SUPERINTENDENT OF EDUCATION,
JOHN W. ABERCROMBIE, of Calhoun.

FOR TREASURER,
J. CRAIG SMITH, of Dallas.

FOR AUDITOR,
WALTER H. MATTHEWS, of Marion.

FOR COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE,
ROBERT R. POOLE, of Marengo.

FOR SENATOR 15TH SENATORIAL DISTRICT,
W. R. OLIVER, of Shelby.

H. W. Nelson, of Columbiana, is out as a candidate for tax collector of this county. Mr. Nelson is well and favorably known all over the county, having for four years held the office of sheriff, which office he filled acceptably. He has been a lifelong democrat, and no one has worked harder for the success of his party than he. He is competent, painstaking and thoroughly honest, and is in every way qualified to make a splendid officer.

The friends of W. T. Taylor, of beat 9, announce him as a candidate for sheriff, and they publish in addition to his card a very cordial and hearty endorsement of his candidacy. He is as true a democrat as can be found anywhere, and has never failed to do his full share for the success of the party. In his community where he is best known he is universally liked, respected and honored for his sterling qualities, rigid honesty and purity of character. We know of no better citizen or more loyal democrat.

In our announcements this week will be found the card of J. E. Ruffin, of Helena, who is a candidate for tax assessor. Mr. Ruffin was superintendent of education several years since, and he enjoys the reputation throughout the county of having made the best official we ever had in that office; and while that is saying a good deal it is not an exaggeration of the facts. Mr. Ruffin is one of the best business men in the state, and having made a success of his own business is the best possible guarantee of his ability as a public official.

The straight and middle-roaders of the republican party in this county held a mass meeting in the city last Saturday. Chairman Walls and Mr. Vandiver were both present and a number of republicans were also in attendance. S. S. Crumpton was endorsed for superintendent of education and William Brasher, of Spring Creek was named for tax collector. No other endorsements were made. Another meeting was called for the 23d of next month, when a full ticket will be placed in the field. The next meeting of the committee will be held in this city.

W. A. Thompson, of Columbiana, is before the people this week as a candidate for treasurer. He held this responsible office once before, and made a most efficient, careful and accommodating official. Mr. Thompson is a true blue democrat, one who has always labored in season and out of season for the success of his party, and no better man can be found in the county. For the past year he has been afflicted with ill health, but is now able to get out a little. Mr. Thompson is clean, reliable and honest—qualities absolutely essential to qualify one for the office he seeks.

Mr. John Russell, of Harpersville, has consented to make the race for treasurer, and his friends have announced his candidacy in this issue. Mr. Russell needs no commendation at our hands among those who know him, and their names are legion, for he is loved and respected by them all. He is as true a democrat as ever cast a ballot, is worthy, honest to the last farthing, competent, gentlemanly and obliging. He is true in every relation of life, and has always stood in the front in every battle fought for democratic supremacy. There are few men as good, but none better or worthier the high esteem in which he is held.

The democratic executive committee of the Fourth congressional district, composed of the counties of Calhoun, Cleburne, Talladega, Shelby, Chilton and Dallas, has been called to meet at Columbiana on the 31st day of this month for the purpose of deciding on a plan and date for the nomination of a candidate for congress. Up to the present time six candidates have announced for the nomination. Gaston A. Robbins, who was recently unseated by the house of representatives in favor of W. F. Aldrich, is a candidate for reelection and is opposed by Joseph B. Graham, of Talladega; R. P. Thomason, Joseph H. King and Dr. B. Dudley Williams, of Calhoun, and John Burns, of Dallas. It is probable that the committee will order a primary election to select the nominee, the sentiment in favor of the plan being strong throughout the district.

Yellow Leaf.

W. R. Gardner and wife spent Sunday with Mrs. Nancy Hester.

Miss Sadie Day spent one night last week with Mrs. Tine Day.

Several young folks from Weldon attended divine worship at Mt. Tabor Sunday evening.

Mrs. J. H. Hammond and daughter, Miss T., are visiting Mrs. Tine Day at Weldon.

D. S. Shaw paid Columbiana a business trip last Wednesday.

J. M. Spearman transacted business in Columbiana last week.

We are having some pleasant weather now.
Boss.

Redlawn.

Weather warm and dry.

W. T. Taylor went to Columbiana Monday.

Rev. Holdright filled his regular appointment at the Methodist church Sunday and delivered a very interesting sermon.

We are surprised that Honest Abe, of the Advocate, would be so ignorant as to buy a bottle of sample medicine, when he knew it was to give away. I reckon it is because he is so honest.

J. N. Lyon paid Wilsonville a flying visit Saturday.

Rev. E. B. Teague is on the sick list this week.

We are glad to see Rev. J. C. Lyon out again, after a very severe illness for quite awhile.

W. S. McEwen, of Fourmile, was in our parts Sunday.

Two of our boys were missing Sunday, and we wonder where they were. How about, Prof. R. F?

Mrs. Miner was visiting Mrs. Taylor Sunday.

As the Hon. W. A. Lyon has decided not to announce his name as a candidate for sheriff we have another we would like to have the nomination, and it is W. T. Taylor, a true democrat, and well qualified to fill the office. He is a high-toned christian gentleman, a true democrat, and is worthy your vote. So do not forget to cast your ballot for him in the primary in June. Let us have a sheriff from beat 9 for the first time. With Mr. Taylor we can sweep the pops off the face of the earth.
Bud.

Calera.

The exercises at the closing of the session of Calera High School last Thursday and Friday evenings were highly entertaining, especially so on Friday evening. The students acquitted themselves admirably and did much credit to their teachers. To discriminate and say who acted their parts best would be unfair. The school building and grounds all around were crowded with eager spectators, and their pleasure and approval was attested by the repeated cheerings and applauding. Miss Parker and her accomplished assistants, Miss Sue McGehee and Miss Edith Howard, have much cause for gratification at the success of the entire session. They have labored faithfully and energetically and their good judgment and efficiency has carried the session to its close without a jar or tilt, and without any complaint or unkind criticism. May Calera continue to be blessed in its High School with the same good system and ability that has marked its last three sessions.

Quite a number of our people are in attendance at the commencement of the Montevallo Girls' Industrial School this week.

It was reported on the streets here Saturday that Mr. Deans, who was nominated by the late populist primary for representative, would probably resign the position tendered him.

Conductor Jeffries, the Bristows and others spent last week on a camp hunt and fish, returning with nothing but guns and tackle to show for a week's fun.

Rev. Herndon preached interesting sermons morning and evening at the Methodist church Sunday.

The building of a cotton mill near Deans' Spring is contemplated. Gen. C. M. Shelley, of Birmingham, at its head.

Lumsford's saw mill, four miles south of Calera, was burned Friday.

Harpersville.

Weather dry and hot.

The mosquitoes, how they buzz, sing and bite!

There are so many people wanting office.

Rev. Mr. Clifton preached at Wheeler's Chapel last Sunday.

Dr. Nelson and wife are visiting Birmingham.

Mrs. G. V. Kidd is visiting her sister, Mrs. Sparks, at Talladega.

Deputy Marshall Mitchell, of Birmingham, was here last week looking after the whiskey sellers.

The Baptist negroes had some kind of a public gathering at their church Friday, Saturday and Sunday. They came from all parts.

R. M. Borum carried his little daughter, Myrtle, down to Montgomery last week to have her treated for stammering.

Mrs. Phillips, of Fayetteville, visited her mother's family, Mrs. Cater, a few days ago.

Misses Stella Posey and Meeda Kidd, who have been attending the Montevallo school, returned home Tuesday. They speak in the highest terms of the school, both president and faculty, and of Montevallo generally.

Three good men have already announced for sheriff, and we hope that one of them will be elected, for Shelby county certainly needs a good sheriff.

Mrs. Perryman died at her home near here Sunday morning of consumption, and was buried Monday. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Joe Simmons. She leaves a husband and two small children, besides a father and other relatives and many friends, to mourn her loss.

Cotton choppers are in great demand here. Can't you send up a few of your idle clerks and broken-down politicians? They will find it quite a hot job when followed right, but a great deal more honorable than sitting around stores whittling goods boxes and talking politics.

THE CAPE NOME GOLD FIELDS.

From The Scientific American.

The interest in the new gold fields is so great at the present time that a really authoritative account of the conditions which exist there, such as is furnished by Consul Smith, of Victoria, will be welcomed. He wrote under date of December 21, 1899, and stated that there was every indication that there would be a great rush to Cape Nome the present spring. The distance to Cape Nome is 2,500 miles and is performed entirely by water. Transportation companies have booked large numbers of passengers, and it has been computed that 65,000 persons desire to go to Cape Nome as soon as possible. A large number of returning miners called at the Consulate at Victoria and exhibited specimens of gold saying they were dug on the beach near the water's edge. Men with only hand shovels, and the simplest and rudest of pans, cleared from $50 to $100 and even $300 per day, and sometimes a "clean up" of from $1,000 to $1,500 has been reported.

Nuggets worth $300 to $400 were found near Anvil Creek, and it is believed that between $300,000 to $400,000 was taken out of Snow Gulch last summer. One man, it is said, took $190,000, while another claims still more than that. According to their statements the gold does not extend to a great depth, 5 or 6 feet being as low as any have yet found "paying dirt." By decision of Commissioner Hermann no land below ordinary high tide can be disposed of to individuals or corporations, but is open to the public to operate on; the right to dig in these lands is as free as the right to fish in the adjacent waters, so anybody may wash gold out of the sand between high and low water. Anxiety is expressed regarding the establishment of a port of entry at Cape Nome. Captains all agree that there is practically no anchorage or harbor at the cape itself, but at Port Clarence, distant only a few miles, there is a safe and commodious harbor. The market quotations for provisions are very high, beef selling from 75 cents to $1 per pound; flour, $10 a hundredweight; butter, $1 a pound; coal, $57 a ton, and lumber, $250 per thousand feet. The ruling prices of the restaurants are extremely high, a steak with coffee, bread, cheese and pie would be about $5. An ordinary two-story dwelling of eight rooms rents for $200 a month; for the delivery of heavy freight, by horse team and wagon, $10 per hour is charged: the price of a shave is $1, and it costs the same amount to have a white shirt laundered. Longshoremen have been paid $2 an hour for their labor, and carpenters receive $1.50 an hour. From these figures it will be seen that while it may be comparatively easy to obtain considerable quantities of gold, that the mere cost of staying at Cape Nome is enormous. Probably with an increased number of steamers the prices may be decreased.

CLOSING EXERCISES.

Girls' Industrial School Closes After Successful Session.

Montevallo, May 15—The first session under Dr. Peterson's administration of the Girls' Industrial School closed today. Yesterday the industrial departments were open to visitors. There is a lighter attendance of visitors this year than at any previous closing of the school, there being no programmes or invitations issued, nor any evening exercises. The girls are packing their trunks for their departure without any fatigue or exertions, as has heretofore marked the closing days.

The commencement sermon was preached Sunday by Rev. Edgar Gardner Murphee, rector of St. Johns church, Montgomery. Sunday afternoon Rev. G. L. McArthy, of Troy, addressed the young woman's christian association. Monday morning Rev. McArthy addressed the school.

Diplomas were granted to four girls in dressmaking, four in telegraphy, twelve in stenography, twenty in cooking and sixteen in elocution, being presented by Governor Johnston. He also delivered a short talk to the girls, repeating "what I've did," which called forth much criticism among those who know that what he has done for this school had to be pulled out by main force.

Tuesday morning the baccalaureate address was delivered by Rev. O. P. Fitzsimmons, and much depth of thought was expressed. Dr. Eager was called for and addressed the school and audience in his usual impressive manner. Much regret is felt over his resignation as member of the school board. Governor Johnston followed with a talk on the subject of placing three ladies on the school board. He opposed the idea, saying women were not financiers and a lot more of trash that any fifteen year old boy ought to feel ashamed of saying in the presence of an intelligent audience. Thus, not content with incurring the disgust of a vast majority of the manhood of this state, he has incurred the disgust of the representative womanhood of Alabama.

After presenting diplomas to six girls in literary department the exercises and session closed, to open again on September 19.

At a meeting of the board of trustees Monday afternoon the entire faculty were reelected, with the exception of Miss Granberry, teacher in elocution, and Miss Sherman, teacher of music, both of whom resigned.

The president's residence is about completed and ready for occupancy. It is located near the dormitory and is a beautiful and commodious two-story frame structure of twelve or fourteen rooms. Both the red and blue rooms are beautiful and artistic in every detail. Altogether, with commodious halls, balconies and bow windows, the building will make a palatial home.

A WORD ABOUT MILLINERY

We Have Anything Everything The Ladies Want In This DEPARTMENT.

We have had an elegant trade this spring, larger than ever before, in fact so heavy that we had to employ extra help in this department. This fact alone goes to show that our goods are attractive, up-to-date, and at prices the people can afford to pay. We are constantly adding to our stock, receiving goods every week, and all we ask is an inspection of our stock before you purchase elsewhere. We have anything and everything in the millinery line.

DRESS GOODS
DIMITIES
PIQUES
ORGANDIES

Or any of the newest and latest dress fabrics, in the loveliest shades and colors, can be found in our shelves. It is our ambition to make our store one of the most inviting and attractive to be found in the county. We spare no pains or expense in securing the very best selections obtainable as the result of thorough experience, together with the desire to make ours the leading business in all lines.

LADIES' FANS The prettiest, catchiest line you ever inspected. No matter what your taste, we have the very fan you want, or a better one at the same price.

MEN'S AND BOYS' CLOTHING.

In this line we outstrip all our competitors. There are few city stores that carry any better assortment. We have all the new styles in the latest fabrics, and we defy the defiers to fit you better, in better style, or better goods, or at better prices. If skeptical call and see that all we claim is true, and a great deal more that we haven't time to mention. Our line of serges, especially double-breasted coats, is all that you could ask. Crash suits in abundance.

STRAW HATS

Try us for anything and everything in this line. You will not go away disappointed. We can fit your head and your purse, and your head will look far better and your purse will suffer less than you imagine. No need to go to a city to get a neat, pretty hat, straw or any other kind, when I can fit you in superb style.

BUGGIES BY THE CAR LOAD.

To those who have owned a James & Mayer buggy it is not necessary to say a word in its praise, for it is A 1 in every particular, neat, substantial and well made. Buying them, as we do, in large quantities, we can sell them at bottom figures. Save a few dollars by investigating this statement. Buggy harness, all you want, in good, better and best qualities—none better for the money. Rest assured we can suit you in quality and price.

CLAY FURNACE Indispensable in every well regulated household. Handy and economical for heating irons and other purposes. You can't do without it.

SORGHUM SEED Both the Early Amber and Orange varieties. You can't beat either one of them. See them before you get your supply.

Having devoted the best years of my life to the mercantile business, and having built up from a very small beginning, I think I can say modestly that indomitable pluck, energy and a determination to supply every demand has been the bed-rock of my success. Of course a wealth of experience has been gained in all these years, and I come very near knowing what my people want, and it is my intention to supply their every need. If you are not a regular patron call and let's talk the matter over. I am in a position to help you if you need it.

Mrs. Will Holcombe, living about two miles from this city, was thrown from a wagon last Thursday and suffered a broken arm, besides receiving internal injuries. She had been to Shelby, and while attempting to alight from the wagon at her home the horse became unmanageable and ran away. The wagon tongue struck a tree and overturned the wagon, Mrs. Holcombe being thrown beneath the vehicle.

It is stated on good authority that the year will not close before all plans have been perfected for the erection of six or seven new brick buildings in this city. That's the talk now, and the parties doing the talking act seem to know what they are saying. Some of these buildings have been contemplated for some time. The absolute assurance of the cotton factory and a chance to get brick at home has injected new life into the matter and made the probabilities more possible!

County court convenes in this city on the fourth Monday in the present month. The following are the petit jurors for that week: J. W. Dykes, J. A. Davis, J. D. Striplin, J. M. Allen, A. J. Embry, B. L. Dorough, J. W. Hale, J. M. Spearman, W. W. Stone, R. Z. Hill, W. S. McEwen, W. T. Denty, Geo. W. Peal, G. C. Fulton, W. L. Nolen, Geo. Kroell, J. H. Batie, P. C. Fulner, J. H. Acker, J. H. Killingworth, A. J. Taylor, E. R. Harper, John J. Tyler.

Bourke Cockran, one of the greatest living national orators, attended the race conference at Montgomery last week and furnished the best speech of the occasion. His speech, published in the daily papers, contained something over twelve thousand words, and was a strong appeal for the repeal of the fifteenth amendment of the national constitution. He said it was a dead member, unnecessary and that the conditions existing when it was enacted do no not compare with the problems confronting us today.

A negro women left Eutaw, this state, last week for Rome, Italy, where she expects to have a private audience with the pope of all Catholicism and to tell that reverend saint that his days are numbered and that he had better begin to think of sober things and prepare for death. Her commissions, two in number, she says were received from the Almighty and her husband, the latter furnishing the means and the former the ways. No wonder the nations of the earth look upon Alabama as the coming state of America when even her humblest citizens are capable of dictating the purposes of the infinite.

Down at Troy the other day, says a state exchange, a couple from the country came in and bought tickets for Texas. They had seen little of the great iron horse of progress and were very curious about the manipulation of the trains. The train they were to leave on pulled into the station on good time and the agent, too busy to notice, lost sight of them in the hurry incident to the time. As the train pulled out he looked around to find the Texas emigrants gazing in open-eyed wonder at the rear of the last coach receding in the distance. When asked why they did not get aboard, they replied: "Was that what we was goin' on?"

LET 'EM RIP.

So here goes to beat the crowd of hungry fellows—I will for the next twenty days sell my entire stock of fancy and staple groceries at the lowest price ever before offered in the county. Come and see. I am just obliged to have money, and if you have the cash I will sell you.

J. H. Hammond.

The oldest of that trio of incorrigible young Americans lodged in the jail at this place last week is said to have made a voluntary confession that he was one of the crowd of men who burlarized the store of Mr. Cross at Helena some months since. Three men were arrested for the crime at the time of the burglary and it was thougt then a fourth party knew something about the crime. The young fellow claims to be a brother of one of the men arrested, but who subsequently made their escape. They are a glorious set, these three, and the ardor of their spirits seem not in the least impaired by their confinement in the county jail.

The county reunion of Confederate veterans is not to be held until some time in August, but it is not too early now to be thinking of the event and making preparations for the occasion. Everybody should go to work talking about the matter and arousing a sentiment that will make the reunion for this summer an event long to be remembered. The harmony, peace and fraternal spirit that characterized last year's meeting and furnished a green spot in the memory of all can hardly be improved upon, but it can be duplicated, and no doubt exists but that this will be attempted. Commander Johnston has a card in this issue requesting the organization into companies of the young men of the county to assist in the exercises of the coming reunion. The number he requests is quite small, but a proper spirit among the young men could greatly enhance this number. The call should be given a hearty response.

Endorsement of Mr. Taylor.

We, the undersigned voters of beat 9 in Shelby county, present to the good people of Shelby county the name of W. T. Taylor as a candidate for sheriff, subject to the action of the democratic primary, to be held June 16 next. Mr. Taylor is a quiet, unpretending, sober, true man, and we do most heartily endorse him for the office he seeks. We further state that he is a true democrat, in the harness at all times and under all circumstances.

CONTRACT AWARDED.

Mr. A. O. Harwell, of Auburn, Gets Contract to Make Factory Brick.

The contract for the manufacture of brick to be used in the construction of the cotton factory for this city was awarded Mr. A. O. Harwell, of Auburn, his bid being considered the best by the factory directors. He is in the city this week making preparations to begin the burning of brick right away. The ball ground near the depot has been selected as the place for molding and burning the brick, and the dirt will be obtained from the hill on which the old yard is situated. Four tables will be kept in constant use and a good force of workmen will, of course, be necessary.

An order for eleven thousand feet of lumber has already been placed by Mr. Harwell, and the work for which this lumber is intended will commence at once. More lumber will be required, but this is considered sufficient to begin with.

All necessary machinery for the factory has been purchased, and all that now remains to make a long-cherished ideal of our citizens an established fact is the completion of the factory building, which is bound to go up.

CALL FOR DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY.

In accordance with the resolutions of the democratic executive committee of Shelby county passed at a meeting held in Columbiana on the 9th day of May, 1900, a primary election is hereby called to be held on Saturday, the 16th day of June, 1900, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for representative in the legislature, sheriff, treasurer, superintendent of education, tax assessor, tax collector, commissioner for the first and second districts, two justices of the peace for each beat, constable for each beat, and three from each beat as members of the democratic executive committee of Shelby county.

"All conservative white voters, irrespective of past political differences or associations who can unite with us in the effort for pure and economical government and who will support the nominees and principles of the democratic party," are cordially invited to participate in said primary.

Said primary shall be held under the supervision of the beat committeemen of each beat, who shall make up the returns and forward the same, properly sealed, to the secretary of this committee.

The tickets to be used in said primary will be printed on June 1; therefore, all persons desiring to become candidates should notify the chairman of this committee of their intention by that date so as to insure having their names appear on said ticket.

SHREWD CASHIER.

Saved $50,000 for His Bank by Prompt Action.

A cashier employed in a large western city recently went over the collateral held by his loan clerk simply by way of precaution. He noticed that one of the bank's best customers had over $50,000 out on bills of lading of cattle on the way north. As the house in question had an abattoir, this was not surprising. The firm was rated at over $500,000, and its transactions were on a large scale. Suddenly it occurred to him that the way bills looked very much alike. Comparison showed that they were written by the same hand. He took one to the railroad which was supposed to have issued it, and found that it was a forgery. The handwriting on the bills was that of a member of the firm which was borrowing the money. This could mean but one thing—the firm was in desperate financial difficulties and about to go under. It was now too late to do anything in the matter that day. The cashier did not say a word to anybody, but went home. He did not sleep that night, but planned out his campaign for the next morning. The loans were all subject to call at any time. He waited until after the clearing house returns were in for the day to excite no suspicion. Then he had the guilty partner in the cattle firm rung up on the telephone. "Very sorry," he said to the cattleman nonchalantly, "but we are debtors in the clearing house today. Money is a little scarce. Guess we'll have to ask you to repay that $50,000 worth of loans today. Sorry to inconvenience you, and if you want the money again a little later, will be glad to have you call around." "Very well," came the reply; "will you have a check on our account in your bank or on our other bank?" "Better draw on the other bank, as that is customary," replied the cashier. In a few minutes the check, duly certified by the cashier of the rival institution, was sent in. The cashier took the precaution to send around to the other bank to make sure that the certification was no forgery. Then he sent for the forger. "Now," said he, "I have my money, and I can speak plainly. I want you to take your account out of this bank." "What do you mean?" demanded the cattle dealer. "You know perfectly well what I mean," was the reply. "You may take your account out of this bank and keep it out. We have no use for it." The account was withdrawn. Within less than thirty days the failure of the cattle firm was announced.

A Poor Fireman.

Mrs. A. told her new man-servant—a colored youth from the country—to make a fire in the drawing room. Coming in soon after, she found him hopelessly contemplating the andirons, tongs, and so forth, while a pile of logs by his side large enough to warm a regiment. "Have you never made a fire before, William?" she asked, somewhat sharply. "Well, ma'am, I ain't never made what yo' call a refined fire—no ma'am," was the puzzled reply.—Harper's Bazar.

LODGE ADVISES BIGGER NAVY

Declares Our Safety Lies In Ships and Guns.

MAKES STRONG ARGUMENT

Question of Armor Plate Plant to Be Owned By the Government, Is Discussed In Senate.

A Washington special says: The possibility of a clash with Germany over the Monroe doctrine was forcefully laid before the senate and the country Friday by Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, in the course of a vigorous speech against the construction of an armor plate plant by the government.

The particular significance of this declaration that we must look to such a contingency over either the Danish West Indies or Germany's desire to get more power in South America lies the fact that Senator Lodge is usually very reticent on all matters pertaining to foreign relations and further that he is generally recognized as representing the views of the president and state department on the matter. When, therefore, he declared, that there were such possibilities to be considered his declarations were given greater weight than such talk coming from almost any other senator.

When consideration of the naval bill was resumed the pending amendment was that offered by Senator Tillman for a straight price of $300 per ton for armor and a government armor factory not costing over $4,000,000.

Mr. Lodge, of Massachusetts, speaking in opposition to the amendment, said that for the past three years the senators from South Carolina and New Hampshire—Mr. Tillman and Mr. Chandler—had been endeavoring to get armor at a low price. The net result of their work had been to put a stop to the construction of a navy. He had no prejudice against a government armor plant, but to stop the building of all ships until the armor plant could be erected, would, he thought, be a flat mistake.

"My reason for desiring more ships," said he, "and desiring them quickly, is my belief that the safety of the United States depends upon the strength of our navy. We do not need the navy for the protection of our insular possessions. The danger lies in our own great coast line and in the defense of the Monroe doctrine in the western continent. For the defense of this great coast line and the cities studding it we have no adequate fleet. We are about to enter upon the construction of an isthmian canal, to defend, control and operate which we must be the naval master of the Caribbean sea. We must have a far more powerful fleet than we have today. The safety of the canal depends upon our fleet.

"A great fleet is the greatest insurance of peace. We should not close our eyes to the possibilities of the situation. We could never allow the Danish islands to pass into any other hand than ours. The European nation which should undertake to take possession of those islands right on the road to the canal and to make of them great naval stations would by that very act become an enemy of ours. We could submit to no such thing as that. The Monroe doctrine is a great protection to the United States. Men of all parties—Democrats, Republicans and Populists—without distinction, adhere to that.

"I am by no means sure that some European nations, perhaps one whose navy is now receiving such a rapid increase, may not test the Monroe doctrine. We may be called upon to protect that doctrine in Brazil or some other country. Already too much time has been lost. If the Monroe doctrine should be endangered or if our coast should be menaced, we would be prepared and it would be a weak excuse that we had been engaged in throttling an egregious monopoly."

In a colloquy with Mr. Lodge, Mr. Tillman said it was well known that the navy of the United States was superior to that of Germany.

Mr. Lodge pointed to the great increase that now was being made in the German navy.

"If the senator thinks," said Mr. Lodge, "there is no danger to be apprehended, I fear he underrated the importance of the subject—a subject to which I have given much thought and consideration."

Mr. Ellis, of West Virginia, argued against plants, as did Mr. Allison, who spoke on the score of economy. The latter said it would be four years before a government armor plate could be put on a ship.

Mr. Bacon, of Georgia, advocated the construction of a government factory because he believed it would be a protection of our interests.

TRAGEDY IN AUGUSTA

Negro Kills White Man On Street Car And Is Afterwards Lynched By Mob.

A tragedy occurred on a Summerville electric car Sunday afternoon, just before dark, in which Aleck Whitney, one of the best known young men in Augusta, Ga., a graduate of the Technological institute at Atlanta, was shot and killed by a young negro man, William B. Willis.

Whitney and his friend, Lieutenant Pinckney Steiner, were riding together on the car when the negro, Willis, got on the car, accompanied by a negro woman. It was an open car with seats running across it from one side to the other, and the negro and his companion, Hattie Wade, got in at the seat occupied by Whitney and others. The negro told Whitney to get up and give the lady a seat, which he declined to do.

The negroes forced themselves into the seat, the man sitting partly upon Whitney, who shoved him off forcibly. The two men grappled and the negro pulled a pistol and shot twice. One bullet entered Whitney's eye and the other missed, but grazed Pinckney Steiner's hand and buried itself in the back of a car seat. Steiner seized the pistol and prevented the third shot, the hammer coming down upon his hand.

Whitney fell limp across the back of the seat in front of him, and the greatest excitement resulted among the passengers on the crowded car, women growing hysterical.

The negro tried to escape from the car, but was seized by passengers, disarmed and was soon taken charge of by an officer who was attracted by the shooting.

Whitney died as soon as he reached the hospital, where he was carried in the ambulance.

The police authorities took quick action and within a few minutes twenty-five officers with rifles were on guard at the jail. They were at their posts but a short time when a mob of seventy-five people had assembled. The crowd prevailed upon Dr. T. A. Plunkett to enter the jail and ascertain if the prisoner was there. He reported in a few minutes that he was not.

Divining the intention of the police, two separate mobs, it is said, boarded the two outgoing trains in order to catch the prisoner before he should reach a place of safety.

The officers with their prisoner missed the central of Georgia train for Savannah, and after waiting some time at an out-of-the-way place, boarded the night train on the Georgia railroad for Atlanta.

News soon reached Augusta to the effect that the prisoner was discovered on the Georgia train and taken off at Grovetown by the mob and lynched.

A meeting of citizens late Sunday night decided to call the attention of the city council to the fact that the state law regarding the separate seating of whites and blacks was not being enforced.

RUMORS OF OUTBREAK

In Manila Occupy Attention of American Officials of the Town.

The latest rumor of an outbreak in Manila among the natives, which was in circulation last week, was seriously discussed by some of the local propers, and attracted more general attention than has usually been the case with this sort of thing.

As a matter of fact many Filipinos did leave the American employers with the apparent intention of joining some such movement. Their action, taken in connection with the arrest of several natives for carrying concealed weapons and the dispersion of several suspicious gatherings, gave color to the reports.

The officials have been active in the matter, but are not inclined to think an uprising will be attempted.

QUIET AT ST. LOUIS.

No Cars Are Run on Sunday and Police Are Given a Rest.

An earnest effort was made Saturday to settle the street railway strike at St. Louis by means of arbitration along the lines suggested by W. H. Woodward and other employers of union labor. The efforts came to nothing, however, as the strikers and street car companies could not be brought together on any proposition involving the recognition of the union in the manner desired.

Not a wheel on any of the lines, except of the mail cars, was turned in the city Sunday.

ROBBED BY EMPLOYEES?

Chicago Waterworks Department Is Alleged to Be Short $200,000.

A scheme by which the city of Chicago has been defrauded out of sums aggregating $200,000, according to Chief Detective Coloran, has been unearthed by detectives and two men are now in jail charged with conspiracy, while seven others are under surveillance. Clarence M. Wolfe and Geo. W. Pigott, employes of the water office in the city hall, are under arrest charged with participating in the conspiracy which, it is said, has been going on for over five years.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS

NOT SO FREQUENT IN RECENT YEARS.

Travel on American Trains Safer Now Than Ever Before — Work of Guarding Against Accidents Is Being Diligently Followed Up.

There are 50,000 flagmen, switchmen and line watchmen employed on the railroads of the United States, and the duties which devolve upon them relate primarily to the security of passing trains. The use by them of lanterns at night and flags by day, while desirable in a small way as a measure of protection, especially at crossings, is by no means so important as the signal lights which are displayed from towers and which are regulated by telegraphic communication maintained along the line of track. Under the signal rules adopted by the American railroad association, the application of which is general not only throughout the United States, but in Mexico and Canada as well, a red light whenever displayed signifies danger and calls for a stop; a green light cautions and commands "go slowly;" white indicates safety and commands "Go ahead." A blue flag by day and a blue light by night displayed at one or both ends of an engine, car or train signifies that workmen are engaged on or about it. When thus protected it must not be disturbed. One effect of the more general use of uniform signals has been the steady reduction of the number of fatalities on American railroads, the total number of which is now considerably less than it was ten years ago, though in the meantime railroad travel has increased enormously. The total number of passengers carried on American railroads in a year is not far from 600,000,000, and the number of fatalities to passengers average less than 250, or less than one two-thousandth of 1 per cent. While the number of passengers carried is increasing, the number of accidents is diminishing in consequence of the fact that while some railroad accidents appear to be absolutely unavoidable, serious accidents entailing the wreckage of trains and wholesale disasters are very much less frequent than formerly. The adoption and maintenance of a complete system of railroad signals entails a considerable expense upon railroad companies, but it is much more than made up by the advantages attained, which include greater security in travel, a high rate of speed for passenger trains, a much diminished danger of track obstruction and a practical diminution in the number and success of suits brought for damages. The work of making travel safe on American railroads is going ahead even faster than is the work of railroad building, actively resumed since 1897.—New York Sun.

PAPA FROG AND THE TADPOLES

His Children Cling to His Back Till They Are Big Enough to Leave.

A male frog with little tapoles living on his back was discovered lately by Dr. August Brauer of Marburg, Germany. For a little fellow it has a pretty long name, but perhaps its paternal devotion has earned it the long Latin name, arthroleptis seychellensis boettger. It has been noticed before that in some species of frogs living in Venezuela and the island of Trinidad the male bears the young on its back, to which they hold by their mouths. But this new species is the first one on which so many as nine little ones were discovered, and besides they do not hold on by their mouths, but seem to be stuck to the papa frog's back and sides by some gummy substance which holds them in place until they are large enough to care for themselves. It is a wonderful device of nature, that the female sometimes deposits her eggs on the back of the male, where they hatch out, and the little tadpoles grow until they attain a certain size. Such is, of course, not the case with our common frogs, but in these rare species only lately found by naturalists is a strange reversal of what seems to us to be the usual law that the mother takes care of the young. In this species the eggs are not laid on the back of the male, but on the ground, and only after they are hatched do they take up their position on papa's back. And there they ride until they are big enough to walk around and look for their own food.

A Queer Name.

There is a woman's outing club up in Maine, composed of a dozen Portland feminines that glories in a name which has proved a puzzle to pronounce and an equal puzzle as to meaning. For ten years these women have preserved their secret, but it has just leaked out that Rammejheckt, the club name, is composed of the first letter of the Christian name of each of the members.

Wise Cat.

These are the three reflections of Theophile Gautier's cat when she first saw a parrot: "This is certainly a green chicken," was her first thought. Succeeding it, came the conclusion: "Chickens, even if green, are good to eat." Then she sprang upon the perch, and the parrot shouted at her in French. "Ah," thought pussy, "it can't be a chicken at all! It must be a gentleman!"

MAKES HER SICK.

New Jersey Woman Who Is Strangely Affected by Light.

In a Spruce street boarding-house there is now living an elderly spinster who for thirty years has avoided the light. She is no misanthrope, no recluse, nor does her aversion to light arise from any constitutional defect. Of wide information, chatty and fond of company, her peculiar condition precludes enjoyment of society in circumstances making social intercourse most pleasant. In the evenings when the gas is lighted, she retires to a cloaked corner, and hidden under an umbrella especially constructed to ward off rays of light, she holds converse. Thus she sits for hours, like some seeress unseen by those in the same room, and not seeing those to whom she talks and charms with her fund of bright and interesting things. Not that her eyesight is affected—it is as good as that of any woman 60 years of age. She simply cannot bear the light to strike her. Diffused sunlight as a rule does not trouble her, but a tiny ray illuminating a near-by object upsets her physical system and is followed by an attack of nausea. The patient is Miss Ford of Moorestown, N. J., a descendant of the Fords in whose house Washington made his headquarters while in that part of New Jersey. She came here recently to be treated for her peculiar malady. The physicians who have her case in charge will not say whether her condition is pathologically natural or reflex. Her ailment has existed for thirty years. For all that time she has been unable to suffer the radiance of gaslight, and when electric light was introduced her retirement from its presence was rendered imperative. Its effect upon her nervous system is so baleful that she is made ill, as though some nauseating dose had been administered to her. So sensitive has Miss Ford become to the irritating effect of light that should a sun's ray invade her corner and flicker upon the hangings, or tint the window shade, she would be immediately thrown into a nervous spasm. The sun which brightens and cheers all the world is to her a dread visitor, whose benign sparks are malevolent messengers. The effulgence all nature glories in induces only abhorrence in her. When she drives out, except on cloudy days, the curtains of the carriage are drawn and draperies so arranged that there may be no invasion of distinct rays of light. The most peculiar fact connected with Miss Ford's unique condition is that it is not necessary for her to see the ray of light to be adversely affected. Its mere presence in her immediate vicinity, at her side or behind her back, renders her susceptible.—Philadelphia North American.

DRAMATIC SCENE

At a Hanging Owing to a Mistake About a Reprieve.

"The dramatic interruption of the Wright hanging over in Gretna," said a New Orleans lawyer, "reminds me of a strange and tragic episode which occurred years ago at a little river town in Kentucky, where I first began the practice of law. I'll tell you the facts in a few words. A worthless white man named Jim Early had murdered an old farmer under very atrocious circumstances, and was convicted and sentenced to death. As is often the case with such men, Early had a most excellent and devoted wife, and she moved heaven and earth to save his neck, but without success. She did everything humanly possible, and the day before the hanging, when she finally realized that her efforts were in vain, she made a formal application to the court to be allowed to have her husband's remains, which would otherwise have been turned over to a medical college. The next morning the judge, in glancing over his papers, happened to remember that he hadn't written the official order for Early's body, and, doing so in some haste, gave it to a clerk to deliver. The clerk in turn handed it over to an old deputy, saying, 'Here, take this over to the sheriff right away. The judge has granted that order for Mrs. Early.' The old man, who was half-blind and deaf, totally misinterpreted the remark, and, supposing the paper to be a reprieve, started bareheaded on a run for the jail. He arrived just as the poor woman was bidding her husband good-by in front of his cell, and thrusting the paper into her hand he bawled out: 'Stop it! Stop everything! Here's a reprieve!' For a moment everybody stood petrified. Then one of the officers began to unbind the prisoner, and Mrs. Early, sobbing and weeping and calling out that God had answered her prayers, flung herself into his arms. The paper had fallen to the floor, and the sheriff picked it up mechanically. He told me afterward that he felt as if he had received a bullet through his heart when he read the contents. Instead of a reprieve it was an order for the man's dead body! I was present, yet I can hardly tell what followed. I only know there was a scene of terrible confusion; that they dragged the woman away by main force, and proceeded with the execution as quickly as they could. The terrible double shock left him so stunned that I doubt if he knew what was happening when he went through the trap."

Printed the Wrong Portrait.

After Hon. Foster M. Voorhees was elected governor of New Jersey the usual portraits of him were published in the newspapers. They made an interesting variety. In one instance an enterprising journal drew upon its cabinet and used a cut of the president of a small western university, showing a young man with the hair carefully parted and curled, and with eye-glasses that stood prominently in the picture. He looked about 20 years of age and the face was smooth and smiling. The governor had a good laugh over this particular picture as well as over some of the other interesting variations of his countenance. He is not an old man by any means, being only 43, but he has the look of a serious student and man of affairs. His home is in Elizabeth, N. J.

LANGUID

How are the children this spring? Complaining a good deal of headache, can't study as well as usual, easily fall asleep, and are tired all the time? And how is it with yourself? Is your strength slipping away? Do you tremble easily, are your nerves all unstrung, do you feel dull and sleepy, and have you lost all ambition?

That's Spring Poisoning

Nearly every one needs a good spring medicine: a medicine that will remove impurities from the system, strengthen the digestion, and bring back the old force and vigor to the nerves. A perfect Sarsaparilla is just such a medicine; a Sarsaparilla that contains the choicest and most valuable ingredients; a Sarsaparilla accurately and carefully made, and one that experience has shown is perfect in every way.

The Jap's Regard for the Fox.

All over Japan you will see images of foxes—old foxes, with their noses chipped and their ears broken off; older foxes still, with a growth of moss on their backs; sly, alert, foxes, with noses perked smartly in the air; great foxes and little foxes, sages and clowns, all kinds and degrees—showing the prevalence of this belief in the land of the wistaria and the fan, and also showing in what respect the fox is held, says a traveler. It is curious to note that in all countries the fox above all other animals has been considered to exert great influence and power. All nations have legends of which the cunning and intelligence of the fox is the theme.

RECEPTION TO BOER ENVOYS

Big Audience Honors Kruger Representatives

AT NATIONAL CAPITAL

Members of Congress Present and Many Patriotic Speeches Were Made In Support of Boer Cause.

An audience, remarkable for its size, sympathy and enthusiasm, greeted the Boer envoys at the reception given in their honor Sunday night at the Grand opera house, Washington City, under the auspices of the congressional and citizens' committee.

Long before the time for the meeting to open, the house was crowded to suffocation and many were turned away unable to gain admittance.

While official Washington was not represented in any manner, there were probably thirty members of the senate and the house occupying seats in the auditorium and on the stage. Speaker Henderson was in one of the boxes, and others present were Senators Daniel of Virginia, Teller, Tillman, Pettigrew, Mason and Wellington, Representatives Shaffroth, Atwater, Slayer, Glynn, Ruppert, Gaines, Latimer, Lentz, Sulzer, Landis, Linney, Ryan, Greene, Henry of Massachusetts, Hay, DeArmond, Clark of Missouri, Meirs and Rhea of Kentucky.

One of the boxes, it was stated, had been reserved for the president, a committee having been sent to the white house with tickets of admission to the opera house, but no representative of the president's official household was on hand.

Chairman Sulzer, of the reception committee, presided, and a number of addresses, all of them patriotic in character and earnestly supporting the cause of the Boers, were made, the speakers including Messrs. Fischer, Wolmarans and Wessels, the Boer envoys; Senator Wellington, Hon. Bourke Cockran, of New York, and Mr. Sulzer.

Chairman Sulzer was the first speaker. After welcoming the envoys and emphatically stating that the occasion was non-partisan and non-political in character, he said in part:

"England now and always has been the aggressor. The Boers will never surrender their love of liberty. They can only be conquered by being exterminated, and England must not be permitted to exterminate them and steal their homes. Her criminal march of devastation must and will be checked."

The three enjoys were introduced in turn by Mr. Sulzer and each of them was given a cordial reception. Their remarks were listened to with close attention. The audience gave a standing greeting to Commissioner Fischer, who told his hearers why the enjoys had come to this country and what they hoped to accomplish. His remarks were very much in keeping with what he already has said in published interviews.

"We have come across the seas from two different republics," said he, "to see whether here in the hearts of the people of a greater sister republic the spirit of more than a hundred years ago is still alive, whether the sentiment that caused its people to take up arms to obtain its freedom is strong enough to recognize the feeling possessed by us. We come to you as a great liberty loving people in whom the sense of justice and fair play is strong, and look to you to find a practical scheme to obtain peace with justice.

"We come to appeal to your people and speak to you as brother Republicans and to ask for a hearing, and hope to obtain it. The receptions which we have been given have been most gratifying to us ever since we have set foot on your shores. There is no doubt, from assurances received from all parts of the country that the sympathy of the people is with us. We look to you to help us, if possible, and whether we get assistance or not we appreciate the kindly feeling which has been manifested for us."

'FRISCO ANNOUNCES PLAGUE.

Six Deaths From Bubonic Have Occurred In Chinatown.

The board of health of San Francisco has adopted a resolution declaring that bubonic plague exists in that city. While there are no living cases at present, there have been six deaths during the past six months, and they have decided to take precautions against the development and spread of the disease.

A force of physicians went through Chinatown Saturday to treat Chinese with Haffkine prophylactic as a preventive against the plague. The members of the board of health say that there is absolutely no danger of the development or spread of the disease.

Prospective Tobacco Deal.

GIRL WAS WILLING,

But Father Objected To Would-Be Bridegroom and a Bloody Tragedy Resulted.

News dispatches state that on Saturday morning about 11:30 o'clock a Mr. Gleaton went to the home of his sweetheart, a Miss Raines, about eight miles from Cordele, Ga., and was accompanied by a friend intending to have a wedding. When they arrived at the home of the young lady she joined them, but her father interfered and tried to induce her not to leave him.

One word brought on another, and finally a quarrel was on. The young lady's brother rushed up with his pistol and commenced to shoot at Gleaton and Gleaton's friend. Gleaton drew his pistol and shot the young lady's father, killing him instantly. He then shot the brother.

By this time a friend of the Raines family rushed up to try to stop the trouble and was himself shot down. Gleaton then drove away, returning to his home.

Since then the brother has died. The friend of the Raines family is believed to be mortally wounded and the friend of Gleaton is in a critical condition. The situation at last reports was as follows: The young lady's father and brother are dead and the friends of the opposing parties are expected to die.

The full names of the parties could not be learned. They were all planters and are prominent in their communities. The killing caused a profound sensation and threw the entire countryside into a state of mourning.

STRIKERS "HELD UP."

Federal Judge Issues Injunction Restraining St. Louis Mobs.

For one week at least the striking employees of the St. Louis Transit Company will be face to face with federal authority, which speaking through Judge Elmer R. Adams, of the United States circuit court, in the form of an injunction, has commanded them to abstain from interfering in any manner with the running of mail cars on the various street car lines of the city owned by the Transit Company.

The writ of injunction, issued at 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon by Judge Adams, is sweeping in its nature, and is made returnable May 26th. It commands the strikers to refrain from doing anything whatever that will delay or obstruct the operating of mail cars, or the gathering and distribution of the mails. Everything prayed for in the petition for an injunction presented to Judge Adams by Unted States District Attorney Rosier was granted.

One thousand copies of the injunction have been printed. Each person named in it will be served with a copy by United States Marshal Bohle. Bulletins will be posted at the various carsheds and they will also be posted in conspicuous places along the street over which the mail cars run.

Measure Passed In House to Pay Certain War Losses.

For the first time since the civil war the house Friday passed a measure to pay Confederate soldiers for losses growing out of the civil war. It was a bill introduced by Mr. Cox, of Tennessee, to pay the Confederate soldiers who surrendered at Appomattox for the loss of horses and other personal effects taken from them in violation of Lee's capitulation to Grant by which officers and men of Lee's army were allowed to retain their baggage, side arms and horses.

The bill originally carried $200,000, but the specific sum was stricken out.

COLORED PRELATE DEAD.

Rev. R. M. Cheek, Preacher and Editor, Dies In Columbus, O.

Death invaded the African Methodist Episcopal conference in session at Columbus, Ohio, Saturday. Rev. R. M. Cheek, editor of The Southern Christian Recorder, of Atlanta, Ga., died of locomotor ataxia. Eulogies upon the deceased were pronounced in conference late Saturday afternoon.

Rev. R. M. Cheek was one of the best known negroes in Atlanta, and his death was a great surprise in that city.

SUN'S ECLIPSE A PHENOMENON

Coming Momentous Event Attracts Widespread Attention.

ASTRONOMERS ARE READY

On May 28 Old Sol's Face Will Be Obscured By the Moon.

A Washington special says: The forthcoming total eclipse of the sun on May 28 is attracting world-wide attention, and astronomers everywhere have long been making preparations for observing and photographing the phenomenon. Besides making the usual time observations, interest largely centers in photographing the corona, the coronal streamers, the spectra of the chromosphere, and particularly the celebrated flash spectrum appearing both at beginning and end of totality. Fortunately it will be possible to witness the phenomenon from many sections of the United States.

The Johns Hopkins University expeditions to observe the solar eclipse will work in unison with the United States Naval Observatory and under the supervision of the latter. The observations of the Naval Observatory will be divided among five parties. At Pinehurst, N. C., there will be four astronomers from Washington, under the direction of Professor Skinner; the Johns Hopkins party, and a party from the Coast and Geodetic Survey, under Professor G. A. Bauer. At Griffin, Ga., there will be one Naval Observatory party, consisting of Dr. L. S. Mitchell, of Columbia University; Professor Henry Crew and Dr. Tatall of the Northwestern University of Virginia, and L. E. Jewell of the Johns Hopkins University; Professor S. J. Brown, Astronomical Director of the Naval Observatory will conduct observations at Barnesville, Ga. The colleges and universities of the country will be well represented. Expeditions will be dispatched by Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Princeton, the University of Pennsylvania, the University of Virginia, the University of Chicago, etc.

On May 28th the circular shadow of the moon cast by the sun upon the earth, and about eighty miles in diameter, will come sweeping across the American continent from New Orleans to Cape Henry. Along the centre of the path traveled by this swiftly moving shadow the sun will be completely hidden for a period of about two minutes. More than forty miles away, on either side of the track the eclipse will be partial, not total.

An eclipse of the sun that will be visible can occur only when the moon is new. At that time she passes exactly between the earth and the sun According to the calculations of Professor Lumsden, the round black shadow of the moon, like a great arm, will sweep in out of space some time after sunrise in the morning of May 28th. This gigantic arm will come into contact with the earth somewhere near the Revilla Gigedo islands in the Pacific ocean. With tremendous velocity the shadow will rush toward the mainland and will enter Mexico, near Corrientes, at a speed of more than one hundred miles a minute. In eight minutes it will have crossed the Rocky Mountains, and by 7:30 central or 8:30 eastern time it will have crossed the Gulf and entered Mexico. Then on it will pass, over its selected path, until it is lost again in space.

The period of totality of the eclipse varies at different points along the track. At the Rocky Mountains the spectacle will last but about thirty seconds, and at New Orleans the period will have been lengthened thirty-seven seconds. At Union Point, Greene county, Ga., the center of the path for the United States, the time of totality will be 92 seconds, while those who are at the Atlantic coast, just south of the city of Norfolk, will be able to continue their observations for 105 seconds.

Deputy Manipulator Of Cuban Financial Transactions In Cuba Makes a Confession.

A special from Havana says: W. H. Reeves, deputy auditor of the island of Cuba, made a confession at midnight Friday and gave up $4,500 given to him by C. F. W. Neely, the arrested financial agent of posts at Havana, to perform certain services the day he left. General Wood and the postal inspectors refuse to disclose the nature of the confession, barely admitting that one has been made. It is claimed that $1,400 more will be recovered.

General Wood says that the report from Muncie, Ind., that nearly $2,000,000 worth of stamps have been printed there and sent for distribution to Cuban postoffices can be regarded as a canard.

It is believed now that the whole story is known and that the amount of the defalcation will fall between $100,000 and $125,000.

Methuen Takes Hoppstad.

Lord Roberts telegraphs the London war office as follows: "KROONSTAD, May 18.—Methuen entered Hoppstad Thursday unopposed. Generals Duprey and Daniels and forty men have surrendered.

CUT PRICE OF FLOUR.

Chattanooga Mill Men Have Disagreement Over Their Compact.

The cut of 50 cents on the barrel of flour made by one of the Chattanooga mills Thursday created a stir in the city Friday and several hundred barrels changed hands at the reduced price, the millers limiting sales, however, to any one dealer to ten barrels. The cut grew out of a misunderstanding between the mills, a combination having been formed some time ago to keep up the prices. One miller reduced the prices and the other in a rage cut 50 per cent lower.

Brother Slays Brother In the Town of Arlington, Ga.

At Arlington, Ga., Thursday night in the store of J. S. Cowart & Bro., the former in defending his own life, shot to death his brother and partner, J. W. Cowart. The two brothers have been engaged in the turpentine, lumber, general merchandise and extensive farming business there for a number of years. A business misunderstanding arose between them.

ENVOYS ARE NOTIFIED

Of the Relief of Mafeking But Refrain From Making Comment.

The first intimation of the relief of Mafeking which came to the Boer envoys now in this country was conveyed to them by a reporter of the Associated Press, who boarded the congressional limited, upon which they were being conveyed to Washington, as it passed through Baltimore. Abraham Fischer, who acted as spokesman for the party, read the dispatches from Pretoria and London carefully, but without show of emotion.

"I have no comment to make at this time," he said.

STRIKERS ARE JAILED.

In the United States district court at Little Rock Friday, Judge John A. Williams imposed a jail sentence of six months and thirty days uyon Guy Miller and Alden Hayes for contempt of court in boarding a street car and interfering with the non-union motorman and conductor who were employes of the court receiver now operating the street car system.

BRITONS RELIEVE BESIEGED TOWN

Town of Mafeking at Last Wrested From Its Investment.

NEWS CAUSES MUCH JOY

Brave Defenders Under Baden-Powell Unstintedly Praised.

Advices from London state that a dispatch of the Associated Press announcing the relief of Mafeking was posted outside the Mansion House Friday and the news rapidly spread. A large crowd collected and quickly all the streets in the neighborhood were resounding with cheers.

The war office at 9 o'clock had announced that no news had been received, but at 9:10 the lord mayor, Mr. A. J. Newton, in his official robes of office, announced the news to the crowd outside. The lord mayor was accompanied by the lady mayoress to the front of the Mansion House, where an immense portrait of Colonel Baden-Powell was displayed, bearing the inscription: "Mafeking Relieved."

The the attendants were waving union jacks, the lord mayor briefly addressed the assemblage saying:

"I wish your cheers could reach Mafeking"—

Here the speech was interrupted by redoubled cheering and the singing of "Rule Britannia," after which the Lord Mayor remarked:

"We never doubted what the end would be or that British pluck and courage would conquor at last."

The masses of people outside the Mansion House soon grew to such dimension that the police were compelled to divert all traffic, omnibuses, etc., through the side streets. The cheering is now incessant. The news was also announced in special newspaper editions and the tickers in all of the resorts. The enthusiasm outrivaled the scenes which followed the relief of Ladysmith.

The dispatch of The Associated Press containing the news of the relief of the long besieged place was sent to the house of parliament, where it created a great deal of excitement in the press gallery and lobbies and soon began to be circulated among the members of the house of commons.

London's millions spent half the night in the street, and even at 4 o'clock Saturday morning troops of young men promenaded, singing and cheering, and there were crowds in front of the Marlborough house, the clubs on Pall Mall and the war office and in Parliament square, waving flags and joining in the national airs.

This sustained bellowing and uproar of hundreds of thousands amazes the Englishmen who ceases for a moment to be an actor and becomes merely an observer. Sober, phlegmatic London was beside itself with emotion.

CLARK MAY FAIL

To Benefit By the Erstwhile Montana Acting Governor's Appointment.

A Washington special says: The senate committee on elections decided at its meeting Friday morning to press the resolution declaring "that William A. Clark was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the senate of the United States by the legislature of the state of Montana. The vote in the committee was 6 to 3. Those who voted in favor of pressing the resolution were Chandler, Hoar, McComas, Caffery and Turley.

Pettus, Harris and Pritchard were against further proceedings on this line, taking the position that the announcement by Senator Clark of his resignation brought an end to the matter and placing it beyond the jurisdiction of the senate. This, they claim, is in line with all precedents. Mr. McComas first voted with the minority, but afterwards changed.

Under the notice given by Senator Chandler this resolution was to have been called up Saturday, but owing to the fact that it was a broken day with the Grant monument exercises before the senate, it was decided that it should go over until Monday.

MORE QUESTIONS ASKED.

Senator Kenny Seeks Information About War In Philippines.

Senator Kenny Saturday presented a resolution in the senate calling upon the secretary of war for information upon the condition of military affairs in the Phillippines. The call is based on the "official statement that the insurrection in the Philippines has been successfully suppressed and that preparations are now being made to return the troops now serving in the islands to the United States."

TO INDEMNIFY CUBA.

Resolution Introduced In Senate To Pay All Alleged Shortages.

Senator Teller introduced an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill Saturday appropriating $200,000 for the money supposed to have been embezzled in Cuba. The amendment provides the appropriation "to enable the president of the United States to refund any money that has been embezzled or in any way misappropriated by the civil or military appointes of the United States from funds collected in the island of Cuba by the military authorities."

OOM PAUL KRUGER ASKS FOR PEACE?

Report Reaches London That Overtures Have Been Made.

NEWS IS UNCONFIRMED

The Relief of Mafeking Is Now "Officially" Announced.

A report was received in London Saturday that the Pretoria government had decided to sue Lord Roberts for peace. While no confirmation of this rumor is at hand, it is generally credited.

Displayed in the most conspicuous style in the London Daily Express of Sunday the dominant war news of the morning in the following editorial statement:

"We have the best reason for stating that in the last twenty-four hours a telegram has been received at the foreign office, addressed personally to the prime minister, from President Kruger, proposing terms of peace. The exact terms of the message cannot be stated, but we believe it is couched in an exceedingly humble strain."

It is inconceivable, of course, that Lord Salisbury can have sent any reply except the one that stands ready on the lip of every Briton—unconditional surrender.

Saturday night's court circular contained the following:

"The queen received on Friday night, with the greatest gratification and thankfulness, the news of the relief of Mafeking after a heroic defense of over seven months, by Baden-Powell and troops under his command."

The significance of this, which refers to the receipt by her majesty of a copy of the Associated Press Pretoria dispatch, is that it is the first official intimation of the relief of Mafeking, and it would not have been made had any doubts existed in the official mind as to the correctness of the news.

The boisterous rejoicings over the reports from Mafeking have become riots in parts of London, Aberdeen and Belfast and elsewhere in the United Kingdom.

WITH ELABORATE CEREMONY

The Statue of Grant Is Unveiled In Rotunda of the Capitol.

The statue of General Grant, presented by the Grand Army of the Republic to the nation, was unveiled in the great rotunda of the capitol at Washington Saturday and elaborate ceremonies commemorative of the event were held in the hall of representatives in the presence of a vast concourse of people who included the widow, daughter and descendants of the general, hundreds of his comrades in arms, the officers and committees of the Grand Army of the Republic prominent in military and social circles.

The statue represents the contributions of thousands of his comrades, none of whom was allowed to subscribe more than 15 cents, and is the result of a movement started shortly after General Grant's death at Mt. McGregor. July, 1885.

The unveiling took place shortly before noon in the presence of Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Sartoris, the officers of the Grand Army of the Republic, Speaker Henderson and Senator Frye, president pro tem. of the senate.

In the senate the Grant ceremonies were also held. After a handsome eulogy by Mr. Harris, Mr. Turley, of Tennessee, delivered a notable address from the view point of a private soldier in the ranks of the Confederate army and his tribute was brilliant.

At 2:30 p. m. the ceremony of accepting the statues of Benton and Blair from Missouri began, the other business of the senate being laid aside.

Alabama Campaign Committee.

TUBE PLAN FAILS.

Senate Don't Approve of New Scheme To Transport Mails.

After a spirited debate the senate Saturday, by the decisive vote of 32 to 16, laid on the table the whole proposition relating to the transportation of mail by the pneumatic tube system. An effort was made to secure the adoption of an amendment to appropriate $225,000 to carry out existing contracts for the service in New York, Brooklyn, Boston and Philadelphia, but no action was taken upon it, special orders superseding the appropriation bill.

TEXAS QUARANTINES

Against San Francisco As Result of Bubonic Plague Reports.

A telegram was received in Austin, Texas, Saturday night confirming the reports of the existence of the bubonic plague at San Francisco. Immediately upon receipt of the news Dr. Blunt declared absolute quarantine against San Francisco, and stationed inspectors at El Paso and Texarkana. No passengers or goods of any kind will be admitted from San Francisco.

ALABAMA NEWS SUMMARY

Decision Reversed in the Moonshiner Cases Sent Up From This State.

In the supreme court of the United States Monday Justice Harlan handed down the decision of the court in the case of Columbus, Winchester, Motes and others charged with the murder of W. A. Thompson in Alabama because he had given information concerning their operations as moonshiners. The men were all sentenced to life imprisonment, but the opinion handed down today reversed the decision with reference to all of them except Motes on the ground that an affidavit by one of the gang named Taylor, who had turned state's evidence, was admitted when this court held that Taylor himself should have been produced as a witness. The verdict with reference to Motes was affirmed because he had sworn that he and Taylor were alone responsible for Thompson's murder. Having confessed his own guilt, Motes could not be given the benefit of the decision in the other case, even though Taylor's affidavit had borne upon his case as well as upon the other cases.

Plow Factory Locates at Ensley.

Ensley gets the plow factory of the Austin-Bryan Manufacturing company The site has been selected and purchased by the company, and work on the construction of the plant will begin at once. It is stated that it must be completed and the factory ready to go in operation by the middle of August. It will be located near the Ensley steel mill, and will get its supply of steel from that company. Plows and other agricultural implements will be manufactured.

The capital stock of the Austin-Bryan company is $150,000, and between two hundred and three hundred men will be employed when it is put in operation.

Senator Morgan Disappointed

A Washington dispatch says:

While disappointed at the refusal of the senate to take up the Nicaraguan bill, Senator Morgan will probably make a second attempt to have the bill considered. The fact that six republicans voted to take up the bill has encouraged him.
